Mr. FAIR, from the Committee on Claims, to whom were referred the following bills, reported adversely thereon; and the bills were postponed indefinitely:

- A bill (S. 1452) for the relief of B. Reinhart & Co.; and
- A bill (H. R. 4380) for the relief of A. H. Herr.

Mr. HAMPTON. I am instructed by the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4684) for the relief of certain citizens of Marion County, Tennessee, to report it favorably. I call the attention of the Senate to the fact that this bill is reported without amendment. By a typographical error one word was left out which the committee has interpolated. Will that be treated as an amendment?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It must be so treated. The bill will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. HAMPTON, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the petition of Miss Herrmine Thomson, praying that she be permitted to pre-empt one hundred and twenty acres of the reservation at Camp Independence, California, submitted an adverse report thereon, which was agreed to; and the committee were discharged from the further consideration of the petition.

Mr. MITCHELL, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

- A bill (H. R. 7933) granting a pension to Henry Biederbick;
- A bill (H. R. 5191) granting an increase of pension to Augustus Jones;
- A bill (H. R. 4055) granting a pension to Sarah Tyler;
- A bill (H. R. 6982) granting a pension to W. H. H. Coleman;
- A bill (H. R. 2645) granting a pension to Esther Hudson, mother of William H. Hudson, deceased, late of Company G, Twenty-sixth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, and Company E, One hundred and ninety-first Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers;
- A bill (H. R. 838) granting a pension to Mrs. Lydia S. Huggins;
- A bill (H. R. 8229) to grant a pension to James Dye;
- A bill (H. R. 7169) granting a pension to Elizabeth Kaler;
- A bill (H. R. 383) granting a pension to Creet H. Dougherty;
- A bill (H. R. 8091) granting a pension to David Sears;
- A bill (H. R. 4605) granting a pension to Ellen Edmiston;
- A bill (H. R. 3556) granting a pension to Mrs. Lucretia G. Ripley;
- A bill (H. R. 7572) granting a pension to Amos McDowell;
- A bill (H. R. 5148) granting a pension to Jacob Leflerty;
- A bill (H. R. 7836) for the relief of Mrs. Ida P. Belcher;
- A bill (H. R. 1235) granting a pension to Annie E. Bailey; and
- A bill (H. R. 5554) granting a pension to Sarah Parry.

Mr. MITCHELL, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2569) granting a pension to Mrs. Lydia S. Huggins, submitted an adverse report thereon, and moved its indefinite postponement; which was agreed to.

He also, from the same committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1308) to grant arrears of pension to the widow of Milton Searle, submitted an adverse report thereon, which was agreed to; and the bill was postponed indefinitely.

Mr. MITCHELL. I am directed by the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 5509) for the benefit of soldiers and sailors who have lost an arm at the shoulder-joint, to report it with a favorable recommendation and to ask the Senate to consider it at this time. The bill is very brief and it ought not to take five minutes to pass it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. HALE. I ask for the regular order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made.

Mr. MITCHELL. Then I shall ask the Senate to take up the bill and consider it in connection with the Senate pension bills this afternoon.

Mr. MANDERSON. I am directed by the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the joint resolution (H. Res. 342) to authorize the printing of 400,000 copies of the annual report of the Commissioner of Agriculture for the year 1885, to report it with certain amendments, and I ask for its present consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. HALE. I must call for the regular order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made. The joint resolution will be placed on the Calendar.

Mr. CAMDEN, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

- A bill (H. R. 5740) for the relief of Grigsby Foster;
- A bill (H. R. 4878) granting a pension to Emma O. Zeigler; and
- A bill (H. R. 8136) for the relief of Addison M. Copen.

Mr. CAMDEN, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 993) for the relief of Maria G. Dunbar, reported it with an amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

RETURN OF BILLS.

Mr. MANDERSON. I am instructed by the Committee on Printing to ask for the following order:

Ordered, That the Secretary request the House of Representatives to return to the Senate the joint resolutions S. R. 127, S. R. 128, and S. R. 129.

The order was agreed to.

LIEUT. A. W. GREELY.

Mr. DAWES. I ask the indulgence of the Senate for a moment to make an inquiry of the Committee on Military Affairs.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent to make a statement. If there be no objection, he will proceed.

Mr. DAWES. The chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs is absent and has been for some time. I do not know who acts as chairman in his absence; but I should like to make an inquiry, as I see several members of the committee present.

Some weeks ago a bill was referred to that committee designed to create an assistant chief of the Signal Bureau. The object of it was to give an opportunity for a recognition of the very distinguished and heroic deeds of a member of the Army, Lieutenant Greely. Lieutenant Greely is a native of my State, and the people of my State take a great interest as well as pride in what he has achieved and what he has suffered. They are looking anxiously to Congress for some recognition of his services; and I make bold to inquire of the committee respectfully whether there is any prospect that a report will be made upon that bill, so that the sense of the Senate can be taken upon it or upon some opportunity to make recognition of the services of that distinguished officer? I fear that if Congress shall adjourn without doing that, Lieutenant Greely will not be where any recognition of his services will be of any avail to him before Congress may meet again.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Indiana, if there be no objection, will be heard.

Mr. HARRISON. In the absence of the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LOGAN], who is chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, and of the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. CAMERON], who is next on the committee, I have been for two weeks, perhaps, the acting chairman of that committee.

Prior to that time I am not able to give any account of the bill referred to by the Senator from Massachusetts. I do not know in whose hands it was or whether it had been referred to any member of the committee for consideration up to that time. Since my attention was called to the bill by the Senator from Massachusetts, in a private way, I looked it up and had a communication addressed to the Secretary of War on the subject, as is the custom of the committee. The response of the Secretary of War was only laid before the committee this morning. The early hour at which the Senate is meeting makes it difficult to get the committee together for a full session. At the best, if we are all prompt, we can get not more than an hour for the consideration of business before the committee. There are a large number of bills pending, some of which have been in the hands of subcommittees for a considerable length of time, who have been awaiting an opportunity to get in their reports. We did not have time this morning to act upon the bill to which the Senator from Massachusetts has referred.

I may say that the bill brings to the attention of the committee a subject of a general character about which there is some division of opinion, which has no relation whatever to Lieutenant Greely or his claims to consideration. It is known, I think, to many members of the Senate that the Secretary of War has in several communications recommended that the roster of offices of the Signal Service should not be increased. In his opinion the Signal Service has come chiefly to be a weather bureau and the duties connected with it of a civil rather than a military nature. The Secretary of War is disinclined to recommend or approve any suggestions for increasing the number of officers assigned to that corps. So the bill to which the Senator from Massachusetts has referred brings before the committee that question as well as the question of giving by law some proper recognition to Lieutenant Greely for his services and exposure in the Arctic regions.

We shall have another meeting of the committee on Monday, and I will say to the Senator that the question will be again considered by the committee, and if there is time to reach a decision upon the bill it will be reported to the Senate.

Mr. DAWES. If the Senate will permit me to add a word—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts will proceed, if there be no objection.

Mr. DAWES. Of course the Committee on Military Affairs and the War Department have a better judgment than any one else as to the propriety of increasing the force of the Signal Bureau. It is not the purpose of the friends of the measure to seek any special channel of recognition of Lieutenant Greely, but the bill gives the committee jurisdiction of the subject-matter, and I hope the Senate will indulge me in invoking earnestly their consideration of the subject contemplated by the bill. I do it in the feeling that Lieutenant Greely eminently deserves some recognition. I do not care to specify it nor do I care what it may be if it is in some measure commensurate with the value of his services and the heroism which he has exhibited. I hope the Senate Committee on Military Affairs may not omit to do that, if they should come to the conclusion that the way suggested in the bill is not a wise one.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the joint resolution (S. R. 109) authorizing the loan of certain flags and bunting to the committee on inauguration ceremonies.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House of Representatives had signed the enrolled bill (S. 84) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to ascertain the amounts due to citizens of the United States for supplies furnished to the Sioux or Dakota Indians of Minnesota subsequent to August, 1860, and prior to the massacre of August, 1862, and providing for the payment thereof.

EVENING SESSIONS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. "Concurrent and other resolutions" are in order, and the Chair lays before the Senate a resolution offered on the 26th instant by the Senator from Maine [Mr. FRYE], which will be read.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, That until otherwise ordered the Senate take a recess each day at 6 to 8 o'clock p. m.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President—

Mr. SHERMAN. There is no necessity—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maine first addressed the Chair.

Mr. HALE. If there is not to be any debate I shall not interpose a motion to proceed to the consideration of the naval appropriation bill; but if there is to be any debate—and I have been notified that there will be—I make the motion now that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the naval appropriation bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator submit the motion?

Mr. HALE. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHERMAN. All I wish to say is that there is no necessity for the resolution. There is not a particle of necessity for it.

Mr. HALE. We can take a recess any day we choose.

Mr. SHERMAN. It is in order under the rules now to take a recess, without such a resolution as this.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Pending the consideration of the resolution, the first hour of the morning hour having been concluded, it is in order for the Senator from Maine to move, and he does move, that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the naval appropriation bill. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Maine. The motion was agreed to.

SUPPLIES TO MINNESOTA SIOUX INDIANS.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, returned to the Senate in compliance with its request the bill (S. 84) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to ascertain the amounts due to citizens of the United States for supplies furnished to the Sioux or Dakota Indians of Minnesota subsequent to August, 1860, and prior to the massacre of August, 1862, and providing for the payment thereof, with the amendments of the House of Representatives thereto.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. Will the Senator from Maine consent to waive the appropriation bill for a moment while I ask that a Senate bill returned from the House with amendments be laid before the Senate?

Mr. HALE. I consent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. INGALLS in the chair). The Chair lays before the Senate a bill returned from the House of Representatives with amendments, the title of which will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. "A bill (S. 84) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to ascertain the amounts due to citizens of the United States for supplies furnished to the Sioux or Dakota Indians of Minnesota subsequent to August, 1860, and prior to the massacre of August, 1862, and providing for the payment thereof."

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. I now move that the Senate reconsider the vote by which it concurred yesterday in the House amendments to the bill just laid before the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That order will be made if there be no objection. The Chair hears none.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. Now I move that the Senate non-concur in the amendments and ask the House for a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two bodies.

The motion was agreed to; and, by unanimous consent, the presiding officer was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. CAMERON of Wisconsin, Mr. DAWES, and Mr. SLATER were appointed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In this connection the Chair would state that while the bill was in the custody of the House of Representatives it was enrolled, and the enrolled copy sent over for the signature of the President pro tempore. In consequence of the action of the Senate this enrolled bill will not receive the signature of the President pro tempore, and will be returned by the Secretary with a message stating the reason therefor.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 8239) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes.

Mr. HALE. I ask unanimous consent that the first or formal reading of the bill be dispensed with, and that then the bill be read for amendment, and the amendments of the Committee on Appropriations be first considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine asks unanimous consent that the reading of the bill in extenso be dispensed with, that it be read by paragraphs, and that the amendments of the Committee on Appropriations be acted on as they are reached in the reading and considered before amendments offered by individual Senators. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. The reading will proceed.

The Chief Clerk proceeded to read the bill till line 14 was reached.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair would call the attention of the Senator from Maine to the fact that the word "one" is repeated in line 13.

Mr. HALE. That is one of the amendments I proposed to call up afterward, but it may as well be done now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be made if there be no objection, striking out one "one."

The reading of the bill was resumed. The first amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations was, in the appropriations for "miscellaneous" expenses, in line 74, after the word "piloting," to strike out the words:

Bringing home the bodies of naval officers who have died or may hereafter die abroad while on duty.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 112, to increase the total amount of the appropriation for the "Bureau of Navigation" from $87,500 to $100,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 113, to insert:

For special ocean surveys and the publication thereof, $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 115, to insert:

For publication of professional papers, $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the appropriations for the "Bureau of Ordnance," after line 133, to insert:

For the purchase or manufacture of steel guns of small caliber for ships now in service, and for testing the same at the naval ordnance proving-ground, $21,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 133, before the word "test," to insert "public;" so as to read:

For the completion and public test of two breech-loading rifle-cannon of the larger calibers now in course of construction for the Navy, with carriages and ammunition for both, $90,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after the word "dollars," in line 141, to strike out the following proviso:

Provided, That the test shall be conducted as follows: With battering charges for two hours, and under the most rapid continuous rate of firing, as near as may be like the conditions of a hotly-contested battle; then with the service charge not less than five hours. Permission, with ample notice to be present, shall be given to all persons who indicate a desire to examine the preliminary preparation and witness the firing. Expenditures of public money on all other naval cannon of and above said caliber shall cease until this public test has terminated. And all the facts and incidents of the test shall be reported to Congress by the Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance as soon thereafter as possible.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 165, to increase the total amount of the appropriation "for miscellaneous items" for the Bureau of Ordnance from $3,000 to $4,000.

Mr. HALE. There is an error in the print. The word "three" occurs twice in line 165.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the committee will be regarded as to strike out both words "three" and insert "four."

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in the appropriations for the "Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting," in line 185, to increase the total amount appropriated "for equipment of vessels" from $500,000 to $825,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the appropriations for "Bureau of Yards and Docks," in line 231, to increase the total amount of the appropriation "for general maintenance of yards and docks" from $200,000 to $250,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the appropriations for "Bureau of Medicine and Surgery," in line 235, after the word "dollars," to strike out the following words:

And if the Secretary of the Navy shall not be able to maintain properly the whole number of naval hospitals now kept open on the amounts hereby appropriated for the maintenance of and civil establishment at naval hospitals, he shall close those which are least necessary to the service, and provide for the patients now cared for therein at such other naval hospitals as may be most convenient.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 261, to increase the appropriation "for necessary repairs of naval laboratory, naval hospitals, and appendages, including roads, wharves, outhouses, sidewalks, fences, gardens, farms, and cemeteries," from $10,000 to $15,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the appropriations for the "Bureau of Provisions and Clothing," in line 269, to increase from $1,085,000 to $1,100,000 the appropriation "for provisions for the seamen and marines; commuted rations for officers, naval cadets, seamen, and marines; expenses of inspections and storehouses, including labor; purchase of water for cooking and drinking on board ships; and for provisions and commutation of rations for seven hundred and fifty boys."

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the appropriations for the "Bureau of Construction and Repair," in the proviso to the clause appropriating $1,000,000 "for preservation and completion of vessels on the stocks and in ordinary," &c., in line 292, after the word "exceed," to strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty;" so as to make the proviso read:

Provided, That no part of this sum shall be applied to the repairs of any wooden ship when the estimated cost of such repairs, to be appraised by a competent board of naval officers, shall exceed 20 per cent. of the estimated cost, appraised in like manner, of a new ship of the same size and like material.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out lines 299 and 300, as follows: For the completion of the New York, $400,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the appropriations for the "Bureau of Steam-Engineering," in the proviso to the clause making appropriations "for repairs, completion, and preservation of machinery and boilers, including steam-steerers, steam-capstans, steam-windlasses, &c., in vessels on the stocks and in ordinary," &c., after the word "exceed," at the end of line 315, to strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty;" and in line 320, after the words "repaired for," to strike out "thirty" and insert "twenty;" so as to make the proviso read:

Provided, That no part of said sum shall be applied to the repair of engines and machinery of wooden ships where the estimated costs of such repair shall exceed 20 per cent. of the estimated cost of new engines and machinery of the same character and power; but nothing herein contained shall prevent the repair or building of boilers for wooden ships the hulls of which can be fully repaired for 20 per cent. of the estimated cost of a new ship of the same size and material.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was continued to line 528.

Mr. COCKRELL. I thought the understanding was that "car-tickets" were to be stricken out.

Mr. HALE. I am going to call attention to that when we come to it. It may as well be stricken out now, however, and I will move it.

Mr. COCKRELL. I want the words "car-tickets" struck out wherever they occur.

Mr. HALE. We have stricken out "car-tickets" in other appropriations bills.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator indicate the lines where the amendment is to be made?

Mr. HALE. In lines 520 and 521 I move to strike out the words "car tickets, $200."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection the amendment will be made. It is agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was to strike out the clause from line 529 to line 535, inclusive, as follows:

To complete the construction of the steel cruiser of not less than 5,000 nor more than 6,000 tons displacement, and the armament therefor, authorized by act of Congress August 3, 1882, $1,780,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary: Provided, The Secretary of the Navy shall approve of the construction of said vessel.

And in lieu thereof to insert—

Mr. MCPHERSON. Is the question first to be taken on striking out that paragraph? Do I understand the question to be on striking out from line 529 to line 535?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the committee is to strike out from line 529 to line 535, inclusive—

Mr. HALE. And to insert the matter printed as lines 536 to 539.

Mr. MCPHERSON. I wish to say a word in respect to that. I wish to ask the Senator from Maine if the committee have properly considered the question as to whether it is possible to build a naval vessel of the size which I see the committee propose to build and obtain the requisite speed as a cruiser to overtake the modern commercial ships. Necessarily in vessels of small size the lines will not be fine, the ship will not have the requisite length, and can not have the necessary power to overtake the commercial ships of to-day. I think the Sen ator will not for a moment argue that the ships the committee here propose to build can overtake such a vessel as the Alaska or the Arizona or other ships of like class and character which have been built of late and which will make up the commercial marine of the future. Therefore I think it wise that the committee should retain this provision of the House bill providing for the construction of the larger ship. As all the ships we are now building are simply experiments, it would seem to be wisdom not to delay longer the commencement of one ship of the larger size having the requisite speed.

Mr. HALE. I am very glad that the Senator from New Jersey has called attention to this matter and has asked the question which he has put to me. The committee did consider this question very carefully. Of course the Senator from New Jersey and other Senators will bear in mind that this is not a new subject. These matters have been gone over repeatedly heretofore in the Senate at other sessions. Undoubtedly the class of ships provided for by the committee's amendment ranging from three to four thousand tons, no specific type being determined, but that being left to the future Secretary of the Navy and such advice as he may gather from naval officers, will not be able to overtake the largest and fastest of the great steamers that are employed in the transportation of goods and passengers, especially those upon the European lines; neither would the ship that is provided for in the clause of the House bill that the committee strike out be able to do that. No ship can be constructed in the Navy that would overtake such steamships as ply between the ports of America and Europe, unless she went up into the range of ships from eight to ten thousand tons. Such a ship is immensely expensive.

When the advisory board came to consider the practical condition of the Navy and the need for immediate ships, one of the first questions that they met was this which is raised by the Senator from New Jersey, and in making their report in 1883 and 1884 they used this language, which I will read:

In concluding the report the board deems it necessary to record its emphatic disapproval of the suggestions that have of late been so frequently made throughout the country, that the Navy should acquire a number of extremely high-speed commerce-destroying vessels of great endurance, designed in these respects with special reference to gaining superiority over the large and swift transatlantic mail steamers. The main reasons for this disapproval are as follows: "In order that a competitive vessel should excel in speed and endurance the best of these fast packets, she must certainly cost as much to build and be of nearly as great dimensions, necessitating a displacement of at least 11,000 tons. Once built, these vessels would be so costly in maintenance, so limited in maneuvering power and scope of effective service, owing to the great dimensions, especially the draught, and they would absorb for their control such a large proportion of the personnel of the Navy, that active service could only be warranted by the most urgent necessity for special work."

They go on further to amplify these reasons. One ship capable of overtaking the fast transatlantic steamships would absorb a tenth part of the entire force of the Navy; and the Committee on Naval Affairs last year and the Committee on Appropriations now in reporting this amendment deemed it wise to take the recommendations of the advisory board as to classes and to leave out in their recommendations in commencing the reconstruction of the Navy this large ship of from five to six thousand tons proposed by the House.

Now, let me say one word upon the important matter of speed. The Esmeralda, which has been built in Great Britain and sent to a South American power, which is the same type almost exactly with the Boston and Atlanta, has made 18 knots per measured mile in her first trip. It is believed that the Boston and Atlanta, which are almost finished, will do the same. But the committee realized the force of the objection that has been raised by the Senator from New Jersey and by other Senators heretofore, that in future building the Department ought not to be kept down to this type of vessel, and therefore it has made this amendment in the most liberal terms, giving a range of from three to four thousand tons and leaving the kind of ship that shall be constructed to the discretion and judgment of the Secretary of the Navy upon plans that he makes after full examination.

Now, as to the overtaking of commercial vessels upon the waters of the globe, these ships if they are constructed of about 3,600 tons, as the board recommends, will be able to overtake nine-tenths of the commercial marine of the world impelled by steam. The other tenth, a few immense great transatlantic vessels, can not be overtaken by any ship that is provided for here, nor by the ship provided for by the House bill, and only, as the board says, by constructing an immense vessel of ten or eleven or twelve thousand tons displacement; and the committee has not felt that it was wise in the decaying condition of the Navy to put so many eggs into one basket, and has, therefore, provided for the building of four new ships under the discretion of the next administration of the Navy Department.

Mr. MCPHERSON. The Senator from Maine will observe that the vessels he proposes to build are almost the same in class with those we are now building. The vessels here proposed to be built will scarcely be larger than the Chicago type, perhaps a little larger than the Boston and Atlanta.

The Senator speaks of the Esmeralda as having made eighteen miles per hour on the measured mile. I think the Senator will not argue from that that the vessel was capable of going through an intense wind and storm making more than 13 or 14 knots per hour on the average. I think the Britannic, one of the White Star steamships, when she first came out measured about twenty miles in an hour; but the average of her sailing during the entire year, I am informed from a paper laid before the House committee, is only about fifteen miles per hour. The Britannic is a vessel some five hundred feet in length and over 5,000 tons register. In short, all the commercial ships of the present day, those that transport a large majority of the commerce of the United States between the port of New York, particularly, and the European ports, are vessels of that class and type. The Cunard line, the National line, the Inman line, the White Star line, the German line are all composed of much larger vessels with larger tonnage, with great power and great speed.

What do we build cruisers for? We build them to cruise for something, and as the commerce of the country is transported in these larger and faster ships what is the use of continuing the construction of cruisers which can really overtake nothing except sailing vessels?

I have no objection to the amendment of the committee as far as it goes; I have no objection to building ships of the class proposed; I think perhaps they are needed; but I do submit that certainly as to one vessel of a larger class, of more tonnage, with great power and great speed it is time the Government of the United States commenced such a ship. Certainly we can afford to experiment with one ship of larger class and great speed, and I think the time to do it is now. It was recommended by the present advisory board, I think last year.

Mr. HALE. No; the Senator is mistaken. The old advisory board recommended one of the ships of this kind. The present advisory board rejected that and advised to go on with the cruisers of the smaller type.

Mr. MCPHERSON. Then there is only a difference of opinion as between the two advisory boards, and certainly the common sense of the whole matter is in favor of building the largest ships.

I wish to ask the committee to consent to retain that clause in the House bill, which they propose to strike out, making appropriations for the larger ship in addition to those they propose to construct. The bill would then only appropriate money for five new ships of different types, and two of those are gunboats. There are but two cruisers provided for by the committee if you strike out the words proposed to be stricken out by this amendment. Therefore I shall vote against striking out these words.

While I am on my feet, Mr. President, I wish to say that I had the honor to submit an amendment to the Senate the day before yesterday, which was printed, getting rid of all complications and all jealousies between advisory boards and the Navy Department proper. I am sorry the committee did not see fit to report that amendment back to the Senate favorably; and inasmuch as it has not been reported favorably by any committee of the Senate I am aware it would be ruled out on a point of order, and therefore I shall make no attempt to press it. I am in favor of all the committee has proposed in this bill by way of increase of the naval establishment, but I am in favor of more. I am in favor of the House proposition being retained in addition to what is proposed by the committee.

Mr. HALE. There was an additional reason why the committee thought it better to build these four ships rather than one large one. To build the larger ship, complete her with machinery and armament, would cost in the neighborhood of $3,000,000. Now, I believe in leaving the responsibility of this matter largely to the administration of the Navy Department in the future. I have always contended that the responsibility should be there. The head of the Department, or the President, acting through the Secretary, should be largely responsible. I have never believed in limiting that very much.

Mr. MCPHERSON. Will the Senator yield a moment for an observation right there?

Mr. HALE. Certainly.

Mr. MCPHERSON. He will notice in lines 534 and 535 of the House bill it is provided that "the Secretary of the Navy shall approve of the construction of said vessel," leaving the responsibility entirely to the Secretary as to whether he shall proceed to build such a vessel or not.

Mr. HALE. I have said that this is left to the Secretary by our amendment. I was going on to remark that I doubt very much whether any new Secretary of the Navy coming afresh as he must, whoever he may be, however able he may be—and I assume that it will be an able and competent man who will be selected for Secretary of the Navy—would desire even to be intrusted with the responsibility between now and the next session of Congress of going into the question of constructing one of these large ships. I believe that he would prefer to investigate for himself and to form his plan for reconstructing the Navy, and not to be beset, as he would be if authority is given him to construct this large vessel, by the urgency of contractors, to go on and build it.

I will say further that if, after the discretion that this amendment allows him he goes on investigating, making himself informed as to naval architecture and to constructing these ships that the committee amendment provides for, the Secretary of the Navy, who will be responsible in the future largely for this work of building up the American Navy, shall report and advise that one of these large ships should be built, and we have his investigation and report on which to rest, then, with these additional new vessels that we have built, I shall be in favor of the experiment of trying one of those very expensive ships. I do not think now and the committee did not think it wise to embark in that expenditure. It will be all that any new Secretary will want to do to investigate and look into and settle the types of the ships provided for here, contract for them, and commence building them; and then when he recommends, if he does, that we go into this other domain, I shall be willing to follow him. The committee has left it as the advisory board leaves it; and so I trust that the committee's amendment will be agreed to to strike out this immensely expensive ship and give us these others instead, and let the Department go on, and then if they recommend the larger ship we can try that at another Congress.

Mr. MCPHERSON. I ask that the vote may be taken separately on the proposition to strike out.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A motion to strike out and insert is not divisible.

Mr. MILLER, of California. The Senator from Maine speaks of large ships. The clause which the committee recommend to be stricken out provides for a steel cruiser of not less than 5,000 nor more than 6,000 tons displacement. That is not a very large ship, a ship of about 3,000 tons burden. In the amendment of the committee it is provided that two cruisers of not less than 3,000 nor more than 4,000 tons displacement may be built, and these the Senator thinks are smaller ships not near so expensive to build. He estimates that a cruiser of five or six thousand tons displacement will cost $3,000,000. I can not conceive how it is possible that a ship of that size should cost that sum of money, unless it is to be an ironclad.

From the examination which I have given this subject from time to time I am of opinion that these ships of 4,000 tons displacement are too small for any very valuable purpose in the Navy. They can not make time which a cruiser ought to make. No ship of that class can make in all weather more than fifteen or sixteen miles an hour, no matter what material you put into it. It is true that too large a cruiser would be a very expensive machine for the Government to handle. It is doubtful whether a cruiser as large as the merchant sailers now plying on the waters of the Atlantic could carry coal enough to run her more than ten or twelve days, but a steamer of the size here described in the provision in the House bill would not probably consume more than sixty or seventy tons of coal in twenty-four hours, whereas the larger class of steamers, like the Alaska and the Britannic, consume from one hundred and seventy-five to two hundred and fifty tons of coal in twenty-four hours.

I should like this amendment much better if the limit as to the size of these cruisers were raised to 5,000 tons displacement, giving a discretionary power to the Secretary of the Navy to build a ship up to 5,000 tons displacement. If the committee would consent to that amendment I should be willing to strike out the clause in the House bill that they propose to strike out.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California will please suspend. The hour of 1 o'clock having arrived, it is the duty of the Chair to lay before the Senate the unfinished business of yesterday, being the bill (H. R. 4976) for the retirement and recoinage of the trade-dollar.

Mr. MORRILL. Let that be informally laid aside until the naval appropriation bill is through.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The unfinished business will be informally laid aside and the naval appropriation bill will be continued.

Mr. MILLER, of California. In the committee's amendment in line 543 I suggest the striking out of the word "four" and inserting "five," so as to leave a margin between 3,000 tons and 5,000 tons displacement.

Mr. HALE. The Senator from California, who is evidently proceeding on the same proposition and theory as the Senator from New Jersey, suggests that the discretion given to the Secretary of the Navy as to the size of the two new ships be increased from 4,000 to 5,000 tons displacement, so as to give an opportunity of building one of the two, or both, of the larger kind. I am willing to consent to that because it leaves the discretion with the Secretary of the Navy. He might do one, or very possibly might do both, but I am willing to leave it to him.

Mr. MCPHERSON. Would you not be willing to make an amendment after the word "each," in line 545, to read as follows—I submit this also to the Senator from California?

And one cruiser of not less than 5,000 nor more than 5,000 tons displacement.

So as to provide for three vessels. That is practically bringing in by that amendment to the committee's amendment the same provision that is involved in the House bill between lines 529 and 535. It provides for the building of one more ship, and leaves the two cruisers exactly as the committee proposed them.

Mr. COCKRELL. I hope the Senator from Maine will not agree to that.

Mr. HALE. I can not consent to that.

Mr. MCPHERSON. Then I agree to the other proposition, though I should like to have it increased to 6,000 tons.

Mr. MILLER, of California. I think 5,000 tons is large enough, and I think that will be a solution of the difficulty. We can all agree to have two ships, one of which may be of 5,000 tons, and leave that to the discretion of the Secretary of the Navy.

Mr. HALE. I ask then that unanimous consent be given that in line 543 the amendment be amended by inserting "five" instead of "four," and then I hope the amendment of the committee will be adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from Maine that the part proposed to be inserted has not yet been read by the Secretary.

Mr. HALE. I ask that that be read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The words will be read.

The Secretary read the words proposed to be inserted in lieu of the clause to be stricken out, as follows:

To enable the President to strengthen the naval establishment of the United States by additional vessels of the best and most modern design, having the highest attainable speed, the sum of $1,805,000 is hereby appropriated, to be expended as follows and under the following limitation:

For the construction of two cruisers of not less than 3,000 nor more than 4,000 tons displacement, costing, exclusive of armament, not more than $1,100,000 each; one heavily armed gunboat of about 1,600 tons displacement, costing, exclusive of armament, not more than $320,000; and one light gunboat of about 800 tons displacement, costing, exclusive of armament, not more than $275,000; and authority is hereby given for the construction of said four vessels, at not exceeding the total cost for each above specified, in accordance with such final plan as may be determined upon, after a revision and reconsideration of all designs which have been heretofore made, and in the manner and conformity to the conditions and limitations provided for the construction of the new cruisers in the acts of August 3, 1882, and of March 3, 1883.

Mr. HALE. In line 543, after the word "than," I move to strike out "four" and insert "five;" so as to read:

For the construction of two cruisers of not less than 3,000 nor more than 5,000 tons displacement, &c.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that the motion of the committee is to amend by striking out lines 529 to 535 inclusive and inserting the words which have just been read. The Senator from Maine proposes to amend the amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, after line 559, to insert:

Toward the armament of the foregoing cruisers and gunboats, $500,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 561, to insert:

For continuing work upon the double-turreted monitors, $2,000,000, the same to be applied toward procuring the side and turret armor and armament and finishing the vessels; and the Secretary of the Navy, acting under the advice of the naval advisory board in the same manner in all respects as in the construction of the steel cruisers, shall not, in procuring such armor and armament and finishing the monitors, exceed as the total cost of such completion the amounts estimated in the report of the board of October 25, 1883, and the report of the Secretary of December 1, 1883; and in all purchases of armor or contracts for construction there shall be free and open public competition.

Mr. MILLER, of California. I ask the Senator from Maine if it is to be understood that this applies to the four double-turreted monitors upon which work is to be continued at the discretion of the Secretary of the Navy and the advisory board?

Mr. HALE. Yes, it is the same provision that the Senate has put on repeatedly before. It refers to the four ironclads, one upon the Pacific coast and the three here. They are not named in terms, but the references that are made include them all.

Mr. MILLER, of California. The intention is that this money shall be divided among the four?

Mr. HALE. Undoubtedly.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was to strike out section 4 in the following words:

SEC. 4. That no officer whose name is borne on the retired-list of the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps shall hold position in the civil service or other employment of the Government, and draw the salary or compensation thereof together with his pay as a retired officer of the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps: Provided, That any such retired officer accepting a position in the civil service or other employment of the Government may, at the time of acceptance, elect to take the salary of such position or in lieu to retain his pay as a retired officer: Provided further, That the restrictions of this section shall not apply to any officer below the rank of major in the Army or Marine Corps or commander in the Navy who has been retired by reason of wounds received in service, or to any retired officer of the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps designated by law to perform civilian duty.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. I wish now to go back to page 2. There are some formal amendments that should be made. At the top of the page, line 13, was the superfluous word "one" struck out?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It has been struck out.

Mr. HALE. In line 21 the word "nine" should be erased and the word "ten" substituted; so as to read:

Ten naval constructors.

I move that amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HALE. In line 22 the "ten" should be erased and "nine" substituted; so as to read:

Nine assistant naval constructors.

I move that amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair calls the attention of the Senator from Maine to the fact that the word "ten" occurs twice in line 22. Which "ten" is it proposed to strike out?

Mr. HALE. The first "ten" before "assistant naval constructors." The PRESIDING OFFICER. That change will be made.

Mr. HALE. I have an amendment to offer, not from the Committee on Appropriations but by direction of the Committee on Naval Affairs; it has been duly presented and sent to the Committee on Appropriations. I now offer it as an additional section.

The Chief Clerk read the proposed amendment, as follows:

For the purchase by the Secretary of the Navy of the Destroyer, an iron vessel designed and built by Capt. John Ericsson, armed with a submarine gun and projectile torpedo, including also an independent submarine gun, $112,000: Provided, That it shall satisfactorily appear that said vessel, steam-machinery, guns, projectiles, and experiments developing the same have cost that amount: And provided further, That the Government of the United States shall at any time hereafter, if it shall so elect, have the option to purchase all the patents issued by the United States relating to said vessel, submarine gun, projectile torpedo, and all appliances connected with the same, the said John Ericsson having agreed to communicate to the Secretary of the Navy any and all improvements he may make on and concerning the same free of charge, for a sum not exceeding $100,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL. I desire to call attention to the provision on pages 21 and 22 for the naval asylum at Philadelphia. I have just received a communication from a prominent gentleman who resides in the same ward where this institution is, and he says he has had consultation with those in charge of it and that the appropriations proposed in this bill are entirely inadequate. It appears that by the estimates $98,411 were thought requisite for the maintenance and support of the institution and for some improvements proposed, while the bill only gives $60,067. I should be glad if the Senator in charge of the bill would inform us why it is that the estimates are not followed in this case.

Mr. HALE. The committee looked into that and did not find any pressing need for additional appropriations, all the more because these are the same that they were in the last regular appropriation bill, upon which the institution has got along without any deficiency. It is quite likely they might use more money to some advantage, but the committee did not deem it a case where there was any necessity for adding to the House provision this year.

Mr. McPHERSON. I desire to offer an amendment to come in after section 3 as a new section:

That the sum of $5,000 be, and the same is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended under and by direction of the Secretary of the Navy, for extending and continuing explorations in Madagascar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator from New Jersey state the point in the bill where he desires the amendment inserted?

Mr. McPHERSON. At the end of the bill, after section 3, to form a new section.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be read.

The Secretary read the amendment.

Mr. McPHERSON. I am fully sensible of the fact that this amendment is subject to a point of order that may possibly be raised; but I think if the Senate will listen to me for two minutes, there is not a single Senator here who will not be willing to make this a part of the naval appropriation bill.

It is well known to every member of the Senate that extensive explorations have been made in the great island of Madagascar in the past eighteen months by a young naval officer of the United States. I speak of Lieutenant Shufeldt, son of Admiral Shufeldt, who performed such great service for the Government in the Korean matter, and young Shufeldt himself is one of the most distinguished and successful officers in the United States service.

Perhaps I can better explain the whole matter by presenting an article which was handed me a few moments ago which appeared in one of the newspapers; and inasmuch as I desire to read only a few extracts from the article I will not send the paper to the Secretary's desk, but will select the extracts myself:

Madagascar, briefly described, is the third largest island on the known surface of the globe. It has 230,000 square miles of area, or larger in extent than modern France, as large as the old German Empire, four times as large as Great Britain, and equals our New England and Middle States, including North Carolina.

It goes on to speak then about the topography of the country, of the races of people, &c., which is not at this time important to the pending question. The article then continues:

Across this vast country Lieutenant Shufeldt, United States Navy, was about one year ago detailed by the United States Navy Department to conduct an exploring party from sea to sea. He came down from Northeast China (Corea) by various steamers to Singapore. He came down from thence embarked on a little English brig, navigating her through the Java seas and across the great Indian Ocean—for fifty-eight days—to the English island of Mauritius. Here he was detained by violent attacks of fever for over a month and much embarrassed by difficulties in reaching Madagascar on account of the French bombardments at Tamatave and their blockade of the whole eastern coast. Overcoming these he got away finally in an English schooner of eighty tons burden, and in twelve days landed alone on the forest-clad shores of Southeastern Madagascar at Mahanava. Entering the dense forest belt and ascending the Mangoko River in a canoe for a distance of forty miles, the first camp was established and the native party of four hundred men organized to make the long journey to the Hova capital through the Betsimisaraka region. Through the great and ever-silent forests of the east and to the foot of the splendid range of lofty mountains that marks the boundary of the interior plateau, day by day, often broken and disheartened by fierce attacks, by desertions from his party, and the innumerable worries and responsibilities incidental to a keen sense of personal responsibility in a strange and barbarous country, the American lieutenant led the expedition successfully.

Ascending the eastern range and reaching the rolling plains of Central Madagascar many of the dangers were passed. There is no fever, the climate is mild and equable, the hills are dotted with pretty villages, the people are kind and hospitable, and the scenery grand and beautiful. In three weeks Lieutenant Shufeldt rested his party under the walls of the Hova capital and in sight of the palace of the Hova Queen, Ranavalona III. His reception in Antananarivo by all the dignitaries of the Hova Government was a perfect ovation to his profession and his nationality. Every attention was showered upon him and every effort made to convey through him to his far-away country the kindly and friendly feelings the Malagasy entertained for the American name. A palace was supplied, an army detailed, and native banquets given in his honor. Lieutenant Shufeldt's experiences in the Hova capital would occupy too much space in our columns; but suffice to say that his presence did much to restore the American interests in Madagascar, to rekindle a decaying knowledge of the greatest of Western powers, and impressed the Hovas with a sense that there are many in America who view with regret the threatened downfall of a new and isolated civilization.

After three weeks' stay—

And this is the important part that I wish to call the attention of the Senate to—

After three weeks' stay and a final adieu to the Queen and her husband, Lieutenant Shufeldt, at the head of six hundred and fifty men (including three white men), left the capital to push his way—a distance as he traveled of six hundred miles—to the western coast. This journey, considered almost suicidal by the white residents of Antananarivo, was successfully accomplished after a series of strange adventures and many narrow escapes. Fierce Sakalava tribes often contested his march; a devastated country afforded frequently no shelter or food; the deadly fevers of the western forests decimated his people, and it was not for two months that the American officer found himself on the seacoast that is washed by the waves of the Mozambique Channel. He had but one hundred and fifty-eight men remaining. From Madagascar the lieutenant managed to cross to the East African coast in an open boat manned by five black men, and landed at Mozambique. He had accomplished the undertaking and solved many of the most important geographical questions in relation to Madagascar.

Mr. HALE. If the Senate will agree to let a vote be taken on this proposition, I will not make the point of order.

Mr. McPHERSON. Perhaps some other Senator may, and I wish to read one statement more, though I know I am detaining the Senate. Let me call attention to a letter written to Lieutenant Shufeldt on his reaching the capital. This is a letter given him by the prime minister:

It is needless to call to your knowledge that this request of Her Majesty and myself—

The request was to return to the capital and try to establish trade relations, and assist Her Majesty—that this request of Her Majesty and myself is extended to you from their certainty that your wishes for the advancement of Madagascar are sincere and true, but as showing their friendly feeling for the great country of which you are an officer, not only the first American but the first of any foreign nationality so invited. May God bless you, sir.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senate agree to this amendment?

Mr. COCKRELL. That is very beautifully and handsomely written—by whom I do not know.

Mr. McPHERSON. By the prime minister of Madagascar.

Mr. COCKRELL. He is a magnificent English scholar, then, and I think it is not a barbaric country. I make the point of order on this proposed amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks that the amendment is open to the point of order, and sustains the point raised by the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. McPHERSON. I do not wish to appeal from the decision of the Chair; but may I ask the Chair if he will submit the question to the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will be glad to submit the question to the Senate, on the request of the Senator from New Jersey, is the proposed amendment in order under the rules of the Senate?

The question was decided in the negative.

Mr. HALE. Now, I hope we shall pass the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there further amendments to be offered to the bill? [A pause.] The Chair will suggest that the words "car tickets" appear in one or two places in the bill where they have not yet been eliminated. The Chair understood the Senator from Missouri to suggest that they were to be stricken out wherever they occurred.

Mr. COCKRELL. Yes, sir. Their being left in the bill is an oversight. I move that they be stricken out wherever they occur.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Where do they occur?

Mr. HALE. I have no objection to striking them out. I know of but one place, and that is in line 520.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 9, line 195, after the word "postage," occur the words "car tickets."

Mr. HALE. I move to strike them out there.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. SEWELL. I should like to ask the Senator from Maine, as a matter of curiosity—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will ask the Senator from New Jersey to suspend a moment until this order can be carried out: Will the Senator from Maine state the places where the words "car tickets" occur?

Mr. HALE. I know of no other place.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 11, at the end of line 243, are the words "and car tickets."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Those words will be stricken out, if there be no objection.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 12, line 275, after the word "ferriages" occur the words "car tickets."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Those words will be stricken out here, if there be no objection.

Mr. SEWELL. I desire information in relation to the monitors. I have been voting for four years continuously, if I am not mistaken, for finishing the monitors, and still they come up every year for an appropriation.

Mr. HALE. Does not the Senator know that the reason is that we never could get it through the House? This is the same provision the Senator has been voting for, and I hope we shall be able to get it through the House now.

Mr. SEWELL. Has there not been an appropriation for monitors within the last two years?

Mr. HALE. There was $1,000,000 given three years ago, all of which was expended except a portion for the Monadnock. This provision is the provision the Senate has put on two naval appropriation bills, but the House has always resisted it, and it has gone out. It is put on again now, the same provision the Senator has been voting for, and I hope that now we shall be able to get it through. It is right in the line that the Senator wants.

Mr. SEWELL. Can not the Senator from Maine tell us how long we shall have to vote for this in order to finish the monitors?

Mr. HALE. Just as often as the committee puts it on to the bill, I suppose.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed a concurrent resolution for the printing of 3,500 copies of the first and second volumes of Decisions Relating to Public Lands, prepared under the direction of the Department of the Interior.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bill and joint resolution; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (H. R. 48) providing for the erection of a building to contain the records, library, and museum of the Medical Department United States Army; and

Joint resolution (H. Res. 320) authorizing the printing of the report of the Commissioner of Education for 1893 and 1894.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. MILLER, of California. I am instructed by the Committee on Foreign Relations to report an amendment intended to be proposed to the deficiency appropriation bill providing for the payment of the awards made in favor of French claimants by the French and American Claims Commission created by virtue of the provisions of the claims convention of January 15, 1880, amounting to the sum of $625,566.35. It will be necessary perhaps under the rule that the amendment should be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, so that the committee may have it before them for consideration. I move that it be referred, with the accompanying papers, to the Committee on Appropriations. It need not be printed.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. MILLER, of California. I am also directed by the Committee on Foreign Relations to report an amendment intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill proposing to appropriate $2,000 to enable the President of the United States to send the Chief of the Bureau of Statistics of the Treasury Department as a delegate to represent the Government of the United States at the jubilee to be held by the Statistical Society in London in June, 1885. I move that the amendment be referred with the accompanying papers, without printing, to the Committee on Appropriations.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BOWEN, from the Committee on Mines and Mining, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. HARRIS. I am directed by the Committee on Epidemic Diseases to report an amendment intended to be proposed to the deficiency appropriation bill. I understand from the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations that there is ample time for the printing. I therefore move that the amendment be printed and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin, from the Committee on Claims, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. BAYARD, Mr. BLAIR, Mr. BUTLER, Mr. GORMAN, and Mr. PENDLETON submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them respectively to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

SENATE MANUAL.

Mr. FRYE. The last edition of the Manual is exhausted, and Senators are desirous of more. I offer a resolution for reference to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved, That there be printed and bound for the use of the Senate, under the direction of the Committee on Rules, 1,000 additional copies of the revised Senate Manual.

The resolution was referred to the Committee on Printing.

SAC AND FOX AND IOWA INDIAN LANDS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. INGALLS in the chair). The Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business of yesterday, being the bill (H. R. 4976) for the retirement and recoinage of the trade-dollar.

Mr. HOAR. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. VAN WYCK. I ask the Senator to yield a moment for the passage of a bill which it is important to be passed, reported favorably by the Indian Committee with an amendment, that it may go to the House.

Mr. HOAR. I withdraw the motion for that purpose only.

Mr. VAN WYCK. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill, Calendar No. 1271, reported by the Committee on Indian Affairs.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The title of the bill will be reported for information.

The CHIEF CLERK. "A bill (H. R. 6658) to provide for the sale of the Sac and Fox Indian reservation, in the States of Nebraska and Kansas, and for other purposes."

Mr. HOAR. The understanding is that if it leads to debate it shall be set aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The unfinished business will be informally laid aside, if there be no objection.

Mr. MORRILL. If this bill gives rise to no debate the unfinished business may be laid aside informally.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6658) to provide for the sale of the Sac and Fox Indian reservation, in the States of Nebraska and Kansas, and for other purposes.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with an amendment, to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That with the consent of a majority of the chiefs, headmen, and male adults of the Sac and Fox (of the Missouri) tribe of Indians and the Iowa tribe of Indians, expressed in open council by each tribe, the Secretary of the Interior be and he hereby is, authorized to cause to be surveyed, if necessary, and sold the remainder of the reservations of the Sac and Fox and Iowa Indians, lying in the States of Nebraska and Kansas. The said lands shall be appraised, in tracts of forty acres each, by three competent commissioners, one of whom shall be selected by the Sac and Fox and Iowa tribes of Indians and the other two shall be appointed by the Secretary of the Interior.

Sec. 2. That after the survey and appraisal of said lands the Secretary of the Interior shall be, and hereby is, authorized to offer the same, through the United States public land office at Beatrice or Lincoln, Neb., at public sale, to the highest bidder. In cases where improvements have been made by any Indian or for the United States upon such lands, such improvements shall be separately appraised: Provided, That no portion of such land shall be sold at less than the appraised value thereof, and in no case for less than $5 per acre, and to none except such as purchase the same for actual occupation and settlement, and who have made and subscribed on oath, before the register of said land office, and filed the same with said officer of the land office at Beatrice or Lincoln, Neb., that it is his good-faith intention to settle upon and occupy the land which he seeks to purchase, and improve the same for a home; and, except in case of the death of the purchaser, unless said party shall have executed his declared intention by making improvements and being in actual occupation of said land, by actual residence thereon, at the time for making the second payment, he shall forfeit the payment already made, and the land shall be subject to resale as hereinafter provided. Each purchaser of said lands at such sale shall be entitled to purchase one hundred and sixty acres of land, and no more, except in cases where a tract contains a fractional excess over one hundred and sixty acres. If the excess is less than forty acres, is contiguous, and results from inability in the survey to make township and section lines conform to the boundary lines of the reservation, and no other objection exists, the purchase of such excess shall be allowed. Such purchaser shall pay one-fourth of the purchase-price at the time said land is bid off, one-fourth in one year, one-fourth in two years, and one-fourth in three years, with interest on the deferred payments at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum; and where there are improvements upon the lands purchased which shall have been separately appraised, the purchaser shall pay the appraised value of such improvements at the time of purchase, in addition to the amounts hereinbefore required to be paid. No patents shall issue until all payments shall have been made; and on the failure of any purchaser to make payment as required by this act he shall forfeit the lands purchased, and the same shall be subject to entry and sale, at the appraised value thereof, or shall be again offered at public sale, as the Secretary of the Interior may determine.

Sec. 3. That if any member of said Sac and Fox or Iowa tribe of Indians residing at the date of the passage of this act upon any of the lands authorized to be sold by the second section of this act, and who has improvements thereon, shall elect to remain on the lands occupied by him, such lands shall be withheld from sale as provided for herein; and the Secretary of the Interior shall cause a certificate to issue to the person so electing as follows: If he be the head of a family, to one hundred and sixty acres of land, and if a single man, to eighty acres of land, the land so selected to include his improvements, and to be accepted in full satisfaction of his interest in and to the said reservation, and of the moneys or fund realized from the sale thereof. The certificate provided for herein shall be of the legal effect and declare that the United States does and will hold the land thus certified, for the period of twenty-five years, in trust for the sole use and benefit of the allottee, or in case of his decease, of his heirs according to the laws of the State in which said land is situated, and that at the expiration of said period the United States will convey the same by patent to said Indian, or his heirs, as aforesaid, in fee, discharged of said trust and free of all charge or incumbrance whatsoever; and if any conveyance shall be made of the lands thus allotted, or any contract made touching the same, before the expiration of the time above mentioned, such conveyance or contract shall be absolutely null and void; and such lands during such time shall not be subject to taxation, alienation, or forced sale of any improvements belonging to individual Indians shall be paid to the Indians to whom such improvements belong. The proceeds of the sale of any improvements belonging to the United States shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States; and the proceeds of the sale of said lands, first deducting therefrom the cost of the survey, appraisement, and sale, and the expense of removing the Indians as hereinafter provided, shall be placed to the credit of the said Sac and Fox and Iowa Indians, according to the interest of said tribes in said reservations, in the Treasury of the United States, and shall bear interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, which income shall be annually expended for the benefit of said Indians, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior.

Sec. 5. That the Secretary of the Interior may, with the consent of the Indians expressed in open council, as aforesaid, secure other reservation lands upon which to locate said Indians, cause their removal thereto, and expend such sum as may be necessary for their comfort and advancement in civilization.

Sec. 6. That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized to cause patents to be issued to the Sac and Fox (of the Missouri) tribe of Indians and the said Iowa tribe for the reservations that may be selected for them under the provisions of the preceding section.

Sec. 7. That the patent authorized by the preceding section to be issued to said Sac and Fox and Iowa tribes of Indians shall be of the legal effect and declare that the United States does and will hold the land therein described in trust for the sole use and benefit of said Sac and Fox and Iowa tribe of Indians, respectively.

Sec. 8. That whenever the Indians who may be properly residing upon the said reservations referred to in the last preceding sections shall desire allotments of lands in severalty, the Secretary of the Interior shall cause allotments to be made to such Indians in quantity, as follows:

To each head of a family, one hundred and sixty acres.

To each single person over the age of 21 years, eighty acres.

Sec. 9. That upon the approval of the allotments provided for in the preceding section by the Secretary of the Interior, the President shall cause certificates to issue therefor in the name of the allottees, which certificates shall be of the legal effect and declare that the United States does and will hold the fee of the land thus allotted, for the period of twenty-five years, in trust for the sole use and benefit of the Indian to whom such allotment shall have been made, or in case of his decease, of his heirs, and that at the expiration of said period the United States will convey the same by patent to the said Indian, or his heirs, in fee, discharged of said trust and free of all charge or incumbrance whatsoever; and if any conveyance shall be made of the lands set apart and allotted as herein provided, or any contract made touching the same, before the expiration of the time above mentioned, such conveyance or contract shall be absolutely null and void.

Sec. 10. That the Secretary of the Interior may, with the consent of the Indians expressed in open council, as provided in section 1, cause the removal of that portion of the Sac and Fox and Iowa tribes residing upon said Sac and Fox and Iowa reservations, in Nebraska and Kansas, to the reservation or reservations that may be secured for them, and expend such sums as may be rendered necessary by such removal, and for the comfort and advancement in civilization of said Indians; and the sum of $30,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the payment of such expenses and for the expenses of the survey, appraisement, and sale of said Sac and Fox and Iowa lands; and the amount so expended shall be reimbursed to the United States out of the first proceeds of the sale of said lands by said tribes, respectively.

Mr. MANDERSON. Mr. President—

Mr. DAWES. I move to amend the amendment in the tenth section by striking out "thirty" and inserting "ten;" so as to read:

And the sum of $10,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the payment of such expenses and for the expenses of the survey, appraisement, and sale of said Sac and Fox and Iowa lands; and the amount so expended shall be reimbursed to the United States out of the first proceeds of the sales of said lands by said tribes, respectively.

Mr. MANDERSON. That was the amendment I was about to move. The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CONGER. I understand the amount allotted to each of the Indians to be one hundred and sixty acres for the head of a family and eighty acres to one not the head of a family. I wish to ask, does this make any provision for lands to minors?

Mr. DAWES. The heads of families select for their minor children, and where the minors have no heads of families to select for them the Secretary of the Interior, through the agent, selects for them.

Mr. CONGER. The clause allotting one hundred and sixty acres to the head of a family and eighty acres to a minor I wish to have read again.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Sec. 8. That whenever the Indians who may be properly residing upon the said reservations referred to in the last preceding sections shall desire allotments of lands in severalty, the Secretary of the Interior shall cause allotments to be made to such Indians in quantity as follows:

To each head of a family, one hundred and sixty acres.

To each single person over the age of 21 years, eighty acres.

Mr. CONGER. I do not hear in that any provision for any minor.

Mr. DAWES. I think there is none. This amendment is a copy of a bill which passed the Senate at the last session and went down to the House in reference to the Iowa Indians. The Iowa Indians and the Sac and Foxes are occupying two small reservations together, of about 8,000 acres each, one in Nebraska and one in Kansas. That bill having passed the Senate, and a bill for the Sac and Foxes having passed the House, it is deemed wise by the Committee on Indian Affairs of the Senate to put the two together into one so that these two reservations, which are in fact one reservation of Indians living together, might be sold in the same manner and at the same time.

The bulk of the Indians included are located down in the Indian Territory but do not have any title to their land in the Indian Territory. They are all desirous of disposing of this land in Kansas and Nebraska. There is a residue remaining there. They are to have as part of the consideration title to the land they have chosen for themselves in the Indian Territory. That there is no provision for minor children, I suppose there is no doubt, though my attention has not been specifically called to it. There is no doubt of the fact that the few who remain there propose to go down and join their brethren in the Indian Territory; but lest there may be some families already located there who prefer to stay where they are this provision was put in the bill. It is not supposed that it will have any practical effect, because it is believed that these Indians of their own choice will all join their brethren.

Mr. CONGER. These very Indians were taken to the Indian Territory by force and under military authority; in the interest of civilization and philanthropy these Indians were driven from their land. I suppose if you are going to take away all their land and sell it either for their benefit or for that of some one else, there should be a provision that every living Indian on that land, old or young, should have some little piece of land out of the amount here provided for. I inquire of the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs whether it is not proposed to require that provision in every such bill? I find here a bill taking away the remnant of land left to this remnant of a tribe with provision for the head of a family and for certain Indians not heads of families that are of age. I know how much these lands are desired. I do not know whether this is part of the reservation along Locust Valley or some other part of the State of Nebraska, but I know how delightful those lands are and how desirable they are to people of my own race, and I shall propose to allow forty acres for each minor of these tribes. I move that there be an amendment coming in after "eighty acres," in line 8 of section 8, for persons not heads of families over 21 years of age:

And forty acres for the minors of each family on the reservation.

That would be in accordance with our uniform and universal rule. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan will please send his amendment to the desk.

Mr. CONGER. I have not the bill before me.

Mr. DAWES. While the Senator is preparing his amendment, I will say that if the Senator can frame an amendment that will give to any Indian any greater safeguards than those now in the bill, it will meet my hearty support.

The Senator is confusing this case with some other. The Iowa Indians and the Sac and Foxes of their own accord years ago preferred to leave, the main body of them, Kansas and Nebraska and go down into the Indian Territory. With the help of the Indian Department they have selected their own reservation down there. Each one of them is located on land represented to the Committee on Indian Affairs as of excellent quality; and they are, especially the Sacs and Foxes who have been there the longest, doing exceedingly well. Their land with the few Indians remaining on it in Kansas and Nebraska has become of great value, but is of no use to them because they do not cultivate it themselves but live down in the Indian Territory.

If they can have the fund that that land will create if properly sold they will have the means of subsistence and of education and of civilization that will make them independent. They are few in number; but this is an estate of great value to them. It is provided in reference to this sale, first, that it shall not take place until the consent in open council of the Indians, both the Sacs and Foxes and the Iowas, is obtained. They are an intelligent people; they know what they are about. To-day they are leasing their lands in the Indian Territory on such terms as that the Interior Department stands aside and lets them transact their business themselves. So they know what they are about. The land is to be appraised, but shall not be appraised at a sum less than $8 an acre. It may be appraised at as much over $8 an acre as three disinterested appraisers shall determine. Then it is to be put up at auction above the appraisal. That land will bring, it is supposed, from ten to fifteen dollars an acre, creating a great fund for the use of these people.

The evidence before the committee was that it was not likely a solitary Indian would choose to remain there; but it may turn out that there are Indians who would prefer to remain. The committee have provided therefore that every head of a family that shall prefer to remain there shall first have a title deed to one hundred and sixty acres of land, and every single man over 21 years of age shall have a title deed to just half that, or eighty acres. If my friend from Michigan thinks that there is a minor who will want to stay there while his parents go off into the Indian Territory, or any minor who has not got any parent living that wants to stay there, I hope he will provide for them.

Mr. CONGER. That is what I am proposing to do.

Mr. DAWES. The Senator shall have my support in such an amendment if he will omit to intimate that this land is about to be stolen from these Indians by the help of the Indian Committee and the Senators from Nebraska. If he will omit that, I will help him in his amendment.

Mr. CONGER. I find the plain fact that there is an omission here which has been put in every other bill contested and put in against all opposition. Now, I modify my amendment, and after the words "eighty acres," in line 8, at the end of section 8, I move to amend by inserting:

To each minor, forty acres.

Mr. VAN WYCK. No objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The proposed amendment to the amendment will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. After line 8, at the end of section 8, it is proposed to insert:

To each minor, forty acres.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Committee on Indian Affairs as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. DAWES. I move that a committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses be asked on the amendment to this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair would suggest that the title of the bill requires amendment.

Mr. DAWES. There is an amendment to the title reported by the committee.

The title was amended so as to read: "An act to provide for the sale of the Sac and Fox and Iowa Indian reservations, in the States of Nebraska and Kansas, and for other purposes."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts moves that the Senate request a conference with the House of Representatives on the disagreeing vote of the two Houses on this bill.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the Presiding Officer was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. DAWES, Mr. HARRISON, and Mr. COKE were appointed.

JOHN W. LANGSTER.

Mr. BLAIR. I have a written representation which should accompany a paper touching the case of one John W. Langster, who is under sentence of death in the jail of this District. A petition on the subject was presented by me a few days since, and it was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. He appears to have been tried and sentenced as though he were a sane man. There is an application pending for pardon. The witnesses who, from this statement, could demonstrate the man's insanity live some 1,200 or 1,500 miles distant. The parties are very poor, including those who are interesting themselves in behalf of this man. There seems to be no provision of law by which evidence in such a case can be obtained to be used before the pardoning power.

I have here a demonstration that this man was sent from the United States service to St. Elizabeth's Insane Asylum in this District only a year ago. He was discharged as temporarily cured. He soon got into some difficulty and through that difficulty committed a homicide, was tried, and convicted as a sane man. I must say that I believe from this evidence that he was insane, and that if the evidence could be procured his pardon would follow as a matter of course.

I do not know just what the Committee on the Judiciary can do in regard to this matter. Perhaps an examination of the evidence would satisfy the committee that they might address a formal communication to the Executive upon the subject, and there may be a respite or at least a proper investigation. It may be that the matter should properly go to the Committee on the District of Columbia. I ask the presiding officer now in the chair, who is chairman of the Committee on the District of Columbia, and also, I believe, a member of the Judiciary Committee, if, in behalf of humanity, he will not give a little attention to this matter?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The paper will be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, if there be no objection.

DIS TRICT TAX SALES.

Mr. ALDRICH. I now ask unanimous consent to call up House bill 8236, Order of Business 1345, the consideration of which was partially concluded yesterday.

Mr. MORRILL. I will not object, provided the trade-dollar bill is laid by informally subject to call.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That order will be made. Unanimous consent implies that the pending order is laid aside informally.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8236) relating to sales for taxes in the District of Columbia.

Mr. HOAR. I move to amend the bill in certain respects. In line 10 I move to insert after the word "deed" the words "and the affidavit hereinafter required."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection the amendment will be regarded as agreed to.

Mr. HOAR. Then I move to add to the bill:

The collector of taxes or other officer charged with the duty of selling any real estate in the District of Columbia for taxes shall, in addition to the other proceedings required by law, within ten days after such sale, give personal notice to all persons within the District of Columbia known to him or who can be ascertained by him by inquiry, having interest in the estate sold, whether as owner, mortgagee, or otherwise, of the fact of such sale and the assessment of such tax, and shall deposit in the post-office, postage prepaid, a like notice addressed to all such persons not within the District of Columbia at the place of their residence, so far as the same can be ascertained by him on inquiry; and he shall make affidavit that such notice has been given, which affidavit shall contain a copy of the same and of the names of the persons notified or of the fact that no such persons could be ascertained on inquiry, and shall be recorded with the deed conveying such estate.

These two amendments together, instead of making the deed conclusive evidence of the title after the expiration of the time limited, require with the deed an affidavit of the collector that he has inquired for the owners and has given them notice, if he can find them, and with a copy of the notice. This does not put upon the purchaser the necessity of proof that that has been done, but it makes the affidavit the conclusive proof. I have shown the provision to several members of the committee, and I think they all agree to it.

Mr. JACKSON. I desire to call the attention of the Senator to an amendment which I propose to come in at the end of line 22.

Mr. HOAR. Suppose this be added first, and then the Senator can state his amendment.

Mr. JACKSON. I think if it is read the Senator will see that it ought to come in at this point.

Mr. ALDRICH. Both these amendments have been submitted to members of the committee and are satisfactory to the committee.

Mr. JACKSON. It is only a question of the order in which they come.

Mr. HOAR. Let the amendment be read for information.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments reported by the Committee on the District of Columbia will be regarded as agreed to, if there be no objection. They were read yesterday. The question now is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR], to which the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. JACKSON] desires to offer an amendment, as the Chair understands. It will be read for information.

Mr. JACKSON. My amendment is not to the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts; but it is an amendment which ought to precede his.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be read for information.

The CHIEF CLERK. At the end of line 22, after the word "purchaser," it is proposed to insert:

Provided, however, That this conclusive evidence and title shall not prevail against the former owner who can show that the taxes for which the property was sold were duly paid before such sale.

Mr. HOAR. I think that should come in after my amendment.

Mr. JACKSON. Very well.

Mr. PLATT. I want to inquire whether the amendment which was proposed by the senior Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS] last night has been adopted.

Mr. HARRIS. It has not been formally offered, but will be offered as soon as the amendments of the Senator from Massachusetts and my colleague have been disposed of.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR].

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now is on the amendment of the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. JACKSON].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HOAR. I have one more amendment. In line 18, after the word "within," I move to strike out "one year" and insert "two years." I hope that will be done by unanimous consent.

Mr. HARRIS. I have no objection to that.

Mr. HOAR. Making the time within which the suit shall be brought two years instead of one year.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In line 18 it is proposed to strike out "one year" and insert "two years." The question is on that amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARRIS. I move to add to the bill the following additional proviso:

Provided further, That persons under legal disability shall not be precluded from bringing suit within two years from the removal of such disability.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CONGER. The amendment offered by the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. JACKSON] mentions "taxes." The bill mentions "taxes and assessments."

Mr. ALDRICH. I think the word "assessments" should be put in.

Mr. CONGER. The word "assessments" should be put in after "taxes." Let it read "taxes or assessments."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The proviso will be read as proposed to be modified.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Provided, however, That this conclusive evidence and title shall not prevail against the former owner who can show that the taxes or assessments for which the property was sold were duly paid before such sale.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The modification will be made, if there be no objection.

Mr. CALL. I move to add to the bill the following additional proviso:

Provided further, That when the commissioners are satisfied that any lot is the actual homestead of the owner, and that it comprises the principal portion of his estate, they may authorize the collector to accept a sum in full not less than one-half of the assessed value of the lot.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Florida [Mr. CALL].

Mr. CALL. The amendment was prepared by one of the commissioners of the District, and after consultation with him some of the citizens of the District came to me and stated that their cases were cases of very peculiar hardship; that the assessments formerly made for the improvement of the city had been very excessive, and sometimes the assessments had been made not in the interest of the improvement of the property but for the advantage of the public buildings.

Mr. HOAR. May I inquire of the Senator whether he means by his amendment that the collector is to accept what is proposed, from the purchaser at the sale, or that he is to accept from the tax-payer?

Mr. CALL. From the tax-payer.

Mr. HOAR. I think if the Senator will look at it he will see that it is a provision in regard to the proceedings at the sale.

Mr. CALL. It was intended that the tax-payer should have this relief.

Mr. HOAR. It would be interpreted to mean to accept as purchase-money of the estate, the Senator will see if he will look at it.

Mr. CALL. It was drawn by one of the commissioners, and I did not read it closely.

Mr. HOAR. If it had been drawn by the Senator it would have been much better.

Mr. CALL. I know what he intended by it. I will correct it in that respect.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Florida will be read as modified.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to add to the bill the following additional proviso:

Provided further, That when the commissioners are satisfied that any lot is the actual homestead of the owner and that it comprises the principal portion of his estate, they may accept a sum in full payment of the same not less than one-half of the assessed value of the lot.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McPHERSON. I move that the further consideration of the bill be postponed until to-morrow, and that the amendments which have been agreed to by the Senate be printed with the body of the bill, in order that the Senate may thoroughly understand what it is voting upon. As I understand from the reading of the bill, with all the amendments which have been agreed to by the Senate, it is a bill which proposes in effect and under certain conditions to extinguish all other title save the tax title. The tax title is supposed to supersede all others. There is no State Legislature in any State in the Union which would impose such a measure upon the municipal government of a city in the State. It is the most arbitrary, unjust, and tyrannical measure that I have ever heard or read of in my life. It is a bill that the Senate should not pass as it stands to-day. No mortgagee would, under this bill, be safe for a moment. Any man in the District of Columbia desiring to improve property and to borrow money for the purpose of improvement could not obtain it at any rate of interest that he would be willing to pay. It stops all improvements.

I say that for the Senate to hasten through a bill of that character in the last hours of the session, and amended as it has been, without the knowledge of any Senator here that the amendments touch in any shape or form or cover the defects of the bill, is entirely wrong. I think in justice to the people of this District who are interested and deeply interested in this legislation the bill should be printed with all the amendments, so that every Senator may know exactly what he is voting for.

Mr. HARRIS. In reply to the Senator from New Jersey I desire simply to say that I know of the laws of no State in the Union upon the subject of tax sales better guarded or more liberal in their provisions than the bill now pending as amended by the Senate; and at this late hour of the session, why we should postpone the bill from day to day, in order that the Senator from New Jersey may see in print the amendments adopted, I do not quite feel justified in doing or see the propriety of doing. I hope the Senator's motion to postpone the further consideration of the bill until to-morrow will not be agreed to.

Mr. CONGER. Within the last few days notice has been served upon one or two church societies, religious organizations, in this city that old assessments unpaid, supposed to have been disposed of long ago, under a revision or a review of the laws by the commissioners or by the authorities of the board, are found to apply to church property through some little defect or difference of time between the passage of one law and the passage of another, and they have received a notice that unless these old assessments, three, four, five, or six years old, some of them, are paid within so many days, the property will be sold. There has been no question about the intention of Congress in the laws which were passed to exempt church property actually held for religious purposes or for school purposes from certain taxes and certain assessments.

Mr. HARRIS. Do I understand the Senator to assert that church property held for purposes of public worship is threatened with sale for taxes in the District of Columbia?

Mr. CONGER. I do make that assertion, sir.

Mr. HARRIS. I am very much surprised that it is made, for my distinct impression is that within the last few years every church lot in the District of Columbia held and used for purposes of public worship has not only been exempted from all taxes, but that all taxes accruing previously have been remitted by acts of Congress.

Mr. CONGER. So I supposed.

Mr. HARRIS. I do not think there is such a case in the District.

Mr. CONGER. So I supposed; but I have had occasion to look into the matter in behalf of one of these societies, and I find that the laws on this subject were changed a little one year and changed a little another, and that there were intervals there where assessments did apply, notwithstanding the intention of the law to exempt them. I have spent some little time voluntarily with the officers of one society in laying their matter before the commissioners and getting a part of the property released.

There is another thing. One of these organizations has its Sunday-school room and chapel all in the same building. The District of Columbia authorities desired to occupy on week days the room that the church organization occupied evenings and Sundays for its purposes, and they rented that room of the organization for a primary school of the District, and have had it for years and paid rent. Now they come in and say because that building was rented and the church organization received a little rent, although it was occupied for church purposes whenever they wanted it, they must pay taxes and pay assessments upon that portion—one story—of the church building. I know several cases of that kind. I say this measure would compel and sanction the sale of that property under the notice that it will be sold unless these things are paid within a certain time.

Old taxes, old assessments came up in this kind of shape contrary to the spirit of the legislation for this District and supposed to be contrary to the law at the particular time when the assessments were incurred, endangering that kind of property all the while with disputed questions, and no remedy if it should pass along or the church be unable to pay its taxes. I think this is a most dangerous measure. The Senator from Tennessee says that it is more lenient than the law of any State. I do not know how it may be in all States, but a return of property for the non-payment of taxes in almost every State is made to the State authority; it is made to the treasury; it is advertised by the auditor-general; it is returned again; a year of public notice and personal notice is made to the owner or occupier of the land so taxed; and then by advertisement it is sold at open sale in the county.

Mr. HARRIS. The bill as it is now amended gives two years' public notice before the tax-deed is made.

Mr. CONGER. But that is before it becomes absolute.

Mr. HARRIS. Before the tax-deed is made.

Mr. CONGER. For the woman or child, it is true there is a restriction; but who in this city can follow along through all the intricacies of old assessments in the city, coming up year after year, and being enforced against property now in the hands of new purchasers?

I agree with the Senator from New Jersey that the title to all property in this District would be under a cloud continually from the time of the passage of such a bill as this is, as I believe it to be; and I agree with the Senator in desiring that the bill shall at least be reprinted with the amendments, so that we may see what it is.

Mr. McPHERSON. Mr. President—

Mr. HOAR. Will the Senator from New Jersey yield to me to make a motion to proceed to the consideration of executive business?

Mr. McPHERSON. Yes, sir.

Mr. HOAR. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. McPHERSON. Will the Senator withdraw the motion for a moment that we may have the bill printed with the amendments?

Mr. HOAR. I withdraw the motion for that purpose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The order to print the bill as amended will be made if there be no objection. The Chair hears none.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. HOAR. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After one hour and twenty-five minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, returned to the Senate in compliance with its request the following joint resolutions:

Joint resolution (S. R. 127) to authorize the printing of the reports of the Bureau of Ethnology;

Joint resolution (S. R. 124) to authorize the printing of the reports of the Geological Survey; and Joint resolution (S. R. 129) to authorize the printing of the reports of the Geological Survey.

The message also announced that the House had concurred in the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the fifth amendment of the House to the bill (S. 66) providing for allotment of lands in severalty to the Indians residing upon the Umatilla reservation, in the State of Oregon, and granting patents therefor, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8179) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes, asked a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. W. S. HOLMAN of Indiana, Mr. JOHN HANCOCK of Texas, and Mr. JOSEPH G. CANNON of Illinois managers at the conference on its part.

The message also announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 8256) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 8256) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5849) limiting the time for the presentation and payment of claims against the United States.

Mr. MORRILL. I call for the regular order.

Mr. DAWES. I ask for the consideration of a conference report.

Mr. MORRILL. Let the regular order be laid before the Senate before anything else is done.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. COCKRELL in the chair). The Senator from Wisconsin moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill indicated by him, pending which the Senator from Vermont calls for the regular order. The regular order will be announced.

The CHIEF CLERK. "A bill (H. R. 4976) for the retirement and recoinage of the trade-dollar."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Wisconsin to proceed to the consideration of House bill 5849.

Mr. MORRILL. The bill suggested by the Senator from Wisconsin would undoubtedly take the whole afternoon, and I do not expect that the trade-dollar bill will occupy more than a few minutes. I wish to say that, after the demonstrations made elsewhere, there is not probably any chance of the latter part of the amendment, the section proposed to be stricken out by the Senator from Kansas, becoming a law.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is the duty of the Chair to say that debate on the motion of the Senator from Wisconsin is not in order.

Mr. MORRILL. I am not debating that; I am debating the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion of the Senator from Wisconsin is the only pending motion. If there be no objection the Senator from Vermont will proceed. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. MORRILL. I merely desire to say further that I think there will be unanimous consent to take the vote upon striking out the fifth section of the amendment of the Committee on Finance at once, without further debate, and then the Senate can dispose of the trade-dollar bill as they choose. I trust that that course will be pursued.

Mr. DAWES. Is it not in order to call up a conference report at any time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will not be in order, the Chair thinks, until the Chair puts the question on the motion of the Senator from Wisconsin. The Senator from Wisconsin moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5849) limiting the time for the presentation and payment of claims against the United States. The question is on agreeing to the motion.

The question being put, a division was called for; and the ayes were 29. Mr. MORRILL. I ask for the yeas and nays. The question is evidently whether the silver bill shall be superseded or not.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. MITCHELL. I rise to a question for parliamentary information. What will be the effect of the adoption of the motion to take up the bill proposed by the Senator from Wisconsin? Will it displace the trade-dollar bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks it will, under the rules.

Mr. MITCHELL. So I understand.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will be in order to move to proceed to the consideration of the trade-dollar bill or any other bill afterward. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Wisconsin, on which the yeas and nays have been ordered.

The Secretary called the roll.

Mr. MANDERSON. I am paired with the Senator from Florida [Mr. JONES]. If he were here, I should vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 34, nays 21; as follows:

YEAS—34.

Bowen,	Garland,	Jonas,	Vance,
Butler,	George,	Jones of Nevada,	Van Wyck,
Call,	Gibson,	Miller of Cal.,	Vest,

So the motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5849) limiting the time for the presentation and payment of claims against the United States.

INDIANS ON UMATILLA RESERVATION.

Mr. DAWES. I now call up the conference report on the bill (S. 66) providing for allotment of lands in severalty to the Indians residing upon the Umatilla reservation, in the State of Oregon, and granting patents therefor, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the fifth amendment of the House to the bill (S. 66) providing for allotment of lands in severalty to the Indians residing upon the Umatilla reservation, in the State of Oregon, and granting patents therefor, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to House amendment No. 5, and agree to the same.

H. L. DAWES.

JAS. H. SLATER.

ANGUS CAMERON,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

M. C. GEORGE.

R. S. STEVENS.

OLIN WELLBORN.

Managers on the part of the House.

The report was concurred in.

MARY ALLEN.

Mr. PLUMB. I ask unanimous consent that the vote of the Senate taken on the 6th of the present month, by which the bill (H. R. 2100) granting a pension to Mary Allen was indefinitely postponed, may be reconsidered, and that the bill be placed on the Calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to a reconsideration of the vote indefinitely postponing the bill? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered. The bill will be placed on the Calendar with the adverse report of the committee.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. BUTLER, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. GROOME submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. MANDERSON submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the general deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. DOLPH submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. SLATER. I desire to ask a change of reference of an amendment offered by me on the 19th of February from the Committee on Claims to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oregon asks unanimous consent to change the reference of an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 8255) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1885, and for prior years, and for other purposes, from the Committee on Claims to the Committee on Military Affairs. That order will be entered if there be no objection; and the amendment will be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

WASHINGTON MONUMENT DEDICATION.

Mr. MANDERSON. I ask unanimous consent to make a report at this time from the Committee on Printing.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nebraska asks unanimous consent to make a report at this time from the Committee on Printing. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. MANDERSON. I am directed by the Committee on Printing to report back a concurrent resolution of the House of Representatives authorizing the printing of extra copies of the report, &c., of the joint commission on the Washington Monument, adversely to the adoption of the concurrent resolution, and presenting a bill as a substitute for the concurrent resolution. I ask that the bill may be now considered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands that the Senator from Nebraska moves that the concurrent resolution be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. MANDERSON. Yes, sir.

Mr. SHERMAN. I submit to the Senator from Nebraska whether he had better not let the House resolution stand unacted upon, and pass the bill, so that if the House does not act upon the bill promptly we can dispose of the concurrent resolution?

Mr. MANDERSON. I will take that course, and ask that the concurrent resolution be laid on the table.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That course will be taken then. The Senator from Nebraska reports an original bill, the title of which will be read.

The bill (S. 2666) to provide for the printing of the report and proceedings of the commission to provide suitable ceremonies for the dedication of the Washington Monument, was read the first time by its title.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nebraska asks unanimous consent that the bill be now considered. It will be read the second time at length for information.

The bill was read the second time at length, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the report and proceedings of the commission to provide suitable ceremonies for the dedication of the Washington Monument, together with the engraved card attached thereto, be printed under the direction of the Joint Committee on Printing, and that 26,500 additional copies be printed; 5,000 copies of the same for the use of the Senate, 16,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives; 500 copies for distribution by Lieut. Gen. P. H. Sheridan, United States Army, to the civil and military organizations which participated in the procession; 500 copies for the Washington National Monument Association, for distribution among its members; 500 copies for distribution by Col. Thomas L. Casey, engineer, among the mechanics and workmen employed in the erection of the monument; 500 copies for Hon. Robert C. Winthrop; and 500 copies to Hon. John H. Daniel; and for the purpose of defraying the expense of printing the said attached card the sum of $2,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be and the same is hereby, appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move to amend the bill by changing the name of "Hon. John H. Daniel" to "Hon. John W. Daniel."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That amendment will be made if there be no objection.

Mr. COCKRELL. I should like to ask the Senator reporting the bill what the report embraces. We have not seen it. Does it include the two addresses and all the proceedings?

Mr. MANDERSON. Both. It includes all the proceedings upon the 21st day of February.

Mr. SHERMAN. All will be printed.

Mr. HAWLEY. It occurs to me at the moment to make another inquiry of my colleague on the Committee on Printing, or for the consideration of the Senate, whether it would not be worth while to provide in the bill, now we are about it, that there shall be printed a brief statement of the exercises at the laying of the corner-stone, with the address of Mr. Winthrop delivered at that time, so that the whole may appear together? I make the suggestion.

Mr. SHERMAN. That would be a long document. That has already been published and it will be found in the Library. It is a large document, larger I think than the proposed document will be. It would only make a compilation not needed. I have no objection to the proposition, but it would probably double the size of the document to print the addresses and the Masonic ceremonies, which were very long, on the laying of the corner-stone. However, I shall not object to it if the Senator thinks it is worth while.

Mr. MANDERSON. I submit that the bill is broad enough to permit the joint commission to print that or any other matter it may desire. It is under the control of the commission and the Joint Committee on Printing.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PENSION BILLS.

Mr. VAN WYCK. From the Committee on Pensions I gave notice this morning that early in the day we should ask for the consideration of a few Senate pension bills reported favorably—eight or ten of them. It is desired that they should be passed early in the day, and be sent over to the House so as to secure their passage there, that they may become laws. I ask unanimous consent for that purpose now. It will take but a few moments to dispose of these bills.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nebraska asks unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to consider in their order Senate pension bills favorably reported. Is there objection?

Mr. VOORHEES. I desire to say a single word. I perceive that there is great danger that a large mass of pension business now on the Calendar is liable to be neglected and not acted upon at this session. I refer to the business reported adversely by the Committee on Pensions, and yet with merit enough in somebody's mind to be placed on the Calendar. Anything on the Calendar of the Senate is worthy of consideration. With every impulse and desire to take up any pension business that is called for, I feel impelled to require the consideration of the Calendar. I agreed, and agreed cheerfully, day before yesterday to the consideration of pension business reported favorably, but it was with the understanding—for that was the understanding of the Senate—that some time or other before final adjournment the other pension business on the Calendar which has great merit should be considered; that it should not be ignored.

I see very plainly the danger of drifting out of the present session without considering the other pension business that is on the Calendar. I know cases that are reported adversely which are as full of merit and justice as any cases which have been passed under a favorable recommendation by the committee. Consequently I do not want to have that class of business lose its place and be ignored and overslaughed; and it shall not be done so far as I am concerned.

The discrimination which has been made repeatedly, and which is now made again by the Senator from Nebraska, by taking up favorably reported business from the Pension Committee alarms me for the fate of the Calendar cases that I speak of. The Senator from Nebraska knows very well, and so does the chairman of the Committee on Pensions, that there is a large number of cases adversely reported which were adversely reported pro forma, as a kind of precedent, where the adverse reports are without merit, and it was supposed the bills were to be passed, and the committee expects them to be passed. Consequently I intend when we approach the consideration of pension business again to insist that the Calendar shall be taken up and that those cases shall be considered.

I could enumerate cases; I could speak of individual instances of the old widows of high officers; but I do not feel that it is proper to do so now. It will be wrong if we ignore and leave untouched and unconsidered and unacted upon those cases because they are reported upon adversely. Some Senators here spring to the floor as if an adverse report from the Committee on Pensions was as the laws of the Medes and Persians, and as if there can be no change about it. I do not feel that way, and I have reason to know that the Senate has been and is wiser by far than the committee in many instances, and that the committee itself is not exacting for its adverse reports.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made.

Mr. VAN WYCK. No; I beg the pardon of the Chair. I do not understand the Senator from Indiana to object.

Mr. VOORHEES. No; I do not make an objection to the consideration of any pension business, but I ask that the other pension business on the Calendar shall be taken up likewise, and I am mistaken in the Senator from Nebraska if he does not believe with me that that ought to be done.

Mr. VAN WYCK. Yes; I agree with the Senator from Indiana. The only difficulty is that the bills to which the Senator refers are principally House bills, and are already on the Calendar, and only require the action of the Senate. The few bills here are cases which are entirely undisputed, and are Senate bills which the committee have really neglected, and therefore it is desired that they shall be passed now in order that they may go to the House.

Mr. VOORHEES. Very well; I want to know, because if it is intended that there shall be action in good faith on these adversely reported cases I shall not interpose this kind of an objection. I have not interposed an objection to the consideration of the bills that the Senator from Nebraska now speaks of except that I want to call attention to the rest of the pension business on the Calendar, and I wish to know from the committee whether they intend to have action on those cases, because there is very great danger of their being ignored, and that the session will go out on the tide of time without those cases being considered.

Mr. VAN WYCK. I will say that the committee are as anxious as the Senator from Indiana to have those cases considered and acted upon.

Mr. VOORHEES. When will you call them up?

Mr. VAN WYCK. At any time the Senator suggests.

Mr. VOORHEES. The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT] suggests to me to call them up right away.

Mr. MITCHELL. If I may be allowed to say a word, I trust the Senate will take up the class of bills to which the Senator from Indiana refers and dispose of them. I do not know that I can ask for that in the name of the committee, because the reports stand formally as adverse reports; but the Senate has overruled the committee in a great many cases similar to those now on the Calendar in which adverse reports have been made. I think it is due and proper that those bills should be considered; but the proposition now is simply that we shall take up the Senate bills reported favorably so that they may go over to the House. I trust that may be done.

Mr. HARRIS. I shall interpose no objection to the consideration of pension bills favorably reported, but I desire to give notice that while there are more than a hundred House bills on our Calendar which are favorably reported I shall object to the taking up of a pension bill or any other bill adversely reported until those House bills have been considered.

Mr. BLAIR. I desire to say a few words, as this seems to be a sort of debate. A few days since we took up the pension business on a general understanding that we were to have the day for that business. We went through the cases to which there was no objection. That took up half the day. There was plenty of time remaining to have considered and to have disposed of all the cases of the character alluded to by the Senator from Indiana. Then, with the understanding that not more than ten minutes would be taken, two bills were by unanimous consent allowed to come before the Senate on the request of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL]. I was very much disposed to object, but the assurance was very strong that they would not lead to debate. One passed with little debate, but the other took several hours and consumed the rest of the day, and it is liable to consume considerably more time; so that we lost the half day which was by general consent given to the Committee on Pensions.

These contested cases, if I may so call them, are some twenty or more in number, but they involve only one or two principles which are in controversy in the Senate. I do not think that more than an hour or two could possibly be consumed in the consideration of all of them. Many of them are very pressing cases. Unless acted upon very great distress will result in many of them. In fact they are here for the purpose of relieving existing distress, and as touching and as deep as that in any of the cases which have passed without objection through the Senate.

I do not understand that a pension bill is necessarily to receive the unanimous approval of the committee in order to entitle it to be heard in the Senate any more than any other bill. Very few bills which are of importance come before the Senate with the unanimous approval of a committee. A pension bill upon which the Pensions Committee is divided ought not to stand any worse than any other form of proposed legislation. Many of these bills have been pending from quite early in the session; some came over from the last session.

I think that if any class of legislation should be considered by the Senate it is the contested-pension cases, and they can be disposed of very soon. I shall ask the Senate under these circumstances to consider those cases as soon as the bills, which have been alluded to by the Senator from Nebraska, are disposed of. I want them to come up as they may be moved. I shall make that motion myself in regard to some of them.

Mr. PLATT. May I ask the Senator from New Hampshire a question, so that I may understand just what he means?

Mr. BLAIR. I mean just this—

Mr. PLATT. Let me ask the question. There are on the Calendar a great number of cases which have been reported against unanimously by the committee. Some of them have been indefinitely postponed, and that vote reconsidered, and the bills placed on the Calendar; but there is a unanimous report of the committee against them. Then there is another class of cases where bills have been reported adversely and less than a majority of the committee have submitted the views of the minority, and they have been placed on the Calendar. Those cases are of the same character as cases which we have hitherto passed in the Senate. It seems to me that at least that class of cases ought to come first, before those which have been unanimously reported against by the committee.

Mr. BLAIR. That is certainly true; and it is to that class of cases I have reference. Those which are reported against unanimously by the committee will hardly be given any time. I suppose each case must come up on motion, with the understanding that others of a like class may be considered, the Senate voting perhaps with that understanding.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. There seems to be such a strong desire that pension business may be considered this afternoon that I will consent that the bill in my charge, and which the Senate has just voted to take up and proceed to the consideration of, may be informally laid aside in order that pension business may be proceeded with. I do not want the bill to lose its place as the regular order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. VAN WYCK] that the Senate private pension bills favorably reported be now considered in their order? The Chair hears no objection. The first bill of that class will be read.

MARIA G. DUNBAR.

The bill (S. 993) for the relief of Maria G. Dunbar was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate from the Committee on Pensions, with an amendment, in line 8 to strike out the word "filed" and insert the words "properly executed;" so as to make the bill read:

seventh Regiment Massachusetts State Volunteers, for arrears of pension; Provided, That she shall establish to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that an application for said arrears was properly executed by said Moses C. M. LOUISE BUTLER.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Pensions with amendments, in line 8, before the word "dollars," to strike out "fifty" and insert "forty;" and at the end of the bill to add "for herself and her three children;" so as to make the bill read:

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of M. Louise Butler, widow of George Butler, late a major of marines in the service of the United States, and pay her a pension at the rate of $40 per month; said pension to be in lieu of any she may hereafter receive for herself and her three children.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELLA W. THORNTON.

The bill (S. 2662) granting an increase of pension to Ella W. Thornton, widow of Capt. James S. Thornton, late of the United States Navy, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Ella W. Thornton, widow of Capt. James S. Thornton, late of the United States Navy, and to pay her a pension at the rate of $50 a month in lieu of the pension now paid her.

Mr. JACKSON. I should like to hear the report read in that case.

Mr. BLAIR. I will state that this is not a contested case. The woman is paralyzed, and the proposed increase is put on the ground of her physical condition.

Mr. JACKSON. These reports were all made to-day. I should like to hear the report read and the grounds stated for increasing this pension to $50 a month.

Mr. MITCHELL. I will say to the Senator from Tennessee that this is not the case of the Mrs. Thornburgh to which so many allusions have been made. It is another case entirely—the case of Mrs. Thornton.

Mr. BLAIR. She is the widow of the commander of the Kearsarge.

Mr. JACKSON. Let us hear the report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the following report, submitted by Mr. BLAIR February 27:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2662) granting increase of pension to Ellen W. Thornton, widow of Capt. James S. Thornton, have examined the same, and report recommending passage of the same upon the ground of her physical condition, which is such that an even larger pension would be given to a private soldier under the same circumstances, she being afflicted with paralysis. We print her memorial presented to the Forty-seventh Congress. Her condition is now worse.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Respectfully represents your petitioner that she is the widow of the late Capt. James S. Thornton, of the United States Navy, deceased; that she has long been an invalid; that she is unable to walk without assistance, and that her malady, which is in the nature of paralysis, is increasing; that on account of her extreme ill-health she has resided at St. Michaels, Azores, for the past five years; that she is now in the receipt of a pension of $30 a month on account of her said husband, and that he left a very small property, the income of which, together with her said pension, is insufficient for her support, even with the strictest economy, in her present helpless condition.

Wherefore she prays that her said pension may be increased from $30 to $50 a month.

ELLEN W. THORNTON.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMELIA J. GILL.

The bill (S. 2661) granting a pension to Miss — Gill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

Gill, and pay her a pension at the rate of $20 a month from the passage of this act, on account of her services as a nurse during the war of the rebellion and her disability contracted therein while rendering such service.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended to read:

A bill granting a pension to Miss Amelia J. Gill.

ANN ATKINSON.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MITCHELL. I now move to take up the bill (H. R. 5509) for the benefit of soldiers and sailors who have lost an arm at the shoulder-joint, a bill which I reported this morning from the Committee on Pensions, with instructions to ask for its immediate passage. It has passed the House. It simply applies the same rule to soldiers who have had their arms amputated at the shoulder-joint as—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is the duty of the Chair to state to the Senator from Pennsylvania that debate on a motion to proceed to the consideration of a bill is not in order. The Senate resumes the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5349) limiting the time for the presentation and payment of claims against the United States, the pending question being on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Indiana [Mr. HARRISON], pending which the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. MITCHELL] moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5509) for the benefit of soldiers and sailors who have lost an arm at the shoulder-joint. The Chair understands that this bill was reported to-day. It requires unanimous consent that the bill be now considered. Is there objection?

Mr. JACKSON and others. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made. The pending question is on the amendment of the Senator from Indiana to House bill 5349, which will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 7, after the word "three," it is proposed to insert "six;" so as to read:

Within six years after the passage of this act.

Mr. BLAIR. I do not quite understand the telescopic performance here.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. All the Senate pension bills favorably reported have been gone through with. The Chair will state the condition of business. The Senate then resumed the consideration of the bill it had under consideration when it was informally laid aside. Notice was given that those being concluded it would be moved to go on with the pension bills that had not been favorably reported. But it was the duty of the Chair to lay before the Senate the business which had been laid aside informally.

Mr. MORRILL. In accordance with that notice I now move to take up the House bill—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Hampshire has the floor.

Mr. BLAIR. I yield to the Senator from Vermont.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. Will the Senator from Vermont bear with me one moment? I will consent that the regular order be informally laid aside for the purpose of considering pension bills, whether favorably reported or not.

Mr. BLAIR. I understand that to be the original consent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Vermont asks unanimous consent that the pending order be informally laid aside for the purpose of considering pension bills. Is there objection?

Mr. JACKSON. I object to that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made.

EMILY L. ALVORD.

Mr. MORRILL. I move, then, to take up House bill No. 7659, Order of Business 1138.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Vermont moves to proceed to the consideration of Order of Business 1138. The title of the bill will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. "A bill (H. R. 7659) granting a pension to Mrs. Emily L. Alvord."

Mr. JACKSON. I object to that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Vermont.

The question being put, it was declared that the ayes appeared to prevail.

Mr. JACKSON. I call for the yeas and nays.

On seconding the call for the yeas and nays four Senators rose.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is obliged to say there is not a sufficient number up, only four Senators rising. The ayes have it.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 7659) granting a pension to Mrs. Emily L. Alvord. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Emily L. Alvord, widow of Brig. Gen. Benjamin Alvord, deceased, late Paymaster-General of the United States Army, at $50 per month.

Mr. MORRILL. I desire to say a brief word about this bill. It is a House bill, and I understand was reported unanimously there—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator has no right to refer to reports made in the House of Representatives.

Mr. MORRILL. I will take that all back, then. [Laughter.] It is in behalf of the widow of General Alvord. The only reason why I say a word about it is that I was acquainted with him for a dozen years here in Washington and knew him to be a very valuable man. He served in the Army forty-six years, and his service commenced almost immediately after his graduation, in the Florida or Seminole war, and he was engaged in the Mexican war, brevetted for his conduct in battle in various places in the Seminole war and at Cerro Gordo and at Resaca de la Palma. He was also a valuable officer at West Point, serving there as a professor. He was known, while living, to be a man of large culture in scientific matters, and contributed to the various publications of the country in that direction. His widow is almost entirely destitute. She has a mother and a sister to sustain, and I trust therefore there will be no objection to passing this bill as it came to us from the House.

Mr. VANCE. I ask that the report be read.

The Chief Clerk read the following report, submitted by Mr. CULLOM February 6, 1885:

The Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 7659) granting a pension to Mrs. Emily L. Alvord, having examined the same submits the following report:

The circumstances of this case are set forth in the report of the House Committee on Invalid Pensions, as follows:

That General Alvord was an officer in the Army of the United States in continuous service for forty-seven years. His military record is most satisfactory and brilliant. He was in the Florida war against the Seminole Indians, was engaged in several skirmishes, and was promoted for his gallant conduct. He was in the war with Mexico, and participated in several engagements, and was twice promoted for his gallant and meritorious conduct in the battles of said war. He was in command as brigadier-general United States volunteers from 1862 to 1866 in the war with the seceding States, and promoted in the regular Army for faithful and meritorious services to brevet lieutenant-colonel and brevet-colonel and brevet brigadier-general in the United States Army. He was afterward Paymaster-General of the United States Army, and discharged the duties of the office with great ability, giving entire satisfaction, being honest, faithful, and industrious.

He died in 1884, having been on the retired-list four years, of disease contracted while in active service in the Army and in the line of his duty, as shown by the certificate of the surgeon of the United States Army, which certificate is appended to this report. He graduated in the Military Academy of the United States; was a scholar of distinction; was assistant professor of mathematics and of natural and experimental philosophy at the United States Military Academy in 1857. He was the author of some valuable books, which honored him. He was a pure and devout Christian, of high honor, a warm and generous friend, and a kind husband and father, as brave as the bravest and as gentle as the gentlest. His widow, the only wife he ever had, his companion for many years and the mother of his children, is old and infirm, with but little money or property, and with three children and a very old and helpless maiden sister of her husband to support.

Wherefore they report the bill without amendment, with the opinion that it ought to pass.

I certify that Brig. Gen. Benjamin Alvord, United States Army, retired, was, at the date of his retirement, suffering from chronic diarrhea, for which he had been repeatedly treated by me during the last two years of his active service. Though for many years, and dating as far in the past as the Mexican war, General Alvord had been frequently compelled to apply for medical treatment for diarrhea, to which he was strongly predisposed, it did not become a permanent and chronic disease until in 1876, and when in the line of his duty as Paymaster-General. At that time and subsequently his health became so much impaired as to necessitate the daily use of remedies and led to feeble action of the heart, general debility, and organic disease of the kidneys, of which he died.

BASIL NORRIS,
Surgeon, United States Army.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., December 8, 1884.
True copy.

WM. B. ROCHESTER,
Paymaster-General, United States Army.

The committee does not feel warranted in favoring the passage of the bill, and therefore recommends that it be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. CULLOM. I only wish to say that I reported this bill from the committee; and while the committee was adverse to the passage of the bill I thought that the facts in the case connected with the history of this soldier and the condition of his widow justified the passage of the bill, and I so stated when I reported it.

Mr. CONGER. I knew General Alvord for some twenty-five years. He was stationed for a long time at a fort near the town where I live, and I therefore knew him very well. I know too of the extreme destitution of his widow. I trust there will be no opposition to the passage of this bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, and read the third time.

Mr. VANCE. I ask for the yeas and nays on the passage of the bill. The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin (when his name was called). I am paired for this afternoon with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. SLATER]. If I were not paired, I should vote "yea;" and if he were present, he would vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 34, nays 13; as follows:

So the bill was passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARRIS in the chair). The Chair calls the attention of the Senator from New Hampshire to Senate bill 2377 to pension the same person.

Mr. BLAIR. Let that be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate bill will be indefinitely postponed, if there be no objection. It is so ordered.

WIDOW OF COMMANDER S. DANA GREENE.

Mr. ALDRICH. I now move to take up House bill 7830, Order of Business 1140, which is the next case on the Calendar.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 7830) granting a pension to the widow of the late Commander S. Dana Greene, United States Navy. It proposes to place on the pension-roll, at the rate of $50 per month, the name of Mary A. Greene, widow of the late Commander S. Dana Greene, United States Navy.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

J. WASHINGTON BRANK.

Mr. VANCE. I move to take up Order of Business 1242, being House bill 1132. It does not have the merit of being a pension case, but it is the next thing to it; it is the case of a soldier who was enlisted, and was captured before he was regularly sworn in, and served two years in the military prison in Richmond.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from North Carolina that the question is not debatable.

Mr. VANCE. So I understand, but I debated it a little before I was reminded of the point of order, for which I beg pardon. I move to take up that bill.

Mr. SEWELL. Will not the Senator from North Carolina allow us to get through with two or three pension cases that are continuous on the Calendar with those just acted on? There will be no objection to getting up his bill afterward.

Mr. VANCE. No, sir; I can not waive my motion now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is not debatable. Debate can only proceed by unanimous consent. The Senator from North Carolina moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 1132) to place J. Washington Brank on the muster-rolls of Company B, Second North Carolina Mounted Infantry.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to direct the Secretary of War to place the name of J. Washington Brank on the muster-rolls of Company B, Second North Carolina Mounted Infantry, to date from September 25, 1863.

Mr. SHERMAN. I should like to have the report read. I do not know what the bill is about.

The Chief Clerk read the following report, submitted by Mr. MAXEY February 17, 1885:

The Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1132) to place J. Washington Brank on the muster-rolls of Company B, Second North Carolina Mounted Infantry, respectfully submit the following report:

H. R. 5316 was introduced at the first session Forty-seventh Congress, having the same object in view as the bill now before the committee. That bill was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs of the House, and was reported with amendments June 12, 1882. As amended by the committee, it is in words the same as the present bill.

The passage of the bill was recommended as amended by the committee. (See House Report 1408, first session Forty-seventh Congress, to accompany H. R. 5316.)

That bill was never finally acted on. At the first session Forty-eighth Congress the present bill (H. R. 1132) was introduced, referred to the Committee on Military Affairs of the House, and on the 18th March, 1884, submitted to the Committee of the Whole, with House Report No. 821 thereon, and passed the House May 17, 1884.

The report (821) of the House embodies the facts, and is hereby adopted, as follows:

"The testimony in this case shows that the soldier was duly enlisted by Capt. George M. Kirk, Company B, Second North Carolina Mounted Infantry, the 25th September, 1863, to serve three years or during the war, at Greenville, Tenn., he having passed through the confederate lines for that purpose. He was furnished for three weeks to visit his home, and on his return to the command was captured by the confederates at Warm Springs, N. C., where he was to have been regularly mustered into the United States service. The soldier was taken to Belle Isle, at Richmond, Va., and kept as a prisoner of war till Richmond was occupied by the Union forces. He was kept until the surrender at Appomattox, and then allowed to go home. His papers were made out, which were lost, and he never received either pay or bounty."

In the opinion of the committee the bill ought to pass; wherefore they report said bill (H. R. 1132) without amendment, and recommend that it do pass.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARGARET D. MARCHAND.

Mr. SEWELL. I move to take up Senate bill 957, Order of Business 1141.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 957) granting a pension to Margaret D. Marchand. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Margaret D. Marchand, widow of Commodore J. B. Marchand, late of the United States Navy, at the rate of $50 per month.

Mr. SEWELL. There is a report submitted by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BLAIR] with an amendment reducing the amount to $30 a month.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands that the bill was reported with an amendment. The amendment will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 8 it is proposed to strike out "fifty" and insert "thirty;" so as to read:

And pay her a pension at the rate of $30 per month from the date of the passage of this act.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. May I ask the Senator from New Jersey when this man died or when he was killed?

Mr. SEWELL. This is the case of the widow of Commodore Marchand, one of the old officers of the Navy, who served thirty or forty years. There is a long report on the case.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I understood that; but it does suggest itself to me that there must be some time when you will have to end this pension-roll. Why we should pension the representatives of those who have died since the war from ordinary disease, I do not understand. I am entirely willing to go as far as any other Senator in pensioning those who were wounded, or the widows and children of those who really were killed in the war; but I do not see that I am under any obligation, I do not see that I ought properly to vote to pension the family of everybody who has died since the war, merely because he happened to hold some rank in the United States Army or Navy or any other army or navy. There must be a period put to this matter of pensions, somewhere and at some time. It seems to me that the right time to do it is now. Pension the dependent families of those who were soldiers and as soldiers either were killed or wounded or suffered. To that extent I can go, and I will go as far as any Senator on this floor; but to pension the family of every man who happened to be a commodore or a general or a colonel or something else, I can not vote for.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. BLAIR. I wish to say that this is just like the Alvord case which the Senate has adopted. The committee divided precisely as in that case, and this being a Senate bill a majority of the committee were in favor of reporting an amendment reducing the rate of pension from $50 to $30 per month. So it comes here with that amendment, but upon the principle sanctioned by the Senate at the last session and this session and its general practice this lady should receive the benefit of the bill as it was introduced at $50, and therefore consistency and justice to this woman require that the amendment should be rejected; and the issue comes in this way: Let the bill be passed as originally introduced and referred to the committee. I therefore move that the Senate do not concur in the amendment of the committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will state that on looking at the report it appears to have been adverse on the whole bill, and it is open to some question whether an amendment to a bill reported adversely entirely would be strictly in order; but as it stands in the papers the Chair will put the question, saving any point of order until it shall arise in the future. The question is on the amendment recommended by the committee reducing the amount from $50 to $30 a month.

The amendment was rejected.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LEGISLATIVE, ETC., APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. MITCHELL. I move to consider—

Mr. PLUMB. I rise to a privileged question. I desire to have the President lay before the Senate the message from the House in regard to the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill in order that I may make a motion with regard to it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Pending the motion of the Senator from Pennsylvania, the Senator from Kansas asks, under the rule, that the Chair lay before the Senate the message from the House of Representatives returning the legislative appropriation bill, disagreeing to the Senate amendments. The action of the House of Representatives on the Senate amendments will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, February 27, 1885.

Resolved, That the House do not concur in the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8179) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes, and ask a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Ordered, That Mr. HODGKINS, Mr. HANCOCK, and Mr. CANNON be appointed managers on the part of the House.

Mr. PLUMB. I move that the Senate insist on its amendments to the bill and accede to the request of the House for a conference.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. ALLISON, Mr. DAWES, and Mr. COCKRELL were appointed.

MARTHA C. BREESE.

Mr. MITCHELL. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Order of Business 1196, being the bill (H. R. 4280) to increase the pension of Mrs. Martha C. Breese.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to increase to $50 per month the pension of Mrs. Martha C. Breese, widow of Kidder Randolph Breese, late a captain in the United States Navy.

Mr. MANDERSON. I ask the Senator from Pennsylvania to yield to me until I can call up Order of Business 1331.

Mr. MITCHELL. This can be disposed of in a few moments.

Mr. MANDERSON. Very well.

Mr. CAMDEN. I should like to have the report in that case read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is no report; only the views of the minority.

The Chief Clerk read the views of the minority (submitted by Mr. MITCHELL, February 10, 1885), as follows:

The minority of the Committee on Pensions, dissenting from the views of the majority in relation to the bill (H. R. 4280) granting a pension to Mrs. Martha C. Breese, respectfully recommend the passage of the bill for the reasons stated in the House report, which is as follows:

"Mrs. Breese is the widow of Kidder Randolph Breese, late a captain in the United States Navy, of whom Admiral Porter has well said: 'There was no officer during the war who performed more valuable service than he did.' And referring to Mrs. Breese's application to Congress for an increase of her pension, Admiral Porter says: 'I hope sincerely that she will not be disappointed in this matter, for if ever the widow of an officer deserved to be taken care of by the Government it is the widow of Captain Breese.'

"Captain Breese served all through the campaign of the Mississippi, through the siege of Vicksburg, and the opening up of the river to the sea, and always with the most distinguished bravery and self-sacrificing conduct. He was fleet-captain of Admiral Porter's fleet at the storming of Fort Fisher, and the heroism with which he led the forlorn hope of naval officers and sailors that assaulted the works by land is a bright page in the history of the civil war and is the common heritage of American citizens.

"But," says Admiral Porter, referring to Captain Breese's part in the campaign of the Mississippi, 'he no doubt laid the first seeds of disease on those rivers, for he was never well after he left there.' Captain Breese died while on sick-leave, September 13, 1861, leaving no estate—nothing for his family to live upon. The widow of this hero is now dependent upon her small pension of $30 a month and the trifling amount of $2 allowed each of her four little children, she having absolutely no other source of income. Can Congress refuse to grant her an increase of $20, all she asks? The committee believe not. Certainly her case appeals strongly to the Government, and the committee recommend the passage of the bill for her relief."

Mr. CAMDEN. I desire to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that if the Senate goes on to increase the pensions of the widows of captains and commodores and brigadier-generals and colonels, as it has done in four instances already this evening, it might just as well declare at once that the pension of all widows of officers of such rank shall be $50 a month instead of $30. Every case where it is allowed will be used as precedents to obtain the same pension for the widows of other officers of the same grade. The bill pensioning the widow of General Alvord at $50 a month will be used as a precedent for pensioning some other widow at the same amount. Cases are brought before the Pensions Committee at every meeting, claimants come there asking an increase of pension upon the ground that some other person no more meritorious than the claimant at that time has obtained an increase of pension. If the allowance to the widow of every officer that is pensioned is to be increased simply because of the fact that the officer did his duty well while in the service, the widow of every other officer who did his duty equally well is certainly entitled to use that as a precedent to obtain an increase of pension.

Mr. HALE. The Senate has already passed several bills not more meritorious than this, but this case is a good one upon its own merits. Captain Breese was one of the most distinguished and gallant of the younger officers of the Navy. Perhaps no other officer of his age and rank had a better and more consistent record, or rendered more valuable service. When such service was dangerous, he was in the midst of danger. When a piece of hard work was demanded, Captain Breese did that work. He died leaving no estate, with wife and little children dependent upon him, and I hope, after what has been done in other cases, that the Senate will not hesitate here.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, and read the third time.

The question being put on the passage of the bill, it was declared that the ayes appeared to prevail.

Mr. CAMDEN. I ask for a division on the passage of the bill.

The question being put, the ayes were 22.

Mr. CAMDEN. I withdraw the call for a division.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator gives it up. The ayes have it, and the bill is passed.

REPRESENTATIVES OF CAPT. JOHN G. TOD.

Mr. COKE. I move that the Senate take up and consider Order of Business 980, being the bill (H. R. 1567) for the relief of the legal representatives of the late Capt. John G. Tod, of the Texas navy.

Mr. MILLER, of New York. I hope the Senator will withdraw that until we get through with pension cases, and then I will go with him to take up that case or any other.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Debate is not in order.

Mr. MILLER, of New York. By unanimous consent we proceeded to consider pension cases.

Mr. COKE. This bill will not give rise to any debate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will state that the unanimous consent was for the consideration of Senate pension bills favorably reported. That list has been exhausted; and since then Senators have moved to take up such bills as they pleased.

Mr. BLAIR. The understanding we all had was that it included contested pension cases.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That was objected to by gentlemen on the right of the Chair.

Mr. HARRIS. So far from any such understanding, I gave notice that I should object to taking up the adversely reported pension cases while more than one hundred House bills favorably reported from our committee remained on our Calendar unacted on.

Mr. BLAIR. I know that; but there were further proceedings.

Mr. COKE. I move that the bill I have named be taken up.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Texas to take up the bill moved by him.

Mr. VOORHEES. I object until I have a better understanding.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. An objection is not in order. It is a question for the majority of the Senate to decide without debate. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Texas.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 1567) for the relief of the legal representatives of the late Capt. John G. Tod, of the Texas navy. It provides for the payment to the legal representatives of the late John G. Tod, of Texas, $12,500, the amount provided for a captain waiting orders in the United States Navy for the term of five years, in conformity with the provisions of section 12 of the act approved March 3, 1857, "making appropriations for the naval service for the year ending 30th of June, 1858."

Mr. SHERMAN. Is there a report in that case?

Mr. COKE. The report is brief and can soon be read.

Mr. SHERMAN. Let it be read.

The Chief Clerk read the following report, submitted by Mr. JACKSON January 7, 1885:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred H. R. 1567 and Senate bill 1042, "for the relief of the legal representatives of the late Capt. John G. Tod," have examined the same, and report as follows:

That bills for the relief of John G. Tod, late captain in the navy of Texas, and of his legal representatives, have received repeated favorable reports in the House of Representatives since the Forty-fourth Congress, and have several times passed the House without receiving the action of the Senate. The facts of the case are fully and correctly set forth in the last report of the House at the first session of the present Congress, as follows:

"The Committee on Naval Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 1567) for the relief of the legal representatives of Capt. John G. Tod, of Texas, report: 'That after the failure of the treaty by which Texas was to have been annexed to the United States, and the consummation of the annexation by resolution, much dissatisfaction existed among the citizens of Texas because of the failure to transfer the officers of the navy of Texas to the Navy of the United States, with rank and emoluments corresponding with rank and emoluments held and enjoyed by said officers in the navy of Texas, as was provided for in the inoperative treaty; and that, as it was ascertained that such transfer was impossible of accomplishment by reason of that provision in the Constitution of the United States which imposes on the President the duty of appointing the officers of the Navy of the United States, Congress did, as compensation for the non-performance of the stipulations contained in said inoperative treaty, pass a law, approved March 3, 1857, entitled 'An act making appropriations for the naval service for the year ending the 30th of June, 1858,' the twelfth section of which act is as follows:

"That the surviving officers of the Republic of Texas, who were duly commissioned as such at the time of annexation, shall be entitled to the pay of officers of the like grade when awaiting orders in the Navy of the United States for five years from the date of said annexation, and a sum sufficient to make the payment is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated; Provided, That the acceptance of the provisions of this act by any of the said officers shall be a full relinquishment and renunciation of all claims on his part to any further compensation on his behalf from the United States Government to any position in the Navy of the United States."

"And that it has been settled by the Supreme Court of the United States that the annexation of Texas to the Union was consummated on December 29, 1845; and that it was settled by the Court of Claims of the United States, in the case of E. M. Moore vs. United States (4 Nott & Huntington, page 139), that 'John G. Tod was a captain in the Texas navy at the time of annexation;' and that this decision of the Court of Claims is fully sustained by the commission of the said Capt. John G. Tod now on file in the Navy Department, signed by the President of the Republic of Texas, dated July 12, 1845, more than five months prior to the date of annexation, according to the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, a certified copy of which commission is on file with the committee. And that Capt. John G. Tod did, by his attorney, J. B. De Bow, a few weeks prior to the 10th day of June, 1857, file his claim with the Navy Department for five years' pay, as provided under the law of March 3, 1857, hereinafter referred to; which proffer to accept the terms thereof did rest in the said Tod an immediate fixed right of present and future enjoyment of the benefit of said law."

"And your committee further find that Capt. John G. Tod, some time in the latter part of the year 1857, departed this life, leaving in Harris County, State of Texas, a wife and one son and one daughter, and that the county court of said Harris County, in said State of Texas, on the 8th day of October, 1877, ordered that letters of administration on the estate of John G. Tod be issued to Maggie G. Tod, as appears by a copy of said order and the letter of the attorney of the heirs on file with the committee."

"And your committee find further that relief as prayed for under the bill referred has been afforded by act of Congress in like cases under the law hereinbefore referred to, as will appear by reference to the United States Statutes at Large, as follows:

"Forty-third Congress, first session, page 608, chapter 403, 'An act for the relief of the heirs at law of William C. Brashears, of the Texan navy; Forty-fourth Congress, first session, page 454, chapter 209, 'An act for the relief of Susan E. Rhea, widow of Dr. L. Burrows Gardiner.'"

It appears that Captain Tod was the last of the surviving officers contemplated by the act of March 3, 1857, and your committee deem it but a simple act of justice that his legal representatives should receive the same benefits as were extended by said act to the other officers of the Texan navy. They accordingly report back the House bill with the recommendation that it be passed by the Senate.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ELIZA W. THORNBURGH.

Mr. MANDERSON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7655) granting an increase of pension to the widow of Maj. Thomas T. Thornburgh, late of the United States Army.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Eliza W. Thornburgh, widow of Maj. Thomas T. Thornburgh, late of the Fourth Regiment of Infantry, United States Army, at $50 per month.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SOPHIA A. MORGAN.

Mr. MILLER, of New York. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 1091) granting an increase of pension to Sophia A. Morgan, widow of the late Charles H. Morgan, a brevet brigadier-general in the United States Army.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Mrs. Sophia A. Morgan, widow of Bvt. Brig. Gen. Charles H. Morgan, at the rate of $50 per month.

Mr. GROOME. It seems very evident that it is the temper of the Senate to give to every widow of an officer entitled, under the general law, to $30 a month; a pension of $50 a month, if she chooses to apply to Congress for it. That being the case I am opposed to doing by retail what can be done by wholesale. I therefore move to add to the bill the following additional section:

SEC. 2. That the widow of every officer of the Army above the grade of lieutenant-colonel, and of every officer of the Navy above the grade of captain, who is now receiving a pension of $30 or more a month and less than $50 a month, shall be entitled, upon application to the Pension Bureau, to have her pension increased to $50 a month from and after the date of said application.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. BLAIR. The Senator misapprehends the ground upon which the committee, or a minority of the Committee on Pensions, have recommended this increase to $50 a month. It has not been urged in any cases save where there was distinguished service, long service, and actual need. The amendment would of course open an indiscriminate, an exhaustive raid upon the Treasury which could not be included within the principle which I have laid down.

Mr. GROOME. I think there have been very few officers in the United States of the rank mentioned in my amendment, either of the Army or of the Navy, who did not render distinguished service and whose widows do not need a pension larger than that of $30 a month in order to enable them to live in the condition of comfort and luxury which they enjoyed during the lifetime of their husbands. So I think my amendment may very well be adopted if the course of legislation which we have been indulging in to-day is to be continued.

Mr. CAMDEN. I will ask the Senator from New Hampshire whether there is not a minority report in favor of every person who has asked for an increase of pension to $50 a month during this session of Congress, and if there is any exception? I ask him if that is not the rule without exception?

Mr. BLAIR. That is not true. I recollect one case which passed to-day where upon my own suggestion the amount of pension was reduced from $50 to $40. Even if that were so, it would not controvert my statement. Because the class which would be included in the amendment are not here asking for an increase of pension, it does not follow that those who are asking for the increase are not properly included within the principle laid down. I do not know that those who are not entitled to the increase have asked for it. Certainly the cases which have passed through the Senate to-day, and so far as I know the cases which remain upon the Calendar, are most of them those of widows of admirals, rear-admirals, major-generals, and the like, whose husbands were in service anywhere from thirty-five to sixty years, and in one of two instances even more. The amendment of course is only hostile to the bills as they stand on the Calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. GROOME].

Mr. GROOME. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and being taken, resulted—yea 1, nays 42; as follows:

YEA—1.

So the amendment was rejected.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is proposed by the Committee on Pensions to amend the title to read: "A bill granting an increase of pension to Sophia A. Morgan, widow of the late Charles H. Morgan, a brevet brigadier-general in the United States Army and brevet brigadier-general of volunteers."

Mr. MILLER, of New York. Do I understand that the title will have to be amended? The bill has passed the House, and if we amend the title it will have to go back for concurrence.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will state that it appears in the body of the bill as reported, and as a part of it, "Amend the title so as to read: 'A bill granting a pension,'" &c. The Chair will state also that the bill appears to have been amended in the House to correspond to that title. The Chair does not think it is necessary to amend the title, and although it is a singular phrase in the bill itself it will do it no harm. The title will stand as it came to the Senate.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 8280) making appropriations for the preservation and continuation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bill and joint resolutions; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (S. 1609) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Detroit, Mich.;

Joint resolution (S. R. 109) authorizing the loan of certain flags and hunting to the committee on inauguration ceremonies;

Joint resolution (H. Res. 338) providing for printing additional copies of the sixth and seventh annual reports of the Director of the United States Geological Survey;

Joint resolution (H. Res. 339) providing for printing the sixth and seventh annual reports of the Director of the Bureau of Ethnology; and Joint resolution (H. Res. 340) providing for printing monograph 2 of the publications of the United States Geological Survey.

ROSA VERTNER JEFFREY AND OTHERS.

Mr. BECK. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 2185) for the relief of Rosa Vertner Jeffrey and others.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BECK. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Debate is not in order.

Mr. BECK. I ask unanimous consent to make a brief statement.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, the Senator from Kentucky will proceed.

Mr. BECK. I doubt whether I shall be able to be in the Senate much more during this session because of being in attendance in committee on the appropriation bills, and as bills are being called up from the Calendar a little out of order I should like to have this bill acted upon now. It is to refer a case to the Court of Claims. The Senator from West Virginia [Mr. KENNA] reported it, and his family is sick. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] knows all about it, and I should be very glad to have it considered now.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Kentucky.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It refers to the Court of Claims the claim of Rosa Vertner Jeffrey and the legatees of Claude M. Johnson for the proceeds or value of eight hundred and twenty bales of cotton alleged to have been appropriated by and to the use of the United States.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CHIEF ENGINEER ON NAVY RETIRED-LIST.

Mr. MILLER, of California. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6324) authorizing the President of the United States to appoint one passed assistant engineer, now on the retired-list of the Navy, a chief engineer on the retired-list of the Navy.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It authorizes the President of the United States to nominate and, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint one passed assistant engineer, now on the retired-list of the Navy, a chief engineer on the retired-list of the Navy, with the highest retired pay of that grade.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FENDALL CARPENTER.

Mr. JACKSON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 4686) for the relief of Fendall Carpenter.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It appropriates $4,400 to pay to Fendall Carpenter for twenty-five bales of cotton seized and sold by the United States military authorities during the late war, and the proceeds thereof appropriated to the use of the Quartermaster's Department of the United States Army.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. INGALLS in the chair) laid before the Senate the bill (H. R. 8280) making appropriations for the preservation and continuation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes; which was read the first time by its title.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection the bill will be read the second time and referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. I object to the second reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The second reading is objected to.

FRANCIS B. VAN HAESEN.

Mr. McMILLAN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 847) for the relief of Francis B. Van Haesen.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It authorizes the Commissioner of the General Land Office, on behalf of the United States, to accept a relinquishment by the governor of the State of Minnesota, executed under the authority of an act of the Legislature of that State approved February 24, 1881, of the title derived by that State through an internal-improvement selection certified by the Commissioner of the General Land Office on May 8, 1869, for the southeast quarter of section 3, township 128, range 40 west, in the district of lands subject to sale at Alexandria, Minn., and confirms the location of the tract by Francis B. Van Haesen, with military bounty land-warrant numbered 106976, for one hundred and sixty acres, issued under the act of March 3, 1855, and which was patented by the United States to Van Haesen on the 15th of October, 1870. The State of Minnesota is to be allowed to select other lands in lieu of the tract relinquished.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Public Lands with an amendment, to add the words "from the public lands of the United States within the limit of said State;" so as to read:

And the State of Minnesota shall be allowed to select other lands, in lieu of the tract relinquished as aforesaid, from the public lands of the United States, within the limits of said State.

Mr. McMILLAN. I ask the Senate to refuse to concur in the amendment. I have conferred with the chairman of the Committee on Public Lands, and I have his assent to that course. This is a House bill. A Senate bill granting this relief has already passed the Senate, but it can not be reached in the House. The amendment, if adopted, would put the House bill in the same condition. A similar bill has passed the Senate three or four times at previous sessions of Congress. It is recommended by the Interior Department, and there is no doubt about the propriety of the relief. I ask the Senate to non-concur in the amendment and pass the bill.

The amendment was rejected.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. McMILLAN. The name should be spelled "Van Hoesen." I ask that the correction be made.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That would require an amendment of the bill.

Mr. McMILLAN. Very well; let it go.

THE BARK MARY TERESA.

Mr. GORMAN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 737) for the relief of Juliet Leef, widow, and the heirs of Henry Leef, deceased, owner of the bark Mary Teresa, illegally seized by Alexander H. Tyler, consul of the United States at Bahia, Brazil.

Mr. HOAR. I ask unanimous consent to make a statement in regard to that case. It is a case which involves a very important public principle about which the Committee on Claims were divided in the last Congress, making elaborate reports on both sides, and about which they are divided in this. I should myself feel it my duty to make a speech of considerable length upon the question. I do not think the Senate ought to take it up at this time. The bill is submitted without recommendation from the committee, I understand; but I do not know about that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill indicated by him.

Mr. MILLER, of New York. I suggest to the Senator from Maryland to call up the bill at some other time.

Mr. GORMAN. I did not hear the Senator from Massachusetts. There was so much confusion I could not hear what he said.

Mr. HOAR. It is an adverse report, and it involves a very important principle indeed and will take undoubtedly a debate of several hours. I suggest to the honorable Senator from Maryland that this is not the proper time to consider such a bill. If I may be pardoned for saying so, it involves the principle of the United States making compensation to individuals who suffer by the misconduct of a public officer. It is a case where a consul of the United States detained a vessel abroad. The owner of the vessel claimed that it was either a willful wrong or an egregious error on the part of the consul, but in either case it was within the consul's official power.

The majority of the committee have always been of opinion that the United States is not liable for the acts of public officers in such cases, and have made several reports at the present session of Congress based upon that principle. I appeal to my honorable friend from Maryland that this is not the time to take up and deal with an important principle of that kind.

Mr. GORMAN. I dislike very much to press my motion so as to compel the Senator from Massachusetts to make a long speech upon the bill at this hour of the evening, but I am exceedingly anxious to hear the Senator argue the other side of the case, for I listened to him with great pleasure in a bank case a few days ago, which was similar although perhaps not so strong in its equities as this. This is a case which I think ought to be considered favorably. It has been reported upon favorably in another branch of Congress seven times,* and has passed the House of Representatives at least three times, twice certainly, two Congresses ago and again at this session. The equities are so strong that I should like very much to have the bill considered; but if the Senator from Massachusetts at this late hour intimates that he intends to make a long argument, I shall not by any means press my motion.

Mr. HOAR. The reading of the report would take an hour.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Maryland withdraw his request for the consideration of the bill?

Mr. GORMAN. I withdraw it under the threat of the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. HOAR. I ask unanimous consent to remove a misapprehension in the mind of the Senator. I did not make the suggestion in the least as a threat. I should not prolong my argument thirty seconds for the sake of defeating the bill, but it is proper that the Senate should know that the nature of the question would inevitably involve that result.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is withdrawn.

ANN CORNELIA LANMAN.

Mr. HAWLEY. I move to take up the bill (H. R. 1813) granting an increase of pension to Ann Cornelia Lanman. She is the widow of the late Rear-Admiral Lanman.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Ann Cornelia Lanman and to pay her a pension of $50 a month, in lieu of the pension now received by her.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

O. L. COCHRAN.

Mr. MAXEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 1566) for the relief of O. L. Cochran, late postmaster at Houston, Tex., reimbursing him for money erroneously collected from him by the Post-Office Department.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to pay to O. L. Cochran $422.85, collected from him by the Post-Office Department on the 26th of November, 1867, and which amount is in excess of what he was indebted to the Department.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. MAXEY. I move that the bill (S. 1481) for the relief of O. L. Cochran, late postmaster at Houston, Tex., now on the Calendar, be postponed indefinitely.

The motion was agreed to.

JOHN C. HERNDON.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (S. 164) for the relief of John C. Herndon. The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. A bill identical with this bill has passed the House and is now in the hands of the Committee on Claims. I move that the Committee on Claims be discharged from the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 2158) for the benefit of John C. Herndon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection, that order will be made.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. I now move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 2158.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to John C. Herndon, late of Mason County, now of Louisville, Ky., $1,785 in full compensation for 105,000 pounds of hay furnished, under verbal contract, to Capt. D. W. McClung, assistant quartermaster United States volunteers, for the use of the Government of the United States, in March, 1865, and which was swept away by a flood in the Ohio River and lost, in consequence of the failure of the Government to remove the hay, after due notice had been given to its authorized agents so to do.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. I move that the bill (S. 164) for the relief of John C. Herndon be postponed indefinitely.

The motion was agreed to.

JOHN W. MARTIN.

Mr. GEORGE. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5452) for the relief of John W. Martin.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to John W. Martin, of Brookhaven, Miss., $700, for services actually rendered as postmaster at Brookhaven, Miss., by authority of the military commandant, from July, 1865, to July 1866.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I should like to have some reason assigned why we should just go along here appropriating money out of the public Treasury to give to people. I see no reason for it, and yet we have been proceeding upon that theory all this afternoon. If there be a reason why the United States Government should give this man $700 I think it is proper to assign that reason. I will say further that without the reason being given I shall be pardoned for voting against the bill. I should like to know what reason there is for giving any man $700.

Mr. GEORGE. It is in payment of a debt that the United States owes him.

Mr. MILLER, of New York. That is a pretty good reason.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HUGH AND BYRD DOUGLAS, DECEASED.

Mr. MAHONEY. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill No. 8034, Order of Business 1274.

The motion was agreed to; and the bill (H. R. 8034) for the relief of the estates of Hugh and Byrd Douglas, deceased, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay to the legal representatives of Hugh and Byrd Douglas, deceased, late of Nashville, Tenn., $6,299.33, for rent of and damage to their property in Nashville by officers of the Army of the United States during the late war.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN M. DORSEY AND WILLIAM F. SHEPARD.

Mr. JONES, of Nevada. I move to take up House bill No. 948, Order of Business 1123.

The motion was agreed to; and the bill (H. R. 948) for the relief of John M. Dorsey and William F. Shepard was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It directs the payment of $9,021.33 to John M. Dorsey, and $3,746.66 to William F. Shepard, in full settlement for beef and supplies furnished certain volunteer troops by Dorsey, Shepard, and one S. B. Wallace, while the troops were engaged in quelling the Indian disturbances in the Territory of Utah, now the State of Nevada, in the year 1860.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HEIRS OF MARY JANE VEAZIE.

Mr. LAMAR. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill No. 851.

The motion was agreed to; and the bill (H. R. 851) for the relief of the heirs of Mary Jane Veazie, deceased, was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It appropriates $2,500 to pay the heirs of Mary Jane Veazie, deceased, late of Natchez, Miss., for property taken for the use of the United States troops stationed at Natchez.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENT TO AN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. JONES, of Nevada, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF LARNED, KANS.

Mr. MORRILL. I move to take up Order of Business 967, being House bill 5747.

The motion was agreed to; and the bill (H. R. 5747) to authorize the increase of the capital stock of the First National Bank of Larned, Kans., not to exceed $250,000, was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

LETITIA TYLER SEMPLE.

Mr. MORGAN. I move to proceed to the consideration of Order of Business 1222, being the bill (S. 498) granting a pension to Letitia Tyler Semple.

Mr. COCKRELL. I hope the Senator will not insist on passing that bill now. There are quite a number of bills that ought to be passed, and I do not think there is much chance of getting that through at this late hour.

Mr. MORGAN. I know the Senator from Missouri can not understand the merits of this case, and the House of Representatives, I should think, would hold an extraordinary session to pass the bill. I think there will be no difficulty about passing it in the House if it goes through the Senate. I hope it will be taken up.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to taking up the bill?

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question recurs on the motion of the Senator from Alabama that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (S. 498) granting a pension to Letitia Tyler Semple. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Letitia Tyler Semple, daughter of the late John Tyler, President of the United States, at $50 per month.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the bill be read again. I did not catch the wording of it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be read again.

The bill was read.

Mr. COCKRELL. I want to ask the Senator who reported the bill if this pension is based purely upon the fact that the applicant is the daughter of a deceased President?

Mr. JACKSON. Mr. President—

Mr. MORGAN. I hope the Senator from Tennessee will let me answer that question.

Mr. JACKSON. Certainly.

Mr. MORGAN. We have precedents on our statute-book for pensioning the daughters and widows of deceased Presidents. This lady at the time Mr. Tyler became President of the United States was the lady of the White House, the first lady in the country. She remained with her father until his marriage. He afterward married a lady who was the widow of an officer of the Navy. Mr. Tyler died, leaving this daughter in impoverished circumstances. She went to work in good earnest to teach the women of the country, being herself a very accomplished woman, and to earn her subsistence. She educated a number of ladies of this country, and educated them beautifully. By her excessive work she became blind, or so nearly so that she can scarcely see her hand before her. She received the kind attention and commiseration of that good, benevolent man, Mr. Corcoran, and she is an inmate of the Louise Home, and has been there ten or twelve years entirely dependent on his bounty. She is a woman of beautiful accomplishments, beautiful character in every respect, and I am moving this case for her not because she demands it, but because I know that her situation requires it.

Besides that, she has a young lady who is a relative of hers, an orphan child and dependent, that she has to provide for in some way. She has no estate whatever. And now, sir, the daughter of a deceased President of the United States is a blind woman, dependent upon the charity and benevolence of Mr. Corcoran in this city, and has been so for a number of years; and I have brought this case before the Senate, not on this occasion alone but before. The Senate has never voted it down, but an objection has been made each time when I brought it up, and the case has been placed out of reach. That is the whole story. [Vote!] "Vote!"

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. I object to the entertainment of the proposition because I can not understand that this Government is a government which is established to support people. I can not understand why the daughter of a deceased President is entitled to more consideration than the daughter of any one else. If we owe anything to a President, it would seem to me that it might have been quite, if you will pardon the expression, as genteel for the House of Representatives to have sent back here the bill that retired General Grant. I say that we are under no obligation to pension any of these people; and when the Senator from Alabama takes the position that he does he goes to such an extent that I can not follow him, and I do not think his own constituents will follow him, in pensioning the daughter of a dead President.

I think we have gone almost far enough to-day in pensioning the representatives of men who died twenty years after the war was over, and I repeat now what I said before, that there must be a period fixed to this giving of pensions at some time. If there be any reason why we should pension this lady beyond the mere fact that she is an educated lady, and beyond the mere statement that she is the daughter of a dead President, then I should like to hear it, for that is not sufficient.

Mr. COCKRELL. I simply desire to enter my protest on record against this bill and against the principle involved in it. This is, in my humble opinion, under our form and system of government a crime against the people who are the only sovereigns. We have never in the history of this country pensioned even the adult children of our Revolutionary sires. We do not to-day pension the children of the men who fell for the integrity of this Union, after they reach the age of 16.

The theory of our Government, Mr. President, is that all officers, from President to constable, are the agents, the trustees, the servants, the representatives of the people. They are by the people intrusted with power to be exercised for the benefit and in trust for the people. The compensation paid to each officer and the honor of the office are the full equivalents for every civil employment in the United States. When a man has held the office of President, the office of governor, the office of United States Senator, the office of Representative in Congress, or any other civil office, and has gone out of that office, the people are under no sort of obligation to support him or his posterity.

While men enjoy the emoluments and the honors of office, they receive the full consideration which the people promised them, and after that they have no claim whatever upon the people. It is not so with the soldiers and the sailors of our country. We take them by the strong arm of the sovereign people at whatever compensation Congress fixes for their service, and we promise them in the laws which compel their military or naval service that in certain events they shall receive pensions for themselves and for their widows and their dependent children until they are 16 years of age; but I say there is no promise whatever in our system of government that compensation shall be made to the children of deceased civil officers of this Government.

No Senator entertains kindlier and warmer feelings toward the lady for whose relief this bill is now pressed than I do; but this is not a question of sympathy. I have a right to go into my own pocket and pay out my own money in sympathy to whomsoever I choose; but, I say, as Senators representing the people of the United States we have no right through sympathy or anything of that kind to put our hands into the pockets of the sovereign tax-payers of this country, and, under the color of law and the forms of power delegated to us, rob them of their hard earnings.

Mr. President, there are thousands upon thousands of widows and women in this country who are ten-thousand-fold worse off than the lady here in question. She is enjoying the munificence of that grand old citizen of this District, in a grand charity of which she is a worthy object. But that is not sufficient. Are we here under the power that we have to go to the orphan's home and the widow's home and take from the little earnings a portion to give to this distinguished individual because she happens to be the daughter of an ex-President of the United States?

I tell you, Mr. President, the people of this country do not believe in a civil-pension list. This is the first step toward the establishment of a civil-pension list in this Government to pension the civil employés of this Government. I say that it is in direct contravention of the fundamental principles upon which our Government rests. It is subversive of them, and the people do not believe in it. It is kind for us to yield to our sympathies and to vote these small sums, but the very fabric and structure and system of our Government may be changed by these gradual innovations from sympathy. The widows of certain Presidents have been put upon the pension-list directly out of sympathy. We shall soon have the ex-Presidents of the United States on the pension-list, and then out of sympathy for some distinguished compeer of ours, an associate brother Senator, we shall place him on the pension-list, and then we shall place some Representative who has served his country faithfully upon the pension-list, and then we shall put the child, the daughter of some distinguished Senator, upon the pension-list.

Mr. President, I simply rose to utter my earnest protest against the passage of this bill and the principle involved in it, and I trust the Senate will not be committed to it.

Mr. MORGAN. I am very glad that I have been able to furnish the Senator from Missouri an opportunity to express his opinions upon the question of a civil-pension list. I have been in the Senate with him for eight years, and I have never before heard him express an opinion so forcibly on this subject; I have never known him to do it. He might have done it on the case of Mrs. Polk. For a number of years she has been pensioned on the Government of the United States, and yet she was a lady of wealth, and her pension has been recently increased—

Mr. HARRIS. I beg to say to the Senator from Alabama, if he will allow me, that he is mistaken in his facts. She was put on the pension-roll with the widows of other deceased Presidents. She was never pensioned before that, so far as I am advised.

Mr. MORGAN. She has an independent living, and there is no woman in the world that I think is better entitled to enjoy the honor of being upon the pension-roll of the Government of the United States than Mrs. Polk. Then we pensioned the widow of President Tyler. She was not a beggar by any means. He married her a year or two after he had been in the Presidential office.

Mr. COCKRELL. This is his daughter.

Mr. MORGAN. Of course. It is easy to draw a distinction between a widow and a daughter, especially if the daughter is blind and the widow is not. The widow has an opportunity to live, friends to take care of her, children to rely upon. It is easy enough to imagine why she should be pensioned, and why the blind daughter should not. I can understand that very well.

Then, Mr. President, we take a Senator, a man who served, for instance, ten days of a Congressional term, and he dies, and we do not hesitate to pay his heirs the whole amount of the salary during the rest of the term. My colleague, Hon. George S. Houston, perhaps as strict a man as ever lived, died while he was a member of the Senate, and the Senate did not hesitate to pay the salary for the whole unexpired term of that Congress to his heirs at law, a sum amounting to eight or nine thousand dollars. General Burnside died, and we paid a large sum to his representatives. So it is continually. We are paying money day after day to those public servants who happen to die in office. Where a minister to a foreign country who dies during the time of his service abroad—

Mr. COCKRELL. Will the Senator yield until I ask him a question?

Mr. MORGAN. Certainly.

Mr. COCKRELL. The statement strikes me with wonder that the Senate has paid out to any deceased Senator's family the full salary of that Senator for the unexpired term.

Mr. MORGAN. That is exactly what they have done—paid his salary for the unexpired term of the Congress in which he died.

Mr. COCKRELL. Oh! Just simply the Congress?

Mr. MORGAN. That is all.

Mr. COCKRELL. The two years' term, not the six years' term.

Mr. MORGAN. The difference is between $10,000 and $20,000. There is no difference in principle at all.

Mr. COCKRELL. It seldom averages a year.

Mr. MORGAN. I know that the honorable Senator has been on the Committee on Appropriations, and this is the first time he ever objected to a thing of that sort that I ever heard of. It seems to take a poor blind woman who happens to enjoy the hospitality of a benevolent citizen of this country to arouse all the gentleman's patriotism and all his sense of justice.

Mr. COCKRELL. Will the Senator permit one more question for information?

Mr. MORGAN. Certainly.

Mr. COCKRELL. I never heard of the case until it came up. Is not the mother of this child now living and drawing $5,000 a year?

Mr. MORGAN. No, sir; the mother of this child is dead forty-five years.

Mr. COCKRELL. The step-mother?

Mr. MORGAN. The step-mother is living.

Mr. HARRIS. Allow me to suggest that the President of the United States is commander-in-chief of the armies and navies of the United States; he is the head of the Army. I consider the technical ground upon which, in principle, we may pension his widow (and it might extend to the children under 16 years of age) perfectly consistent with the principles upon which we grant pensions. But when it is proposed to extend it to the adult child of a soldier, whether he be President and commander-in-chief, or commanding general, or an officer of a lower grade, it is introducing a new principle, one heretofore not recognized by the pension law; it is opening a broad field. That is the suggestion I desire to make to the Senator from Alabama in order that he may deal with it.

Mr. MORGAN. Mrs. Dandridge, whom we pensioned at the last session of Congress, was not a woman under 16 years of age. She had been a widow, twice married, and was the daughter of General Taylor, and formerly Mrs. Bliss.

Mr. BLAIR. The Senator will permit me to suggest that we have repeatedly indorsed the principle that where the child of a soldier was over 16 years of age and helpless, either from imbecility or from physical helplessness, the pension should be continued, the principle being precisely the same which led to its being given before the age of 16 years was reached, that being the period fixed by the law on the supposition that at that age the child would be able to take care of itself. Failing to have that ability, the pension is continued from the Government.

Mr. MORGAN. I was not seeking for any precise technical ground on which I could justify this vote. There are precedents enough. We bring home the bodies of our ministers who die abroad in the service, and we pay their families the balance of money due for the unexpired term; and I believe we are about to pass a bill, if we have not already done so during the present session, for Mrs. Hunt, for Mr. Venable's widow, and others, and there are others who ought to be paid. I thought it would gratify the people of the United States, and I believe yet it will, to know that the Congress of the United States has that sense and delicacy of feeling toward a lady who was the first lady in the country, who occupied a place in the White House, who occupied the delicate responsibilities and duties of that elevated position with great ability and with marked success, now that she has grown old and has become blind in the service of the women of the country and is upon the bounty of a private citizen—I thought it would do the Congress of the United States good and the people would like it if they would take that case in hand and allow her enough money to feel at last that she had some little thing or other that she could depend upon instead of trusting to charity.

There is no person, I suppose, who enjoys more worthily than Mrs. Semple does the benevolence of Mr. Corcoran. I dare say that within the Louise Home or anywhere else there is not to be found a single heart in the world that is more burdened with the fact that, after having led a life of duty, a life of honor, a life of elevated position, a life of usefulness, a life of excellence, she should at last be left in this condition without one cent to call her own unless some person should give it to her.

There is some justice in this. There is a good deal more in it than the mere pathetic statement of the fact. There is a duty resting upon this Government which I think we can perform here without violating the Constitution of our country, and when the Senator from Missouri characterizes this bill as a crime against the Constitution it seems to me he goes a long way. If we never commit a worse crime against the Constitution of the United States than to take a lady under such circumstances as these and to show something of our respect for the influential station that she has held and discharged so perfectly, we shall escape with very clear skirts when we leave this august tribunal.

I hope that the Senate will not hesitate to pass the bill.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. Mr. President, I think I am as approachable as any other Senator on this floor when I am asked to do something to assist somebody; but I can not lose sight of the fact that every time we pay out money we have got to collect it. We have got to derive revenue from some source before we pay it out, and there are widows and there are orphan children, and there are suffering widows and suffering orphans in this country who have to contribute to pay a civil pension-list.

That is the only suggestion I have to make.

Mr. BLAIR. Mr. President, I ask the Senator from Alabama and the Senate that this bill may be laid aside informally while I call the attention of the Senate to three or four cases about which there will be no controversy such as we have already passed over.

Several SENATORS. Vote on this.

Mr. BLAIR. There is likely to be more debate. ["No!" "No!"] If we can have a vote, very well.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, and read the third time.

Mr. HAWLEY. I ask for the yeas and nays on the passage of the bill.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GORMAN (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. DAWES].

Mr. HARRIS (when his name was called). I consented to pair with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. PLATT] who is absent. I desire to ask his colleague how he thinks the Senator would vote on this question. I should vote "nay."

Mr. HAWLEY. I think my colleague would vote "nay" from the remark he made when he left the Chamber.

Mr. HARRIS. I vote "nay."

Mr. MILLER, of New York (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. BAYARD] on political questions. I do not consider this a political question. I will therefore vote "yea."

Mr. SAWYER (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. SAULSBURY]. If he were present I should vote "yea."

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. MITCHELL. On this question I am paired with the Senator from Florida [Mr. JONES].

The result was announced—yeas 11, nays 17; as follows:

YEAS—11.
Blair, Brown, Call,	Cameron of Wis., Conger, McPherson,	Mahone, Manderson, Miller of N. Y.,	Morgan, Palmer.
NAYS—17.
Chace, Cockrell, Dolph, Edmunds, George,	Harris, Hawley, Hoar, Ingalls, Jackson,	Jonas, McMillan, Maxey, Ransom, Riddleberger,	Vest, Wilson.
ABSENT—48.
Aldrich, Allison, Bayard, Beck, Bowen, Butler, Camden, Cameron of Pa., Coke, Colquitt, Cullom, Dawes,	Fair, Farley, Frye, Garland, Gibson, Gorman, Groome, Hale, Hampton, Harrison, Hill, Jones of Florida,	Jones of Nevada, Kenna, Lamar, Lapham, Logan, Miller of Cal., Mitchell, Morrill, Pendleton, Pike, Platt, Plumb,	Pugh, Sabin, Saulsbury, Sawyer, Sewell, Sherman, Slater, Vance, Van Wyck, Voorhees, Walker, Williams.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A quorum has not voted.

Mr. MCPHERSON. I move that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. BLAIR. I ask unanimous consent—

Mr. HARRIS. I object to the transaction of any business without a quorum.

Mr. BLAIR. I do not wish to ask for the transaction of any business. I wish to say just a word by unanimous consent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the Senator from New Hampshire speaking? The Chair hears none.

Mr. BLAIR. There are six or eight of the most meritorious pension cases that were before the Senate which, by the turn affairs have taken this afternoon, have failed of consideration. I hope there will be no objection at the first opportunity, which I shall seek, to take up those cases and dispose of them.

Mr. MCPHERSON. I insist on the motion to adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 6 o'clock and 39 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, February 27, 1885.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. JOHN S. LINDSAY, D. D.
The Journal of yesterday was read and approved.

FLAGS FOR DECORATION.

The SPEAKER. The Chair lays before the House a telegraphic communication from the Secretary of War, which the Clerk will read.
The Clerk read as follows:

To the Speaker of the House of Representatives:

In view of applications made to me by proper committees for flags for decoration purposes next week, which can not be granted without authority of law, I beg to ask whether Senate resolution 109, authorizing the loan of flags, has yet passed the House of Representatives.

ROBERT T. LINCOLN,
Secretary of War.

WAR DEPARTMENT.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state to the House that the joint resolution to which reference is made in this telegram is on the Speaker's table and the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. DIBRELL] has charge of it.

Mr. DIBRELL. Mr. Speaker, I have letters from the Secretary of War and the chairman of the committee of arrangements asking the passage of this resolution, and I now ask unanimous consent to take Senate resolution 109 from the Speaker's table and put it upon its passage.

Mr. ROBINSON, of New York. Mr. Speaker, I have some notion to object to all this decoration business, but on the whole I will not interfere.

The SPEAKER. No objection is made, and the Clerk will report the joint resolution.

The Clerk read the joint resolution S. R. 109, as follows:

Resolved, etc. That the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy be, and they are hereby, authorized to loan to the committee on inauguration ceremonies the flags and bunting in the Government depots, for use in decorating the city of Washington on the 4th day of March next: Provided, That the said committee shall indemnify the Departments against any loss or damage resulting from the use of said flags and bunting, except such damage as is necessarily incident to such use.

The joint resolution was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

INTERSTATE-COMMERCE BILL.

Mr. REAGAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take up House bill No. 5461 with the Senate amendments, with a view to move to non-concur and ask a committee of conference.

Mr. KEAN. What is that bill?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. REAGAN] asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 5461 with the Senate amendments, with a view to moving that the House non-concur and ask for a committee of conference. The Clerk will report the title of the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (H. R. 5461) to regulate interstate commerce, and to prohibit unjust discrimination by common carriers.

Mr. KEAN. I object.

Mr. THOMAS. Regular order.

GENERAL HORATIO G. WRIGHT.

Mr. ROSECRANS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to submit two reports from the Committee on Military Affairs.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is demanded by the gentleman on the left [Mr. THOMAS].

Mr. ROSECRANS. May I ask the gentleman for a moment's courtesy while I submit two reports?

Mr. THOMAS. I withdraw the demand for the regular order.

Mr. ROSECRANS, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back with a favorable recommendation the joint resolution (H. Res. 195) to place the name of General Horatio G. Wright, late Chief of Engineers, on the roll of major-generals on the retired-list with the emoluments and pay of said grade; which, with the accompanying report, was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and ordered to be printed.

MULTICHARGE GUNS.

Mr. ROSECRANS, by unanimous consent, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported back with the favorable recommendation the petition of J. R. Haskell in relation to multicharge guns, and moved that the same be referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

The motion was agreed to.

PUBLIC BUILDING, TERRE HAUTE, IND.

Mr. STOCKSLAGER, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back favorably the bill (H. R. 7967) to change the limit of the appropriation for the public building at Terre Haute, Ind.; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and, with the accompanying report, ordered to be printed.

REFERRING CLAIMS TO COURT OF CLAIMS.

Mr. ROWELL, from the Committee on War Claims, submitted the following report; which was laid on the table, and ordered to be printed:

The Committee on War Claims, to whom were referred the following bills and petitions, having considered the same, report that they have referred the same to the Court of Claims under the provisions of an act entitled "An act to afford assistance and relief to Congress and the Executive Departments in the investigation of claims and demands against the Government," approved March 3, 1883:

PUBLIC LANDS DECISIONS.

Mr. ROGERS, of New York, by unanimous consent, submitted a concurrent resolution to provide for printing the first and second volumes of decisions relating to the public lands; which was referred to the Committee on Printing, and ordered to be printed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. THOMAS. Now, Mr. Speaker, I call for the regular order.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McCook, its Secretary, announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the bill (S. 1609) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Detroit, Mich.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments, in which the concurrence of the House was requested, the bill (H. R. 8179) making appropriation for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the Senate had passed without amendments joint resolutions of the following titles:

Joint resolution (H. Res. 338) providing for printing additional copies of the sixth and seventh additional reports of the Director of the United States Geological Survey;

Joint resolution (H. Res. 339) providing for printing the sixth and seventh annual reports of the Director of the Bureau of Ethnology; and Joint resolution (H. Res. 340) providing for printing monograph 2 of the publications of the United States Geological Survey.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed a joint resolution of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

Joint resolution (S. R. 134) relative to the use of plants belonging to the public conservatories of the District of Columbia for inauguration ceremonies.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a privileged question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SNYDER. I desire to explain my vote given yesterday.

The SPEAKER. That is not a privileged matter. The gentleman can proceed only by unanimous consent.

Mr. SNYDER. I ask unanimous consent to make a personal explanation. Mr. Speaker, on page 2439 of the RECORD of yesterday's proceedings I am recorded as having voted "ay" upon the resolution offered by the chairman of the Appropriations Committee. With a decided opinion as to the impropriety of the clause in the sundry civil bill relating to the suspension of silver coinage, and with the avowed intention of voting against the same when the opportunity was offered (the resolution providing for a separate vote upon said proposition), I voted "ay" to limit debate and facilitate business, in order that an extra session of Congress might be avoided.

I am opposed to any legislation on the part of Congress looking toward either the limitation or suspension of silver coinage. The subsequent statement of the gentleman from Pennsylvania demands that this explanation be made in order that my position may not be misunderstood by my constituents.

Mr. HAMMOND. I object. That is not a matter of privilege, and I object to further explanation.

The SPEAKER. The Chair so decided, and the gentleman proceeded by unanimous consent.

Mr. HAMMOND. I object. Every gentleman who casts a vote might occupy time of the House in the same way.

Several MEMBERS. Regular order.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is demanded.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. CABELL. Mr. Speaker, I desire to suspend the rules to take up House bill 8029, to authorize the establishment of export tobacco manufacturing and for drawbacks upon imported articles used in manufacturing exported tobacco.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER. The House is acting under a suspension of the rules.

The regular order being called for, the House resumes, under the order adopted yesterday by suspension of the rules, the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8256) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes. The first question is upon the amendments to the clause in relation to the New Orleans Exposition.

Mr. HERR. The first amendment, as I understand, is the one which I offered.

The SPEAKER. That is the understanding of the Chair. A motion has been made by the gentleman from New York [Mr. POTTER] to strike out the clause; but that will not be voted upon until amendments to the text have been disposed of. The amendment of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HERR] will be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out the entire clause and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"For the purpose of aiding the World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition now being held in the city of New Orleans, in the State of Louisiana, not to exceed the sum of $300,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be immediately available and to be used first in payment of the indebtedness now outstanding of said exposition which is due to persons, firms, or corporations living and doing business outside of the State of Louisiana, including debts due to foreigners or foreign nations and such as are due to States and Territories from said exposition. Secondly, in payment of all premiums heretofore awarded or said shall be hereafter awarded by said exposition in accordance with the lists of awards heretofore published; said money to be disbursed under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall make proper rules and regulations for the form and verification of vouchers in proof of such indebtedness and shall detail a proper agent of his Department to disburse said funds as directed by said Secretary, who shall make a detailed statement of his transactions to the Treasury Department."

The SPEAKER. The question is upon the motion of the gentleman from Michigan to strike out the clause in the bill and substitute what has just been read.

Mr. ELLWOOD. I rise for an inquiry. I have submitted a substitute. Will the vote upon this proposition of the gentleman from Michigan rule out my substitute?

The SPEAKER. Is the amendment of the gentleman from Michigan offered as a substitute?

Mr. ELLWOOD. I move to amend by adding to the substitute of the gentleman from Michigan the clause which I ask the Clerk to read.

The Clerk read as follows:

A committee of three members of the House shall be appointed by the Speaker to inquire into the expenditures by and money received by the managers of the World's Industrial Cotton and Centennial Exposition. The said committee are hereby empowered to administer oaths, to compel the attendance of witnesses, and to send for persons and papers; and it shall report the result of its investigation to the Forty-ninth Congress on or before December 10, 1885.

Mr. BLAND. That amendment is subject to a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it is subject to a point of order. The point is sustained. The question is upon the substitute of the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. ELLIS. As I understand it has been agreed between the gentleman and myself that his substitute shall be amended by striking out the words "or so much thereof as may be necessary." I understand the gentleman from Michigan is willing to accept this amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. ELLIS] moves to amend the substitute of the gentleman from Michigan by striking out the words "or so much thereof as may be necessary."

Mr. ELLIS. By agreement between the gentleman from Michigan and myself those words go out.

Mr. HERR. If it be in order I will state that in my judgment this amendment does not affect substantially my substitute; and I consent to it. I think every dollar of the appropriation will be spent, at any rate.

The question being taken on the amendment of Mr. ELLIS, there were—ayes 78, noes 20.

Mr. ANDERSON. I make the point that no quorum has voted. Tellers were ordered; and Mr. ANDERSON and Mr. ELLIS were appointed.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 121, noes 44.

So the amendment of Mr. ELLIS was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question now recurs on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HERR] as amended.

Mr. BEACH. On this question I demand the yeas and nays. The yeas and nays were ordered, 45 members voting therefor.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the affirmative—yeas 206, nays 58, not voting 60; as follows:

So the amendment was agreed to.

During the roll-call,

Mr. BEACH moved that by unanimous consent the reading of the names be dispensed with.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

Mr. HERR. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Will it be proper to ask by unanimous consent a vote be taken on this proposition as amended or on this substitute? I have said, as I supposed was the fact, there would be a vote if this were amended. I am informed if this is voted in, as it is, there will be no further vote. That misled some gentlemen.

Mr. RANDALL. There will be a vote on the bill with this in it.

The SPEAKER. There will be no further vote on this clause as a separate proposition. The Chair will state the situation.

Mr. RANDALL. There will be a vote on the bill with that in it.

Mr. HERR. But that is not fair.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan moved to strike out the clause and insert what has been read. The gentleman from New York [Mr. POTTER] made a motion to strike out the clause without inserting anything. The gentleman from Michigan offered his amendment first and the House voted on it first. If the House sustains the motion to strike out the words as they stood in the bill and insert the words of the amendment it closes the vote on this clause, because it is not competent under the rules of the House to strike out the identical thing just inserted by a vote; and the only way to reach that would be to reconsider that vote.

Mr. HERR. There can be unanimous consent that a vote be taken on the proposition. I do not think any one will object to that; it will be passed just the same.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I will enter the motion to reconsider.

The SPEAKER. The vote has not yet been announced.

Mr. HAMMOND. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry, and it is that as the vote has not been announced, can not the whole difficulty be obviated by gentlemen changing their votes?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan asks unanimous consent that after the vote shall be announced, if the amendment be adopted, a vote shall then be taken on the motion to strike out the clause; is there objection?

Mr. HERR. There can be no objection.

There was no objection, and it was ordered accordingly.

The following pairs were then announced.

On all political questions, until further notice:

Mr. MORRISON with Mr. JOHN S. WISE.

Mr. SHAW with Mr. LAIRD.

Mr. THROCKMORTON with Mr. EZRA B. TAYLOR.
Mr. JORDAN with Mr. HENDERSON, of Iowa.
Mr. HURD with Mr. RICE.
Mr. NEECE with Mr. CHALMERS.
On this vote:
Mr. RANKIN with Mr. OCHILTREE.
Mr. FYAN with Mr. JOHNSON.
Mr. CAMPBELL, of New York, with Mr. HOOPER.
Mr. BLACKBURN with Mr. HART.
Mr. HOBLITZELL with Mr. GOFF.
Mr. MCADOO with Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. If voting, Mr. O'NEILL would vote "ay" and Mr. MCADOO "no."

For the day:

Mr. WILLIAMS with Mr. CUTCHEON.

The vote was then announced as above recorded.

ENROLLED BILL AND JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED.

Mr. PERKINS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found duly enrolled a bill and joint resolution of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same, namely:

A bill (H. R. 48) providing for the erection of a building to contain the records, library, and museum of the Medical Department, United States Army; and

Joint resolution (H. Res. 320) authorizing the printing of the report of the Commissioner of Education for 1883 and 1884.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER. By order of the House the vote will now be taken on the motion of the gentleman from New York [Mr. POTTER] to strike the clause entirely from the bill.

Mr. POTTER. Upon that motion I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. YORK. I rise to a question of privilege.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. YORK. I ask if this is on the vote to strike out the $300,000?

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state that this is to strike out the entire clause.

Mr. BELFORD. I rise to a question of order. There is so much confusion and smoking on the floor that we can not determine what is going on.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will cause, on account of the complaints so frequently made to the Chair, clause 7 of Rule XIV to be read; and calls the attention of members on the floor and also of the officers of the House, the Doorkeeper and Sergeant-at-Arms, to the rule.

The Clerk read as follows:

7. When the Speaker is putting a question or addressing the House no member shall walk out of or across the Hall, nor, when a member is speaking, pass between him and the Chair; and during the session of the House no member shall wear his hat, or remain by the Clerk's desk during the call of the roll or the counting of ballots, or smoke upon the floor of the House; and the Sergeant-at-Arms and Doorkeeper are charged with the strict enforcement of this clause.

The SPEAKER. The Chair hopes the officers of the House charged with the execution of this rule will see that it is complied with on the floor.

The question is on agreeing to the motion of the gentleman from New York to strike out the clause on which the yeas and nays have been ordered; and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 124, nays 153, not voting 42; as follows:

So the motion to strike out was not agreed to.

On motion of Mr. ELLIS, by unanimous consent the reading of the names was dispensed with.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Mr. BLACKBURN with Mr. STRAIT, on this vote.

Mr. FYAN with Mr. BINGHAM, on this vote.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. ELLIS moved to reconsider the vote by which the motion to strike out was rejected; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question now recurs upon ordering the bill as amended to be engrossed and read a third time.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time.

The question recurred on the passage of the bill.

Mr. RANDALL. On that I demand the previous question.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. I call for the reading of the engrossed bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not think there is any rule or any recent practice of the House requiring the reading of the engrossed bill.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. I understood the Speaker to say that the bill was now upon its passage.

The SPEAKER. The Chair so stated.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. What bill?

The SPEAKER. The sundry civil appropriation bill.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. Then I ask for the reading of the engrossed bill.

The SPEAKER. On the passage of the bill the gentleman from Pennsylvania has demanded the previous question.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. And I call for the reading of the bill upon which we are to pass, which is the engrossed bill.

The SPEAKER. Under what rule?

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. The Speaker knows the rule.

The SPEAKER. The Chair knows of no such positive rule or late practice. If there be any, the Chair hopes the gentleman will call attention to it.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. The Chair stated the question to be upon the passage of this bill, and that the gentleman from Pennsylvania had demanded the previous question. Now, upon that bill on which the previous question is demanded, which, as the Speaker states, is the sundry civil appropriation bill, I ask as a question of right for the reading of the engrossed bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Kentucky on the subject as to whether there is any such rule or practice of the House.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. I call the attention of the Chair to page 190 of the Digest, to Rule XXI, clause 2:

Bills and joint resolutions on their passage shall be read the first time by title and the second time in full, when, if the previous question is ordered, the Speaker shall state the question to be: Shall the bill be engrossed and read a third time? and, if decided in the affirmative, it shall be read the third time by title, unless the reading in full is demanded by a member, and the question shall then be put upon its passage.

I contend that if the bill has been engrossed it ought to be here, and the Clerk should read that engrossed bill upon which we are here to vote. The rule says so; it is in the bond, and I call for the pound of flesh.

Mr. WAIT. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WAIT. Did not the House on yesterday by a vote of two-thirds direct the suspension of the rules for the remainder of the session upon the sundry civil appropriation bill?

The SPEAKER. The House by a vote of two-thirds suspended the rules to consider the bill under certain regulations prescribed in the motion itself, which regulations say nothing concerning the readings of the bill.

Mr. WAIT. Would not then the action of the House suspend any rule such as the gentleman from Kentucky invokes?

The SPEAKER. The Chair has not yet decided that.

Mr. COX, of New York. I would like the Chair to state to the House the exact situation of this bill at this time. If I understand it, the bill has been read a third time by its title. We have passed from that. The previous question has been called on the passage of the bill. Am I right?

The SPEAKER. The previous question has been demanded, but has not been ordered.

Mr. COX, of New York. The custom has been, so far as I recollect, after the proceedings on a bill have reached this stage not to have the engrossed bill read a third time at length.

Mr. POTTER. It has not been read at length at all.

Mr. CRISP. It was read here in the House.

Mr. POTTER. At what time?

Mr. CRISP. Between 6 and 7 o'clock last evening.

Mr. COX, of New York. My friend from New York was not present at that time.

I submit that since the adoption of the new rules there has been no practice calling for what the gentleman from Kentucky now demands, the reading of this bill at length at this stage.

Mr. REED, of Maine. This is not a question of what practice has arisen. The action of the House thus far has simply been to pass the bill to be engrossed. That is the order of the House; consequently the bill has got to be engrossed and read the third time. Now, how is it possible if a member demands the reading of the engrossed bill to say to him that that has not been done which the House has ordered to be done?

The SPEAKER. The Chair has no doubt as to the right of a member under the express language of the second clause of Rule XXI to demand the third reading of the bill at length before the question is taken on its passage; but the question of practice, as to which the Chair has some difficulty, is whether the member has a right to demand that the bill shall be actually engrossed before it is read.

There was a practice prevailing at one time, according to the impression of the Chair, to take the printed or manuscript bill and simply indorse it as an engrossed bill. That practice prevailed for a long time in the House according to the present recollection of the Chair, but was afterward discontinued, and the bill was simply read in its original printed form.

Mr. REED, of Maine. When I first came into this House it was understood if a member chose to demand the reading of the engrossed bill the bill had to be engrossed before it could be read to satisfy his demand; and I supposed that arose not from any particular rule but from the nature of the case. The first passage of the bill is a passage to be engrossed, and the House before it passes the bill finally, if it chooses, is entitled to have the engrossed bill read in order to see if that is the bill which has been actually passed in the House.

I remember once in the Legislature of my own State that a bill which was engrossed was actually different from the bill which passed the senate of the State, and that by reason of a mistake on the part of the clerk of the senate; so that the bill actually went to the governor, but was not signed, with amendments in it not one of which had been voted on by the senate. That occurred because the engrossment was made by mistake.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has no doubt the practice in most legislative bodies is as the gentleman has stated.

Mr. REED, of Maine. It is not in any respect different from the practice and from the principle of the rules of this House. The House has passed a bill to be engrossed. That has got to be done. The engrossment has to take place before the bill can be finally passed. It seems to me that is in the very nature of things and can not be eradicated by any custom of the House or by the rule.

Mr. RANDALL. I suppose that there may be members here who had the impression that this bill was not engrossed. I beg to state that that precaution has been taken and the bill is engrossed.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. Then have it read.

Mr. RANDALL. And in that connection I ask the Chair whether the suspension of the rules under which we have been acting has exhausted itself?

The SPEAKER. The motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL] was simply to suspend the rules and consider the bill under certain regulations. The Chair thinks that does not dispense with the rules ordinarily relating to the passage of bills.

Mr. RANDALL. If the suspension of the rules is not operating at this time I make the motion to suspend the rules so as to dispense with a reading of the bill at length.

The SPEAKER. The Chair prefers not to decide the question made by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WHITE] as to his right to have the engrossed bill read at this time; because it is not necessary to do so or to establish a precedent which shall prevail in regard to this matter hereafter. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL] moves to suspend the rules so as to take the vote on the passage of the bill without having it read a third time at length.

Mr. REED, of Maine. I desire to say in response to a single sentence of the gentleman from Pennsylvania that so far as concerns the actual demand made for the reading of the bill at length I neither knew it was going to be made—

Mr. RANDALL. I did not make any such charge.

Mr. REED, of Maine. Nor had I any disposition to make such a demand. I have spoken simply as a member of the House interested in the orderly conduct of its business.

The SPEAKER. This is of course an important parliamentary question, and may at some time become more so.

Mr. BAYNE. As I understand the position of this bill now, a majority may pass it. Am I correct?

Mr. RANDALL. I have made the motion to suspend the rules and dispense with the reading of the engrossed bill.

Mr. BAYNE. In the interest of this bill I suggest to my colleague [Mr. RANDALL] that he do not make that motion. I should prefer having the engrossed bill read if it should be necessary.

Mr. RANDALL. I would prefer not, because I do not want time, which is valuable, exhausted in that way.

Several MEMBERS. Regular order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL] moves to suspend the rules and vote upon the passage of the bill without reading it at length the third time.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, how did the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL] take me off my feet to make that motion?

The SPEAKER. He did not. Several gentlemen addressed the Chair after the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WHITE] concluded and before the gentleman from Pennsylvania obtained the floor.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. But they were discussing the point of order. They were not making motions.

The SPEAKER. But there is no motion. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WHITE] made no motion; he simply demanded the reading of the bill.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. Under the rule.

The SPEAKER. Certainly; but that is not debatable. Is there a second demanded?

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. I demand a second.

The SPEAKER. A second is demanded. The Chair will appoint as tellers the gentleman from Kentucky, Mr. WHITE, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. RANDALL. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania to suspend the rules and vote upon the passage of this bill without reading it at length the third time.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 79, noes 11; so the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. A second is ordered. Fifteen minutes are allowed for debate.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I yield two minutes of my time to the gentleman from New York [Mr. JAMES].

Mr. JAMES. Mr. Speaker, in examining this sundry civil bill I find that the Committee on Appropriations have inserted general legislation in reference to the public buildings and the sites for such buildings in three of the States which are represented on the committee by three of its members. We ordinary members of this House when we wish to have the limit of expenditure upon public buildings in the communities we represent increased are obliged to introduce bills for that purpose, which are referred to a committee, and in due time are reported back and acted upon by the House; but here I find that members of the Committee on Appropriations propose in this general appropriation bill to increase the limits of expenditure upon certain public buildings. The bill proposes to increase the limit of expenditure on a public building at Dallas, Tex., from $75,000 to $100,000; the limit on the public building at Galveston, Tex., from $125,000 to $145,000, and the limit on public buildings at Jefferson City from $100,000 to $132,000.

Mr. KEAN. Where is Jefferson City?

Mr. JAMES. In Missouri.

Mr. KEAN. Oh! I thought it was in Indiana. [Laughter.]

Mr. JAMES. The limit of expenditure on the public building at Saint Joseph, Mo., is to be increased from $75,000 to $300,000.

The original limit for the public building and site at Minneapolis, Minn., was fixed at $175,000, and it is to be increased by this bill to $500,000. I protest, Mr. Speaker, against this treatment of this House by the Committee on Appropriations, giving to the members of that committee an advantage over other members of the House who are equally interested in general appropriation bills.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. Now, Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. THOMAS].

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, three minutes of time have been yielded to me by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WHITE], and I shall occupy that time in pointing out some peculiarities of this bill. The gentleman from New York [Mr. JAMES] has called attention to the six instances in which the Committee on Appropriations have introduced general legislation into this bill in violation of the rules of the House, and by the suspension of the rules the points of order which otherwise might have been made against these several appropriations have been cut off.

But this bill has some special features, which ought to commend it especially to this House, and I desire to call attention to those features. If we look at the appropriations for public buildings and grounds, keeping in view the personnel of the Committee on Appropriations, a new light will dawn upon the House. I call attention to the provisions in the bill beginning at line 29. I find that the first of these items is in the interest of Massachusetts, which is so ably represented on the Committee on Appropriations by the distinguished gentleman Mr. LONG.

Mr. LONG. If the gentleman will permit, there is not the slightest appropriation for Massachusetts.

Mr. THOMAS. I speak of the provisions of the bill.

Mr. LONG. There is not the slightest appropriation for Massachusetts there. It is a provision for the sale of a building belonging to the Government, a provision to put $220,000 into the Treasury—not to take anything out of it.

Mr. THOMAS. But it is a provision which could not have been introduced on this bill if it had not been introduced in this way. It would have been subject to the point of order.

Mr. RANDALL. No; it would not.

Mr. LONG. It would not.

Mr. THOMAS. I decline to be interrupted further.

Mr. LONG. Then be honorable!

Mr. THOMAS. I am, in pointing out the true inwardness of this bill. Mr. Speaker, the next item to which I desire to call attention is that for the benefit of Brooklyn, N. Y., which State is so ably represented upon the committee by Mr. HUTCHINS. That gets $135,000.

Mr. POST, of Pennsylvania. The gentleman [Mr. HUTCHINS] does not live in Brooklyn.

Mr. THOMAS. I say the appropriation is for the benefit of Brooklyn, in the State of New York, which is so ably represented on the committee by the distinguished gentleman I have named.

Mr. ROBINSON, of New York. The appropriation ought to be a great deal more.

Mr. THOMAS. The next item is for the benefit of Buffalo, N. Y., $37,500. Then we come to Chicago, Ill., which State is so ably represented on the committee by my colleague, Mr. CANNON. Then come Cleveland and Columbus, Ohio, represented on the committee by Mr. FOLLETT.

A MEMBER. And General KEIFER.

Mr. THOMAS. Then we come to Dallas, Tex., which gets $25,000. That State is represented on the committee by Mr. HANCOCK. Then we come to Fort Wayne, Ind., which State is represented on the committee by the distinguished gentleman Mr. HOLMAN, and I want to call attention to the fact that a bill has already passed this House giving him another appropriation for Fort Wayne; so that if this item goes through he is to have a double appropriation for this public building in Indiana. [Laughter.] Such is the work of the great watch-dog of the Treasury. I say it in no offensive sense.

Mr. REED, of Maine. If it is for Indiana it is meritorious.

Mr. THOMAS. Yes; if it is for Indiana it is very meritorious and is "in the line of economy." [Laughter.]

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. Will the gentleman allow me to ask him whether the appropriation for that Indiana building is not in excess of the amount authorized by law?

Mr. THOMAS. I understand that it is $25,000 in excess of the amount authorized by law. Mr. Speaker, this is the economy and reform of this Democratic House under the guidance of the great economist, Mr. HOLMAN, of Indiana. [Renewed laughter.]

For Hannibal, Mo., which has as its representative on that committee the gentleman from Missouri, Mr. BURNES, the appropriation is $37,500. Then for Jefferson City, also in the State represented by that gentleman, there is an appropriation of $132,000. There is also an appropriation of $15,000 for Kansas City, Mo., and $50,000 for Saint Joseph, Mo. Then we come to Leavenworth, Kans., which is represented on that committee by the gentleman from Kansas, Mr. RYAN; then Montgomery, Ala., which is represented on that committee by the gentleman from Alabama, Mr. FORNEY. Then Minneapolis, Minn., gets $100,000, and the limit heretofore fixed by law for the building there is increased, under the leadership of the distinguished Representative from Minneapolis, Mr. WASHBURN. [Laughter.] Then there is an appropriation of $15,000 for New Orleans, represented by the gentleman from Louisiana, Mr. ELLIS, a member of that committee. Then Peoria, Ill., under the leadership of the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. CANNON, obtains an appropriation; and then Poughkeepsie, N. Y., represented by the gentleman from New York, Mr. HUTCHINS. Then comes Philadelphia, Pa., represented by the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. RANDALL. [Laughter.]

Mr. RANDALL. I ask the gentleman to read that provision. It is to put $300,000 into the Treasury, not to take money out.

Mr. THOMAS. It is general legislation on an appropriation bill, which would have been subject to a point of order if this bill had been considered in the ordinary way. I have only called attention to these points so that the House and the country may see how well the districts and States represented on the Appropriations Committee are provided for in this bill.

Mr. MILLS. I remind the gentleman that he does great injustice to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. TOWNSHEND], whom he has not mentioned.

Mr. THOMAS. I had forgotten that my colleague [Mr. TOWNSHEND] was on the Appropriations Committee, and beg his pardon for not giving him his due.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. MCOMAS].

Mr. MCOMAS. Mr. Speaker, in these two minutes I wish only to supplement the statement which has been made with reference to public buildings provided for in this bill. I have nothing to do with motives; but I have taken the trouble to add together the various appropriations in this bill for public buildings, and I find the total to be $2,173,000.

Mr. RANDALL. The gentleman is mistaken.

Mr. MCOMAS. That is the calculation I have made, and I have made it from the bill. I take these figures from the printed bill, if not from the engrossed bill before this House.

Mr. RANDALL. The gentleman counts in perhaps provisions for the sale of two public properties—

Mr. MCOMAS. I have only a moment, and can not yield. I am not here to ascribe motives to anybody; but I want the House to say, while we protest time and again against sporadic extravagance, whether in an appropriation bill passed under a suspension of the rules in the last days of the session we shall pile up expenditures to the amount of two millions of dollars for these public buildings out of $22,000,000 which the bill carries, although these provisions in many cases change the existing law, going beyond limitations heretofore enacted.

Now, there is no committee for which in its constitution I have higher respect than for the Committee on Appropriations, but I say we are driven by the force of this vote upon suspension of the rules to the alternative of spending $2,000,000 without an opportunity to amend or diminish these appropriations.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. PAYSON. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. PAYSON. Would it be in order at this time, as the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HORR] is the only member on the Committee on Appropriations who seems to be unprovided for in this bill, to move that he be allowed an appropriation for a public building in his district?

Mr. RANDALL. I hope the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. THOMAS] will do justice by correcting the statement he has made. There is not a dollar in that part of the bill, so far as I know, that goes to my district or to Pennsylvania either.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. I yield two minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. POTTER] reserving one minute to myself.

Mr. POTTER. Mr. Speaker, in the two minutes allowed me I desire to say, as forcibly as I may, that this departure from the uniform practice of this Government by passing great appropriation bills under a suspension of the rules can not be justified. It ought to be condemned by the entire country, and it will be so condemned. The evils of such a practice could not be more forcibly illustrated than in the attempt now being made to pass these bills, in which private interests may be concerned, without an opportunity for the scrutiny of this House. I protest in the name of honest government, I protest in the name of that vigilance which we are bound under our oaths as legislators to exercise, that we are revolutionizing the whole practice of the Government by this procedure.

I am willing to sit here day and night until the session closes in order that these bills may be passed in regular order, and that no appropriation necessitating taxation upon the country shall be passed without such scrutiny on the part of Representatives here as the Constitution and all the honest practice of the Government require.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky has one minute remaining.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. In that one minute I desire to call the attention of this House to this remarkable bill, which provides in it over $1,000,000 for public buildings beyond the limit allowed by law, and which bill is to be passed now under a suspension of the rules.

I wish to call the attention of the House to the fact that this same committee refused $400 to the Freedmen's Hospital for a force-pump in this city, while they put in millions of dollars beyond the limit provided by law for public buildings.

I wish also to call attention to the fact that they omit provision for payment of arrears of pay which may be certified to be due to officers and men of the United States Army. They also omitted to provide pay for two and three years' volunteers which may be certified to be due to the officers and men who served in the war of the rebellion. They also omitted to provide bounty to volunteers and their widows and legal heirs. They also omitted to provide for the payment of bounties under act of July 28, 1866.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. I regret it. I wish I had an hour. [Laughter and applause.]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania has eighteen minutes.

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Speaker, notwithstanding what the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. McCOMAS] has said, the amounts appropriated in this bill for public buildings aggregate $1,794,719.84, which is about the amount which was appropriated for a like purpose last year.

As to individual members being influenced in that committee, I wish to give those gentlemen opportunity to defend themselves. But as my name has been drawn in here I want to say, so far as I know, not one dollar has been appropriated for any public building connected with Philadelphia by this appropriation bill. On the contrary an estimate of $60,000 for the post-office building of that city was left unprovided for. All the Philadelphia Representative did was to authorize the sale of a public building in the city of Philadelphia, whereby $300,000 or more would come into the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. THOMAS. What about the public building for Williamsport, Pa.?

Mr. BROWN, of Pennsylvania. The gentleman from Illinois is mistaken about the Williamsport public building, as that appropriation is within the limits of the law.

Mr. RANDALL. I have nothing to do with Williamsport. That was the action of this House. It is not, however, over the limit, but on the contrary is within the limit.

Several MEMBERS. How about the vaults? What about Minneapolis public building?

Mr. RANDALL. Those gentlemen who are interested can defend themselves, as they secured a majority of the committee in favor of these several propositions. I am not able to say what occurred in the committee in this respect and I do not wish to say even how I voted. I am not afraid of my record in that regard.

Mr. BELFORD. Let me ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania a question.

Mr. RANDALL. Now before leaving the subject I wish to say, in defense of the committee, I do not believe there is a dollar in that bill for a public building which will not be wisely and economically expended. I objected, perhaps, to its insertion here on the ground it would break the limit; but I think the public interests by legislation in connection therewith have not been imperiled in any particular whatever.

Now as to the payment of soldiers—because that is a tender subject, Mr. Speaker—the gentleman from Kentucky is entirely in error. There was no estimate for the soldiers to which the gentleman referred in connection with this bill. It referred to another bill altogether, and his objection, therefore, on that point falls to the ground.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McCook, its Secretary, announced that that body respectfully return without the signature of the President pro tempore an enrolled bill (S. 84) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to ascertain the amounts due to citizens of the United States for supplies furnished to the Sioux and Dakota Indians of Minnesota subsequent to June 1, 1861, and prior to the massacre of August, 1862.

It also requested the return of joint resolutions of the following titles:

Joint resolution (S. R. 127) to authorize the printing of the reports of the Bureau of Ethnology;

Joint resolution (S. R. 128) to authorize the printing of the reports of the Geological Survey; and Joint resolution (S. R. 129) to authorize the printing of the reports of the Geological Survey.

It further announced the passage of a bill (H. R. 8179) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes, with amendments; in which concurrence was requested.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. RANDALL. This bill has been added to largely for purposes intended to benefit the soldiers, and also to protect the country from disease. There is, for instance, $400,000 appropriated in the bill for artificial limbs; which is an increase over the last appropriation, this being the fifth year. There is also $350,000 incorporated in the bill to protect the United States from the approach of cholera, which adds largely, and there is another appropriation of $200,000 in the bill more than that of last year because of the increased demand for money to be applied in support of the soldiers' homes. So that when the effort is made to prejudice the mind of this House against the bill on the score that the soldier has not been taken care of, it is only necessary to examine the facts to destroy any such impression.

I now yield two minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts, and then to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. BELFORD. Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania a question.

Mr. RANDALL. I will yield for a question if the gentleman does not consume too much of my time.

Mr. BELFORD. I know it to be a fact that there is in the Treasury to-day $145,000,000 of surplus revenue, and that instead of acting extravagantly you have cut the appropriations in every case, making them fall below the estimates. Now, why has this been done?

Mr. RANDALL. My answer to the gentleman's question is that in the first place I do not know the exact amount of surplus in the Treasury that can be safely placed in circulation, and further I say distinctly that economy and the good of the country at large demand that that money, whatever may be there, should be applied in paying the public debt. [Applause.]

Mr. BELFORD. You have not acted extravagantly in the appropriations.

Mr. RANDALL. I now yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. LONG].

Mr. LONG. Mr. Speaker, whatever share of responsibility falls upon me as a member of the Committee on Appropriations, which reported this bill to the House, I accept and do not propose to shirk. And that responsibility extends to portions of the bill relating not only to the section of country from which I come, but to all other sections as well.

But I rise now, sir, simply to answer the assertion which has been made that the State I in part represent is specially benefited in this bill in the matter of appropriations for public buildings. The fact is exactly to the contrary, as the following statement will show:

I am the only member on the Committee on Appropriations from New England, and not a single public building in New England is represented in the appropriations of this bill. The new post-office and court-house building in the city of Boston is nearly finished. The old court-house will become vacant probably within ninety days, and as a matter of profit to the Treasury of the United States, as well as a question of economy, a provision has been inserted in the bill for the sale of the court-house, which will add $225,000 to the Treasury and take not one dollar out of it.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. RANDALL. I now yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. CANNON. How much time?

Mr. RANDALL. One minute.

Mr. CANNON. Well, I cannot do much in a minute. [Laughter.]

Mr. RANDALL. Well, say all you can in that time, because I have to yield to others on the other side.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, I have had six years' service on the Committee on Appropriations, and during that time I have never had a dollar for the construction of a public building, or any public work, appropriated for the district I represent. I have taken the very best care I knew how to take of my State and section, and in doing so I was not neglectful of the responsibility that rested upon me to do exactly the same for the whole country. It is true this appropriation is in here for the Quincy and Peoria buildings, and it ought to be in, but they are within the limit.

By considerable effort I succeeded in getting Chicago in at $40,000 for repairs and preservation of the custom-house, and it ought to be in. And my colleague [Mr. THOMAS] might have gone a little further and made reference to a former Congress while I was on that committee, at least I think, and I want the gentleman from New York on my left to notice that I was a respectable factor in getting an appropriation in the gentleman's own district of $60,000 for the marine hospital at Cairo, [applause and laughter], and it ought to be there, and I was glad that it was put in.

Mr. HISCOCK. I always stand by my friend from Illinois. [Laughter.]

Mr. WELLER. It is an unfortunate fact that he does.

Mr. CANNON. And so I apprehend that gentlemen complain not so much for what is in the bill as for what is not in it. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. THOMAS. I move that my colleague be excused. [Renewed laughter.]

Mr. RANDALL. I now yield to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER] one minute.

Mr. KEIFER. In one minute I can say that I voted to break the limit for the public building at Columbus, Ohio, because the Secretary of the Treasury and other officers interested in this matter recommended it. We propose by adding $60,000 to the limit to build another story on the court-house, rather than come here a few years hence and ask an appropriation to erect another building, and the limit is yet too low. It is a question of merit, and not any other question, and I can say that in reference to the public building at Minneapolis as well as the small amount at Columbus. And I might also call the attention of the gentleman from Illinois to the fact that although he is in a large State it has one million more in appropriations for public buildings than mine, which outnumbered it at the last census.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. RANDALL. How much time have I?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Cox, of New York). The gentleman has seven minutes of his time remaining.

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania. I rise to a question of order. Would it be in order to ask unanimous consent to give each member of the Appropriations Committee five minutes to explain?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That would not be in order.

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania. I am sorry to hear it. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. RANDALL. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. WASHBURN].

[At this point Mr. HOLMAN was crossing the floor, and there were many cries of "Holman!" "Holman!"]

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Minnesota yield me a moment? [Loud applause.]

Mr. WASHBURN. I do not yield.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Minnesota is entitled to the floor.

Mr. WASHBURN. I do not desire any five minutes to explain my vote or my action upon the Committee on Appropriations, and I do not believe there is any necessity for any gentleman to make any such explanation. As a matter of fact, in the last sundry civil appropriation bill there were appropriations of this character for thirty-five buildings. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. THOMAS] talked as though this thing was unusual. This is the very bill in which these appropriations should be made.

So far as the appropriation for a building in my own city is concerned, I will state that Minneapolis is a city of 125,000 people, and before this building can be completed it will be a city of 200,000 people. The Secretary of the Treasury recommended $600,000 for the construction of a building there. The demands of the public service required such a building, and I see no impropriety in having that appropriation.

Mr. MILLS. I wish to ask the gentleman a question. Did the architect who planned this building plan a $500,000 building on a limit of $175,000 appropriation?

Mr. WASHBURN. I will say to the gentleman from Texas that the appropriation made last year broke the limit. There was no limit, and the architect went forward and prepared the plans for such a building as he thought the service required.

Mr. MILLS. Notwithstanding the limit of $175,000.

Mr. WASHBURN. The limit had been broken before.

Mr. MILLS. How?

Mr. WASHBURN. By making an appropriation in excess of the $175,000. The requirements of our city are such that there should be no hesitation about making this appropriation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. To whom does the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL] yield?

The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] is recognized.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, I could not hesitate to express my thanks to the House for the very good-natured greeting they gave me a few moments ago. My friend from Illinois [Mr. THOMAS] is under a misapprehension. This bill contains an appropriation $25,000 less than the limit which has been fixed for the Fort Wayne, Ind., public building in the district represented by my friend Judge LOWRY. But the trouble is this: After this bill was reported to the House a bill which came from the Senate passed the House appropriating $50,000 for this Fort Wayne building. The result of that is, there is in this bill $25,000 too much for that building.

Mr. THOMAS. There are two appropriations for the same building.

Mr. HOLMAN. Certainly; but my friend will excuse me. I discovered that fact, and on yesterday I asked unanimous consent of the House to strike from this bill that $25,000. My friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. MILLER] objected and then withdrew his objection, and then the gentleman from Iowa objected, and his objection stands yet. I now ask what I have been asking all the time, that the House will give unanimous consent that that unhappy $25,000 shall be stricken out. Gentlemen will see that the passage of the Senate bill after this bill was reported produced the result of which gentlemen complain.

Mr. WELLER. I wish the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] would indicate the gentleman from Iowa who objected. I am not the man.

Mr. HOLMAN. The gentleman from Iowa who objected was Mr. HEPBURN.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL] has three minutes of his time remaining. To whom does he yield?

Mr. RANDALL. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BURNES].

Mr. BURNES rose.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. I rise to a question of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky can not take the gentleman from Missouri off the floor on a question of order, unless it be a question of order as against the gentleman who is on the floor.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. Will the gentleman yield one minute to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HANCOCK] of the Committee on Appropriations to explain lines 1737 to 1740? [Cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. BURNES. Mr. Speaker, if the gentlemen on the other side have sufficiently amused themselves and are disposed to be just a little serious I have a few words to offer. Of course the Committee on Appropriations need no defense against the pleasantries and wit with which the House has been so generously enlivened. So far as I know or have been advised no gentleman has presented any subject to the committee or to myself that failed to receive a careful and honest consideration, and no legal and meritorious appropriation for the continuation of work on any public building has been denied. In all cases when the Congress have authorized the erection of a public building it becomes the duty of the Supervising Architect, under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, to prepare plans and specifications for it, and submit estimates of appropriations from year to year as the progress of the work may require. The Committee on Appropriations have not undertaken to authorize the erection of any building, but simply to appropriate for such as are already authorized and established.

In the exercise of the power to bring in bills of appropriation the committee found in the official report of the Secretary of the Treasury that a building having been authorized and under construction at Jefferson City, the capital of my State, needed $32,000 to make it of fire-proof material. Will any one say it was unwise to include an appropriation of the amount for such a proper purpose? My colleague, Mr. BLAND, who represents the capital district—always so careful and prudent in legislation—would not have warmly recommended it if it had not been in the interest of the Government. My colleague, Mr. HATCH, who represents the Hannibal district most faithfully, will verify the necessity and justice of the appropriation for making the building in Hannibal likewise fire-proof. I have no words of eulogy for my own city of Saint Joseph. She needs none.

There being no existing limit to the cost of the United States building in that city, we desired to make one. The Supervising Architect and the Secretary of the Treasury in their official reports have recommended to Congress that $300,000 be appropriated as the cost of such building. The House Committee on Buildings and Grounds have unanimously reported to the House in favor of appropriations to that amount, and all these reports and recommendations were before your committee for action. In allowing what seemed to be so manifestly proper and so universally approved the committee provided that the cost of the building should not exceed the amount stated.

Mr. COOK. Did you get anything in the bill?

Mr. BURNES. The gentleman from Iowa, representing a district which needs neither public buildings nor improvement—

Mr. BLOUNT. I would like to ask the gentleman from Missouri—

Mr. BURNES. I can not yield even to my honored friend from Georgia. The gentleman from Iowa is not happy, evidently. His district needs nothing—

Mr. WELLER. I desire to correct the gentleman from Missouri—

Mr. BURNES. I do not yield. There are doubtless hundreds of gentlemen on this floor who are more competent than myself to represent my district and the interests of the Government therein; but, notwithstanding, I have, perhaps, that right; and those who know its varied interests, industries, and resources will sympathize with me in my feeble efforts to represent and protect them. Missionary service in its behalf by the able gentlemen from Iowa, New York, and Brooklyn is, in all kindness, appreciated, but commended as more appropriate at home.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. RANDALL. Now, let us have a vote.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL] to suspend the rules so as to vote on the passage of the bill without reading it at length.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. I call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. HERR. I desire just half a minute.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. I do not object to the gentleman from Michigan having time for debate.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Objection was made.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made to an extension of the time.

Mr. REED, of Maine. The gentleman is a member of the committee.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to ask unanimous consent—

A MEMBER. Regular order.

Mr. BELFORD. Mr. Speaker, I do not rise to debate; I rise to ask unanimous consent—

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] is endeavoring to do the same thing; but objection is made.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, to avoid mistake, I now ask unanimous consent that the possible duplication of the appropriation for the public building at Fort Wayne, Ind., may be corrected by striking out the appropriation of $25,000 contained in this bill.

Mr. HEPBURN. I object.

Mr. ANDERSON. If it is proposed to pass this bill under a suspension of the rules, I object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL].

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. I call for the yeas and nays.

The House divided; and there were—yeas 47, noes 142.

The SPEAKER. More than one-fifth of the last vote have voted in the affirmative, and the yeas and nays are ordered. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL] to suspend the rules and take the vote upon the passage of the bill without reading it at length.

Mr. REED, of Maine. This is only on the motion to dispense with the reading.

The SPEAKER. That is the substance of it.

Mr. STOCKSLAGER. There will be another vote upon the passage of the bill?

The SPEAKER. Of course.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. THOMAS. If this motion is decided in the affirmative will it pass the bill?

The SPEAKER. Not at all. If this shall be decided in the affirmative the first question will be on the demand for the previous question, and the next on the passage of the bill. The Clerk will call the roll.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. I desire to know whether this is a suspension of the rule which requires the engrossed bill to be read.

The SPEAKER. This motion, if decided in the affirmative, will dispense with the rule which requires the bill to be read in any form.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 223, nays 55, not voting 46; as follows:

So the motion was agreed to.

The following additional pairs were announced from the Clerk's desk:

Mr. DOWD with Mr. MILLIKEN, on this vote.

Mr. OATES with Mr. HOLMES, on this vote.

On motion of Mr. BEACH, by unanimous consent the reading of names was dispensed with.

The result of the vote was then announced as above stated.

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Speaker, I now move the previous question on the passage of the bill.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. RANDALL moved to reconsider the vote by which the previous question was ordered; and also moved to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

Pending the roll-call, a message from the Senate, by Mr. SYMPSON, one of its clerks, requested the House to return to the Senate joint resolutions of the following titles:

Joint resolution (S. R. 127) to authorize the printing of the reports of the Bureau of Ethnology;

Joint resolution (S. R. 128) to authorize the printing of the reports of the Geological Survey; and Joint resolution (S. R. 129) to authorize the printing of the reports of the Geological Survey.

The SPEAKER. In the absence of objection to the return of these joint resolutions it is so ordered.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BAGLEY). The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HEPBURN. After the previous question has been ordered, there having been no debate upon this bill, is it not now in order to have thirty minutes' debate?

Mr. RANDALL. The rule has been suspended.

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Speaker, I call attention to the third clause of Rule XXVIII, which provides that—

When a motion to suspend the rules has been seconded, it shall be in order, before the final vote is taken thereon, to debate the proposition to be voted upon for thirty minutes, one-half of such time to be given to debate in favor of, and one-half to debate in opposition to, such proposition, and the same right of debate shall be allowed whenever the previous question has been ordered on any proposition on which there has been no debate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state that the rules have been suspended by order of the House.

Mr. RANDALL. That very debate was had on yesterday.

Mr. HEPBURN. I submit, Mr. Speaker, that the rule that has been suspended is the rule requiring the third reading of the bill in full.

Mr. RANDALL. On yesterday there was a debate of fifteen minutes on each side.

Mr. REED, of Maine. That was on another point.

Mr. HEPBURN. That was not upon the merits of the bill.

Mr. REED, of Maine. Mr. Speaker, I hope this question will be carefully considered. I wish to state the facts in regard to it. The motion to suspend the rules was so suspended them that the previous question might be ordered on the question.

There has been no debate on the bill. The debate already had was on the suspension, which is a totally different thing from the bill itself.

Now, we have arrived at this position, that the previous question has been ordered on the passage of the bill, but there has been no debate on the bill. The two hours' debate was simply upon one clause—was upon the question whether that particular clause should be a part of the bill or not. The bill itself has not been debated.

Mr. RANDALL. This matter is very plain.

Mr. HISCOCK. I desire to ask for the reading of the order or resolution which was adopted by a two-thirds vote.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Cox, of New York). If there be no objection the order will be read. The Chair will state, however, before the order is read—

Mr. HISCOCK. I hope the Chair will defer his statement until this order has been read; for I think it will make it perfectly clear that the gentleman from Maine [Mr. REED] is right.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will defer his statement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the rules be suspended so as to discharge the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union from the further consideration of the bill of the House 8256, making appropriations for the sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes, and to consider the same for one hour, which time shall be occupied in debate on the clause relating to the World's Industrial and Cotton Exposition, said time to be equally divided; and said bill shall be subject only to amendment, to strike out, and amend said clause, after which the previous question shall be considered as ordered.

Mr. HISCOCK. I think the Chair will see that this bill is simply here for consideration under that order, and that now debate is in order.

Mr. RANDALL. If the Chair will observe the reading of the last clause of that resolution, he will find it says that the previous question shall be considered as ordered. That has nothing to do with the suspension of the rules.

Mr. REED, of Maine. Well, after the previous question is "considered as ordered," if there has been no debate on the bill, the rules which in this respect were not suspended give us the right to fifteen minutes' debate on each side. I hope the Chair will not cut off that debate. It is perfectly evident that we ought to have debate on the bill. Members who have not yet spoken are entitled to be heard.

Mr. HISCOCK. The debate already had has not been upon the passage of the bill at all. There has been no debate on the bill itself.

Mr. KEIFER. Mr. Speaker, I think the order just read provides for a debate of one hour on the bill, which I believe was subsequently changed to two hours. Then it provides that the time shall be devoted to debate upon a particular part of the bill; still that constitutes debate upon the bill, and operates to cut off the right of debate under the third paragraph of Rule XXVIII, to which the attention of the Chair has been called.

Mr. HEPBURN. Mr. Speaker, allow me to call your attention to the fact that the gentleman from Pennsylvania, after there had been some discussion with regard to the bill which he sent to the Clerk's desk at the time he introduced his resolution, proposed then to introduce a new and distinct bill, and asked a suspension of the rules upon that bill. Then there was an agreement later between him and certain gentlemen that there should be two hours of discussion upon a particular clause of the bill. The bill we are now considering is not the bill that was named in his resolution.

Mr. RANDALL. Oh, yes, it is.

Mr. HEPBURN. It is not the bill that came from the committee. It has not been offered as the committee's bill, but as the proposition of the gentleman himself.

Mr. RANDALL. Yes; and it was under a suspension of the rules.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is prepared to decide this question. The Clerk will read the third paragraph of Rule XXVIII.

The Clerk read as follows:

3. When a motion to suspend the rules has been seconded, it shall be in order, before the final vote is taken thereon, to debate the proposition to be voted upon for thirty minutes, one-half of such time to be given to debate in favor of, and one-half to debate in opposition to, such proposition, and the same right of debate shall be allowed whenever the previous question has been ordered on any proposition on which there has been no debate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is clearly of opinion that the debate contemplated by the rule has been had. The previous question has been demanded. The question is on ordering the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

Mr. RANDALL moved to reconsider the vote by which the previous question was ordered; and also moved to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is now upon the passage of the bill; which, in accordance with the rule, will be taken by yeas and nays.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the affirmative—yeas 160, nays 107, not voting 48; as follows:

So the bill was passed.

During the roll-call,

Mr. POST, of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I ask, by unanimous consent, that the reading of the names be dispensed with.

The SPEAKER. The Chair hears no objection, and it is ordered accordingly.

The following pairs were announced:

Mr. CABELL with Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, on this vote.

Mr. PEEL with Mr. STRAIT, on this vote.

Mr. RANDALL moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. WILLIS. I move to suspend the rules and pass the following resolution:

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I rise to a privileged question.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. I ask the Speaker to have read what has just taken place.

The SPEAKER. The Chair announced the passage of the bill, when the gentleman from Pennsylvania moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table. The Chair then stated if there be no objection it would be so ordered.

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. I have been waiting for the Chair to state if there be no objection the title would stand.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the whole matter has passed beyond the control of the House.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. I understand it was the duty of the Chair, under the rules, to announce the title of the bill would stand if there be no objection. I stood waiting for the Chair to make that announcement. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Kentucky call the attention of the Chair to the number of the rule?

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. On page 103 of the Manual it is there stated that after a bill has passed the title may be amended, and then the bill shall be sent to the other House.

The SPEAKER. That is not the rule.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. Now I wish to call the attention of the Chair to the rule. [Cries of "Regular order!"] I call attention to page 117 of the Manual, and also to Rule XXVIII, page 205.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will read what he called the attention of the Chair to on page 205.

Mr. RANDALL. I submit it is too late, as the whole matter has passed from the attention of the House.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it is too late. The Chair had recognized the gentleman from Pennsylvania, who moved to reconsider and lay that motion on the table. That having been done, the Chair then recognized the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WILLIS], who made a motion to suspend the rules and pass the resolution which he sent up; and this was before the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WHITE] arose. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. ANDERSON. I demand a second on the motion of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WILLIS] to suspend the rules and pass his resolution.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. I ask whether it is not the custom of the Chair, after a bill has been passed, to ask whether the title of the bill shall be amended, and to state if there be no objection this will remain the title of the bill?

The SPEAKER. It has not, but the Chair has made the announcement, the bill has been passed, and the title will be as reported if there be no objection.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. I was on my feet and waiting for the Chair to make that announcement.

The SPEAKER. Then the gentleman waited not only until the Speaker had completed his announcement, but until other motions had intervened and been acted on before he addressed the Chair. The Chair thinks he is too late. The gentleman from Kentucky moves to suspend the rules and pass this resolution, but pending that the gentleman from Oregon rises to submit a privileged report.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I also have a privileged report to submit.

Mr. ANDERSON. I ask for a second of the motion to suspend the rules.

The SPEAKER. The privileged report submitted by the gentleman from Oregon will be first read.

ALLOTMENT IN SEVERALTY.

Mr. GEORGE. I submit the following report.

The Clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (S. 66) providing for the allotment in severalty to Indians residing upon the Umatilla reservation, in the State of Oregon, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference agree to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to House amendment numbered 5; and agree to the same.

M. C. GEORGE,

R. S. STEVENS,

OLIN WELLBORN,

Managers on the part of the House.

HENRY L. DAWES,

JAMES H. SLATER,

ANGUS CAMERON,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. I ask for the reading of the amendment.

The amendment was read.

Mr. GEORGE. I demand the previous question on the adoption of the report.

The previous question was ordered; and under the operation thereof the conference report was adopted.

Mr. GEORGE moved to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was adopted; and also moved to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I now rise to a privileged report. I am directed by the Committee on Appropriations to report back the House bill making appropriation for the postal service, and I ask that the Clerk read the report of the committee.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8138) making appropriation for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes, together with the amendments of the Senate, having considered the same, beg leave to report as follows:

They recommend concurrence in the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 7, 8, 10, and 14. They recommend non-concurrence in amendments numbered 3, 4, 5, 6, 9, 11, 12, 13, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, and 21.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I move the adoption of the report.

Mr. HISCOCK. I suppose these amendments are to be considered in the Committee of the Whole?

The SPEAKER. If the point is made.

Mr. HISCOCK. It is made.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York makes the point that these amendments must have their first consideration in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union. They will accordingly be so referred.

Mr. HOLMAN. I move to take from the Speaker's table the legislative, &c., appropriation bill returned from the Senate with amendments, and that they be referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I will yield for that purpose.

XVI—142

The SPEAKER. The amendments to the Post-Office appropriation bill have gone to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. May I be permitted to ask the gentleman from New York what amendments he objects to?

Mr. HISCOCK. I want to have them all read to know what they are.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I am willing to have all the amendments read and considered.

Mr. HISCOCK. I presume that I should have no objection to considering them in the House as in Committee of the Whole with the right of debate and amendment.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I have no objection to that, and ask that it be done and that the amendments be now read.

The SPEAKER. But there is a matter pending before the House—a motion to suspend the rules.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. By whom?

The SPEAKER. By the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WILLIS].

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I suppose that, the report being a privileged report, carried with it the right to have it considered.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks if the gentleman desires to have it considered he had better wait until the pending matter is disposed of.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. But I ask if it is privileged is it not likewise privileged for consideration?

The SPEAKER. It is under the rules of the House, but the gentleman proposes to waive the rule of the House and consider it in the House as in Committee of the Whole. There is now pending another matter before the House.

Mr. HISCOCK. I do not believe any objection will be made on this side to considering it in the House as in Committee of the Whole, subject to five minutes' debate and amendment.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I will accept that.

Mr. HISCOCK. Very well.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Then I again ask that we proceed to the consideration of the amendments in the House.

The SPEAKER. But there is a prior motion pending.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. The gentleman from New York agrees to consider it now in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. HOLMAN. That is all proper.

Now I ask, Mr. Speaker, that the bill with the Senate amendments—the legislative appropriation bill—be taken from the Speaker's table, the Senate amendments non-concurred in, and a committee of conference appointed.

Mr. HISCOCK. I think the amendments had better be read, and we can dispose of them here and now.

Mr. HOLMAN. Why there are a hundred or over.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Is not the proposition that I have made pending?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is not on the floor, the point of order being made that the first consideration must be in Committee of the Whole, but that point being waived by an agreement that it shall be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Now there is a matter pending before the House prior to that.

Mr. REED, of Maine. But unanimous consent was granted to consider it in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. And that arrangement dispensed with the point of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is anxious, of course, to get the appropriation bill in if an opportunity is given, if gentlemen can come to some understanding about it. But the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WILLIS] has a motion pending which is in the way at present.

Mr. REED, of Maine. If there is no objection why can not an arrangement be arrived at to consider the Post-Office bill now?

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to that request?

Mr. WILLIS. I am compelled to object.

Mr. CANNON. Would it not be in order for the gentleman from Illinois to ask that the rules be suspended—

The SPEAKER. There is a motion pending to suspend the rules now.

LEGISLATIVE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HISCOCK. I will withdraw the objection I made with reference to the legislative appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. If there be no further objection the request of the gentleman from Indiana will be complied with and the bill taken from the Speaker's table, the Senate amendments non-concurred in, and the bill with the amendments printed, and a committee of conference asked on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER announced as the managers at the said conference on the part of the House, Mr. HOLMAN, Mr. HISCOCK, and Mr. CANNON.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WILLIS] assures me that the motion he proposes to make will occupy but a short time. I am willing therefore to allow the report of the committee to stand over until that is disposed of.

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania. I now rise to a privileged motion. I move that the House do now adjourn. And pending that I move that when it adjourns it be to meet to-morrow at 10 o'clock.

The SPEAKER. That would be a recess.

The gentleman moves that the House do now adjourn.

The question was taken; and on a division there were—ayes 4, noes 105.

So the motion was not agreed to.

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania. I move that the House take a recess until 10 o'clock to-morrow.

Mr. KEIFER. I make the point of order that that is not in order. A motion has been made to suspend the rules, and one motion to adjourn is in order and no other motion.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is right; the motion is not in order until there has been action on the motion to suspend the rules. The Clerk will read the proposition which the gentleman from Kentucky moves to suspend the rules and pass.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill making appropriations for the preservation and continuation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted, &c., That there is hereby appropriated, to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and to be expended under the direction and with the approval of the Secretary of War, for the preservation and continuation of such of the uncompleted public works mentioned and designated for improvement in an act entitled "An act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes," approved July 5, 1884, the sum of $5,000,000, which sum of $5,000,000 shall be applied by the Secretary of War to each of said public works respectively in proportion to the sums appropriated for such works under and by the said act: Provided, That no more shall be thus allotted than is sufficient for the completion of said works under the present estimate: Provided, That the work at the harbor of Galveston, Tex., shall be treated as if the sum of $250,000 had been appropriated for said harbor of Galveston by said act: And provided further, That any money that shall be allotted under this act for the improvement of the Mississippi River below Cairo, except so much thereof as shall be necessary to be expended in preventing the works in progress on other portions of the river from waste and injury, shall be expended in the continuation and completion of the works on the Plum Point and Lake Providence reaches of the river now in progress of improvement as established by the commission, to the end that the proposed improvement of said two reaches of the river on which works are in progress shall be completed at an early day, and the plan of said commission for the improvement of the navigation of the river fully tested; and the money thus allotted by this act for the improvement of the Mississippi River below Cairo shall be expended by the Secretary of War in accordance with plans approved by him.

Mr. ANDERSON. I demand a second.

Mr. HOLMAN. I suggest to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WILLIS] that the words "below Cairo," in the last clause of the bill, should be omitted.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. I rise to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. Is this a joint resolution or a bill?

The SPEAKER. It is a bill.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. I ask the chairman of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors if this is the unanimous report from that committee, and if it has been considered by the full committee.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. ANDERSON. I demand a second.

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania. And pending that I move that the House take a recess—

Mr. WILLIS. The gentleman from Pennsylvania has already made the only motion which he is entitled to make under the rules.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania has made a motion to adjourn, and the rule says after the result on the motion to adjourn is announced the Chair shall not entertain any other dilatory motion until a vote shall be taken on the motion to suspend the rules.

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania. Do I understand that the Chair will entertain no further motion to adjourn or to take a recess until a vote is had on the proposition of the gentleman from Kentucky?

The SPEAKER. That is the rule of the House. The Clerk will read it.

The Clerk read clause 8 of Rule XVI, as follows:

8. Pending a motion to suspend the rules, the Speaker may entertain one motion that the House adjourn; but after the result thereon is announced he shall not entertain any other dilatory motion till the vote is taken on suspension.

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania. Would not a motion that when the House adjourns it be to meet on Monday next be in order?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that would be a dilatory motion.

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania. Then I will wait till the House shall vote, when I will renew my motion.

Mr. WILLIS. The words "below Cairo" should be stricken out.

The SPEAKER. These words will be stricken out. A second having been demanded, the Chair appoints as tellers the gentleman from Kansas, Mr. ANDERSON, and the gentleman from Kentucky, Mr. WILLIS.

Mr. ANDERSON. I should like to understand what is stricken out. Would it be in order to have it read?

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the latter clause as modified.

The Clerk read as follows:

And the money thus allotted by this act for the improvement of the Mississippi River shall be expended by the Secretary of War and in accordance with plans approved by him.

The SPEAKER. The words "below Cairo" were originally in the bill after the words "Mississippi River." They are now stricken out. The question is on ordering a second. The tellers will take their places.

The tellers proceeded to take the vote.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky (while the vote was proceeding). I call for the enforcement of the rule that no member shall be allowed to be at the Clerk's desk while a vote is being taken.

The count having been completed, the tellers reported—ayes 158, noes 7.

So there was a second.

The SPEAKER. Under the rules thirty minutes are allowed for debate, fifteen minutes in support of the motion and fifteen minutes against. The gentleman from Kansas, Mr. ANDERSON, is recognized to control the time in opposition. The gentleman from Kentucky, Mr. WILLIS, will control the time in support of the motion.

Mr. ANDERSON. As I understand, it is for the gentleman advocating the suspension to occupy the floor first.

The SPEAKER. There is no rule on that subject.

Mr. ANDERSON. I think that would be the natural rule under parliamentary law. The affirmative should open.

Mr. WILLIS. I will occupy five minutes and will then yield to the opposition, and then my friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. BAYNE] will take five minutes, and I will reserve five minutes.

If I can have the attention of the House I will endeavor briefly to explain this bill. It is a substitute for the bill that has been pending. After consultation with gentlemen on both sides of the House it was thought best not to leave these great works of the Government in the next three years without appropriations sufficient to take care of them and to protect them against waste and ruin. As the result of that consultation we have brought in this bill for $5,000,000.

It may be proper to state that the estimates of the Engineer Department for this year of the sum which could be profitably expended during the year was over $34,000,000. This, therefore, is barely one-seventh of the amount which the engineers say could be profitably expended upon these public works. The bill does not leave the expenditure of these $5,000,000 to the discretion of the Secretary of War. On the contrary, it declares in express terms that he shall expend this money upon those public works that are mentioned and described in the last river and harbor act, which passed July 5, 1884. So that there is no room for doubt that each of those public improvements which has been approved by Congress will receive its pro rata of this $5,000,000 for the preservation, or, if not needed for the preservation, for the continuation of the work. The harbor at Galveston is included in this bill because, when the committee reported an amount for Galveston at the last session, upon motion in Committee of the Whole it was stricken out, and it was now thought but fair that, for the preservation of the expensive Government plant at that city, Galveston should have its pro rata of this $5,000,000; which it would not have except for the mention of it in the pending bill, as it is not one of the works described in the last river and harbor act.

In regard to the Mississippi River improvement, this bill incorporates the amendment presented in Committee of the Whole during the pendency of the bill and reported by the committee, limiting the expenditure of money upon the Mississippi River improvement to the two reaches of Plum Point and Providence. That is the amendment offered in Committee of the Whole by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN], and which was acceptable to an overwhelming majority of the committee. The bill requires the Government to test these methods of improvement upon the two reaches I have named before any portion of this amount shall be expended in any other direction. It is believed by the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and by gentlemen of the House whom I have consulted, that it is simply a matter of legislative propriety and of the highest legislative duty that this Congress should not adjourn leaving the public works upon the great rivers and the great harbors of our country without a dollar of appropriation in the event of storm or injury from natural causes, and in that view it is believed that there should be at least this amount ready at hand to meet any demand or emergency that may arise from such causes. The bill is submitted to the House as a compromise, because we understand—we know—that under our rules the discussion of the other bill making an appropriation for rivers and harbors would occupy valuable time of this House to the exclusion of pressing appropriation bills that ought to be disposed of if we wish to avoid an extra session.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I now yield five minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. HISCOCK].

Mr. HISCOCK. Mr. Speaker, I have a word to say in regard to this bill. This is the third appropriation bill brought into this House by our friends upon the other side, which they propose to pass under a suspension of the rules. The River and Harbor Committee brought in a bill here which, in two of its largest appropriations, was against the sentiment of the House, and upon the substantial defeat of those two propositions the committee now seek to pass this bill appropriating $5,000,000. The two propositions upon which they were defeated were the appropriation for Galveston Harbor and the appropriation for the Mississippi River improvement. We all remember the vote in this House upon adopting the amendment of the Committee of the Whole. It was defeated by a scant majority, made by changes after the roll-call had been concluded. And, Mr. Speaker, what is this bill now proposed? In the law for the current year there are forty-three items, carrying $910,000, none of which are included in the bill for the next year; and I do not include in this statement the Mississippi River or the Missouri.

There are, I say, forty-three items in the law for the current year that are not in the bill reported to the House at this session, and we have a right to assume that the necessity for expenditure upon those works has ceased; yet this bill proposes to appropriate for these works the sum of $350,000 out of the total appropriation of five million dollars which the bill makes. Can gentlemen give us any explanation of this? Are we to vote blind here for a bill containing items that you have discarded from your general river and harbor bill, and which, for aught I know, have been discarded from the reports and estimates of the engineers? You exclude these items from your river and harbor bill, and yet you now propose, in this pending bill, to appropriate for the same works over $350,000. I regard it proper that the attention of the House should be called to this proposition.

I submit to the House a list of the forty-three public works to which I refer:

Now, sir, as to the public works embraced in this list, appropriated for by the law for the current fiscal year, not included in the bill reported by the Rivers and Harbors Committee, but entitled to receive distribution under the pending bill, the House has no means of knowing whether there should be any further appropriations for them or not; yet this bill gives them $350,000. It will be observed that this list is exclusive of the items for the Mississippi and Missouri Rivers.

I am and always have been in favor of liberal appropriations for river and harbor improvements, but I am opposed now, as I always have been, to appropriations for public works which never have been considered by a committee, as to which the House has no information upon which to base judicious action, and which are vouched for only by the judgment of one man—for this bill, sir, has never been considered by the Committee on Rivers and Harbors at all.

Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that if we can not have time to perfect our legislation so that we may feel satisfied with it, we had better defeat it altogether rather than to vote away money for purposes that have not been discussed or considered at all. In this bill there is an appropriation of $250,000 for Galveston Harbor, and yet every gentleman from Texas who has spoken in reference to that harbor has told us that an appropriation of $250,000, if voted, would be simply wasted. Right back of me sits a Representative from the State of Texas [Mr. OCHILTREE], who has spoken upon that subject, and has told us that such an appropriation would be merely thrown away. Another gentleman from Texas [Mr. MILLS] has been heard upon the same question, and has denounced such an appropriation. Yet it is proposed in this bill to force that appropriation upon them. What reason is there for including that item in the bill? Last year when your river and harbor bill came in here carrying an item for that work, as I remember, some gentleman from Texas arose and asked to have it stricken out, and it was stricken out unanimously. And I desire to ask the gentleman from Kentucky why it is that you propose to force this sum upon them? Does that committee set up its judgment against that of these gentlemen who live in the locality interested? Does it assume to speak for the people of that State?

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. MILLS. To what does the gentleman refer when he speaks of my having said that we have no use for any appropriation of this kind?

Mr. HISCOCK. I refer to remarks which the gentleman made and which, had I the time, I should with great pleasure read.

Mr. MILLS. The gentleman can profit by reading my speeches.

Mr. ANDERSON. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON].

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, we have been informed by the Committee on Rivers and Harbors that they have done an immense deal of work upon a river and harbor bill, and that they could not report it earlier. With all the aid of engineers' reports, after daily and nightly meetings, after months of incubation, as they inform us, they produced a bill which has been discussed in Committee of the Whole, but the consideration of which is not yet completed. Now the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WILLIS] comes into this House with a bill matured by no committee, not specific in its terms, not even printed, his own handiwork, and he moves that almost in the twinkling of an eye, after only thirty minutes' debate, we shall by a two-thirds vote pass this bill giving this money, $5,000,000, in a lump sum.

Mr. WILLIS. Did not the Committee on Appropriations, of which the gentleman is a member, report and have passed under a suspension of the rules the sundry civil bill?

Mr. CANNON. Oh, the sundry civil bill was matured in full by a committee of the House. But even if the Committee on Appropriations failed in its duty it is no reason why you should fail in yours. This bill never had even the blessing or condemnation or consideration of a committee of this House for a moment. Yet we are asked to pass it. What does it mean? There are not twenty men in this House who can tell what it means. I confess I can not, after having heard it read and after hearing thus far the expressions in debate upon it.

I am in favor of internal improvements; but I want intelligent appropriations and correct expenditure of the money as directed by the Congress after full consideration.

Mr. Speaker, we have the spectacle in a House of Representatives with a Democratic majority of seventy or eighty, of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. WILLIS] coming here in the last four days of the session and giving us, as is stated, the choice of letting these improvements suffer, of having a special session, or voting $5,000,000 in a lump, to be expended by the incoming Secretary of War. Worse things could happen to this country than a special session of Congress. Why, gentlemen, in your canvass last fall and since you have congratulated the country that at last it is to have a Democratic Executive; that at last your hand is to be placed on the helm. Yet now, when your Executive is about to come into power, you come here and beseech us to suspend the rules and pass such crude measures as this with the threat that if we do not the incoming President will have to inflict upon the country a special session of Congress. In other words, the fear that you have of yourselves makes you willing to pass, and to ask us to pass, these crude measures. For one, so far as I am concerned, I am not going to do it.

Mr. HENLEY. Is not the gentleman somewhat accustomed to that business as a member of the Appropriations Committee?

Mr. CANNON. What business?

Mr. HENLEY. The business of passing under a suspension of the rules bills appropriating millions of dollars.

Mr. CANNON. I am in the minority, doing the best I can—

Mr. HENLEY. On that you are with the majority.

Mr. CANNON. It was your duty with 76 of a majority to have such rules, such proceedings, and such committees as would have brought this business forward in order.

Mr. HENLEY. The gentleman was with the majority on this matter this morning.

Mr. CANNON. I do not yield further.

Mr. HENLEY. And the gentleman defended the action of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. CANNON. I defend nothing that this Democratic House has done or can do, because I do not believe that any good and praiseworthy thing from a public standpoint has been or will be consummated by it or come from it.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. ANDERSON. I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MILLER].

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, the passage of this bill in the manner now proposed will be a fitting act for the closing days of the Forty-eighth Congress. Within the last two days the House under suspension of the rules has appropriated without debate or investigation more than $24,000,000; and now, after it has been demonstrated that the House will not pass a river and harbor bill in the ordinary course of procedure, we are brought face to face with the proposition to pass this bill appropriating $5,000,000 under a like suspension.

If it were to stop there, Mr. Speaker, I would not so seriously oppose the proposition; but this measure is to be passed here with the expectation on the part of its authors that at the other end of this Capitol an increase of one to five million dollars will be made; and with this bill once in a committee of conference this House will be confronted with the question whether it will pass without discussion such a bill as the Senate may see fit to tack upon this.

In November, 1882, when the Forty-eighth Congress was elected, the people of this country were led to expect much from its labors. But this Congress spent all or nearly all of the last session in the attempt to change the revenue laws and failed. It has spent all of this session in endeavoring to get the Appropriations Committee to report their bills; yet they only bring them in at such an hour that discussion can not be had. No other act of special importance has been passed by this Congress. Every bill of any particular consequence to the country that has been proposed and brought before this body has been defeated; and the Forty-eighth Congress is now going out of power without having done anything to advance the prosperity or the material interests of this country.

Mr. ANDERSON. I yield one minute to my colleague [Mr. HANBACK].

Mr. HANBACK. Mr. Speaker, I am opposed unalterably to this bill. Coming as it does to this House in the twinkling of an eye, to be voted on without consideration, asking the appropriation of $5,000,000 to be expended where no member of the House can tell, I as one of the Representatives of the people enter my protest against this kind of legislation. The Committee on Rivers and Harbors, sitting for sixty days with closed doors, no man admitted within the sacred precincts of that committee-room, came here fully armed and equipped with a bill which has met with signal defeat at the hands of this House; and now that committee seeks to recover its lost ground and by a kind of enabling act to its failure pass a measure of this kind in violation of every principle which should be exercised to guard the Treasury and protect the interests of the people.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. ANDERSON. How much time have I remaining?

The SPEAKER. Two minutes.

Mr. ANDERSON. I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Maine [Mr. BOUTELLE].

Mr. BOUTELLE. Mr. Speaker, I imagine that in two minutes it will be about as futile for a member of this House to undertake to interpose any obstacle to the railroading through of this scheme as it has been and will be in the future to attempt to tie up the mighty currents of the Mississippi River by annual appropriations from Congress.

This proposition, sir, can not be claimed to be presented here in good faith. It is not what it purports to be on its face. It is not a proposition to distribute $5,000,000 upon a pro rata established in a bill passed by a former Congress, for one item of large dimensions is inserted here which had no place in that former bill. We are asked to appropriate what will be equivalent to some $90,000 under this bill to carry on the work at Galveston Harbor, which has been declared by Representatives of that State on this floor, Mr. OCHILTREE and Mr. REAGAN, to be an absolutely useless expenditure.

I desire to read from page 1068 of the RECORD what Mr. REAGAN said:

In relation to the expenditure of money on Galveston Harbor, it is true that a million and a half of dollars have been expended from first to last, and there is but little difference in the condition of the harbor now and when the expenditure was commenced.

Again, on page 1069, the same gentleman declared:

Mr. Chairman, for eleven years this Congress has been most liberal in its appropriations for the harbor of Galveston. It has required the expenditures there to be made under the direction of the Engineer Corps of the United States. It has expended in attempting the prosecution of that work about a million and a half of dollars. That money has been expended and substantially no progress has been made.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. BOUTELLE. I will take but one minute to read another extract in reference to this harbor improvement at Galveston. [Cries of "Order!"]

All right; railroad it through, and then let us suspend all the rules and go home. [Applause.]

Mr. WILLIS. I now yield two minutes to the gentleman from Maine.

Mr. MILLIKEN. I do not think, Mr. Speaker, any member of this House can object more strongly than I do to putting bills through here under suspension of the rules. I hesitate not to say I think the manner in which the sundry civil bill was put through to-day was an outrage upon the House as well as an insult to the people of the United States, whose representatives we are upon this floor. But this bill comes in very differently. The sundry civil bill was brought in here but a few days ago, this House never having had an opportunity to examine it, while on the contrary the River and Harbor Committee brought in their bill on the 1st day of February, and they have done all they could to get it considered in the ordinary way and through proper channels, but they have failed to do it. Now they come and ask us to pass this bill in order to preserve the works already in course of construction, and if anything shall remain over then to continue them. It seems to me to be a fair proposition, one demanded by the country, so deeply interested in the continuance and preservation of works of improvement already commenced.

Mr. WILLIS. I yield one minute to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. O'NEILL].

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I appeal to those members whose prejudices are enlisted against this measure because of their failure to insert in the river and harbor bill their peculiar items, not to carry them so far as to injure threefold more than the amount involved the interests of the Government as they are affected by the plants it already owns. A failure to pass this proposition, Mr. Speaker, means the loss of millions of dollars, not alone in the works partially completed and requiring constant attention until completed, but in depreciation and loss of steamers, barges, and other appliances going to make up the necessary outfits of works of internal improvement. You should not do it. It would be a blunder; it would be more than a blunder, it would be a crime. I hope, therefore, those members will not let their prejudices influence their action in a matter of this kind, but will agree to vote this small pittance for the preservation of the costly plants now owned by the Government of the United States, amounting in value to many millions of dollars.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. WILLIS. I now yield two minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. KING].

Mr. KING. Mr. Speaker, I shall vote for this bill with reluctance, because it is far inadequate to the needs of the public works now in progress under the charge of the engineers of the Government. The amount here called for will not go further than meet the wear and tear upon these works during the coming fiscal year.

I hope the country, Mr. Speaker, will recognize upon whom the responsibility rests for having failed to pass a full measure, appropriate to the demands of these public works, at this session of Congress.

I can not here permit to go unchallenged the frequent allegation that the works constructed by the Mississippi River Commission are merely experimental in their nature. Now, those works have been in progress for six years, and in every instance where they have in any degree been completed their results have warranted the expenditure made upon them, thus vindicating the wisdom, the energy, and the honest purpose of the commission.

This House has been led to believe the money expended upon these works has been disbursed by the commission. The most casual investigation will show that not one dollar has been so expended. Every dollar has passed through the hands of the Secretary.

What I most strenuously oppose in this measure is the amendments which have been injected into it by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN]. They, whether aimed for that purpose or not, unless stricken out, must result in the destruction of the entire system already so successfully put into operation for the improvement of that river and the destruction of the works themselves, which have been built and are now contributing so greatly to this improvement, in which upward of 30,000,000 of the people of the Republic are interested for the obtaining of cheaper freights and safer and cheaper transportation to the markets of the country and of the world.

Mr. WILLIS. I now yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BAYNE], my colleague on the committee.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. How much time?

Mr. WILLIS. The remainder of the time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will recognize the gentleman for five minutes.

Mr. BAYNE. Mr. Speaker, this bill has been criticised very unjustly in several respects. The gentleman from New York [Mr. HISCOCK] has stated that it makes appropriations for a long list of places which he mentioned. The fact is it makes no appropriation, or the Secretary of War will apply none of the appropriation made by the bill, as the gentleman will find at any point where the work has been completed.

Mr. HISCOCK. But you do not know whether the work has been completed or not. Now, the difficulty is—

Mr. BAYNE. I do not yield; I have but a few moments. The Secretary of War will know it if the gentleman from New York does not; and he claims to know it now.

Another gentleman from Kansas says that he does not know where one cent of the money will go. Evidently the gentleman has not read the river and harbor appropriation bill of 1884. The committee is not able, unfortunately, to furnish all gentlemen who need information with that very necessary article. But if gentlemen will turn to the law they will find exactly where the appropriations are to be applied.

The gentleman from Maine has contended, and very justly, that there should be responsibility on the part of somebody, and that this responsibility should be fixed somewhere and definitely for the expenditure of the money. There can be no complaint of this bill on that ground. The responsibility is fixed clearly. It says that the money shall be expended under the direction and with the approval of the Secretary of War, and if there is a dollar of this money misapplied the Secretary of War will stand responsible for it.

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. But you do not know who the Secretary of War is going to be.

Mr. BAYNE. Oh! you will have to trust somebody; you must fix the responsibility somewhere.

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. That is just the trouble.

Mr. BAYNE. If the gentleman from Ohio himself was Secretary of War there would be no doubt of the proper application of the appropriations. [Laughter.]

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. Thank you.

Mr. BAYNE. This bill appropriates enough, and only enough as it is believed, to keep in repair the public works already in progress throughout the country; and they are going to suffer detriment and the Government very serious loss if some appropriation is not made at this session of Congress. The Secretary of War himself, who has been already cited here over and over again with the entire approbation of the House, has recommended to Congress, as gentlemen will find on an examination of the subject, and his recommendations are usually heartily concurred in, for the repair and preservation of works on rivers and harbors the sum of $8,000,000. This bill now before us appropriates only $5,000,000, and, therefore, is on the side of retrenchment and reform in public expenditures to the extent of $3,000,000. That fact can not be denied.

The amount that will go to the improvement of the Lower Mississippi by this bill will probably be $450,000 to $500,000. Under the proposition of the gentleman from Indiana, which is incorporated in this bill, that money will have to be applied, except so far as may be necessary for dredging and the removal of snags and bars, to two points on the river—Plum Point and Lake Providence reaches—with a view to testing to a conclusion the experiments which have been begun at those points. I think, under all the circumstances, it is fair enough to allow this amount of money, since we have spent so much already, to be applied to testing the experiment of the improvement of the Mississippi River at those two points and explicitly in the manner in which the work has progressed up to this time.

The safeguards thrown around the bill, I venture to say, in reference to the expenditure of the money appropriated by it, are better, more complete, and more certain of securing the interests of the Government than those that have been applied to any river and harbor bill that ever passed the American Congress.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Illinois. Why do not you let the committee consider that for themselves?

Mr. BAYNE. And never before has such a responsibility been absolutely attached to an officer of the Government in the application of the fund appropriated for this purpose as this bill provides. And I say further, that the incoming Secretary of War, whoever he may be, under the language and the intent of this bill, as I understand it, and as I think the House will and should understand it, will be held strictly responsible for the expenditure of this money, and if there are misapplications of it we will know who is responsible for it.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. Do not you think it would be better to wait until it has been printed, so that we can examine it and determine for ourselves?

Mr. BAYNE. Mr. Speaker, it is very easy for gentlemen to carp and criticise and find fault; and one of the besetting sins in the American Congress is for members to get up here and find fault with the methods and not go into the merits of measures.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. We have had no opportunity of going into the merits of this.

Mr. BAYNE. There has been ample time for consideration, but we have had debate after debate and motion after motion, delaying the business, by gentlemen rendering themselves famous—I was going to use another word—but famous throughout the country because they fritter away the time of the House discussing points of order, making motions, and commenting on what they are pleased to call the "star chamber" proceedings of the committee, instead of considering the merits of propositions.

I hope this bill will pass, and it ought to pass.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. ANDERSON. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry in regard to the manner in which this vote is to be taken.

Clause 6 of Rule XXI provides:

Upon all general appropriation and revenue bills, and bills for the improvement of rivers and harbors, the yeas and nays shall be taken on the passage of such bills in the House and entered upon the Journal.

Now this is a motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill, which I understand is a river and harbor appropriation bill. My inquiry is whether under the rule that vote must be taken by yeas and nays?

The SPEAKER. The Chair decided that question at the last session of Congress, and held when a motion was made to suspend all the rules of the House and pass a bill the bill might be passed without a yeas-andnay vote; because if it received a majority it could be passed under the Constitution of the United States.

Mr. ANDERSON. Then I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, 52 members voting therefor.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. DAVIS, of Illinois. Does this bill come from any committee of the House?

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not know officially what the committee has done in regard to this bill.

Mr. HENDERSON, of Illinois. I would suggest to my friend the chairman of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors that it is due to state that this is not the bill of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors. They have never considered it. It has never been referred to them.

ENROLLED JOINT RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. GLASCOCK, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that the committee had examined and found duly enrolled joint resolutions of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

Joint resolution (H. Res. 338) providing for printing additional copies of the sixth and seventh annual reports of the Director of the United States Geological Survey;

Joint resolution (H. Res. 339) providing for printing the sixth and seventh annual reports of the Director of the Bureau of Ethnology; and

Joint resolution (H. Res. 340) providing for printing monograph 2 of the publications of the United States Geological Survey.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 192, nays 88, not voting 44; as follows:

Mr. CURTIN. I desire to say that I was in the room of my committee while the roll was being called. I desire to vote.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule the Chair can not entertain the gentleman's request.

Mr. WILLIS. I understood the gentleman to say he was in the Hall.

Mr. CURTIN. No, sir; I was in the committee-room.

Mr. ANDERSON. If the gentleman from Pennsylvania was on the floor I would not object, but as he states he was in his committee-room I do.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the names.

Mr. ANDERSON. I object.

The Clerk read the names of members voting.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Mr. ELLIS with Mr. POST, of Pennsylvania, on this vote.

Mr. LEWIS with Mr. ARNOT, on this vote.

Mr. CURTIN with Mr. BINGHAM, on this vote.

Mr. FIEDLER with Mr. ATKINSON, on this vote.

Mr. HART with Mr. HAMMOND, on the river and harbor bill.

Mr. HERBERT with Mr. KELLEY, for the rest of this day.

Mr. LOWRY with Mr. WILSON, of Iowa, for the rest of this day.

Mr. LEWIS. I desire to state that if I were not paired with Mr. ARNOT I should vote "ay." Mr. ARNOT would vote "no."

The result of the vote was then announced, as above stated.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. MCCOOK, its Secretary, informed the House that the Senate had passed the bill (H. R. 8239) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896, and for other purposes, with amendments; in which the concurrence of the House was requested.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. TURNER] is recognized.

Mr. TURNER, of Georgia. I call up the contested-election case of Pool vs. Skinner, first district of North Carolina.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I desire as a privileged question to call up the Post-Office appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. TURNER] calls up an election case, which is a matter of higher privilege than any other.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I will say to the gentleman from Georgia that this will take but a moment. The object is to get the Post-Office appropriation bill into conference.

Mr. TURNER, of Georgia. I am aware that the gentleman from Illinois has made several efforts heretofore to proceed with that bill and they have always provoked discussion.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. If discussion is provoked I will not insist on going on with the bill.

Mr. HISCOCK. I understand the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. TOWNSHEND] proposes to call up the Post-Office appropriation bill. I have told the gentleman I would not again make the point that it should go to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the Senate amendments. But as against an election case I shall insist on the amendments going to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union to be discussed and considered. I think if we have time enough in these late days of the session to take up election cases we have time enough to consider these appropriation bills in committee.

Mr. TURNER, of Georgia. How does the gentleman from New York get the floor?

Mr. HISCOCK. I give notice to the gentleman from Georgia if he does not want an extra session he must give the Appropriations Committee the right of way.

Mr. TURNER, of Georgia. The gentleman has no right to thrust in his "notice" here while I am on the floor.

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania (to Mr. TURNER, of Georgia). If you are ever going to get your election case in you must get it in now.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. TURNER] calls up the report of the Committee on Elections in the case of Mr. Pool against Mr. Skinner, in the first Congressional district of North Carolina. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the old first Congressional district of North Carolina, in which

Walter F. Pool was chosen as Representative to the Forty-eighth Congress, was the only proper district in which to call and hold an election to fill the vacancy caused by his death.

Resolved, That Thomas G. Skinner is not entitled to retain longer his seat in this House as the Representative from the first Congressional district of North Carolina to the Forty-eighth Congress.

Mr. TURNER, of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, the Clerk has read the resolution reported by the minority of the committee.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the resolution reported by the majority of the committee.

Mr. HISCOCK. Mr. Speaker, I wish to inquire whether this is a case in which the Committee on Elections are agreed.

Mr. TURNER, of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I insist that the gentleman from New York shall not interrupt the proceedings of the House in this way.

Mr. HISCOCK. The gentleman from New York will know what is doing.

Mr. TURNER, of Georgia. The gentleman from New York [Mr. HISCOCK] has no right to take me off the floor by impertinent interruptions.

The SPEAKER. This question is not debatable. The Clerk has read the resolution reported by the minority. He will now read the resolution reported by the majority of the Committee on Elections.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That Thomas G. Skinner retain his seat, without prejudice to the ultimate right to the seat involved in the contested-election case of Charles C. Pool vs. Thomas G. Skinner.

The SPEAKER. The question is, Will the House now consider this report of the Committee on Elections?

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Mr. Speaker, I want to notify the House that I raise the question of consideration.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is putting that question now. [Having put the question.] In the opinion of the Chair the yeas have it.

Mr. TURNER. I ask for a division.

Mr. HERR. Mr. Speaker, I want to know how I am to vote.

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, what is the question before the House?

The SPEAKER. The question of consideration.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. On what bill?

The SPEAKER. No bill at all; an election case from the State of North Carolina. As many as are in favor of proceeding with the consideration of this report of the Committee on Elections will rise and be counted.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 76, noes 113.

The SPEAKER. The yeas have it; and the House refuses to consider the report.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. Speaker, I call up the contested-election case of Frederick vs. Wilson.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Now, Mr. Speaker, I move the adoption of the report of the Committee on Appropriations in relation to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8138) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Still the matter called up by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BENNETT], being a matter of higher privilege, would cut the gentleman off.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I understood, Mr. Speaker, after the motion of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. TURNER] was disposed of I would be recognized.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will secure to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. TOWNSHEND] the consideration of the matter he desires to call up as soon as possible; but the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BENNETT] calls up a matter of higher privilege.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. Speaker, I do not want to call up this case if I am to antagonize the fertile gentleman from the State of Illinois [Mr. TOWNSHEND]. I would rather keep out of the way of my friend from Illinois, but I would like to have my chance immediately after he has his.

Several MEMBERS. Regular order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina has charge of a privileged matter, which he can call up whenever he sees fit. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. TOWNSHEND] is recognized.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Mr. Speaker, I now move the adoption of the report of the Committee on Appropriations in regard to the Senate amendments to the Post-Office appropriation bill.

Several MEMBERS. Let us have it read.

Mr. HISCOCK. We may as well go to the Committee of the Whole with it, or else consider it in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. HISCOCK] makes the point of order that this must first be considered in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I am willing to have it considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. HISCOCK. I have no objection to that, Mr. Speaker. I say frankly that the only purpose I have is to keep out election cases.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection the report moved by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. TOWNSHEND] will be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Before the consideration of that matter is begun the Chair will state that under a rule heretofore made, and which is still in force, at 5 o'clock p. m. the Chair will be compelled to declare the House in recess until 8 o'clock this evening.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Then I ask unanimous consent that the House may continue its sitting until 6 o'clock.

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania, and other members objected.

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Is there a report in this case?

The SPEAKER. There is.

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania. Then I ask for its reading. I believe I have that right.

The SPEAKER. The report has been read.

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania. When?

The SPEAKER. Half an hour or perhaps an hour ago.

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania. Is it in order to call for the reading of the bill?

The SPEAKER. It is not. The gentleman can have it read in his own time whenever he may obtain the floor. The gentleman has a right to have the amendments read.

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania. Then I ask for the reading of the amendments.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has already directed the Clerk to read them.

Mr. SPRINGER. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Is it in order now to move to rescind the order by which the House on Friday takes a recess from 5 till 8 o'clock?

The SPEAKER. That can only be done by unanimous consent or by a suspension of the rules.

Mr. SPRINGER. I move, then, to suspend the rules in order to revoke that order. There is no pension business for this evening.

The SPEAKER. This business may be disposed of before 5 o'clock.

Mr. SPRINGER. I presume there would be no objection to vacating by unanimous consent the order for a recess.

The SPEAKER. That proposition has been made and there was objection. The Clerk will read the amendments of the Senate to the Post-Office appropriation bill.

The first amendment was read, as follows:

On page 1, line 21, strike out "three hundred" and insert "one hundred and fifty."

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania. I would like to have the context read in connection with the amendment so that the amendment may be understood.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will direct that each amendment be so read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 1, line 21, strike out "three hundred" and insert "one hundred and fifty," so as to read:

"For compensation to clerks in post-offices, $5,150,000."

Mr. TOWNSHEND. If it be in order, I desire to move concurrence in that amendment.

The SPEAKER. It is in order to make that motion. Each amendment must be acted on separately.

The motion of Mr. TOWNSHEND to concur in the amendment was agreed to.

The second amendment was read, as follows:

Page 2, line 6, strike out "five hundred and thirty-five" and insert "four hundred and eighty-five;" so as to read:

"For payment to letter-carriers and the incidental expenses of the free-delivery system, $4,485,000; $45,000 of which may be used, in the discretion of the Postmaster-General, for the establishment, under existing law, of a free-delivery system in cities where it is not now established."

Mr. TOWNSHEND. By direction of the committee I move concurrence in this amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The third amendment was read, as follows:

Page 2, line 16, strike out the word "hereafter," after the word "that;" so as to read:

"That the Postmaster-General may," &c.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I desire to submit a proposition to which I think the entire House will agree. It is needless to occupy time in reading all these amendments. All I desire is to have the report of the Committee on Appropriations adopted. Now, I submit to the House this proposition—that if the report of the Committee on Appropriations be adopted, I will then move that the House take a recess till 8 o'clock.

Mr. HISCOCK. We will consent, if an order be entered to that effect, that the report be adopted and a recess at once taken.

Mr. TURNER, of Georgia. I would like to inquire by what right the gentleman from Illinois makes that proposition. He stated that he would require not more than five minutes for this matter; and now he proposes that immediately after it is disposed of the House shall take a recess.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. If the gentleman from Georgia objects, of course I do not press the proposition.

Mr. TURNER, of Georgia. I do object.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I move to non-concur in the amendment last read.

The motion was agreed to; there being—ayes 82, noes 23.

The fourth amendment was read, as follows:

Page 2, line 16, strike out "lease" and insert "in the disbursement of this appropriation, apply part thereof to the purpose of leasing;" so that the clause will read:

"That the Postmaster-General may, in the disbursement of this appropriation, apply part thereof to the purpose of leasing premises for use for post-offices."

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I am instructed by the Committee on Appropriations to move non-concurrence in this amendment.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The fifth amendment was read, as follows:

Page 2, line 17, strike out the word "and," between the word "first" and "second."

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I am instructed by the Committee on Appropriations to move that this amendment be non-concurred in.

The motion was agreed to.

The sixth amendment was read, as follows:

Page 2, line 17, after the word "second," insert "and third;" so as to read: "Post-offices of the second and third classes."

Mr. TOWNSHEND. In accordance with instructions of the Committee on Appropriations I move that this amendment be non-concurred in.

The motion was agreed to.

The seventh amendment was read, as follows:

Page 2, line 25, after the word "for," insert "safes and other;" so as to read: "For safes and other office furniture."

Mr. TOWNSHEND. The Committee on Appropriations have instructed me to move that this amendment be concurred in.

The motion was agreed to; there being—ayes 98, noes 10.

The eighth amendment was read, as follows:

Page 2, line 25, strike out "twenty" and insert "thirty;" so as to read: "Post-office and other office furniture, $30,000."

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Mr. Speaker, this amendment makes an increase of $10,000. In accordance with the instruction of the committee I move concurrence.

The motion was agreed to; there being—ayes 101, noes 12.

The tenth amendment was read, as follows:

Page 3, line 4, strike out "and ten" and insert "five hundred;" so as to read: "For inland mail transportation, namely: For transportation on railroad routes, $14,500,000."

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I am instructed by the Committee on Appropriations to move non-concurrence in that amendment.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The next amendment was read, as follows:

After the word "thereof" insert "and reduced by the act of March 3, 1883, to 2 cents for each half ounce or fraction thereof;" so it will read:

Office of the Third Assistant Postmaster-General: For manufacture of adhesive postage-stamps and of newspaper and periodical stamps, $174,000. That upon all matter of the first class, as defined by chapter 180 of the laws of Congress, approved March 3, 1879, entitled "An act making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes," and by that act declared subject to postage at the rate of 3 cents for each half ounce or fraction thereof, and reduced by the act of March 3, 1883, to 2 cents for each half ounce or fraction thereof, postage shall be charged, on and after the 1st day of July, 1883, at the rate of 2 cents per ounce or fraction thereof; and drop letters shall be mailed at the rate of 2 cents per ounce or fraction thereof, including delivery at letter-carrier offices, and 1 cent for each ounce or fraction thereof where free delivery by carrier is not established.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. As instructed by the Committee on Appropriations, I move concurrence in that amendment.

Mr. ADAMS, of Illinois. I should like to have some explanation of it.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. It is a mere formal amendment and only makes the original text more specific. For myself I do not think the amendment is necessary, but the Senate disagrees with the House in reference to that matter, and I have been instructed to move concurrence.

The amendment was agreed to.

Eleventh amendment:

Strike out the words "to bona fide subscribers" and insert "including sample copies;" so it will read:

"That all publications of the second class, except as provided in section 23 of said act, when sent by the publisher thereof, and from the office of publication, including sample copies, or when sent from a news agency to actual subscribers thereto."

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I have been instructed by the Committee on Appropriations to move non-concurrence. I will say this is the amendment about which most of us here have received a great many communications from a certain class of newspaper publishers. I think it would be better for the House to put this question in conference, where it is possible we may reach some agreement, which perhaps we may not be able to do here this afternoon.

The only difference between this and the original text is that it restores the law enabling newspaper publishers to send sample copies.

Mr. BINGHAM. I move to concur.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I hope my friend will not press that motion, because it will lead to delay.

Mr. BINGHAM. Have I the floor?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has the floor and will proceed.

Mr. BINGHAM. I desire to state that when this section of the Post-Office bill was before the House the paragraph relating to sample copies was not even referred to or discussed in any way whatever, and while I thought I had some familiarity with the bill I am free to say I had overlooked this section entirely. I believed it had been the purpose of the committee reporting this bill when they reduced newspaper postage from 2 cents a pound to 1 cent a pound to make that reduction consistent with existing law—that it was a reduction of 1 cent a pound throughout the entire law. But it is not so. Under the present law newspaper postage from a known office of publication to subscribers goes at the rate of 2 cents a pound, sample copies included. The bill reduces newspaper postage to 1 cent a pound, and makes sample copies 4 cents a pound. It doubles the rate of postage on sample copies, and if I am permitted to refer to a discussion in another place where this section was fully discussed, I will state that when the matter was explained it was unanimously adopted as being a fair adjustment and consistent with the action of the committee on another section.

Now, sir, in another section you will reach you say to these newspaper publishers you can send your sample copies at the rate of 1 cent if they weigh an ounce and then it repeals all other acts inconsistent with that act. Permit me to say to the gentleman that under the law today, which we passed at the first session of this Congress, newspaper publishers, if they could not to-day send under the pound rate, may, under public act No. 46, as he can and I can when we send through the mails miscellaneous papers.

Further, by the section which he proposes to hold on to, in the next amendment to the bill he wipes out absolutely that act (public 46) which allows a citizen to send four ounces of newspaper matter for 1 cent. It was patent to the judgment of the House that the two ounces for 1 cent covered but a few of the large publications of the country. Before the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads the large metropolitan papers were weighed, and, with a single exception, almost every one was between three and four ounces in weight. The popular judgment has been that any paper could go through the mails for 1 cent, but we find the greater number weighed over two ounces; and therefore the Committee on the Post-Office and Post-Roads brought into this House a bill fixing the rate for transient newspapers at 1 cent for four ounces.

The result of that action has been that instead of having in the large offices thousands of newspapers daily held for postage and sold for waste paper, they are transmitted through the mails at 1 cent for four ounces. The bill of the gentleman from Illinois, as we passed it through the House, repealed that act, and it did further: it doubled the rate on newspaper publishers in sending sample copies by increasing the postage from 2 to 4 cents, when it reduced the rate on their regular open editions to 1 cent per pound.

The matter was discussed elsewhere, and every member in this House has doubtless received his communications from the publishers of these great newspapers that for all the publications going out their offices they want one rate of postage; and I had thought that such was the purpose the gentleman had in view in presenting the bill. It was the purpose of the Committee on Post-Offices and Post-Roads when they recommended the postal bill to the House, and when their distinguished chairman appeared before the Committee on Appropriations.

How much time have I remaining?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has occupied four minutes.

Mr. BINGHAM. I will reserve the remaining time.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Mr. Speaker, the first proposition introduced in Congress to reduce newspaper postage was introduced by myself in the last Congress. It was referred to the committee of which the gentleman from Pennsylvania was chairman. That committee then entirely ignored the question. It took no action on the subject until during this Congress.

Mr. BINGHAM. The gentleman is entirely welcome to all the distinction which is properly due to him for his efforts in that direction. I am willing that he shall have all the credit.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. The gentleman is not more anxious to see a reduction of newspaper postage than I am. Now, when the Committee on Appropriations had this bill under consideration I offered an amendment to reduce the postage on newspapers one-half; my amendment went no further. That amendment was adopted by the committee. Afterward the Postmaster-General appeared before our committee and recommended that we restrict the law allowing sample copies to go through the mails. He urged as a reason that many merely advertising sheets had taken advantage of this law and were using the mail facilities to flood the country with advertisements of lottery, patent medicines, and other schemes at pound rates. Therefore, the Postmaster-General recommended a modification of the law in respect to sample copies by restricting them to the use of this privilege twice a year.

The Committee on Appropriations, after careful consideration, concluded that if it was wrong to allow them to send sample copies under these circumstances more than twice a year, it was wrong to allow them to be sent at all, and that they should be forbidden altogether. The committee therefore modified my amendment so as to forbid sample copies from being sent at any other than the same rates at which transient newspapers are allowed to go through the mails. That amendment was brought in here by me under the instructions of the committee, and the House adopted it. It was discussed then by my intelligent friend from Pennsylvania.

Mr. BINGHAM. The gentleman is entirely mistaken; that section of the bill was never alluded to in that discussion. It was not discussed one minute on this floor.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. The RECORD will show that the gentleman himself not only discussed it, but offered an amendment to that very provision, which was adopted.

Mr. BINGHAM. The gentleman is in error wholly.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Now I have received a very large number of communications from newspaper publishers on this question, more than, perhaps, any other member of this House. I have received nearly five hundred letters from a certain class of papers, not strictly newspapers, but papers promoting special objects, mostly weekly papers, scientific periodicals, many of them very worthy and valuable papers, but a great many of them merely advertising sheets. Among all of these letters none will be found from purely daily newspapers, and I have received but very few from country newspapers. The country newspapers, as a rule, and the daily press also, are satisfied with the provision as recommended by the Committee on Appropriations and adopted by the House.

I believe it would be well to allow papers to send sample copies for the purpose of extending their circulation, but believe that the exercise of this privilege two or three times a year would be sufficient to promote circulation and secure subscribers.

Now I desire that this question shall go to a conference committee, where we can reach an agreement or a compromise after a general interchange of views. But the gentleman from Pennsylvania insists upon forcing it here upon the House. That being the case, I must meet it now. I believe, as the Postmaster-General believes, that this privilege is greatly abused by a certain class of newspapers, and that we should restrict the sending of sample copies to some extent at least. I am willing to allow the question to be considered by a conference committee, who may, after a full investigation of the subject, agree upon some reasonable plan in that respect which will satisfy reasonable demands; but to open the mails to an unlimited extent to every advertising sheet throughout the country every day in the year is a proposition to which I am opposed.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. BINGHAM. I believe I have one minute remaining. I desire in that time to make just this statement to the House: that no newspaper can go through the mails at second-class rates, as proposed by this bill, at 1 cent a pound until it has been duly registered at the post-office from which it goes under the sworn statement of the publisher of that paper. Therefore the gentleman's statement as to patent-medicine circulars and lottery publications and advertising sheets, and papers generally of that kind, is effectually disposed of.

Now a further fact: the gentleman incorporates in this bill, authorizing this amendment, the provision that they can send their sample copies at 1 cent for each four ounces, and then wipes out all other laws existing on the subject.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. ANDERSON. I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ANDERSON. Would it be in order to move to strike out the last word?

The SPEAKER. There is no last word. It is a motion to concur. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BINGHAM] to concur in the amendment.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 67, noes 43.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I call for tellers.

Mr. HOLMAN. No quorum.

The SPEAKER. The point is made that a quorum has not voted. The Chair will appoint as tellers the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. TOWNSHEND, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. BINGHAM.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. PETERS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that the committee had examined and found duly enrolled a bill and joint resolution of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (S. 1609) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Detroit, Mich; and Joint resolution (S. R. 109) authorizing the loan of certain flags and bunting to the committee on inauguration ceremonies.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania to concur in the Senate amendment.

The House divided; and the tellers proceeded to count the vote.

The SPEAKER. Will the tellers report the affirmative vote?

Mr. ANDERSON. I rise to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ANDERSON. Is it in order to call the attention of the Chair to the fact that the hour of 5 o'clock, when under the order of the House a recess should be taken, has arrived?

The SPEAKER. The Chair takes notice of the fact himself, and now declares the House in recess until 8 o'clock this evening.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. BAGLEY] will occupy the chair as Speaker pro tempore at the evening session.

EVENING SESSION.

The recess having expired, the House reassembled at 7 o'clock p.m., Mr. BAGLEY in the chair as Speaker pro tempore.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will read the order under which the House meets this evening.

The Clerk read as follows:

That until the further order of this House, on each Friday the House will take a recess at 5 o'clock until 8 p.m., at which evening sessions bills on the Private Calendar reported from the Committee on Pensions and the Committee on Invalid Pensions shall be considered.

February 13, 1885.—Amended so as to include bills for the removal of political disabilities reported by the Judiciary Committee and Senate bills on the Speaker's table for the removal of political disabilities.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair desires to present the personal request of a member which was overlooked at the time the recess was taken.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. HEWITT, of New York, asks unanimous consent to print remarks on the bill (H. R. 7366) being a bill to carry into effect the convention between the United States of America and the United States of Mexico, signed on the 20th day of January, 1883.

Mr. ANDERSON. Ought not that to go over till to-morrow? Is it important that that request should be granted to-night?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The permanent Speaker informed the present occupant of the chair that it was proper this request should be submitted.

Mr. ANDERSON. This will not be considered as a precedent for bringing in any other business to-night?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Not at all.

There being no objection, the request of Mr. HEWITT, of New York, was granted.

ROBERT CAREY.

Mr. HILL. I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 6011) granting an increase of pension to Robert Carey, with an amendment by the Senate. It is only a technical amendment. A mistake was made in spelling the man's name.

Mr. ANDERSON. All right.

There being no objection, the bill (H. R. 6011) was taken from the Speaker's table, and the Senate amendments were read, as follows:

In line 3, strike out "Robert Carey" and insert "Robert Cary."
Amend the title so as to read: "An act granting an increase of pension to Robert Cary."

The amendments of the Senate were concurred in.

Mr. HILL moved to reconsider the vote by which the amendments were concurred in; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. MCCOOK, its Secretary, informed the House that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the Senate amendment to the fifth amendment of the House to the bill (S. 66) providing for allotment of lands in severalty to the Indians residing on the Umatilla reservation in the State of Oregon, and granting patents therefor, and for other purposes.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MATSON. I move that the House now resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar for the purpose of considering business under the special order for the Friday evening session.

The motion was agreed to; and the House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar, Mr. HATCH, of Missouri, in the chair.

Mr. MATSON. I ask unanimous consent that Senate bills be first considered in the order in which they stand upon the Calendar.

There being no objection, it was so ordered.

JOHN HALL.

The first business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 1877) granting an increase of pension to John Hall.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions of the pension laws, the name of John Hall, late a private in Company B, Tenth United States Infantry, Mexican war, at the rate of $30 per month, in lieu of the $3 per month heretofore allowed him, as specified in pension certificate 3170.

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania. If there is a report in this case I ask that it be read.

The report (by Mr. MATSON) was read, as follows:

Your committee has had under consideration Senate bill No. 1877, and report the same back to the House with a recommendation that it do pass; and they have adopted the Senate report in this case as the favorable report of this committee.

The claimant was a private in Company B, Tenth New York Volunteers, and was injured on the 10th day of May, 1847, while in the service and in line of duty. While on drill at or near Fort Hamilton, N. Y., in crossing a fence he was suddenly and violently thrown down and the end of a rail striking him in the lower part of the body caused a large rupture which required a severe surgical operation to save his life, which was in imminent peril from the injury. The injury resulted in double inguinal hernia. The proof of the injury, surgical operation, and resulting hernia is clear and convincing. He was discharged on account of this injury and disability the 24th day of July, 1847. He applied for a pension and was placed on the pension-roll in 1847 at $4 per month, and in 1852 his pension was increased to $8, which rate he has been since paid and is now receiving. In 1853 he became totally blind, and in 1874 suffered a paralytic stroke, since when he has been a great charge upon his aged wife and two daughters, being unable to dress or undress himself without assistance.

In 1883 he made an application for an increase on account of an increase of his disabilities, claiming that his lost eyesight and paralysis resulted from his original injuries. The medical referee gave it as his opinion that the blindness and paralysis were not the results of the original injury. It can not be expected that laymen will usually oppose their opinions or views against the opinions of medical men, but in this case the evidence is so clear, and the fact that the neuralgia which terminated in blindness was connected with the surgical operation so distinctly shown, that your committee can hardly doubt that the medical referee in this instance is mistaken.

The surgeon performing the operation says in his certificate, under date of the 13th July, 1847, that the injury rendered "an operation necessary for strangulated hernia which was performed by myself; the injury and consequent operation have been followed by debility and lameness, which still continues." The claimant in his own affidavit says, in speaking of the operation, that—

"He had to lay while undergoing treatment * * * with his head and shoulders much lower than the rest of his body, in which position he remained for thirty days. * * * Neuralgia set in, and on being released from this position his eyes were affected, and he suffered from neuralgia to the present time."

This was in 1883. He also says that the "neuralgia pains burst his eyeballs, and the aqueous humor of the eyes escaped, leaving him blind." He also says that after the operation he frequently felt a numbness in his limbs and side and want of nerve sensibility, and was at times almost deprived of motive power, which continued up to 1874, when he had a severe stroke of paralysis. From these facts your committee are constrained to believe that the blindness and paralysis of this soldier were resulting conditions from the original injury he received and the operation he was compelled to undergo, and think that justice requires that his pension should be increased. Therefore your committee recommend the passage of this bill.

Mr. BELFORD. I move to amend this bill by adding the provision which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

That the sum of $500,000 be appropriated for the construction of a home for the orphan children of the Union and Confederate soldiers of the Republic, at the city of Fredericksburg, in the State of Virginia, said sum to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War.

Mr. KEAN. I make a point of order on this amendment.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. I make the point of order that this amendment is not germane to the bill.

Mr. BELFORD. I ask that the point of order be reserved till I can make a statement.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will hear the gentleman from Colorado for five minutes upon the point of order.

Mr. BELFORD. Mr. Chairman, the shadows of fifteen years have floated over this Republic and the unhappy memories of the war should be forgotten now and forever. You gentlemen from the South should have at least the courage of a Northern Republican to take care of the orphans produced by the war in the South. It was a war of the politicians in which the poor people suffered and were conscripted into the army; and I propose that their little children shall be provided for just as the children of soldiers of the Union Army have been provided for.

When the Greeks, the moderns of ancient civilization, achieved a victory in civil war they celebrated that victory by erecting a monument of wood which would perish under the abrasions and erosions of the atmosphere. When they achieved a victory over a foreign foe, they erected a monument of bronze. [At this point Mr. BELFORD walked toward the Democratic side of the House.]

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. I make the point of order that the gentleman has no right under the rules to speak except from his seat.

Mr. BELFORD. Then I will go to my seat. I will obey the perfunctory order of the distinguished brigadier from Indiana.

Now, what did England do after her great civil war between the White Rose and the Red Rose? She blended them together and made England the great nation of her day. Are we to carry out the prejudices of certain gentlemen on this floor and overlook the fact this is our magnificent nation from the northern lakes to the southern gulf, from the Atlantic Ocean to the Pacific, upon which floats the commerce of our country?

I have offered this amendment in the interest of reconciliation, of peace, of recognition of the fact we are one nation to-day, and will remain so I hope forever. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair sustains the point of order and the amendment is ruled out.

There being no objection, the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

WILLIAM N. MORRIS.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 2245) granting a pension to William N. Morris.

The bill, which was read, provides that the Secretary of the Interior be authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the limitations and provisions of the pension laws, the name of William N. Morris, late a private in Company F, Seventeenth Regiment Indiana Volunteers.

There being no objection, the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

JOHN LOWE.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 2302) granting a pension to John Lowe.

The bill, which was read, authorizes and directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of John Lowe, late of Company F, Fifty-third Regiment Indiana Volunteers.

There being no objection, the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

LEWIS L. CANADY.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 2279) granting a pension to Lewis L. Canady.

The bill, which was read, authorizes and directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Lewis L. Canady, late a private in the war of 1812.

There being no objection, the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

MRS. CORDELIA BRAINERD THOMAS.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 2316) granting a pension to Mrs. Cordelia Brainerd Thomas.

The bill, which was read, authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mrs. Cordelia Brainerd Thomas, widow of the late Rev. E. Thomas, who was killed by the Modoc Indians in 1873 while acting as a member of the Peace Commission sent by the United States Government to treat with said Indians, and to pay her from and after the passage of this act, during her widowhood, the sum of $50 a month.

Mr. PETERS. I would like to hear the report in that case read. The Clerk read as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2316) granting a pension to Mrs. Cordelia Brainerd Thomas, having considered the same, beg leave to report it back with a recommendation that it be amended by inserting the word "twenty," after the words "sum of," in the eleventh line of said bill; so it shall provide payment to Mrs. Cordelia Brainerd Thomas of the sum of $20 a month—

Mr. PETERS. I do not ask for the reading of any more of the report, as I see the amendment limits it to $20 a month.

Mr. MATSON. The Senate proposition was to give her a pension of $50 per month. Her husband was with General Canby at the time he was killed. He was a minister of the gospel. The amendment proposes to give her the pension of a chaplain.

The amendment was agreed to; and the bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

ELIJAH W. PENNY.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 544) granting an increase of pension to Elijah W. Penny.

The bill, which was read, authorizes and directs the Secretary of the Interior to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Elijah W. Penny, late lieutenant-colonel of the One hundred and thirtieth Regiment Indiana Volunteers, at the rate of $42 per month, in lieu of the $36 per month heretofore allowed him as certified in pension certificate 76144.

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania. I ask the gentleman from Indiana why this pension is increased from $36 to $42 per month, and why the claimant comes here instead of going to the Pension Office?

Mr. MATSON. I take pleasure in informing the gentleman from Pennsylvania his coming here grows out of the fact there is a defect in the law. There is no rate of pension between $24 and $50 per month.

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania. Is there not a rate of $30 a month? Mr. MATSON. There is for specific disability, but there is no rate for general disability. Colonel Penny received two gunshot wounds, and receives a pension for disability not specific as to one. He has an arm off, and gets $30 a month. He has another gunshot wound which entitles him to more than he is receiving.

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania. Is it not a fact if the claimant was disabled in a certain degree he can receive $30 or $40 a month?

Mr. MATSON. No, sir; there is no rate of $40 per month.

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania. What is the next rate above $30?

Mr. MATSON. It is $50.

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania. Why should there be an exception made in this particular case? Are there not other persons in the same condition who would be entitled to the same relief?

Mr. MATSON. My judgment is that the law is essentially deficient in this particular, and I think my friend from Indiana, the former chairman of the Committee on Invalid Pensions, General BROWNE, will agree with me, as I believe I have heard him express the same sentiment before.

I will state to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that there are cases of men who are suffering from disability from wounds who are not in that helpless condition that requires the regular attendance of other persons, so as to bring them within the law; and hence they can not receive the pension of $50, but they are worse disabled than if they had lost one arm or a leg; and so to apply relief in cases of that kind we have these special bills of which the gentleman speaks.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, the difficulty is that the general law fixes the rates for specific disability, and every gentleman of observation will readily understand that it is impossible under a general law to adequately adjust every possible character of disability that may arise. It is utterly impossible to do it; and just so long as we grant pensions at all and undertake to provide for them by general acts there will be instances in which appeals will be made to Congress to allow something in addition, perhaps above the lowest provided in the list of disabilities and lower than the highest or the next immediately preceding rate. But for myself I have a great deal more respect for those cases in which increases are granted than for many of those in which pensions are originally granted, because where there is an increase given there is no doubt of the existence of the disability.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

SARAH A. WHITE.

The next business on the Calendar was the bill (S. 2367) granting a pension to Sarah A. White.

The bill is as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Sarah A. White, of Abington, Mass., widow of Ebenezer White, late a lieutenant in the Kansas cavalry volunteers.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. I would like to know why it is necessary to grant relief in this particular case?

Mr. MATSON. To save time, I will ask the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. LONG], who I believe is familiar with the case, to state the facts.

Mr. LONG. What is the question of the gentleman from Alabama? Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. I desire to know why it is necessary to apply to Congress for relief in this case.

Mr. LONG. I am not familiar with the circumstances. It is a bill which was examined by the Senate committee and passed the Senate. I presume the Senate report will convey the facts.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. I ask for the reading of the report of the committee accompanying it.

The report (by Mr. LOVERING) was read, as follows:

Your committee have had under consideration Senate bill No. 2367, and report the same back to the House with the recommendation that it do pass, adopting the Senate report hereto attached as the favorable report of this committee:

"The evidence is somewhat conflicting, but the balance thereof is strongly in favor of the claim."

"The bill simply proposes to place the name of the applicant on the pension-roll as the widow of the soldier, and it appears that she is in great need."

"The evidence also discloses the fact that she rendered excellent service as an army nurse, and might well be pensioned at a higher rate for that service."

"Your committee recommend the passage of the bill."

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

BYRAM PITNEY.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 1739) granting a pension to the widow and children of the late Byram Pitney.

The bill is as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the names of the widow and children of Byram Pitney, late of Company K, Twenty-sixth Regiment New Jersey Volunteers.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. I would like to have some explanation of that bill, or else to have the report read.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state that this is a very long report, and perhaps it will save time if some gentleman who is familiar with the facts will make an explanation.

Mr. BAGLEY. I think I can explain to the gentleman and to his satisfaction. It seems that this man received a severe wound in the neighborhood of the spine which gave him very serious trouble and for which he was pensioned. The man lived, it is true, until some time in 1883, but the disease of which he died proved to be continuous; that is to say that the diseased condition of his lungs, of which he finally died, dated back to his service in the Army and finally resulted in acute pneumonia. The medical testimony goes to show that it was directly on account of this disease, which resulted from the service and which finally culminated in acute pneumonia, that his death resulted. I believe it to be a good case, and hence it was reported favorably.

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. Let me ask the gentleman were all of these cases examined by the House committee?

Mr. BAGLEY. They were, sir; all of them.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Ohio that these bills have been all referred to the committee and reported back from the Committee on Pensions and Invalid Pensions.

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. I so supposed.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

MARY GORDON.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 2437) granting a pension to Mrs. Mary Gordon.

The bill is as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mrs. Mary Gordon, mother of Samuel F. Gordon, late a private in Company G, Sixteenth Regiment Ohio Volunteers.

The report (by Mr. LEFEVRE) is as follows:

Your committee have had under consideration Senate bill No. 2437 and report the same back to the House with the recommendation that it do pass, and they have adopted the Senate report hereto attached as a part of the report of this committee.

"The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2437) granting a pension to Mrs. Mary Gordon, have examined the same, and report:

"That the claimant is the mother of Samuel F. Gordon, who applied for a pension at the Department, but her claim was rejected on the ground that the records of the War Department afford no information as to enlistment or service of the soldier.

"There appears to be ample evidence to show the dependence of the claimant as the mother of the soldier. Her husband died in 1837, and her son, the soldier, died unmarried. The only question to be considered is that of the soldier's service.

"William M. Ross, late first lieutenant of Company G, Sixteenth Ohio Volunteers, testifies that Samuel F. Gordon, the son of the claimant, enlisted October 2, 1861, in the forenoon, as a private in that company, and that in the afternoon the said Gordon was shot and killed by the accidental discharge of a pistol. He also swears that the captain of the company is dead, and the original muster-roll can not be obtained.

"This is corroborated by two comrades of the soldier, who swear to his enlistment and muster and accidental death.

"It also appears from the papers on file that the claimant is 82 years of age, and is and has been for many years a helpless invalid from partial paralysis; and also that she has been supported for seventeen years by a daughter who has been engaged in teaching. The daughter now states that, owing to her mother's increasing helplessness, she is unable to longer provide her a comfortable support.

"In view of all the facts in this case your committee report the bill with a recommendation that it do pass."

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MATSON. In order to save the time that would be occupied in reading these reports I ask that all of them may be printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection it will be so ordered. There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Indiana that many of these reports just come from the committee are in manuscript, and it will be impossible to have them transcribed. The originals may be sent to the Public Printer under the order the gentleman from Indiana suggested, and which has just been made. If there be no objection it will be so ordered.

There was no objection.

SARAH JANE PRINCE.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 2125) granting a pension to Sarah Jane Prince.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll the name of Sarah Jane Prince, widow of the late Capt. Albert Prince, of the Fifteenth Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry.

The report (by Mr. LOVERING) is as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2125) granting a pension to Sarah Jane Prince, having examined the same, adopt the Senate report and recommend that the same do pass.

"The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2125) granting a pension to Sarah J. Prince, have examined the same, and report:

"That the said Sarah J. Prince is the widow of Capt. Albert Prince, late captain of Company E, Fifteenth Massachusetts Volunteers. Captain Prince was a pensioner. He died March 2, 1881. The widow applied for a pension April 27, 1881. Her claim was rejected on the ground that she had been married previous to her marriage with the said Captain Prince, and that her husband by the first marriage is still living. She now applies to Congress to grant her a pension by special act.

"It appears in the evidence that the second marriage was contracted in the belief that the first husband was dead. She states the facts under oath, as follows, namely:

"On the 30th day of August, A. D. 1836, I was married to David K. Dyke, of Lyme, N. H., at Chelsea, in the State of Vermont; that thereafter I lived with said David K. Dyke, as his wife, at said Lyme, N. H., and at Lowell, in the State of Massachusetts, till the month of September, A. D. 1857, when the said David A. Dyke deserted me at said Lowell, taking with him all the money I earned the previous month for labor in the Merrimack mill; that since said David K. deserted me I have had no communication from him, though for some months after said desertion I wrote letters to him at said Lyme, N. H., asking him to return to me, which letters were never replied to by him; that I continued to reside at said Lowell, working in said mill, till October, A. D. 1859, when I came to Worcester, and have since that time resided here; that on the 9th day of December, A. D. 1865, I received a letter from Fanny M. Dyke, a sister of said David K. Dyke, a copy of which is hereby attached, marked A, informing me of the death of the said David K. Dyke. Coming from the sister of the said David K. Dyke I had no reason to doubt the truth of the information contained therein, and did not doubt the same till since the death of Capt. Albert Prince, formerly captain of the Fifteenth Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, to whom I was married on the 24th day of December, A. D. 1865, and with whom after said marriage I lived as his wife till his death.

"After the death of the said Capt. Albert Prince, through the advice of P. F. Murray, of this city, a former comrade of Capt. Albert Prince, I made application for a widow's pension, and after some time I was called upon to furnish the Pension Department with evidence of the death of my first husband. Captain Murray communicated with the town clerk of Lyme, N. H., with a view of obtaining the evidence called for, and from said town clerk came the information that the said David K. Dyke was alive.

"When I became acquainted with said Albert Prince I told him of my former marriage, and showed him the letter hereinbefore mentioned, and I was married under the firm belief that I was the widow of David K. Dyke."

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

ROBERT SHERIDAN.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 2527) granting a pension to Robert Sheridan.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Robert Sheridan, late a private in Company D, First Rhode Island Light Artillery.

The report (by Mr. LOVERING) is as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred bill (S. 2527) granting a pension to Robert Sheridan, having examined the same, and having adopted the Senate report, recommend that same do pass, a copy of the same being hereto attached:

"The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2527) granting a pension to Robert Sheridan, have examined the same and report recommending its passage. The facts are stated in the petition, which we annex as the most convenient form of presenting them to the Senate:

"The honorable Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled:

"The undersigned, Robert Sheridan, of National Soldiers' Home, Togus, Me., late private Company D, First Rhode Island Light Artillery, respectfully represents that on the 18th day of June, 1873, at said national home (he being then an inmate of said institution as a disabled soldier), he was detailed by order of General William S. Tilton, commander of said home, to fire a salute on the occasion of Decoration Day observance, and that while so employed, through the carelessness of one of the men whose business it was to close the rent, the gun was prematurely discharged while your petitioner was ramming home the cartridge, thereby shattering his right arm so badly that it had to be amputated above the elbow.

"He further states that he is now in receipt of a small pension of $4 per month. He now asks that in consideration of his misfortune, which has deprived him almost entirely of the means of obtaining a living, and as said wound was received while in the line of duty, acting under the orders of General Tilton, an officer of the United States and whose orders he was bound to obey, that he may be granted an increased pension, so that his rate may be $24 per month, thereto now allowed by law for a similar disability; and, as in duty bound, will ever pray.

"ROBERT SHERIDAN.

"Late Private Company D, First Regiment Rhode Island Light Artillery.

"STATE OF MAINE,
County of Kennebec, ss:

"December 8, 1882, there personally appeared the above-named Robert Sheridan, and made oath that the facts as set forth in the foregoing petition are true in substance and fact, so far as they relate to the receiving of his wound and injury.

"Before me—
[SEAL.]

H. F. BLANCHARD,
Notary Public."

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

THOMAS H. BOAZ.

The next pension bill on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 2630) granting a pension to Thomas H. Boaz.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Thomas H. Boaz, late of Company H, Second Regiment Ohio Heavy Artillery.

The report (by Mr. MORRILL) is as follows:

Your Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2630) granting a pension to Thomas H. Boaz, having considered the same, respectfully report as follows:

The claimant, Thomas H. Boaz, was a private in Company H, Second Ohio Heavy Artillery. He was enrolled on the 12th of August, 1863, for three years, and was discharged August 29, 1865, to date August 23, 1865. He filed his application for pension on August 7, 1882, alleging disability by reason of being injured by the cars in the small of his back, shoulder, and left thigh, and for rheumatism, all incurred in the service on or about July 5, 1865, at Claysville, in the State of Ohio. The records of the Surgeon-General's office show treatment of the claimant at the general hospital, Camp Denison, Ohio, in August, 1865, for the injuries which the claimant alleges, and that he was returned to duty August 23, 1865. This was evidently only for the purpose of being discharged.

The testimony in the case proves conclusively that at date of enlistment the soldier was a stout, able-bodied man, free from any and all of the alleged ailments. That he continued to do regular service with his company until about the last of June, 1865, when he was granted a furlough for twenty days, cause not stated. That on the 5th of July, at Claysville, in the State of Ohio, he was injured by the cars in the manner stated, the testimony of one witness, who rendered him assistance at the time of the injury, and of the physician who treated him at the time, being on file. There is ample testimony also showing that from the time of his discharge the soldier suffered more or less from rheumatism, which has continued and increased in severity until, by the examining surgeon's certificate, claimant is shown to be totally disabled and helpless, and that he had to be brought into the office to be examined, and he pronounces the disease sciatica, with paralysis of the lower limbs. Your committee are of the opinion that this is a meritorious case, and calls for the immediate relief, and therefore return the bill with recommendation that it do pass.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

CHARLOTTE C. B. HATCH.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 2546) granting a pension to Charlotte C. B. Hatch.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the restrictions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Charlotte C. B. Hatch, dependent widow of Maj. E. A. C. Hatch, late of Hatch's Battalion Minnesota Volunteers.

The report (by Mr. MORRILL) is as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred S. 2546 granting a pension to Charlotte C. B. Hatch, have examined the same, and report: That claimant is the widow of Edwin A. C. Hatch, major Independent Battalion Minnesota Cavalry, regularly mustered into the United States service, who was discharged July 7, 1864, on surgeon's certificate of disability. He was a sound, healthy man when he entered the service, and became disabled in the service, and had a continuing disability until his death. While the cause of death was reported as cholera morbus, still his health had been so much impaired and constitution broken by disabilities contracted by exposure and hardships in the Territory of Dakota, that he was not, by reason of such service, so able to withstand disease as could be done by a healthy and sound man.

Your committee recommend the passage of the bill.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

MARTHA HUGHES.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 2619) granting a pension to Martha Hughes.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Martha Hughes, widow, whose husband was a member of Company E, Seventeenth Regiment Wisconsin Infantry.

The report (by Mr. MORRILL) is as follows:

Your Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2619), granting a pension to Martha Hughes, having considered the same, respectfully report as follows:

The claimant is the widow of John Hughes, late a corporal in Company E, Seventeenth Wisconsin Infantry Volunteers. As shown by the report of the Adjutant-General, the soldier enlisted on December 23, 1861, for three years, and was discharged at Corinth, Miss., on July 10, 1862, cause not stated. The regimental hospital records are not on file and there are no records of the regiment in the office of the Surgeon-General. It is shown by the testimony on file that the soldier was a stout, able-bodied man at the time of enlistment, and that when he was discharged from the Army he was suffering with chronic diarrhea, which incapacitated him for manual labor, and continued to the time of his death.

The soldier made application on account of disability from chronic diarrhea contracted near Shiloh, Tenn., in April, 1862, and states that he was treated in regimental hospital for said disease, and it is reasonable to suppose that this was the cause of his discharge, although the records are silent. His application for pension was filed October 1, 1881, but he died on the 4th of July, 1882, before the claim was finally proven up to the satisfaction of the Pension Office. The attending physician testifies that the death was the result of chronic diarrhea and tuberculous consumption, and states his belief that the diarrhea was the cause of the disease of the lungs. The widow (claimant herein) then made application for a pension in her own right, which was filed on August 2, 1882, but for reasons unknown to your committee it has not been allowed. Your committee think that the evidence in the case is sufficient to prove the incurrence of the disease in the service from which the soldier died, and we therefore report the bill back with the recommendation that it do pass.

The bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

POLLY YOUNG.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 2443) to increase the pension of Polly Young.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Polly Young, widow of Jesse Young, a soldier in the war of 1812, and pay her a pension from and after the passage of this act of $30 a month in lieu of the pension she now receives.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. I would like to ask the chairman of the Committee on Invalid Pensions—

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. I suppose that comes from the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. It should have gone to the Committee on Pensions; but I do not make a question about that. I would like to ask the chairman of the Committee on Invalid Pensions whether any of these bills were reported to the Senate adversely by the Senate Committee on Pensions, or whether this bill in particular was reported adversely.

Mr. MATSON. There was one case that I remember, that of Colonel Penny, the case we were discussing a few moments ago. The original bill in the Senate proposed to give him $50 a month. The bill was finally amended so as to make the amount $42. The remainder of these bills, so far as I now remember, and I think I have examined all of them, were reported favorably by the Committee on Pensions of the Senate. The bill I have spoken of proposed originally to give $50 a month and was amended so as to make it $42.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. This bill now under consideration proposes to increase the pension of the widow of a soldier of the war of 1812 from $8 to $30 a month. Why is that done in this particular case?

Mr. MATSON. Let the report speak.

The report (by Mr. MORRILL) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2443) granting an increase of pension to Polly Young, having examined the same, have adopted the Senate report, which is hereto attached, and made a part of their report, as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2443) granting an increase of pension to Polly Young, have examined the same, and report as follows:

"That Polly Young is now 93 years of age, and receiving a pension of $8 per month by reason of service of her husband in the war of 1812. The history of her family shows remarkable loyalty and devotion to the Republic, dating from the Revolutionary war. Her grandfather and four brothers were in that war. Her husband and three of her brothers were in the war of 1812. She had three sons. All did honorable and long service in the late rebellion. One of these sons, now an old man, furnishes from his small means her support in an humble way.

Every year the number of this class of aged pensioners is becoming less, while the infirmities of age increase and the necessity for care and attendance greater.

"A government, generous in its benefactions to the widows of those of high rank and brilliant service, can well afford to be just and generous to the widows of those who suffered and fought in the ranks, particularly when misfortunes render necessary aid from some quarter to smooth the pathway to the grave."

The committee recommend that the bill above referred to do pass.

ANN E. MANCHESTER.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 1113) granting a pension to Ann E. Manchester.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Ann E. Manchester, the widow of Abel W. Manchester, deceased, who was a sergeant of Company H, Seventh United States Infantry.

The report is as follows:

Your committee have had under consideration the accompanying bill, and have adopted the Senate report in same, hereto attached:

"The Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill (S. 1113) granting a pension to Ann E. Manchester, has examined the same, and reports:

"That Abel W. Manchester was enlisted on the 2d of October, 1846, at New York, to serve five years, and was assigned to Company E, Seventh Regiment of United States Infantry, and served until September 1, 1851. His marriage with the said Ann E. Manchester is established, and they continued to live together as husband and wife to the date of his death, which occurred November 2, 1870.

"The widow applied for a pension and her application was rejected, 'because the records of the War Department do not show the existence of heart disease (which caused the soldier's death, November 2, 1870) in the service, and applicant is unable to show that said disease had its origin in the service.' This is the statement of the Commissioner of Pensions to the committee.

"The records of the War Department do show that the soldier served during the Mexican war, and that he is reported sick at Pueblo, Mexico, June 30, 1847, and again October 31, 1847, and again at Jefferson Barracks, Mo., October 31, 1848, but do not state the nature of sickness.

"It is in evidence that the soldier was sick when he returned home in 1851, and that he had at that time heart disease; that he continued disabled from said disease until he finally died. The widow has been unable to furnish the evidence of officers of her husband's company, because they are all dead, and they are so reported by the Adjutant-General of the Army. But she has furnished the evidence of persons acquainted with him, and who establish his disabled condition from the year of his discharge to the time of his death.

"In the opinion of your committee there is sufficient evidence to justify a favorable report on the bill, and it is accordingly so reported, with a recommendation that it do pass."

There being no objection, the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

BENJAMIN F. BROCKETT.

The next business upon the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 2153) granting a pension to Benjamin F. Brockett.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Benjamin H. Brockett, late a captain Company I, Eighty-seventh Illinois Volunteer Infantry.

The report (by Mr. MORRILL) is as follows:

Your committee have had under consideration Senate bill No. 2153, granting a pension to the above-named claimant, and have adopted the Senate report as the favorable report of this committee, and as so reported they recommend the passage of the bill:

"The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2153) granting a pension to Benjamin F. Brockett, have examined the same, and report:

"That Benjamin F. Brockett, late captain of Company I, Eighty-seventh Illinois Volunteers, entered the service August 15, 1862, and remained therein until December 10, 1863. He applied for a pension, and alleges that when he entered the service—

"He was a sound and healthy man * * * and that he was in good health and always ready for duty until about the 1st of June, 1863; that about that time he was ordered to take charge of a foraging expedition when in camp near Vicksburg, Miss., and had special orders to bring in beef for the hospital supplies; that he ordered the men under his charge to capture a wild Texas cow; that his men failed to capture her, and that in running past him he caught the cow by the horns, when he was thrown under her feet, trampled upon, and forced against a fence; that the men in endeavoring to assist him in her capture frightened her, and in her attempt to jump over the fence she trampled upon him on the lower right side of his abdomen, and on the left side above the hip-joint; that the injury to his right wrist-joint and right ankle were received at the same time; also the injury to the lower right side of his abdomen; that the injuries were so severe that he was unable to stand without assistance, and that his men carried him to a wagon and hauled him to Warrenton or Warrington, some eight miles below Vicksburg, where a part of the regiment was encamped."

"This statement is supported by the testimony of S. S. Gentry, D. M. Grulla, R. B. Graham, and B. J. Brockett, who were members of the same company and present when said injuries are alleged to have been received.

"On the case stated he claimed a pension for injury to wrist, thumb, and ankle, and rupture in the right side.

"During the pendency of this case in the Pension Office he was examined on three several occasions by examining surgeons of the pension service, and was each time reported at three-fourths total disability.

"The claim was finally rejected by the Commissioner of Pensions on the ground that the 'alleged disabilities have originated since discharge, as shown by evidence adduced by special examiners.'

"It does not seem to the committee that this was a just result. The evidence of the witnesses who testify to the incurrence of the disabilities from personal knowledge is not impeached, and there is but little in the testimony taken by the special examiners which can not be allowed to stand and still not disprove the fact that the injuries from which the claimant is now suffering were incurred as he alleges. That they may have developed into more serious conditions than existed when the witnesses whose testimony was taken by the special examiners were examined, is doubtless true, and this very fact may have misled some of said witnesses. But when the case is considered as a whole, and in its several phases, the committee can but conclude that the disabilities of which the claimant complains did originate in the service. Considering the character of the claimant, as attested by his position in the community in which he resides, and the good reputation certified to by his fellow-citizens belonging to the Grand Army of the Republic in Kansas, who assert that he is a man incapable of attempting to 'receive a pension on fraudulent evidence,' the committee feel justified in reporting the bill to the Senate with the recommendation that it do pass."

There being no objection, the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

SARAH HAGUE.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 1836) granting a pension to Sarah Hague.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Sarah Hague, the dependent mother of W. C. Hague, late of Company L, Sixth New York Heavy Artillery.

The report (by Mr. HOLMES) is as follows:

Your committee have had under consideration the Senate bill granting a pension to Sarah Hague, No. 1836, and have adopted the Senate report recommending that the bill for her relief do pass:

"The Committee on Pensions, to which was referred the bill (S. 1836) granting a pension to Sarah Hague, has examined the same, and reports:

"That Sarah Hague is the mother of M. C. Hague, who was a private in Company L, Sixth New York Heavy Artillery. The soldier was enlisted January 4, 1864; was wounded in battle near Bethesda church, Va., May 30, 1864, was captured by the confederates, taken to Richmond, Va., and placed in rebel general hospital, where he died June 17, 1864. These facts appear from the records in the offices of the Adjutant-General and Surgeon-General, United States Army.

"The said Sarah Hague applied for a pension as a dependent mother. Her claim was rejected on the ground 'that the claimant was not dependent upon the soldier, as her husband was able to, and did, support her at the time of the soldier's death.'

"The committee is not of the opinion that this finding is supported by the record and proofs in the case. On the contrary, it does appear that the son did contribute to the support of his parents; that the husband was so afflicted with disease that the results of his labors were not sufficient to support the family, and that it required the efforts of all the members of the family, the assistance of friends, and the strictest economy to effect what the said finding of the Pension Office said the husband alone did. This being the case, the committee can but believe that this mother, whose son died in a rebel prison from wounds received in battle, and who had contributed to her support, and to whom she had looked for aid for years, is entitled to a pension. The bill is accordingly reported with a recommendation that it do pass."

There being no objection, the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

BRYSON R. McCARTNEY.

The next business upon the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 1612) granting a pension to Bryson R. McCartney.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Bryson R. McCartney, late of Company K, Ninth Regiment Illinois Infantry.

The report (by Mr. MORRILL) is as follows:

Your committee have had under consideration Senate bill No. 1612, granting a pension to the above named claimant, and they recommend the adoption of the Senate report in the case as the favorable report of this committee; and as so reported they recommend that the bill do pass. Senate report hereto attached:

"The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1612) granting a pension to Bryson R. McCartney, having examined the same, report:

"That Bryson R. McCartney enlisted in Company I, One hundred and twenty-eighth Illinois Volunteers, September 26, 1862, and was discharged from the service January 9, 1864, on a surgeon's certificate of disability, from chronic rheumatism and general debility. In his application for a pension he alleged that he contracted rheumatism and general debility in the winter of 1862-'63, at Cairo, Ill., by reason of exposure while performing camp and garrison duty. His claim was rejected on the strength of a report made by a special examiner, submitting testimony from a number of former neighbors, going to show that claimant's disability existed prior to enlistment. This testimony shows that claimant had a severe illness two years previous to his enlistment, and was not in as good health afterward, but does not cover the time immediately before enlistment.

"On the other hand, claimant submitted the testimony of two physicians as to his soundness at enlistment; of his lieutenant, and of several neighbors to the same effect. The Pension Office surgeon, who examined him in 1877, pronounced him disabled in excess of total, and declared him 'too feeble to work.' This physician said that claimant's knees and right hand were stiffened, and that the sight of his left eye was nearly gone, and rated him as totally disabled by general debility and five-eighths of total by rheumatism.

"The committee has received petitions signed by a number of citizens of Greenwood County, Kansas, where claimant has resided for many years past, calling attention to his total disability and destitute condition. Claimant is 74 years of age, and has been totally disabled since his discharge. As his services were accepted by the Government we are disposed to give him the benefit of any doubt that may exist as to his soundness at enlistment, and therefore recommend the passage of the accompanying bill."

There being no objection, the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

SEDATE P. MARTIN.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 2262) granting a pension to Sedate P. Martin.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to place upon the pension-roll, upon the evidence on file in the office of the Commissioner of Pensions, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Sedate P. Martin, late a private Company B, One hundred and forty-first Illinois Volunteers.

The report (by Mr. CULLEN) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2262) granting a pension to Sedate P. Martin, having examined the same, have adopted the Senate report, which is hereto attached and made a part of their report, as follows:

"This soldier belonged to Company B, One hundred and forty-first Illinois Infantry Volunteers. He alleges that in August, 1864, while on a march near Caseyville, Ky., going down hill in the dark, he stepped into a depression and met with a severe shock which resulted in a constant pain in the left side; that he never went into hospital, but was soon mustered out of the service and returned home. The pain in his side continued after his return home, as his neighbors testify.

"The comrades who knew about his injury are dead, and his captain and lieutenant could not be found. There have been three medical examinations made by the Pension Office, which show that the disability is internal, and that its exact character and location can not be determined. He is described by the physicians as bent, wrinkled, and decrepit beyond his years, his general physical condition being broken and unsteady. His condition has brought on heart disease, and he has also become totally blind.

"The soldier and his wife have for some years been dependent wholly upon the charity of the community in which they live. He is vouched for as a worthy, deserving man, and, under all the circumstances, the committee report the bill for his relief favorably, and recommend that it do pass."

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. Mr. Chairman, if this man is to be put upon the pension-roll I would like to know what amount of pension he is to draw. It seems to me that it will be very difficult for the Pension Office to determine how this man should be rated. It is said that he is totally blind. If he is totally blind, and if that is the result of his service in the war, then, under the pension laws, he will be entitled to $72 a month. If his blindness is not the result of his service in the war, and you place him upon the pension-roll under this special act, under the evidence that is filed in this Pension Bureau, as the bill provides, I would like the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MATSON] to tell us what will be the amount of pension per month that this man will draw?

Mr. MATSON. Mr. Chairman, this bill is, I believe, in the usual form requiring the Secretary of the Interior to place this man on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. That is not my understanding of it. My understanding is that this bill requires him to be placed on the pension-roll "under the evidence that is filed in the Pension Office." Now, what does that mean?

Mr. MATSON. That means exactly what I have already stated. He is to be placed upon the roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, and I apprehend that unless he is rated it will be impossible for him to be placed there.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. But how is he to be rated? Suppose he is totally blind now, and that his blindness did not result from his service in the Army, will he be rated as totally blind?

Mr. MATSON. Not unless he proves that his blindness was the result of his service.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. But suppose the testimony tends to show that his blindness did result from his service, although the weight of testimony is the other way, and you place him upon the pension-roll by this special act, will not that be an instruction to the Pension Office to give him a pension for his blindness?

Mr. MATSON. If he had alleged blindness in his application to the Pension Office, and if Congress, after a review of that case and that allegation, should pass an act providing that he be placed on the pension-roll, I should say that when he came to be examined if the physicians found him to be blind he would be rated for blindness. If he alleged at the Pension Office an injury in the side, or an internal injury in any part of the body, and that particular allegation was considered by Congress, and in pursuance of it a bill passed requiring that he be placed on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, that action would be construed as having been taken with reference to the precise injury or disease or wound that might have been alleged before.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. Now, I wish to inquire whether this man's application in the Pension Office was based upon the ground of blindness—whether that was one of the allegations?

Mr. MATSON. I think not.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. I would like to make an inquiry. Is this bill in the ordinary form, simply directing that the name of the person be placed on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will cause the bill to be again read. The Clerk again read the bill.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. That bill is very singularly drawn.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. From the report which has been read it appears that this soldier filed an application for a pension upon the ground that one night, while walking along, he made a misstep, the consequence of which was a pain in his side, from which he was suffering at the time he was discharged. The Pension Office, after weighing the evidence put on file there, came to the conclusion that he was not suffering from any disability which originated in the service, and hence that office refused to grant him a pension.

This bill, which is not in the ordinary form, but which is extraordinary in its terms, directs that he shall be placed on the pension-roll upon the evidence filed in the Department, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws. Now, if the application made to the Pension Office was for a pension on account of total blindness—if that was the allegation of the application, and the applicant filed evidence showing that he was blind, but failing to show that the blindness resulted from service in the war—under these circumstances if Congress should direct that this man be placed upon the pension-roll, our act has reference to the application and evidence already filed, and would be construed as instructing the Pension Bureau to pay him a pension according to the disability under which he alleged he was suffering. If the allegation was total blindness, the Pension Bureau would have no ground upon which it could refuse to pay him a pension of $72 a month, even though the evidence might go to prove that his blindness had nothing to do with his service in the Army, but resulted altogether from other causes.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. The language of this bill is extraordinary; at least I do not remember another instance in which similar language has been used. Under the bill passed in this form the Pension Bureau would have nothing in the world to do except to place the name of the beneficiary on the pension-roll and ascertain the extent of his existing disabilities. He would be placed on the roll as being entitled to a pension; he would be referred to an examining board simply for the purpose of ascertaining the character of his disabilities, and he would be rated accordingly.

I do not believe that this bill, in its legal effect, differs in the slightest degree from our bills in the ordinary form, directing that the name of the beneficiary be placed on the roll, subject to the limitations and provisions of the pension laws; and in those cases it has always been held by the Commissioner of Pensions that the Pension Office has nothing to do in the nature of instituting an inquiry as to the manner in which the disability was incurred. The man may have been injured by an accident on the railroad or in a saw-mill or by a threshing-machine; yet when Congress, having sovereign legislative power, declares in this general way that a man is entitled to a pension, nothing is left for the Pension Office to do but to ascertain the character of his disabilities that he may receive a rating in conformity with the law. I feel sure that is precisely the condition in which this claimant will be left if this bill be made law. I have no objection to the bill. I shall support it, supposing that this man ought to be pensioned according to his disabilities.

Mr. PETERS. I wish to inquire of the gentleman whether that language in this bill which makes it extraordinary in its character is not surplusage.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. I so esteem it. In this bill Congress, as I understand, does nothing more than to say that this man is entitled to a pension on the evidence. This language "on the evidence" is of no consequence, for Congress, without making any reference whatever to the evidence, may declare him entitled to a pension. The bill does not say the Pension Office shall grant a pension if, upon the evidence, the Commissioner believes him entitled to a pension. By the general law, as it now is, Congress gives the Pension Bureau that direction. It is the duty of that bureau under existing law to grant the claimant a pension on the evidence, if the evidence justifies such action on the part of the office. All that this bill does is to declare this man entitled to a pension on the evidence; and it refers the character of the disability to the Pension Office to be ascertained in order that it may be able to make a correct rating under the law. I have no doubt it is right that the bill should be in that form.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Mr. Chairman, this bill, if it has no greater effect than what the gentleman from Indiana, as I understand, would claim for it, can not be enforced in the Pension Office. This man has made his application there and filed his evidence; and the officials authorized to pass upon that evidence have declared that under the limitations of the pension laws he is not entitled to a pension. Now, if this bill is merely equivalent to the ordinary provision directing that a person be placed on the rolls subject to the limitations of the pension laws, if the bill does that and nothing more, this applicant can not get a pension under the bill.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. Will the gentleman allow me to interrupt him?

Mr. BUCHANAN. With pleasure.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. It is the standing rule of the Pension Committee and of Congress that no pension will be awarded by a pension act where it might be given under the general law until the evidence has been first examined in the Pension Bureau and the pension denied. So in nine hundred and ninety cases out of each thousand we pass here, we pass them over the head of the Pension Bureau in cases in which the Pension Bureau on the evidence has denied the pension altogether. That will be the effect exactly of this law.

Mr. BROWN, of Pennsylvania. That is to say, the act of Congress supplies the place of evidence.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Certainly. If the man is entitled to a pension under the limitations of the pension laws, then he ought to obtain it at the Pension Bureau. There is the place. And here is an appeal in this case from the decision of those officers. It is true that Congress may try that appeal and grant a pension either with or without cause. But I take it that every bill that is presented to Congress shows some reason why a gratuity should be conferred upon the claimant.

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. Is it not your opinion that every man who was in the first place a good soldier, who was honorably discharged and had a good record, having existing disability, the origin of which we can not trace perhaps, and is without any present means of support—where these three things appear, as they do here, is it not your judgment in all such cases the soldier ought to be pensioned without making further inquiry.

Mr. BUCHANAN. It is not worth while for me to give my judgment what ought or ought not to be done. I stand by what is the law of the land, and that ought to be enforced.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. Will the gentleman allow me to answer the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. BUCHANAN. Certainly.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. While I agree in the case put by him a pension should go, I wish to say quite distinctly it ought not to go in special cases; that a general law in such cases should pass so there may be a perfect equality of all occupying a common level.

I desire to say the meaning of "the provisions and limitations of the pension laws" as employed in pension bills is just this and no more, that the rating of the pension is to be subject to the provisions and limitations of existing law. That is, you ascertain the extent of the disability and grant the pension accordingly. If subsequently Congress should increase that rating then the pension goes up, but if it diminishes the rating the pension goes down. Therefore the pension granted by special act is all the time subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, and when that language is employed it means that and nothing more, unless a specific rate is fixed in the act itself, and then, of course, it does not apply.

Mr. BUCHANAN. On the other point taken by the gentleman from Alabama, this bill, in my judgment, is incapable of the construction this is to be on the evidence. The evidence shows, for one thing, this man is blind, and for another he has pain in his side; consequently this bill should be amended and the evidence filed in the Pension Office, designated whether he should be rated for blindness or for minor injury. I do not say how this bill can be construed in rating the pension received by this individual by the evidence filed in the Pension Bureau, which I presume is the same which appears in the report of the committee.

Now, how is this man to be rated—how are they to rate him? Is it for the minor or the greater injury? All the facts are now before the bureau, and on these facts the bureau determined he was not entitled to any pension at all. Congress now says he is entitled to the pension on that evidence. That evidence indicates two injuries, one blindness and the other of a minor character—some affection of the side. There is not a judge who can construe whether he is to be rated for blindness or for the minor injury.

Mr. BROWN, of Pennsylvania. But the act of Congress, in my estimation, eliminates the matter of rating altogether. The pension and what the amount of that pension is to be depend on his physical disability, without reference to blindness or anything else.

If he is blind and the blindness dates back to his service in the Army or is traceable to that cause, he is entitled to the pension fixed for that character of disability—$70 per month. If he is not blind, then he would receive a pension according to his present condition. It all depends upon the physical disability which now exists.

Mr. VAN ALSTYNE. I would like to have the gentleman recite the language of the statute to which he refers, in view of the fact that we are called upon to vote upon this bill.

Mr. BROWN, of Pennsylvania. The gentleman can do that for himself if he wants to.

Mr. VAN ALSTYNE. I would like very much to see the statute.

Mr. BUCHANAN. What is the disability as shown by the evidence on file in the Pension Bureau?

Mr. BROWN, of Pennsylvania. It makes no difference whatever. That would determine nothing.

Mr. BUCHANAN. I think the gentleman is mistaken in that respect.

Mr. MATSON. Mr. Chairman, I have attempted to say before during the discussion of these bills that as I understand the practice at the Pension Office when a special act is passed the officer there reviews the case with reference to the allegations contained in the claimant's application, if he has made one, in the Pension Office, and particularly with reference to the disability considered by Congress as shown by the reports. It will not do to say that when a man is placed on the pension-roll by act of Congress prescribing that he shall be there placed subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws he is to be pensioned for every disability which may afflict him. That is not the effect of the law at all.

On the contrary, the effect is to place him there for the disability which he claimed in the Pension Office, but which he could not quite prove originated in the service, or perhaps could not comply with the law in other respects, as far as the testimony is concerned, and he would be pensioned for that disability, and that only. He may have a dozen other disabilities and not be pensioned for any other than that for which the application is made and the proof filed.

There may have been disabilities incurred before he enlisted at all, or disabilities incurred afterward, but when he is placed upon the pension-roll by act of Congress he is placed there under the practice of the office; and within the last two days an officer of that department has come to me from the office to get the reports with a view to fixing the rating of a man for whose benefit a special act was passed, so that they could instruct the examining surgeons of the particular disease or injury alleged.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. Suppose a case where the report of the committee does not indicate any disability at all, but simply directs that the office shall place the applicant on the pension-roll. How would the office determine the pension in such a case as that, under the illustration the gentleman now makes?

Mr. MATSON. Such a case could not arise, for the fact is the report itself always states the ground of the application, and states what it is for which the man is to be pensioned. They never fail to do so.

Now, in this particular case, the man alleges an internal rupture of some kind by reason of slipping or stepping down into a depression during his term of service, and for that injury when the bill is passed he will be pensioned, and not for blindness, for he has never alleged blindness in the application to the office for a pension.

The report does set forth the fact that the man is blind, but it does not state that he alleges that he incurred the blindness while in the service, or that it is a ground for granting him a pension at all.

The allegation of the claimant is that he was internally ruptured in some manner and for which injury he asks to be pensioned. As to the language of the bill, which provides that he shall be pensioned upon the evidence on file in the Pension Office, I take that as rather qualifying the terms of the bill than otherwise. I take it as being language which points out to the office in this particular case that it must be in reference to the particular disability for which the pension is asked; although as a matter of fact that would be of no consequence, for the same effect would follow if the language was omitted. And so I regard the expression "to be pensioned on the evidence upon file in the Pension Office" as mere surplusage which leaves the bill in effect just the same as if the language had not been inserted.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Do I understand that there is no evidence on file in the Pension Office as to the blindness?

Mr. MATSON. I presume not. At least there is no allegation that blindness was incurred in the service or that it is set up as a ground for pension. I did not report the bill and can not say that I am familiar with the facts, but I am sure there is not, because the pension is not applied for on that ground at all.

Mr. BUCHANAN. If there is no evidence in the office of blindness as a claim for the pension, that of course would make a different case altogether.

Mr. VAN ALSTYNE. Mr. Chairman, there have been no satisfactory reasons assigned why this bill should be made an exception to the thousand other bills of like character which have passed this Congress. I take it that it is not the intention of the House to make it an exception; and therefore it should not carry language that may be construed for the benefit of this applicant in preference to any other. I therefore offer an amendment, and I do it in earnest, not proposing to argue it either, but I think it should prevail.

It is to strike out all after the words "pension-roll" in the bill down to the words "subject to," so that it will read in harmony with every other bill, without exception, so far as I know, which has been passed by the present Congress.

Mr. PERKINS. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. VAN ALSTYNE. Certainly.

Mr. PERKINS. Let me ask if the language in the bill to which you take exception has any effect at all as to imposing any limit upon the power of the Commissioner of Pensions? Does it really confer any power to rate the pension upon the evidence rather than the certificate given by the examining board of surgeons?

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. That is just the trouble. I would rather take the certificate of the surgeon.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the proposed amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out the words "upon evidence on file in the office of the Commissioner of Pensions."

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection the amendment will be considered as agreed to.

Mr. HOUK. I rise to a question of order. I addressed the Chair long before the question was put.

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman from Tennessee rise?

Mr. HOUK. I want to discuss that amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee says he rose and addressed the Chair before the question was put on the amendment. The gentleman is recognized.

Mr. HOUK. I wish to say to the committee it will be a misfortune to adopt that amendment. In the first place, the language proposed to be stricken out has not one particle of effect in determining the measure of disability or anything in regard to the rights of the pensioner under the bill. In the next place if you amend the bill by striking that out and send it back to the Senate, in all human probability the bill will not be passed and you do absolute injustice to this applicant.

I have listened to the discussion here, and I must submit if there is any point or any force in the argument in regard to this language proposed to be stricken out I am wholly incapable of comprehending it. This simply places the applicant on the pension-roll to be rated by an examining board. The first duty of the Pension Office will be to enroll him as a pensioner. The next will be to refer him to the proper board to be examined; and it will be the duty of the Pension Office to place him at whatever rate he may be rated at by the examining board. And I think it would be wrong to endanger the bill now by making this amendment.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. Will the gentleman from Tennessee allow me—

Mr. HOUK. The gentleman from Alabama has spoken all night, and I should like him to take his seat and let me alone. If there is any one man that talks more than another the choice lies between my friend from Alabama and my friend from Kentucky, who is not here this evening.

A MEMBER. He was here a short time ago.

Mr. HOUK. I hope my friend from Alabama will let me alone. I protest against encumbering this bill with this amendment, because in all probability it will prevent this applicant getting a pension.

There is not a lawyer who does not understand that the bill has no more legal effect or force about it than the bills in the usual language which we pass here night after night. All this discussion it seems to me is surplusage and unnecessary; and I appeal to gentlemen to vote down this amendment.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. I did not propose to talk again on this question; but I want to call the attention of the gentleman from Tennessee to one point. I do not profess to know much law, but the gentleman from Tennessee is a lawyer, and I desire to call his attention to this fact. If you pass a law putting a man on the pension-roll subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension-laws, and if that man has a disability he must be put on the pension-roll under those laws and rated according to the disability; but if as the years go by he becomes a sound man and his disability is removed—

Mr. HOUK. Then the Pension Office would have the right to have him re-examined.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. Then according to the limitations of the pension laws usually applicable his pension ceases because he has no pension disability.

Mr. HOUK. Nobody disputes that.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. But, now, here you see the pensioner must be put on the pension-roll subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, with one exception, that is, "upon the evidence now on file in the Pension Office;" they can look to nothing else; they can not inquire hereafter as to whether he has a disability or not if he has got a disability now. If the evidence shows that you must put him on the pension-roll and keep him there, although hereafter he may become a sound man. There is a distinction between the two cases, and it is a distinction which I think any lawyer can see.

Mr. HOUK. Do not the provisions and limitations of the pension law offer every remedy that is necessary to provide the means of ascertaining when the disability ceases?

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. Not when you say he is put there on the evidence now on file.

Mr. HOUK. He is put there on that evidence. But after he is put there he is subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension law as it exists in the general law.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. VAN ALSTYNE].

A division was demanded.

The question was taken; and there were—ayes 4, noes 28.

Mr. VAN ALSTYNE. No quorum.

Mr. KEAN. I hope the gentleman will not insist on the point as to a quorum.

The CHAIRMAN. The point being made that a quorum has not voted the Chair will appoint tellers.

Mr. MATSON. I ask unanimous consent that this bill be laid aside informally.

Mr. VAN ALSTYNE. I object.

Mr. HOUK. I have not changed my opinion as to this matter, but I doubt the propriety of jeopardizing the case of this pensioner.

Mr. LONG. The Senate will concur.

Mr. HOUK. I am assured by Governor LONG that the Senate will concur in the amendment. I presume that gentleman knows what he talks about. I will therefore stop my opposition and let the amendment go.

Mr. MORRILL. I ask that by unanimous consent the amendment may be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. Unanimous consent is asked to vacate the vote by which the amendment was disagreed to. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question recurs on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. VAN ALSTYNE].

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

JAMES BOND.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 1633) granting a pension to James Bond.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the United States pension-roll the name of James Bond, who was a private in Company B, Fifty-second Regiment Ohio Infantry in the late war of the rebellion, the pension under this act to date from and after the passage of the act.

The report (by Mr. CULLEN) is as follows:

Your committee have had under consideration Senate bill No. 1633, granting a pension to the above-named claimant, and they recommend the adoption of the majority report of the Senate Committee on Pensions as the favorable report of this committee, and further recommend the passage of the accompanying bill. Senate report hereto attached:

"The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1633) granting a pension to James Bond, have examined the same, and report as follows:

"It appears that this case was forwarded to the House Committee on Invalid Pensions last session by the Commissioner of Pensions, who made the following statement of the case in his letter of transmittal:

"I have the honor to call the attention of the honorable Committee on Invalid Pensions, House of Representatives, to the accompanying claim to pension under the general pension laws of James Bond, late of Company B, Fifty-second Ohio Volunteers, No. 54896, rejected by this bureau, under date of August 24, 1881, on the ground that the disability upon which the claim was based was not contracted in the line of duty, and most respectfully ask your attention to the same (under a resolution of Congress passed May 20, 1880), and suggest the passage of a special act granting him a pension from the date of his discharge, September 2, 1864, the amount of which to be governed by the laws now on the statutes.

"By a reference to the papers it will be seen that the claim is for the loss of the left arm and the loss of sight of left eye from the explosion of a shell at Chickamauga, Georgia, while out on a pass from the brigade commander visiting the battlefield at said place, in the month of April, 1864.

"It is shown by the testimony of Lieut. Col. Charles W. Clancy, who was Bond's captain, and assisted in the amputation of his arm, that the regiment was encamped near the battleground, and that Bond and four comrades obtained a pass from the brigade commander to procure boards for quarters, and to go through the battleground of Chickamauga; that while going over the field one of Bond's comrades handed him a small bombshell, which exploded in his hands; that as a result of his injuries his left arm was amputated at the shoulder, his left eye so badly injured as to lose his sight, and his right eye injured somewhat.

"Colonel Clancy testified that the injury was received in the line of duty, that it was accidental, and that it was no fault of the soldier's.

"The Pension Office officials appear to have been divided in opinion as to whether this injury was received in the line of duty. The examiner who briefed the case said in a note on this point:

"It certainly is a pensionable incident of the war, for if he had not been in the service he would not have been injured in this way; and he was not necessarily out of line of duty, while the captain testifies he was in line of duty, being on the battlefield by permission of superior officer."

"Another examiner submitted a long statement in support of his opinion that the claim was justly pensionable under existing laws, because the claimant's terrible disability is a pensionable incident of his services in the Army.

"Still another examiner, in an opinion given at the request of the chief of his division, says:

"The question at issue is as to line of duty. I regard it as a delicate one to decide, and one susceptible of different conclusions. It seems desirable in such cases, where the equities of the claim are recognized, that we should construe the law liberally.

"It is shown that the claimant was visiting the battle-ground with proper permission, and that fact suggests that he was in line of duty at the time. If he had received the same injury within the limits of the camp, we could not hold that he was not in the line of duty, and yet he was to all intents and purposes as much in line of duty as if within the confines of the camp at the time.

"The whole matter may be condensed and covered in this conclusion—the wound was accidental and was a resulting incident of his service. If the circumstances under which the injury was received are truthfully stated, in my opinion we have no impregnable or even tenable ground for denying the pension. If we have not the facts clearly presented, we should then endeavor to obtain them before finally deciding the question involved. The deputy commissioner has already decided the action in the case adverse to the legal right, while admitting the equity of the claim.

"In my judgment, if the claimant has now an equitable title, he has also a legal one, although the claim admits of argument on that point."

"When the case was submitted to the deputy commissioner, another official said:

"The record shows the explosion was accidental, and contains nothing to show that claimant was out of the line of his duty. It appears to have been incidental to the service."

"The case was finally passed upon by the Commissioner, who says in his opinion:

"In my opinion the action then taken (referring to the rejection of the claim) was correct, because every soldier is held to the exercise of common sense and common prudence. An unexploded shell upon a deserted battlefield is not a thing to be carelessly handled, or handled at all, and if an old soldier of two years' service, well knowing the danger he incurred, picked up an unexploded shell, he did it at his own peril and own personal risk. The only safe thing to handle under such circumstances would be an exploded shell, or rather the fragments of one.

"Under some circumstances a soldier picking up an unexploded shell might be pensionable if followed by the results as detailed in this case, i. e., were the shell to fall in the midst of his comrades, and in an effort to save life he should pick it up and in trying to throw it away it should explode, as this did, he would be given a pension by me. But when, as in this case, away from camp and far off from comrades, out of idle curiosity and in the face of what he knew to be the risk he ran, he takes it up and either by percussion or other act ignites the fuse, he certainly is not in line of duty. * * * In my opinion the first action of the office was correct, and should be adhered to."

There being no objection, the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

ROBERT J. BALLORT.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 2268) for the relief of Robert J. Ballort.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the United States pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Robert J. Ballort, a private in Company F, Eighth Regiment Michigan Cavalry.

The report (by Mr. WINANS, of Michigan) is as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2268) granting a pension to Robert J. Ballort, having examined the same, make the following report. Having adopted the Senate report, recommend that the same do pass, a copy of the same being hereto attached:

"The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2268) granting a pension to Robert J. Ballort, have examined the same, and report, recommending its passage.

"This is a case where if the applicant must make out a case before the Pension Office beyond a reasonable or possible doubt he may fail; if he is to be treated as well as the party in an ordinary civil case in the courts he should have prevailed there and have had the benefits of the law long since. Nothing is more required in the administration of the pension laws than uniform rules of evidence as liberal as those of the common law. The Congress might find in this direction the opportunity of rendering claimants and the administrators of the law an important service.

"We print one document from the Pension Office:

"DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, PENSION OFFICE.
"Detroit, Mich., October 11, 1883.

"SIR: I have the honor to return herewith the papers in original in valid claim No. 321037 of Robert J. Ballort, late private Company H, Eighth Michigan Cavalry, for adjudication on report of Special Examiner George C. Kober.

"After a careful review of this claim in connection with No. 324597 of John T. Ballort (also transmitted to-day), I am led to differ from the conclusions of the special examiner in this case, and I recommend its admission for chronic diarrhoea.

"Very respectfully,

"WM. T. SULLIVAN,
"Supervising Examiner.

"Hon. Wm. W. DUDLEY,

"Commissioner of Pensions, Washington, D. C."

There being no objection, the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

MARY HOWARD FARQUHAR.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 1960) for the relief of Mary Howard Farquhar; reported adversely from the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

The report (by Mr. PATTON) is as follows:

Your committee have had under consideration Senate bill No. 1960, granting a pension to the above-named claimant, which passed the Senate granting her a pension at the rate of $30 per month in lieu of the pension she is now receiving, namely, $25 per month, as the widow of Maj. Francis V. Farquhar, Corps of Engineers, and brevet lieutenant-colonel United States Army. The amount she is now receiving is the highest rate of pensions allowed by law to widows of officers of this grade, and therefore your committee are of the opinion the bill should be reported adversely.

The bill was laid on the table.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. MATSON] that this completes the list of Senate bills included in his resolution.

Mr. MATSON. Mr. Chairman, there are two or three House bills that I ask to have taken up.

Mr. CULLEN. Mr. Chairman, before passing to these House bills I desire to call attention to the fact that House bill No. 2514, granting a pension to David T. Hoover, is upon the Calendar. The RECORD shows that that bill passed on Friday evening last, and if the Journal corroborates the RECORD the bill is evidently on the Calendar by mistake.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will inform the gentleman [Mr. CULLEN] that the Clerk of the House discovered the mistake, and has stricken the bill from the Calendar.

MATILDA CODY.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 7907) granting a pension to Matilda Cody.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Matilda Cody, widow of John Cody, as shown by No. 181661 on file in the Pension Office.

The report (by Mr. LE FEVRE) is as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7907) granting a pension to Matilda Cody, respectfully report as follows:

The proof shows that John Cody, the husband of Matilda Cody, served in Company L, Fourteenth Regiment Kentucky Cavalry, from December 10, 1862, until March 24, 1864, when he was mustered out by expiration of service. That said John Cody then enlisted in the Three Forks Kentucky Battalion, but had not been mustered for want of an opportunity, there being no muster officer; when, acting under orders of Capt. Shadrock Combs, the said John Cody, in company with other soldiers, went on a scout and was killed in the line of duty about October 7, 1864. The proof shows that the soldier's widow, Matilda Cody, never remarried.

In view of all the facts the committee recommend the passage of the bill.

The amendment reported by the committee is as follows:

Strike out the words "as shown by number one hundred and eighty-one thousand six hundred and sixty-one, on file in the Pension Office," and insert "late of Company L, Fourteenth Kentucky Cavalry."

The amendment was agreed to.

There being no objection, the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

RACHEL NICKEL.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 603) granting a pension to Rachel Nickel.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name Rachel Nickell, widow of Asbury Nickell, as shown by No. 233993 on file in Pension Office.

The report (by Mr. LE FEVRE) was read, as follows:

The Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 603) granting a pension to Rachel Nickell, beg leave to report as follows:

That the proof shows conclusively that Rachel Nickell is the dependent mother of Asbury S. Nickell, who enlisted as a private in Company I, Forty-seventh Kentucky Mounted Infantry, although the soldier's name does not appear on the muster-rolls.

The proof shows that he, in company with other soldiers, was detailed and sent on a scout, and that while in the performance of duty, Asbury S. Nickell was captured and killed by rebels or guerrillas on or about the 28th day of September, 1863. That Rachel Nickell never remarried, and is very old and in indigent circumstances.

In view of all the facts the committee recommend the passage of the bill.

The amendment reported by the committee is as follows:

Strike out the words "as shown by number two hundred and thirty-three thousand eight hundred and eighty-three, on file in the Pension Office" and insert "late Company I, Seventh Regiment Kentucky Mounted Infantry."

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. Mr. Chairman, I move that where the name occurs it be spelled "Nickell."

The amendment was agreed to.

There being no objection, the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

MARY J. DICKSON.

The next business upon the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 8237) granting a pension to Mary J. Dickson.

The bill was read:

The report (by Mr. HOLMES) was read, as follows:

Your Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8237) granting a pension to Mary J. Dickson, having had the same under consideration, report as follows:

"The claimant, Mary J. Dickson, asks a pension from Congress by special act, as dependent sister of Sylvester R. Dickson, who enlisted in Company A, Eighty-third Illinois Volunteer Infantry, in August, 1862, and was killed in a skirmish with the enemy while in line of duty on the 2d day of January, 1863, near Fort Donaldson, Tennessee. The claimant under the rules of the Pension Office can not obtain a pension, and has made no application in that direction. From the proofs on file it appears that the deceased soldier was never married, that at the time he enlisted as stated claimant was an invalid, and dependent upon him for support. That when he enlisted he willed claimant all his property, which amounted to about $1,000; and that after he went to the Army he sent her money for her support.

Claimant has never married, and during all the years since the soldier's enlistment has remained an invalid. She has long since exhausted the property her brother left her, and is without means and is unable to support herself. Her mother died in 1890, and her father in 1870, the latter remaining a widower after the death of his wife before referred to. Claimant states that she has three other brothers living, but two of them have no property save a few household goods, and neither of them own a homestead, and have no other property; that one of the brothers is 57 years of age, and the other is 66 years of age, both being in poor health.

The third brother has eighty acres of land, upon which he lives with his family, consisting of a wife and four children. That said farm is worth not to exceed $2,400, on which there is a mortgage of $900, besides numerous other debts. That he has but little personal property, and that only sufficient to work his farm. That he is in poor health and is not able to do any work, and is now 61 years old. She has no sister living. The statements of claimant are supported by those of many reputable citizens who have known claimant and her family for many years. There is, besides, a petition, signed by many of the leading men of the State, earnestly recommending her case to Congress for favorable action.

There being no objection, the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

ADDIE L. MOORE.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (H. R. 8155) granting a pension to Addie L. Moore.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll of the United States the name of Addie L. Moore, widow of Camillus A. Moore, late a private in Company E, Seventy-fourth Regiment Illinois Volunteers, subject to the limitations and provisions of the pension laws, to take effect from and after the passage of this act.

The report (by Mr. HOLMES) was read, as follows:

Your Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8155) granting a pension to Adeline L. Moore, having considered the same, report as follows:

The claimant is the widow of Camillus A. Moore, late a private in Company E, Seventy-fourth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry. He enlisted on August 14, 1862, and was discharged February 3, 1863. He died October 7, 1873. The soldier never filed an application for pension, but his widow, on the 24th of April, 1873, filed her application, which was finally rejected by the Pension Office on the 26th of February, 1883, on the ground that the disease of which the soldier died was not the result of his military service. It is shown by the proof on file at the Pension Office that the husband of claimant was discharged on surgeon's certificate of disability.

The certificate of disability and discharge both state that he is discharged "by reason of greatly impaired health, resulting from measles, followed by erysipelas, chronic diarrhoea and cough, that is very unpromising." The record of the Adjutant-General's Office shows that he was sick in hospital at Nashville, Tenn., since December 30, 1862, and was discharged on surgeon's certificate of disability at Nashville, Tenn., on the 3d day of February, 1863.

The evidence is uncontradicted that prior to his enlistment he was an able-bodied man, sound and healthy in every respect. The evidence of numerous witnesses shows that he was entirely broken in health at the time of his discharge, and was unable to do manual labor to any appreciable extent up to the time of his death.

The evidence of the physicians is somewhat conflicting as to the duration of his last sickness; some of them place it at three or four days, and one doctor as high as seventy-five days. The Pension Office decided the cause of his death to have been "cerebral hemorrhage." The evidence in his case would indicate that his death was the result or sequel of the same disabilities with which he was afflicted when he was discharged from the service. The fact shown that he was continuously ill, and that he had a pain in his head for years, together with the further symptoms narrated by the physicians and witnesses, further showing his continuous illness from the time of discharge to the time of his death, will combine, we think, to make a clear case for relief under the bill before your committee.

The soldier had formerly been married, but his first wife died and there were no children surviving as the result of their marriage. By the second wife (the claimant herein) there was born one child, namely, Howard Cornelius Moore, on the 14th of March, 1875.

The soldier seems to have performed his duty well until he was stricken down with the measles, and your committee think it but just that his widow and little child should receive a pension for the services in which he sacrificed his life. Your committee therefore report the bill back with the recommendation that it do pass.

There being no objection, the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

THOMAS R. WARE.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama, called up a bill (H. R. 8278) to remove the political disabilities of Thomas R. Ware, of Virginia.

The bill was read.

There being no objection, the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

Mr. MORRILL. In order that several Senate bills may be reported in the House from the Committee on Invalid Pensions I move that the committee rise, the purpose being that we shall again go into Committee of the Whole immediately.

Mr. STOCKSLAGER. Before that is done, I would like to call up several bills, two of them for the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. LAIRD], who is confined to his room by sickness.

Mr. MORRILL. Very well; I will withdraw the motion for a few moments.

WILLIAM H. HOUGHTON.

Mr. STOCKSLAGER. I call up the bill (H. R. 4026) for the relief of William H. Houghton.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, at the rate of $100 per month, the name of William H. Houghton, late a sergeant of Captain Sherman's company of Iowa Militia Volunteers, under the command of General Dodge, in the Black Hawk war, subject to the conditions and limitations of the pension laws.

The report (by Mr. STOCKSLAGER) is as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 4026) for the relief of William H. Houghton, respectfully report:

Mr. Houghton was sergeant in Captain Sherman's company of Iowa Volunteers in the Black Hawk war. Having lost his discharge, he was unable to share in the appropriation made by Congress for the payment of the soldiers of that war, and so far has been unable to get a pension for the disability which he incurred in the line of duty. And in justice to the worthy old veteran the committee recommend the passage of the bill, with an amendment striking out the words "at the rate of $100 per month."

The amendment reported by the Committee on Invalid Pensions, to strike out the words "at the rate of $100 per month," was read and agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

DELIA G. WEBBER.

Mr. STOCKSLAGER. I call up the bill (H. R. 7504) granting a pension to Delia G. Webber.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Delia G. Webber, widow of Louis Webber; and that the said Delia G. Webber and her children of a pensionable age receive the same pension which they would be entitled to if said Louis Webber had been a private soldier killed in the line of his duty, per month.

Sec 2. That paragraph 3 of section 4693 of the Revised Statutes shall not operate to prevent the granting of the above pension.

The report (by Mr. LAIRD) is as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7504) for the relief of Delia G. Webber and others, having had the same under consideration, respectfully report:

This bill seeks to extend the time within which Delia G. Webber, L. H. Aaron, Mary Anne Mesdall, they or their legal representatives, may file their applications for pensions under paragraph 3 of section 4693 of the Revised Statutes. The paragraph referred to is as follows:

"Any person not an enlisted soldier in the Army, serving for the time being as a member of the militia of any State, under orders of an officer of the United States, or who volunteered for the time being to serve with any regularly organized military or naval force of the United States, or who otherwise volunteered and rendered service in any engagement with rebels or Indians, disabled in consequence of wounds or injury received in the line of duty in such temporary service. But no claim of a State militiaman, or non-enlisted person, on account of disability from wounds or injury received in battle with rebels or Indians, while temporarily rendering service, shall be valid unless prosecuted to a successful issue prior to the 4th day of July, 1874."

Your committee recommend that the bill do pass. As to the above-named Delia G. Webber, your committee, finding the facts in her case on file, have reported a bill granting her a pension.

There being no objection, the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

VALINCA S. HUTCHINSON.

Mr. STOCKSLAGER. I also call up the bill (H. R. 3581) for the relief of Valina S. Hutchins.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll the name of Valina S. Hutchins, widow of Curtis C. Hutchins, formerly a member of Col. J. S. Calhoun's battalion of Georgia Mounted Volunteers, service of Mexican war, whose name through error was not carried on the roll, although enlisted in the service of the United States, and who died while in said service, the pension of said widow to date from application subject to the rules and limitations of the pension laws.

The report (by Mr. LAIRD) was as follows:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 3581) for the relief of Valina S. Hutchins, respectfully report:
It appears from the evidence that Curtis C. Hutchinson volunteered at Aurora, Lumpkin County, Georgia, on or about the 15th day of June, 1847, for five years of the war in a company formed at that place, and which was afterward known as Company F, commanded by Capt. Charles H. Nelson, in the Georgia Battalion of Mounted Volunteers, commanded by Colonel Calhoun, in the late war with Mexico. They marched to Cassville, Ga., where they were organized, and from thence marched to Columbus, Ga., where they joined the battalion, were mustered into service, and marched to Mexico and joined the United States Army and served to the close of the war.

While on the march from Cassville to Columbus, Ga., Hutchinson was taken sick from exposure on the road, and in four days died. He had always been a strong, healthy man. Your committee believe that he was in the line of duty when taken sick, and that his widow is entitled to a pension, and recommend that the bill (H. R. 3581) do pass with the following amendments:

In line 5 strike out the words "Valina S. Hutchins, widow of Curtis C. Hutchins," and insert the word "war," and lines 8, 9, and 10. Also amend the title of the bill by making it read "Valencia S. Hutchinson" instead of "Valina S. Hutchins." Also amend the bill to the same effect wherever said name occurs; also by changing the name of "Curtis C. Hutchins," where it occurs in line 5 of the bill, so that it shall read "Curtis C. Hutchinson."

The amendments stated in the concluding paragraph of the report were read and agreed to.

The bill as amended was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. GEORGE. I desire to call up the bill—

Mr. MATSON. I move that the committee rise.

Mr. GEORGE. I hope the gentleman will withhold that motion for a moment.

Mr. MATSON. I would do so, but I think the gentleman's bill will provoke discussion.

The motion of Mr. MATSON that the committee rise was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and Mr. BAGLEY having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. HATCH, of Missouri, reported that the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar had, according to order, had under consideration sundry bills on the Private Calendar reported by the Committee on Pensions and the Committee on Invalid Pensions, and also bills for the removal of political disabilities, and had directed him to report the same back to the House with various recommendations.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. RICE, by unanimous consent, obtained indefinite leave of absence from the 20th instant, on account of sickness.

MARY B. HOLMES.

Mr. MORRILL, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, reported back favorably the bill (S. 2607) granting a pension to Mary B. Holmes; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

ANNE T. DICKS.

Mr. MORRILL, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, also reported back favorably the bill (S. 1811) granting a pension to Anne T. Dicks; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

MARIA G. DUNBAR.

Mr. MORRILL also reported back adversely, from the Committee on Invalid Pensions, the bill (S. 993) for the relief of Maria G. Dunbar; which was referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the Private Calendar, and the accompanying report ordered to be printed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MORRILL. I now move that the House again resolve itself into Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar for the consideration of the business under the special order.

The motion was agreed to.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole on the Private Calendar, Mr. HATCH, of Missouri, in the chair.

MARY B. HOLMES.

The first business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 2607) granting a pension to Mary B. Holmes.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Mary B. Holmes, widow of Henry W. Holmes, late a lieutenant of Company F, Seventy-second Regiment, New York Volunteers, and allow her the same pension drawn by her husband during his life.

The report (by Mr. MORRILL) is as follows:

Your Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill S. 2607, granting a pension to Mary B. Holmes, submit the following report:

Your committee adopt the report of the Senate committee, which is herewith submitted. Cases similar to this have been repeatedly passed where it is shown as it is herein, that the disability incurred in the service contributed to his death. Your committee report the bill back with the recommendation that it pass:

"Petitioner is the widow of John W. Holmes, late a lieutenant, Company F, Seventy-second Regiment, New York Volunteers, who was pensioned at the rate of $15 per month on account of disability incurred in the service and resulting from disease of the eyes and chronic diarrhea. Her husband was killed by a freight train in New York city in 1881, and his widow is now destitute. She asks a pension on the ground that the accident which caused his death was the result of his defective vision and not of his own carelessness or neglect."

"The soldier's death under these circumstances did not, of course, result directly from his military service, but does seem to have been due to the disability incurred in the service, and to that extent was a result thereof. Taking this view of the case your committee are disposed to regard the claim as a meritorious one, and therefore recommend the passage of the bill."

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. I would like to ask what is the difference between the pension which this lady's husband drew and the pension which she would receive without any special provision of this kind?

Mr. MORRILL. There is no difference at all; but as the bill is drawn in this particular form we have not thought it worth while to change it.

There being no objection, the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

ANNE T. DICKS.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 1811) granting a pension to Anne T. Dicks.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll the name of Anne T. Dicks, widow of John W. Dicks, late an acting master in the United States Navy.

The report (by Mr. MORRILL) was as follows:

Your committee, to whom was referred the bill (S. 1811) granting a pension to Anne T. Dicks, submit the following report:

Your committee adopt the report of the Committee on Pensions of the Senate, which is herewith submitted, with the recommendation that the bill pass:

"The claimant is the widow of John W. Dicks, acting master United States Navy. The officer died of cancer superinduced by wounds and injuries received in the service."

"The evidence is clear to the committee that the constitution of this man was broken down and the entire digestive system prostrated and deprived of normal action by these causes, and that the fatal cancerous affection was a part of the results of the service."

There being no objection, the bill was laid aside to be reported to the House with the recommendation that it do pass.

MARIA G. DUNBAR.

The next business on the Private Calendar was the bill (S. 993) for the relief of Maria G. Dunbar, reported adversely from the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the Commissioner of Pensions is hereby authorized and directed to allow the claim of Maria G. Dunbar, widow of Moses C. Dunbar, late of the Twenty-seventh Regiment Massachusetts State Volunteers, for arrears of pensions: Provided, That she shall establish to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that an application for said arrears was filed by said Moses C. Dunbar within the time fixed by law, and failed of being forwarded to the Pension Office through no fault of said Dunbar.

The report (by Mr. MORRILL) is as follows:

Your Committee on Invalid Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (S. 993) for the relief of Maria G. Dunbar, submit the following report:

Your committee find that this bill proposes "to pay to Maria G. Dunbar arrears of pensions provided she shall establish to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that an application for said arrears was properly executed by Moses G. Dunbar within the time fixed by law and failed of being forwarded to the Pension Office through no fault of said Dunbar."

The facts, as she claims them, are that her husband made an application for pension several months prior to July, 1890; that through the carelessness of her attorney the papers were not filed until after the expiration of the limitation. This committee have again and again rejected cases of a similar character. The case of Nancy B. Leach, reported to the House a few days ago, is almost precisely like this, and your committee would refer to that report for their views in similar cases. Your committee report adversely, but ask that it be placed on the Calendar.

The CHAIRMAN. The report in this case being adverse, the question is, Shall the bill be laid aside to be reported to the House with a recommendation that it lie on the table?

Mr. LONG. Before the question is put, I wish to say that this is a very deserving case. If, however, the principle upon which it has been reported adversely is to be considered as settled, I do not propose to waste time by arguing the question.

It is a case in which the applicant was not at all responsible for delay in filing the application; but as appears very fully and clearly by the sworn evidence, the delay occurred in the first place in consequence of the fault of the attorney charged with the preparation of the papers; and then owing to his death there was still further delay. For this reason the papers were not filed in time to enable the applicant to receive the benefit of the arrears of pension. If this question has been settled in the Leach case, which was argued a week ago—

Mr. RAY, of New Hampshire. That case is still pending before the Committee of the Whole; it has not been acted on finally. There was an adverse report in that case.

Mr. LONG. If that case has not been acted on, then I should like this to take the same course and be laid aside informally.

Mr. RAY, of New Hampshire. I have not thought it proper to press the Leach case so long as there were favorable reports on Senate bills to be acted on, as I did not wish to take up the time of the Committee of the Whole in discussion.

Mr. LONG. I ask that this bill be laid aside informally to await the determination of the question in the other case.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection this bill will be laid aside informally. The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered.

Mr. MATSON. I move that the committee now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and Mr. BAGLEY having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, Mr. HATCH, of Missouri, reported that the Committee of the Whole House had had under consideration, pursuant to order, sundry bills on the Private Calendar, and had directed him to report the same back to the House with various recommendations.

DAVID M. NAGLE.

On motion of Mr. JAMES, by unanimous consent, the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5543) granting a pension to David M. Nagle were taken from the Speaker's table and concurred in.

 - A bill (S. 2316) granting a pension to Mrs. Cordelia Brainerd Thomas.
- A bill (S. 1960) for the relief of Mary Howard Farquhar, reported adversely, was laid on the table.

Mr. VAN ALSTYNE moved to reconsider the votes just taken; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Bills of the following titles were severally ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, were accordingly read the third time, and passed:

- A bill (H. R. 8237) granting a pension to Mary J. Dickson;
- A bill (H. R. 8155) granting a pension to Addie L. Moore; and

- A bill (H. R. 603) granting a pension to Rachel Nickell; and
- A bill (H. R. 3581) for the relief of Valincia S. Hutchinson.

In the two latter cases the titles also were amended.

By unanimous consent, the following House bills with Senate amendments were taken from the Speaker's table and the Senate amendments severally concurred in, namely:

- A bill (H. R. 5364) granting a pension to William H. Whitcomb; and
- A bill (H. R. 7617) granting a pension to Mrs. Ann E. Gridley.

Mr. MATSON moved to reconsider the several votes by which the House pension bills were passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. MATSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask the indulgence of the House for a few moments. On last Friday evening I stated that the business of the pension committees of the House was concluded for this Congress.

At that time I neglected to say what ought to have been said and what I now wish to say, that the Committee on Invalid Pensions, the Committee on Pensions, and I think the House itself, as well as the soldiers throughout this country, are much indebted to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HATCH], who has presided at these evening sessions every single Friday evening with the exception of one night, when he was necessarily and unavoidably absent, during the entire Congress, and has given the most faithful and untiring service to the House and to the interests of the soldiers in passing these pension bills. I feel, therefore, as if this mark of recognition ought to be given to him.

I now move, Mr. Speaker, that the House adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at 10 o'clock and 20 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned.

SENATE.

SATURDAY, February 28, 1885.

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. E. D. HUNTLEY, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

Mr. HALE. I rise to present a privileged report—the conference report upon the agricultural appropriation bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is under the impression that the higher privilege is the laying before the Senate bills from the House of Representatives and other formal matters on the table.

Mr. HALE. I wish to get the conference report out of the way as soon as possible, because I am engaged in the Committee on Appropriations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the Senator asks unanimous consent the Chair will put the question, but the Chair thinks under the rules it is the duty of the Chair to lay before the Senate two or three House bills that are on the table.

Mr. HALE. It is not of importance enough for me to insist. I do not make any request at present.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, in response to a resolution of the 20th instant, sundry papers relating to the claim of William Ward for professional services in suits against the United States revenue-steamer William H. Seward. If there be no objection the letter will be printed, and, with the accompanying papers, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. MITCHELL. I move that the communication be referred to the Committee on Appropriations. An amendment relating to the matter is pending before that committee. It is desired to insert a provision in the sundry civil appropriation bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, the papers will be referred to the Committee on Appropriations without printing. The Chair hears no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Attorney-General, urging that the estimates heretofore made for fees of jurors, witnesses, marshals, and district attorneys, for the year 1885, may be provided for in the deficiency appropriation bill, and inclosing a letter from the First Comptroller of the Treasury on the subject; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a report of the allowance by the accounting officers of the Treasury of the twenty-third installment of the war claims of the State of Ohio, now awaiting an appropriation for its payment; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, with accompanying report of Col. C. E. Blunt, Corps of Engineers, relative to the improvement of the Coheco River at Dover, N. H.; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

RETURN OF BILLS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate three joint resolutions which passed the Senate day before yesterday, concerning the printing of certain documents, which were returned to the Senate at its request from the House of Representatives. The titles of the joint resolutions will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Joint resolution (S. R. 127) to authorize the printing of the reports of the Bureau of Ethnology;

Joint resolution (S. R. 128) to authorize the printing of the reports of the Geological Survey; and Joint resolution (S. R. 129) to authorize the printing of the reports of the Geological Survey.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection the votes of the Senate passing these joint resolutions will be reconsidered, and they will be referred to the Committee on Printing. The Chair understands that precisely identical resolutions have already passed both Houses.

PUBLIC-LAND DECISIONS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution from the House of Representatives; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the United States (the Senate concurring), That there be printed 3,500 copies of the first and second volumes of Decisions Relating to the Public Lands, prepared under the direction of the Department of the Interior, of which 1,000 shall be for the use of members of the Senate, 2,000 for the use of the members of the House of Representatives, and 500 for the use of the Department of the Interior.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HALE. If the Chair has found no further objection, I will present the report of the conference committee on the agricultural appropriation bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair has found no objection at all to the presentation of the report.

Mr. HALE. I did not insist on the report being received after the reading of the Journal, but the reason why I presented it at that time I thought I found in Rule XXVII, which I ask may be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Rule XXVII will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

REPORTS OF CONFERENCE COMMITTEES.

The presentation of reports of committees of conference shall always be in order except when the Journal is being read or a question of order or a motion to adjourn is pending, or while the Senate is dividing; and when received, the question of proceeding to the consideration of the report, if raised, shall be immediately put, and shall be determined without debate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair had reference, if the Senator from Maine will pardon him, to the seventh rule, which is positively affirmative, requiring the Chair to lay before the Senate before the call for petitions, immediately after the reading of the Journal, bills and resolutions from the House of Representatives, messages from the President, &c. The Chair was under the impression that this privileged business on the table would precede the report of a committee of conference. Perhaps the Chair is wrong, but the Chair thought so.

Mr. HALE. I have sent up the papers. I ask that the report be read.

The Chief Clerk read the report, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8000) "making an appropriation for the Agricultural Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes," having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 17, 18, and 19.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 10, 11, 13, 14, 15, 16, 20, 21, 22, and 23, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 8, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$25,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 9, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$32,900;" and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 12, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$40,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a memorial of the Legislature of Dakota Territory, urging the passage of an act reducing the price of all public lands now held at $2.50 per acre to the standard rate of $1.25 per acre; which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.
 He also presented a telegraphic memorial of the Grand Army of the Republic, Department of New Mexico, urging the passage of the bill placing U. S. Grant upon the retired-list of the Army; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. BAYARD. I present the petition of Gideon J. Tucker, a citizen of New York, in which he calls attention to certain inaccurate statements of a historical character in a book which has been published by the United States; and because I know of no committee which may be considered properly charged with this subject, I will ask that the petition be read. It is entirely respectful in form, and perhaps the object of the petitioner will be better reached by this publicity.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair hears no objection, and the petition will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America:

The petition of Gideon J. Tucker, a citizen of the State of New York, respectfully shows as follows:

I ask the attention of the Congress of the United States to a book purporting to have been prepared and published under its authority, the title of which is: The Public Domain: its history, with statistics. Public Land Commission; Committee on Codification. Prepared by Thomas Donaldson, of the commission and committee. . . . Prepared in pursuance of a joint resolution of Congress approved August 7, 1882. Washington: Government Printing Office, 1884.

At page 30 of this book, under the heading of "Chapter 2: English Colonization in America," are the following statements:

"1609. Discovery and exploration of the Hudson River, as far as latitude 30 degrees north, by Hendrick Hudson, holding a commission from the King of England, but in the service of the States-General of Holland.

"1630. The Dutch applied for and obtained permission from James I to 'build some cottages' on Manhattan Island, at the mouth of Hudson's River, and under this license they settled a colony, which they called 'New Amsterdam,' now New York."

And, at page 35, the compiler of this book refers to (among others) Bancroft's History of the United States as an "authority" for the statements contained in "Chapter 2."

I respectfully submit to the Congress of the United States that the above-quoted statements are notoriously incorrect, unhistorical, and untrue in fact; that the discovery of the Hudson River and the settlement of the colony of New Netherlands were not in any sense an English colonization; that Hendrick Hudson held no commission from the King of England, nor was such discovery made by him while in the service of the States-General of Holland, but while in the employ and at the cost of members of the Dutch East India Company; that King James I of England was not applied to by the Dutch for permission to "build some cottages" on Manhattan Island, and never gave such permission, but, on the contrary, Dutch forts and dwellings were on the island before 1614; and that the settlement of New Amsterdam was not made "under license" from the King of England, or by permission of any but the native Indian sachems, from whom the land was purchased.

And I further respectfully submit that no warrant or authority for any of these false statements can be found in Bancroft's History of the United States, or in any other authentic history of the discovery and first settlement at the "mouth of Hudson's River."

I respectfully suggest that it touches the dignity of your honorable bodies that these false statements of historical occurrences should have been put forth to the world in a book covered with the sanction of the Congress of the United States. It touches your dignity that history should be falsified and buried in your name. At least 2,000,000 of the American citizens of to-day are descended from the immigrants who came from Holland and its neighboring States between the years 1613 and 1664, which immigrants are represented by this book, bearing the official stamp of the Congress, to have been either interlopers and intruders upon English ground, or else to have settled under the license and permission of their enemy, the King of England.

I respectfully ask that some official action be taken by the Congress in correction and disavowal of these false statements, and in vindication of the truth of history.

GIDEON J. TUCKER,
 No. 120 Nassau street, New York city.

Mr. BAYARD. Perhaps the petition had better be referred to the Committee on the Library.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be referred to the Committee on the Library.

Mr. SHERMAN. I present the petition of a large number of citizens of Ohio, praying for the passage of the bill commonly known as the Mexican war pension bill. As that bill is now pending in the House of Representatives, I move that the petition lie on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. VAN WYCK presented a petition of the Nebraska Woman Suffrage Association, praying Congress to submit to the people of the several States, through their Legislatures, an amendment to the National Constitution prohibiting the United States, or any State, from disfranchising citizens on account of sex; which was referred to the Committee on Woman Suffrage.

Mr. MITCHELL. I present a resolution of the Legislature of Pennsylvania, favoring the passage of the Mexican war pension bill. As the bill is still pending in the House of Representatives, I move that the resolution lie on the table.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL presented a petition of Thomas C. Hand, president of the Delaware Marine Fire Insurance Company, William A. Platt, vice-president of the Insurance Company of North America, and other inland marine underwriters of Philadelphia, Pa., praying that the United States Government acquire the ownership of the two canals crossing Point Keweenaw, Lake Superior, Michigan; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. CALL. I present the petition of Hiram J. Simonton, a citizen of the State of Florida, and a resident of San Antonio, in the county of Hernando. The petition is as follows:

Your petitioner, Hiram J. Simonton, of San Antonio, county of Hernando, State of Florida, respectfully represents that—

Whereas Congress, by an act approved May 17, 1856 (11 Statutes, page 15), granted to the State of Florida, to aid in the construction of certain railroads in said State (by a company then known as the Florida Railroad Company, and now styled the Florida Railway and Navigation Company), a tract of land, fully set forth and described in said act as extending from Amelia Island, on the Atlantic, to the waters of Tampa Bay, in South Florida, with an extension to Cedar Keys, in East Florida, with limitation to ten years from the date thereof, to complete said roads over the said tract; and

Whereas it is now nearly twenty-nine years since the passage of said act, the said company has not completed a road over that portion of the said tract described as extending from Amelia Island, on the Atlantic, to the waters of Tampa Bay, in South Florida; and

Whereas, notwithstanding your honorable bodies have, at your session last past, taken steps looking to the forfeiture of said grant, the said company has continued to operate the same, and in a manner detrimental to the interests of your petitioner and hundreds of other settlers thereon, to the interests of the State and of the United States, as follows:

That the company, on or about the 1st day of December last, in the person of one S. I. Wailes, land commissioner for the same, proceeded to dispose of, at public sale, the lands occupied by your petitioner and all the settlers residing in his vicinity;

That the company appraised the lands at their improved value, and the settlers had either to pay for their own improvements, which they have established with great toil and pecuniary cost, or permit their little homes (perhaps their all on earth) to pass into the hands of a stranger—a mercenary speculator;

That many of the settlers were too poor to pay the exorbitant price set upon their lands, and many others refrained from purchasing, being so advised by Hon. H. M. Teller, Secretary of the Interior, in an open communication dated June 9, 1884;

That as a consequence of this condition of affairs, the company being predisposed to sell to the party or parties who would purchase in large quantities and pay cash, large tracts of land passed into the hands of parties who have no interest in the soil beyond mere speculation;

That these lands will be held at a price far beyond their present value, and, consequently, will not be purchased by actual settlers and cultivated for many years to come;

Now, therefore, in view of said grievances, your petitioner would respectfully but earnestly pray your honorable bodies to pass, at the earliest date possible, a resolution prohibiting such further operations on the part of said company, of the nature herein complained of, until such time as you shall have an opportunity to make known your further intention in the premises.

I ask that the petition be laid upon the table, and I give notice that at the close of the morning hour on Monday, if not sooner, I shall ask of the Senate the privilege of making some remarks upon the subject.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The petition will lie on the table.

Mr. DAWES. I present a memorial submitted in behalf of the Stockbridge tribe of Indians, by J. C. Adams, of Stockbridge, in the State of Wisconsin, protesting against the passage of House bill 2889, and against a claim set up in their own behalf in Senate Miscellaneous Document 119 of this Congress. The memorialists ask that this memorial may be printed, as that document has been printed, and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs. I do not know exactly how it may be put in the form of a document. It is very desirable that it should be printed. If it can be printed in the form of a miscellaneous document I will ask that it be so printed. It is in answer to a public document sent up in their own behalf, and they protest against the claim made upon the United States Government in their own behalf. I do not know exactly the merits of Miscellaneous Document 119. It is a very long document, which has just come into my hands.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. What disposition does the Senator from Massachusetts desire of the memorial?

Mr. DAWES. I ask that it may be printed in document form.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be printed in document form, under the ordinary order, if ordered to be printed at all. The Senator from Massachusetts moves that the memorial be printed and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. PLUMB presented a memorial of the Legislature of Kansas; which was referred to the Committee on Pensions, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Whereas it is the first duty of government to honor and provide for the welfare and comfort of those who voluntarily offer their lives in defense of their country; and

Whereas only a fractional portion of the brave men who have faithfully served the United States in the Army and Navy prior to and during the late rebellion are now living: Therefore,

Be it resolved by the house of representatives (senate concurring therein). That our Senators in Congress be instructed, and our Representatives respectively requested, to introduce and aid in securing the passage of a law granting all un-pensioned and honorably discharged soldiers and sailors of the United States, who did not give aid and comfort to the rebellion, and who are physically disabled for the active duties of life by reason of disease, accident, or any other good and sufficient cause, or who have arrived at the age of 50 years, a reasonable pension.

Resolved, That the secretary of state is hereby requested to forward to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress a certified copy hereof.

I, E. B. ALLEN, secretary of state of the State of Kansas, do hereby certify that the above and foregoing is a true and correct copy of the original resolution now on file in my office.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto subscribed my name and affixed my official seal. Done at Topeka, Kans., this 24th day of February, A. D. 1885.

(SEAL.)

E. B. ALLEN,
Secretary of State.

SOCIETY OF THE RED CROSS.

Mr. LAPHAM. The Committee on Foreign Relations have instructed me to report back Executive Document 59, being a message from the President communicating to Congress the report of the delegates on behalf of the United States to the international convention of the Society of the Red Cross at Geneva in September last, with an accompanying resolution, and I ask for the present consideration of the resolution. I wish to state that I have inquired, and learn that the expense of the printing provided for by the resolution will be only about $50. I ask that the resolution be now adopted, so that it may go to the other House for consideration there.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New York reports from the Committee on Foreign Relations a message from the President of the United States hitherto referred to that committee, together with a concurrent resolution. The resolution will be read.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate of the United States (the House of Representatives concurring). That there be printed for the Department of State 5,000 copies of Executive Document No. 59, being the report of the delegates on behalf of the United States to the third international convention of the Society of the Red Cross at Geneva in September last, and the message of the President transmitting the same to Congress.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

WILLIAM G. FORD.

Mr. JACKSON. The Committee on Claims have instructed me to report back the bill (S. 2653) for the relief of S. S. Webb & Co., for the use of William G. Ford, with an amendment striking out the second section of the bill, and accompanying it with a resolution to refer the claim to the Court of Claims. I ask for the immediate consideration of the bill and resolution.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Tennessee asks unanimous consent that the bill be now considered. Is there objection?

Mr. BLAIR. I reserve the right to object if there is discussion.

Mr. JACKSON. There is no question about it.

Mr. BLAIR. All right.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It refers to the Court of Claims the claim of S. S. Webb & Co., for the use of William G. Ford, for the proceeds of fifty bales of cotton, containing 25,568 pounds, seized under the captured and abandoned property act, at Mobile, Ala., in May, 1865, by Acting Quartermaster Samuel Lappin, and shipped by him on the bark Ada Carter to the chief quartermaster at New York and sold, and the proceeds paid into the Treasury.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Claims with an amendment, to strike out section 2, in the following words:

SEC. 2. That the evidence heretofore taken in the case and filed in the Treasury Department, and the evidence and papers on file before Congress, shall be admitted and heard by the court the same as if taken over again under the rules and orders of the court; and either party may take additional testimony, and shall have the right of appeal as in other cases.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will now lay before the Senate the resolution which is to dispose of the bill without its passage, as the Chair understands the committee to desire.

Mr. JACKSON. Yes, sir.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be read.

The Chief Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved. That the claim of S. S. Webb & Co., for the use of William G. Ford, as embraced in Senate bill 2653 of the Forty-eighth Congress, be referred, in accordance with the provisions of section 1059 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, to the Court of Claims, together with the papers, vouchers, proofs, and documents appertaining thereto.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

MOQUELAMOS GRANT IN CALIFORNIA.

Mr. MANDERSON. There was referred to the Committee on Printing a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, in response to a Senate resolution, papers on file in his Department relating to the Moquelamos grant in California. The question presented to the committee was whether these accompanying papers should be printed. Upon investigation it is ascertained that the printing of the papers, which pertain to a private grant, would cost nearly $1,400. The committee report adversely, and ask that the papers simply be kept on the files of the Senate and not printed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nebraska, from the Committee on Printing, reports adversely to printing the papers transmitted by the Secretary of the Interior in response to a Senate resolution of February 5, 1885, on file in his Department, relating to the Moquelamos grant in California. If there be no objection the report will be considered as agreed to and the papers placed on file.

SENATE MANUAL.

Mr. MANDERSON, from the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the following resolution, reported it without amendment, and it was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That there be printed and bound for the use of the Senate, under the direction of the Committee on Rules, 1,000 additional copies of the revised Senate Manual.

AGRICULTURAL REPORT FOR 1885.

Mr. MANDERSON. Yesterday, from the Committee on Printing, I reported favorably a joint resolution for printing the annual report of the Commissioner of Agriculture, which is a House resolution. I ask unanimous consent that it may now be considered. It is important that it should pass and become a law.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution (H. Res. 342) to authorize the printing of 400,000 copies of the annual report of the Commissioner of Agriculture for the year 1885.

The joint resolution was reported from the Committee on Printing with amendments.

The first amendment was, in line 3, before the word "thousand," to strike out "four hundred" and insert "three hundred and ten;" so as to read:

That there be printed 310,000 copies of the annual report of the Commissioner of Agriculture for the year 1885.

Mr. MORRILL. I ask the Senator from Nebraska whether he has not made a mistake as to the date of the report? Ought it not to be the report for 1884 instead of 1885?

Mr. MANDERSON. No; the printing of the report for 1884 was ordered at the last session of Congress. The reports are ordered a year ahead.

Mr. MORRILL. Very well, if the Senator is sure he is right.

Mr. COCKRELL. We can not hear a word on this side of the Chamber.

Mr. MANDERSON. The date is correct. The Agricultural Report for 1884 was ordered to be printed at the last session of Congress. This is the report for the present year, and provision is now made so that it may be issued by the next session.

Mr. COCKRELL. I should like to ask the Senator from Nebraska how many copies were ordered to be printed last year of the Agricultural Report for 1884?

Mr. MANDERSON. Four hundred thousand copies, I am told by the clerk of the Printing Committee.

Mr. COCKRELL. How were they distributed between the Senate and House?

Mr. MANDERSON. In accordance with the requirements of the House resolution.

Mr. COCKRELL. What was that?

Mr. MANDERSON. Three hundred thousand copies to the House of Representatives, 70,000 copies to the Senate, and 30,000 copies to the Department of Agriculture.

Mr. COCKRELL. I suppose the Senate committee then yielded all the rights of the Senate in the matter and let the House have its own way.

Mr. MANDERSON. If the Senator from Missouri will examine the present report of the Committee on Printing he will see that we recommend that the number to the House of Representatives be cut down 90,000 copies.

Mr. COCKRELL. How do you propose to distribute these 310,000 copies?

Mr. MANDERSON. By the amendment 210,000 copies to the House, 70,000 copies to the Senate, and 30,000 copies to the Department of Agriculture, thus giving to the Senate about one-third of the number supplied to the House.

Mr. COCKRELL. Not quite a third.

Mr. MANDERSON. Exactly a third—seventy to two hundred and ten.

Mr. COCKRELL. There will be 280,000 printed for the Senate and House. One-third of that number would be over 90,000. I therefore move to amend the joint resolution to make the number conform to what we require, and what I think the Senate has repeatedly decided that we required in other cases. I see no reason why such an enormous number more should be given to the House of this particular document. We have calls for it from the whole of our States, and I think we ought to have an increased number. The number is disproportioned. We are to have 70,000 and they 210,000. Ordinarily we have one-third of the whole number and they two-thirds. Apply that rule and it would give us 93,000; but if the joint resolution proposes to give to the Senate the same number as was heretofore given in 1883 and 1884, and simply reduces the number to the House, and if other Senators are satisfied, I shall make no further objection. I wish to be sure, however, that we are to have the same number that we had last year.

Mr. MANDERSON. That is as the committee understands it. The Senate has the same number and the House a reduced number by the amendments proposed by the Committee on Printing.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment of the Committee on Printing will be again read.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 3, before the word "thousand," it is proposed to strike out "four hundred" and insert "three hundred and ten;" so as to read:

That there be printed 310,000 copies of the annual report of the Commissioner of Agriculture for the year 1885.

The amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The next amendment reported by the Committee on Printing will be read:

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 6, before the word "thousand," the committee report to strike out "three hundred" and insert "two hundred and ten;" so as to read:

Two hundred and ten thousand copies for the use of members of the House of Representatives.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is the Senate ready for the question on agreeing to this amendment? If there be no objection—

Mr. MORRILL. I think the Senator from Missouri proposed an amendment to that amendment.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the joint resolution be read as proposed to be amended by the Committee on Printing. Let it be read as amended.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The last amendment has not been acted upon. The Senator from Vermont addressed the Chair, and the Chair suspended putting the question. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. MORRILL. I think the Senator from Missouri proposed an amendment to this amendment, giving the Senate a larger number and the House a less number than was proposed by the Committee on Printing.

Mr. COCKRELL. How many copies are provided for the Senate?

Mr. MANDERSON. Seventy thousand for the Senate.

Mr. COCKRELL. I move to amend by giving the Senate 80,000 copies and the House 200,000 copies.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri moves to amend the amendment. The amendment to the amendment will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 6 of the proposed amendment strike out the words "and ten;" so as to read:

Two hundred thousand copies for the use of members of the House of Representatives.

And in line 7 strike out "seventy" and insert "eighty;" so as to read:

Eighty thousand for the use of members of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the first amendment proposed by the Senator from Missouri to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question now is on agreeing to the amendment as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The next amendment proposed by the Senator from Missouri will be again read.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 7, before the word "thousand," strike out "seventy" and insert "eighty;" so as to read:

Eighty thousand for the use of members of the Senate.

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the joint resolution to be read a third time.

The joint resolution was read the third time, and passed.

The title was amended to read: "A joint resolution to authorize the printing of 310,000 copies of the annual report of the Commissioner of Agriculture for the year 1885."

BILLS RECOMMITTED.

Mr. GORMAN. For the purpose of having the bill recommitted to the Committee on Indian Affairs, I move to take up the bill (S. 1963) for the relief of J. G. Fell, Edward Harper, and George Burnham. There is an error in the bill as reported, and some members of the committee desire to further consider it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maryland asks unanimous consent to take up the bill indicated by him. The Chair hears no objection, and it is before the Senate.

Mr. GORMAN. I move that the bill be recommitted to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

The motion was agreed to.

MOSES F. CARLETON.

Mr. CONGER. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6089) for the relief of Moses F. Carleton. It is for the benefit of a soldier.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes to pay to Moses F. Carleton, late of Company I, Fourth Michigan Infantry Volunteers, the pay and allowances of a second lieutenant of infantry from October 24, 1865, until June 12, 1866, deducting therefrom the pay he received as sergeant of infantry.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BACKBONE RAILROAD GRANT.

Mr. HILL. I call for the regular order, the regular morning business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The regular order is "reports of committees," although, the hour of 12 o'clock having passed, it is in order for any Senator to move to take up any bill.

Mr. HILL. I merely wish to offer a resolution for reference. I ask unanimous consent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Colorado asks unanimous consent to present a resolution at this time. If there be no objection it will be received and read.

The Chief Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That it is the opinion of the Senate that no patents should issue to the assignee of the New Orleans, Baton Rouge and Vicksburg Railroad Company to the lands granted to the said company until the Senate has acted upon the pending bill relating to that subject.

Mr. HILL. I believe there is urgent necessity that the resolution should be acted upon at once, and I trust the Committee on Public Lands will act upon it promptly. I therefore move its reference to that committee.

The motion was agreed to.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Mr. MITCHELL. I wish to offer a resolution at this time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The order of resolutions is not yet reached. Are there further "reports of committees?" If there be none, that order is closed. The "introduction of bills" is in order.

The Chair thinks it is his duty now to lay before the Senate for action a bill of the House, which was read the first time yesterday and objection was made to its second reading. The Chair is not at all clear under the rules whether the bill now belongs on the Calendar or should be laid before the Senate at this time. In this state of doubt the Chair will lay the bill before the Senate for its action; and the question will be, unless it be objected to or a point of order raised, whether the bill shall be read the second time. The Chair hears no objection to that question being now put. The question is, Shall the bill be read the second time?

Mr. BLAIR. What is the name of the bill?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The river and harbor bill.

Mr. BLAIR. That will be simply for reference, I suppose.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair supposes so. It can not be debated until after its second reading.

Mr. INGALLS. I should like to have it read the second time at length.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be read the second time at length if there be no objection.

Mr. BLAIR. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made to the second reading. The question is, Shall the bill be read the second time? [Putting the question.]

Mr. BLAIR. If it is a short bill I withdraw the objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is putting the question. The ayes have it, and the bill will be read the second time at length, as the Senator from Kansas desires.

The bill (H. R. 8260) making appropriations for the preservation and continuation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, was read the second time at length, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That there is hereby appropriated, to be paid out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and to be expended under the direction and with the approval of the Secretary of War, for the preservation and continuation of such of the uncompleted public works mentioned and designated for improvement in an act entitled "An act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes," approved July 5, 1884, the sum of $5,000,000, which sum of $5,000,000 shall be applied by the Secretary of War to each of said public works, respectively, in proportion to the sums appropriated for such works in and by the said act: Provided, That no more shall be thus allotted than is sufficient for the completion of said works under the present estimates: Provided, That the work at the harbor of Galveston, Tex., shall be treated as if the sum of $250,000 had been appropriated for said harbor of Galveston by said act: And provided further, That any money which shall be allotted under this act for the improvement of the Mississippi River below Cairo, except so much thereof as it shall be necessary to expend in preventing the works in progress on other portions of the river from waste and injury, shall be expended in the continuation and completion of the works on the Plum Point and Lake Providence reaches of the river now in progress of improvement, as established by the commission, to the end that the progress shall be completed at an early day, and the plan of said commission for the improvement of the navigation of the river fully tested; and the money thus allotted by this act for the improvement of the Mississippi River shall be expended by the Secretary of War and in accordance with plans approved by him.

Mr. McMILLAN. I move that the bill be referred to the Committee on Commerce.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. McMILLAN. I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Commerce have leave to sit during the sessions of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. INGALLS in the chair). That order will be entered if there be no objection.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Mr. MANDERSON introduced a bill (S. 2667) making appropriation for the improvement of the Missouri River at or near Omaha, Nebr., and Council Bluffs, Iowa; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on the Improvement of the Mississippi River.

Mr. BLAIR introduced a bill (S. 2668) granting a pension to John M. Milton; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pensions.

Mr. SHERMAN introduced a bill (S. 2669) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to issue a duplicate certificate of deposit to the People's National Bank of Lawrenceburg, Ind.; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. COLQUITT introduced a bill (S. 2670) to remove the political disabilities of John W. Nixon, of Georgia; which was read twice by its title, and, with the accompanying petition, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SARAH M. BISSELL.

Mr. BLAIR. I ask unanimous consent of the Senate to take up Calendar No. 1300, being the bill (H. R. 6940) granting a pension to Sarah M. Bissell.

Mr. HARRIS. I call for the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that it is in order under the rule at this hour for the Senator from New Hampshire to either ask unanimous consent or to move to proceed to the consideration of any bill on the Calendar.

Mr. HARRIS. There is no question about the right of the Senator to make such a motion; but I call for the regular order, which is an objection to unanimous consent.

Mr. BLAIR. I move to take up the bill referred to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire moves that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6940) granting a pension to Sarah M. Bissell.

Mr. MITCHELL. I desire to offer a resolution. I can not do so, as I understand it, if that bill is taken up now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It may be offered by unanimous consent.

Mr. BLAIR. If the motion is in order, I have no objection to a resolution being offered for reference, but I wish to make progress with this and a few other cases of the kind, and I think the Senator ought not to obstruct them.

Mr. MITCHELL. I do not desire to obstruct any motion to take up a pension bill, but I want to present a resolution which I understand to be in order now, and I must object to anything else being interposed.

Mr. BLAIR. Is the resolution proposed for action?

Mr. MITCHELL. It is a resolution that calls for action unless objection be made.

Mr. BLAIR. I ask for action on my motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. BLAIR].

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 6940) granting a pension to Sarah M. Bissell. It proposes to place on the pension-roll the name of Sarah M. Bissell, widow of Commodore Simon B. Bissell, late of the United States Navy, at $50 per month.

Mr. HARRIS. Is that bill reported favorably or unfavorably?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is reported unfavorably.

Mr. BLAIR. Let the report be read. The bill is for the widow of a rear-admiral. It is like half a dozen other cases passed yesterday giving pensions of $50 a month. There are three or four others, and I desire that they may be disposed of and off my mind.

Mr. COCKRELL. I ask for the reading of the adverse report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read.

Mr. BLAIR. I hope the Senate will listen to the report.

The Secretary read the following report, submitted by Mr. BLAIR February 20, 1885:

The Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 6940) granting a pension to Sarah M. Bissell, have examined the same, and report recommending the indefinite postponement of the bill.

The record and other facts are printed below. The commodore was in the service from 1826 until 1883.

[House report No. 2066, Forty-eighth Congress, first session.]

The committee have given Mrs. Bissell's case thoughtful consideration, and are convinced that no more deserving claim has come before Congress. Mrs. Bissell is the widow of the late Commodore Simon B. Bissell, who gallantly and faithfully served his country through a long and honorable career in the Navy, and now in utter helplessness she appeals for a pension barely sufficient to keep her from actual want. And in this connection the committee call attention to the following letter from that gallant patriot Admiral David D. Porter; it tells its own eloquent story. The committee make the said letter a part of this report:

OFFICE OF THE ADMIRAL, Washington, D. C., June 19, 1884.

MY DEAR SIR: Please accept my warmest thanks for your kind and encouraging letter regarding the pension of Mrs. Bissell.

I regret very much to hear that there is not a prospect of getting a bill through for the relief of Mrs. Bissell during the present session. The distress of this interesting family is the most dreadful that has come to my knowledge for many years.

It can scarcely be conceived that a person once holding Mrs. Bissell's position as the wife of a commodore in the Navy could be reduced to such poverty. Mrs. Bissell and her daughter have not a cent in the world. They have been obliged to sell every little article of value to purchase food. Fortunately they have a small house of their own in which they can hide their grief and their poverty.

I never knew until day before yesterday their actual destitute condition, and I yesterday sent them the first square meal they have had for two weeks.

Commodore Bissell, when he was retired, took his family abroad to a cheap place, where he was enabled to lay up a little from year to year. He put the money in the hands of a relative of his wife's to invest for her. After the commodore's death his family returned to America to find that all their savings which they had sent home had been made way with, and that absolute poverty stared them in the face. Their own relatives are unwilling to help them by a loan of even a dollar.

How they will get along God only knows, unless they can get this pension. It is not right that the family of an officer who so faithfully performed his duty, as did Commodore Bissell, should be suffering such extreme poverty from no fault of their own.

I hope you will excuse me for troubling you with this long story; but as you have interested yourself in the matter, and it comes under your cognizance, I thought it my duty to state to you the exact condition of this family. If anything could be done for them this session, it would be an act of mercy.

I am sure you have sympathy enough for this case to excuse my intrusion on your time, and I am glad to know that you consider the claim of Mrs. Bissell a just one.

I am about the only one who interests himself in the cases of the wives of old officers left by the death of their husbands in distress. I do so because I know their merits and demerits, and must be the last one to recommend any person for a pension who did not actually deserve it. These good people, Mrs. Bissell and her daughter, deserve more than ordinary consideration. Thanking you for your courtesy in finding time to write and give me such encouraging news for the future,

I have the honor to remain, very respectfully and truly, yours,

DAVID D. PORTER, Admiral.

Hon. G. W. HEWITT, M. C.,
Chairman Committee on Pensions,
United States House of Representatives.

The committee earnestly recommend the passage of the bill.

To the honorable the Senate of the United States:

I, the undersigned, widow of the late Commodore Simon B. Bissell, United States Navy, who died at Paris, France, February 18, 1883, respectfully appeal to your honorable body for the aid that has been granted to the widows of officers of the rank of my late husband, and pray the passage of the accompanying bill, granting me a pension of $50 per month. My necessities are such as to compel me to make this appeal in as urgent a form as possible. My age is 73, and the records of the Department will show the honorable career of my late husband, whose services covered a period of over fifty years, he having entered the Navy in 1823, having passed successively through all the grades to that of commodore on the active-list, in which latter grade he was honorably retired on attaining the age of 62. During his forty-seven years of active service he filled with credit all the positions to which a naval officer is ever assigned. In the grades through which he passed, and in whatever position he was placed, he left an unblemished record.

I append hereto the record of my late husband as transmitted to me from the Bureau of Navigation and Office of Detail, Navy Department. The petitioner begs that her prayer may be granted.

SARAH M. BISSELL.

The petitioner begs to add that Congress has on many occasions made precedents. Not to go further back than 1876, the following instances are cited in which this has been done: In 1876 to the widow of Commodore Elliott; in 1877 to the widows of Admirals Bell and Winslow; in 1878 to the widow of Admiral Wilkes; in 1879, of Commodores Frailey, Gallagher, and McKeever, and of Admiral Stringham; in 1880, of Admiral Davis; in 1881, of Admiral Paulding, and Commodores McOuley and Guest; and, finally, last winter and summer, to the widows of Admirals Goldsborough, Hoff, Reynolds, Lardner, Spotts, and Rodgers, and Commodore Wood.

SARAH M. BISSELL.

Mr. BLAIR. I only desire to add to the statement of Admiral Porter written last summer, with reference to the extreme need of Mrs. Bissell, that I have come personally to know that it is in no wise exaggerated even in its strongest statement. I hope that the bill will pass.

While I am on my feet—

Mr. COCKRELL. Will the Senator permit me to ask a question for information?

Mr. BLAIR. Certainly.

Mr. COCKRELL. Is Mrs. Bissell now drawing a pension?

Mr. BLAIR. I do not understand that she is. Her husband recently died and the application is made direct to Congress, as I understand, as in the case of Mrs. Alvord, whose husband died this last year.

Mr. COCKRELL. She would be entitled to $30 under the general law, would she not?

Mr. BLAIR. Under the general law she would, and under the universal custom, as these cases have been brought to Congress, to $50.

Mr. COCKRELL. That is where there has been any necessity for it.

Mr. BLAIR. Where there has been any necessity?

Mr. COCKRELL. Where there has been necessity, as I understood the Senator to say yesterday evening, $50 per month had been allowed.

Mr. BLAIR. I should like to say on that point that while the Senate has seen fit, and members of the Pensions Committee who have dissented from this class of bills have deemed fit, when personally interested in such cases, to recommend Congress to pass such bills for those of much lower rank, I have always insisted, and I claim that I am the conservative member of the committee in that regard, that this excessive pension should never be given except where there are special claims founded upon long service, distinguished service, and actual need. In cases where life has been taken and service has been very brief, I think death ought to be accounted as an equivalent to long service; but at all events distinguished service and actual need should be insisted on. I am the conservative member of the Committee on Pensions in that regard, and I should like the Senator from Missouri and everybody else to take notice accordingly.

Mr. COCKRELL. I am very much obliged for the information, for I am sure I would not, unless the Senator had called my attention to the fact, have formed the opinion which he has stated.

Mr. BLAIR. The Senator will pardon me.

Mr. COCKRELL. This is the question I want to ask: I see these papers speak of property. It seems these persons have a comfortable home. What is the value of the real estate?

Mr. BLAIR. It does not say they have a comfortable home. They have a house which they have inherited. I do not know the value of the house. I do not understand it to be a valuable house, one at all unsuitable to their condition in life.

The Senator will observe, of course, that this is a case where the statement of the details in a public way naturally affects a sensitive nature, and I did not desire myself the reading of the report; and yet where an application of this sort is made it is only right that the Senate, who must pass upon it, should know the details in full; and I state with reference to all the circumstances of this family, excepting the dwelling, in regard to which I do not know, that the letter of Admiral Porter is not exaggerated. I have come to know personally that his statements are by no means stronger than the truth.

Mr. JACKSON. Will the Senator from New Hampshire yield for a question?

Mr. BLAIR. Certainly.

Mr. JACKSON. Do the papers in this case show that the husband died of disease contracted in the service?

Mr. BLAIR. I do not know in regard to that. They show that he died in the year 1883, after over fifty years' service and forty-seven on the active-list.

Mr. JACKSON. After he had been on the retired-list a long while. Mr. BLAIR. He had been on the retired-list since 1873, I think, but had been performing actual duty much of the time after he was retired. He went abroad with leave to remain abroad, his absence being on account of his health, and finally died in Paris, France, in 1883.

With regard to the Senator's question as to whether Commodore Bissell died from disease contracted in the service, I will say that he died after he had obtained extreme old age, the whole of his life having been spent in the service of the United States. I know but very few instances where these pensions have been extended to $50 a month by special act where the death of the husband was traceable directly to anything but old age and the natural effect of long service. In some instances, to be sure, the death was attributable to the combined effect of wounds or disease contracted and extreme age, but as a rule in the cases we passed yesterday, the cases which we passed at the last session, and other cases still upon our Calendar, the prolonged service, the high rank, the distinguished character of the service, and the need of the party have been the basis on which I for one have urged the increase to $50.

Where the widow of an admiral has means to support herself in reasonable comfort I do not think she ought to receive anything more than the $30; in fact she ought to make out her case like a private in order to receive any pension whatever. The question which the Senator propounds would in such a case be a pertinent one.

Mr. CAMDEN. Mr. President, I feel it my duty to protest again, as I did yesterday, against this discrimination in increasing the pensions of one class of persons or of particular individuals over the report of the Pensions Committee, especially where there is no other ground for an increase than the necessity of the claimant. Now, it is a fact which all will recognize that of the thousands and thousands of pensioners enjoying the bounty of the Government there is not one single case in which the pensioner might not properly come before the Senate and ask an increase of pension upon the ground that the pension received is not sufficient to support him or her and his or her family.

By these precedents we are inviting every widow now upon the pension-roll of this Government to come before the Committee on Pensions and before Congress and ask for an increase. If we give it in one instance simply for meritorious services we set a precedent after which we can not well deny it to any other widow or any other claimant whose pension is not sufficient for his or her support. Thus you will bring before this committee hundreds and hundreds of cases that come with the same claim for an increase, urging the same reasons for an increase that have been sufficient in the other cases.

I think it is unwise, I think it is impolitic to multiply these precedents which are to be used against us in similar cases. The cases that we passed yesterday are precedents for the same class of cases to-day, and they will be precedents at future sessions of Congress for allowing an increase of many other pensions upon the same grounds.

Mr. President, is long service a good cause for increasing a pension? If the Government has for a great number of years furnished lucrative and high positions to any class of persons serving the Government, are they not as much under obligations to the Government for the positions afforded them as the Government is to support their families after their death? I do not see the propriety of such a marked distinction between the military and civil service of the Government. Whether one man served forty years, another fifty years, or another ten years, if they died in the service, they all alike have a meritorious record, because the simple fact of being in the service and dying in the service is evidence that they performed their duty well; they could not have remained in the service unless they had discharged their duty honestly and faithfully.

I desire to call attention particularly to the result of what is being done and to the evils that must flow from it.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, and read the third time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. CAMDEN. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. MITCHELL. I desire to say one word in regard to this bill. A number of cases similar to this have passed the Senate. So many of them have passed this body that I regard myself as instructed upon them. This I regard as one of the best cases we have considered, and I trust the Senate will pass the bill.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SAWYER (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Delaware (Mr. SAULSBURY). If he were here, I should vote "yea." My pair has been transferred; and I vote "yea."

The roll-call having been concluded the result was announced—yeas 24, nays 27; as follows:

YEAS—24.

Brown,	Dolph,	Lapham,	Morgan,
Call,	Edmonds,	McMillan,	Morrill,

So the bill was rejected.

Mr. BLAIR. I desire to enter a motion to reconsider the vote just taken.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Hampshire enters a motion to reconsider. Does he desire it acted on now?

Mr. VAN WYCK. I hope not now. Let the other bills be considered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from New Hampshire make the motion, or simply ask to enter it?

Mr. BLAIR. I simply enter the motion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion to reconsider is entered.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

A bill (H. R. 603) granting a pension to Rachel Nickell;
A bill (H. R. 3581) for the relief of Valincia S. Hutchinson;
A bill (H. R. 4026) for the relief of William H. Houghton;
A bill (H. R. 7504) granting a pension to Delia G. Webber.
A bill (H. R. 7907) granting a pension to Matilda Cody;
A bill (H. R. 8155) granting a pension to Addie L. Moore; and
A bill (H. R. 8237) granting a pension to Mary J. Dickson.

The message also announced that the House insisted upon its amendments to the bill (S. 84) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to ascertain the amounts due to citizens of the United States for supplies furnished to the Sioux or Dakota Indians of Minnesota subsequent to August, 1860, and prior to the massacre of August, 1862, and providing for the payment thereof, agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. OLIN WELLBORN of Texas, Mr. HORACE B. STRAIT of Wisconsin, and Mr. ROBERT S. STEVENS of New York managers at the conference on its part.

The message also announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5713) to provide for the settlement of the claims of officers and enlisted men of the Army for loss of private property destroyed in the military service of the United States, agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. W. S. ROSECRANS of California, Mr. ROBERT M. MURRAY of Ohio, and Mr. GEORGE W. STEELE of Indiana managers at the conference on its part.

ANSON B. SAMS.

Mr. VANCE. The Committee on Pensions reported adversely on a bill for the relief of one of my constituents, without my observing it. I ask to have the action on the adverse report reconsidered and the bill placed on the Calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senator state the title of the bill?

Mr. VANCE. A bill granting a pension to Anson B. Sams.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. How long is it since the bill was indefinitely postponed?

Mr. VANCE. Three days since, I think.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that the vote of the Senate indefinitely postponing the bill (H. R. 1127) granting a pension to Anson B. Sams be reconsidered, and that the bill be placed on the Calendar. The Chair hears no objection, and that order is made.

SUSPENSION OF SILVER COINAGE.

Mr. MITCHELL. I desire to offer a resolution. Is not that in order at this time?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will receive it, if there be no objection.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Whereas the commercial value of silver has so far depreciated that the standard silver dollars coined under the act of 1873 are now worth but 82 cents in the open market; and whereas the continued coinage of such depreciated dollars, now amounting to nearly $200,000,000, seriously threatens a suspension of gold payments by the Government from necessity, and the consequent banishment of gold coin from active circulation: Therefore,

Resolved, That the Committee on Finance be, and hereby is, instructed forthwith to prepare and report to the Senate a proper bill to provide for the immediate suspension of the coinage of standard silver dollars and for the resumption of such coinage whenever the commercial value of the standard dollars aforesaid shall rise to within 5 per cent. of par with the standard gold dollars of the United States.

Mr. MITCHELL. I ask unanimous consent to have read a very important letter from a very distinguished person relating to this subject, to make public record of the fact.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. HARRIS. There is.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made.
Mr. MITCHELL. I did not understand objection to be made to the reading of the letter.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the reading of the paper?

Mr. HARRIS. There is.

Mr. MITCHELL. Very well.

SENATE P. MARTIN.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2262) granting a pension to Sedate P. Martin, which was to strike out all after the word "pension-roll" in line 3 down to and including the word "pensions" in line 4.

Mr. COCKRELL. Let the words to be stricken out be read.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill had better be read as it would stand if amended.

The CHIEF CLERK. If the amendment be agreed to, the bill will read:
Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to place on the pension-roll, subject to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws, the name of Sedate P. Martin, late a private in Company B, One hundred and forty-first Regiment Illinois Volunteers.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment is before the Senate.
Mr. JACKSON. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House of Representatives.
The motion was agreed to.

MRS. CORDELIA BRAINERD THOMAS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 2316) granting a pension to Mrs. Cordelia Brainerd Thomas, which was, in line 10, to strike out the word "fifty" and to insert "twenty;" so as to read:

And to pay her, from and after the passage of this act, during her widowhood, the sum of $20 a month.

Mr. JACKSON. I move that the Senate concur in the amendment of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had concurred in some and non-concurred in other amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8138) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes, asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. R. W. TOWNSEND of Illinois, Mr. W. S. HOLMAN of Indiana, and Mr. R. G. HOBBS of Michigan managers of the conference on the part of the House.

SAINT PAUL AND SIOUX CITY RAILROAD LANDS.

Mr. WILSON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill No. 7299, Order of Business 1071.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Order of Business 1071, being the bill (H. R. 7299) forfeiting a part of certain lands granted to the State of Iowa to aid in the construction of railroads in that State, and for other purposes.

Mr. McMILLAN. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Debate is not in order.

Mr. McMILLAN. I ask unanimous consent to make an inquiry. I ask if that is a bill forfeiting lands granted to the State of Iowa for railroad purposes?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is.

Mr. McMILLAN. I hope the Senate will not consider such a bill now. That will require great discussion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. McMILLAN. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. HOAR. I ask unanimous consent to make a statement.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent to make a statement. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. HOAR. This is a matter something like the Des Moines land-grant bill in some respects. It relates to a complicated subject and will require a very continuous and extensive debate. It affects important rights, individual rights, on which I understand the committee were divided. I think we ought not to be asked to legislate on matters of this kind at this period of the session. The other matters which the Senate has made special orders, which it has assigned to be taken up, are being laid aside, because there is not sufficient time for considerate legislation on the subjects; and it seems to me that in these last three days of the session the Senate ought not to be asked to give special consideration out of order to matters of this kind.

Mr. MORGAN. I wish to say, with the consent of the Senate of course—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Alabama asks leave to be heard upon this question. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. MORGAN. This case differs from the Des Moines case entirely. I think no member of the Committee on Public Lands has any doubt at all that this case is within the jurisdiction of the courts and that nothing remains to be done but to adjust the jurisdiction, and that in doing so and in subjecting this case now to the consideration of the courts we shall save very much such trouble and imbrogio as there is about the Des Moines case. I believe that no more rightful or necessary legislation can take place than for the Senate to consider and pass this bill.

Mr. McMILLAN. I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate to be allowed to make one or two remarks in regard to this matter.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Minnesota asks leave to be heard on this question. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. McMILLAN. This bill involves the right of the State of Iowa and of a railroad company under a grant from the State of Iowa to certain lands appropriated by the State to the building of a railroad. The securities of the railroad company are in the hands of people throughout this country, based for their payment on these lands. They are in the hands of widows and orphans in different portions of the country, and in the possession of trustees, constituting trust funds for the wards of trustees and guardians. It seems to me that to attempt to consider this bill at this stage of the session under the circumstances in which we are placed now, with great appropriation bills coming constantly to the attention of the Senate, would be very unwise, and great injustice would be done to private rights and to public interest. I hope the Senate will not take up the bill.

Mr. WILSON. I ask unanimous consent to submit an observation.
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa asks leave to be heard on this question. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. WILSON. If this case involves the element stated by the Senator from Minnesota, then one result follows, and that is that the railroad company having claims under the grant in question has perpetrated a gross fraud upon the parties referred to by the Senator from Minnesota.

This case is one of very great importance to a section of the State of Iowa. It involves a controversy covering about 85,000 acres of land. That controversy involves the rights of the State of Iowa, the rights of the United States, and the rights of persons settled upon these lands. Instead of endeavoring to determine by legislative decision what rights these various parties have, the bill proposes to send the entire question involved to the circuit court of the United States in order that all these elements may be resolved judicially; and until some such course is taken, some such remedy applied, that section of country and this great body of land will simply be covered by titles questioned and clouded, and concerning which there should be no doubt whatever left.

Now, therefore, and inasmuch as this bill has waited through months and months, I ask that the Senate will give a little time to its consideration and that it may become a law. There is no more important subject for Congress to consider and to resolve than one which relates to the titles to land upon which people are making their homes, and therefore I ask that this bill may be considered at this time.

Mr. McMILLAN. I ask unanimous consent to make a further suggestion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Minnesota asks unanimous consent to be heard on this question. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. McMILLAN. The Senator from Iowa says that the question of the titles of settlers on the public lands is involved in this question. It is conceded that the lands along the line of this road had been withdrawn from market and had not been subject to settlement as public land at any time since the grant was made, and that the parties who are endeavoring to be benefited by this bill had no right whatever to go upon these lands. They had no right to make settlement there; but this bill recognizes their right to the extent that they are permitted to appear as proper settlers on these lands to raise questions of title which they suggest in regard to this grant.

The lands have not been patented to the company because a contest arose between two railroad companies as to which company should receive the patent to the lands, they both entering the same territory within which these lands lie. The case is one, it seems to me, in which there can be no question of bona fide settlers upon the public lands of the United States, because they are there as trespassers instead of being there under the laws of the United States.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The hour of 1 o'clock having arrived it becomes the duty of the Chair to place before the Senate the unfinished business, which is the bill (S. 498) granting a pension to Letitia Tyler Semple.

Mr. WILSON. I move that that be laid aside, and that the Senate proceed to consider the bill stated in my former motion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Senate bill 498 is before the Senate, the question being on its passage, pending which the Senator from Iowa moves to proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7299) forfeiting a part of certain lands granted to the State of Iowa to aid in the construction of railroads in that State, and for other purposes. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. WILSON called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered. The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin (when Mr. SAWYER's name was called). My colleague [Mr. SAWYER] is paired for the day with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. SAULSBURY].

The roll-call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 28, nays 20; as follows:

YEAS—28.
Allison,	Groome,	Kenna,	Pugh,
Bayard,	Hale,	McPherson,	Vance,

So the motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 7299) forfeiting a part of certain lands granted to the State of Iowa to aid in the construction of railroads in that State, and for other purposes.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Public Lands with an amendment to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That jurisdiction is hereby conferred on the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of Iowa to hear and determine any controversy of either a legal or equitable nature that may exist between the United States and the State of Iowa, or any corporation or person who claims any lands under the laws of said State or of the United States, by reason of an act of Congress entitled "An act for a grant of lands to the State of Iowa, in alternate sections, to aid in the construction of a railroad in said State," approved May 12, 1864, concerning such of said lands as have been patented to the State of Iowa for the use and benefit of the Sioux City and Saint Paul Railroad Company, and have not been by said State conveyed to said railroad company, the United States hereby asserting its reversionary right to all of said lands, or so much thereof as shall be found to have been patented in excess of the amount of land earned by said company, in compliance with the act of Congress aforesaid, and hereby resumes possession of the same, subject to the conditions hereinafter named.

Sec. 2. That the district attorney of the United States for the northern district of Iowa, under the direction of the Attorney-General, shall bring suit at law or in equity in the circuit court for said district against any persons or corporations who are claiming the ownership of the lands granted in said act to the State of Iowa and by said State withheld as aforesaid, so as to fully ascertain and settle all questions as to the interest of the United States in said lands; and any persons or corporations who are claiming any of said lands under the State of Iowa, or by reason of the act of Congress aforesaid, and who are necessary or proper parties, shall be joined as defendants therein; and said court may cause publications to be made, under the laws and rules of court, to bring in non-resident defendants as parties to the suit.

SEC. 3. That the State of Iowa, or any corporation or person not made a party defendant in such suit, may petition the court to be admitted as a party defendant therein, and may set up any interest such defendant may have in the said lands, in such manner as the court may direct, and have the judgment of the court upon the same.

SEC. 4. That the parties to such suit, respectively, shall have the right to revise the judgment or decree of the circuit court rendered therein in the Supreme Court of the United States, on writ of error or appeal, under the laws governing appeals and writs of error in civil causes decided in the circuit courts of the United States: Provided, That such writ of error or appeal is prosecuted within six months from the date of the enrolling of the final decree in such cause; and said cause shall be advanced on the docket of the Supreme Court so as to be heard as speedily as the other business of the court in which the United States is a party will admit.

SEC. 5. That if any of the lands mentioned herein are adjudged to belong to the United States, the same shall constitute a part of the public domain, and shall be disposed of as lands of the United States that are subject to homestead and pre-emption entry: Provided, That in case any lands so decided to belong to the United States have been sold (not encumbered) by said railroad company, prior to January 1, 1864, to persons who purchased the same in good faith for the purpose of making for themselves homes, and have in good faith occupied the same, or for the purpose of adding to other property occupied by them as homes or for business purposes, the person or persons having purchased any of said lands as aforesaid, or their grantees, shall have the right to the lands so purchased, not exceeding one quarter-section to any one purchaser, upon making proof to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Interior of the fact of such purchase, which proof may be first made at the local land office of the district in which said land may be located; and upon the proof being made as above within twelve months after the passage of this act, patents shall issue to the party or parties entitled thereto for the land, not exceeding one quarter-section to any one purchaser as aforesaid.

SEC. 6. That all actual, bona fide settlers upon any of the lands hereby resumed and which may be decided as aforesaid to belong to the United States, who possess the proper qualifications under the general land laws, and are in actual occupancy thereof at the date of the passage of the same, shall, for the purposes of this act, be considered as having entered upon the same lawfully, and shall be treated as if at the date of their entry upon said land the same had been in fact subject to entry under existing laws; and in any proceeding to perfect their titles the date of their actual occupancy shall be considered as the date of entry: Provided, That such occupancy shall have been continuous; and such persons shall have preference in making formal entries at the land office to the extent of such land as each of said settlers may occupy, not exceeding one quarter-section to each settler, and be entitled to enter under existing laws: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior shall adopt rules to govern such entries not inconsistent with the terms of this act; and in case of conflicting claims among alleged actual settlers, he shall, in deciding the same, give preference to the one who may establish prior and continuous occupancy, regardless of the date of entry at the local land office.

Mr. PLUMB. If I can have the attention of the Senate for a few minutes, I will make a statement in regard to this case which I think will not be controverted so far as it is a statement of fact.

In 1864 Congress made a grant of land to aid in building a railroad from Saint Paul to Sioux City, the grant being to the State of Iowa, to be by the State of Iowa in turn given to such railroad company as the State might select for the accomplishment of the purpose. The distance from the Iowa State line to the point where the railroad as constructed from Saint Paul strikes that line to Sioux City in Iowa is about eighty miles. On this line of road, and between the north line of the State of Iowa and Sioux City, is the town of Le Mars, distant 56.13 miles from the northern boundary of the State of Iowa. In the process of time, and within the time named in the grant of the General Government, the Sioux City and Saint Paul Railroad Company, which had been selected by the State for the purpose of building this railroad and to which the State had agreed to give the grant as it was earned, built the railroad from the northern line of the State of Iowa to the town of Le Mars.

At that point it found constructed or being constructed a railroad extending from Sioux City to the town of Le Mars and substantially parallel with the line on which this company had expected to construct its own road; and there the construction stopped, the company having built, as I said, under this grant and in pursuance of its charter from the State of Iowa 56.13 miles of railroad, for which it was entitled to receive from the General Government through the State of Iowa land at the rate of ten sections a mile, or 6,400 acres for every mile of railroad built.

The original grant provided that this land should be patented to the State of Iowa as fast only as the governor of that State should certify to the Secretary of the Interior that the road had been built in sections of ten miles; that is to say, whenever the governor certified that ten miles of railroad had been built the Secretary of the Interior was authorized to patent to the State of Iowa for the use of the railroad company the requisite land at the rate of 6,400 acres per mile. It was provided in the grant also that if this land should not be found within the proper limits on each side of the road, then the company was to have the right to take lands or to have patented for its benefit the lands within twenty miles of the line of the road.

The company built, as I said, 56.13 miles of railroad; and from time to time there were patented to the State for the benefit of the company lands amounting to 407,879.13 acres, being 87,879 acres more than the road was entitled to by reason of having built even sections of ten miles each. The company had built five sections of ten miles each, for which it was entitled to receive 320,000 acres of land; but by reason of a mistake in the Interior Department the amount of 407,879.13 acres was patented to the State instead of the 320,000 acres which the State was entitled to have patented to it by the General Government.

There is no question of the right of the railroad company to the 320,000 acres of land, being 6,400 acres for each mile as it was constructed up to the fiftieth mile-stone, leaving the only question to be settled, as is now apparent, as to whether the railroad company is entitled to land for the 6.13 miles that it built beyond the limits of the last ten-mile section. This would be the only question in the case if it were not suggested that, by reason of litigation now pending between this railroad company and another one crossing it substantially at right angles, the land should be divided within the common limits, which raises the point whether in the event of this company losing any of the land heretofore patented to it it is entitled to indemnity by reason of such loss. If it should be, by reason of the fact that it would lose about 25,000 acres of land within these common limits, then that other question should be settled by the courts. These two propositions are of a kind which can not be settled by legislation unless Congress is to give a new grant, because the right of the company attached under the grant originally made, and the construction of that grant should only be made by the courts; and the first and main question to be decided is, is the company entitled, by reason of the equity arising from the building of the 6.13 miles of railroad, to the lands as it would have been if it had gone on and completed the ten-mile section? As I said, that brings up the construction of the act by which the grant was originally made, and that question can only be settled by the courts; and this bill provides that that question, and also all other questions that arise in this case, shall be decided by the courts, and by the decision of the courts the United States of course, and all other persons in privity with it or holding under it, will be concluded.

It has been sought, and will be I have no doubt by amendments to be proposed to this bill, to so construe the act of 1864 under which these lands were originally granted as to affirmatively give to the railroad company lands for all the road that it built beyond the last completed ten-mile section. That, however it may be viewed, is substantially a new grant.

Mr. McMILLAN. Will the Senator state that position again, if he pleases? I did not hear it exactly.

Mr. PLUMB. I said it had been proposed, and would be again, as I believe, in the form of an amendment to the bill, to give to the railroad company land at the rate of ten sections per mile for the six miles and a fraction which had been built beyond the limits of the last ten-mile section; and while I am not going to say that there is any merit in that proposition, at the same time I do say that it is equivalent to making a new grant, because if they are entitled to that land now by reason of the old grant they can get the land; and if they can not, then the act which does propose it will be equivalent to giving them that which the law as it now stands does not give them; and that is, I understand, making a new grant to that extent.

It has been sought to prejudice this bill by saying that it was in the interest of some men who, without any law or license, have gone as squatters upon these lands, seeking to obtain title to them under the general land laws of the United States. If that were so it would not prejudice the legislation in my mind at all, because if these lands are public lands there is no doubt of the perfect right of any citizen of the United States to go upon them seeking to acquire title under the general land laws. If they are not, then all there is of it is that these men have made a mistake, of which, of course, they must take the consequences; but it does not militate against this bill in my mind that under the impression that has been created by the failure of this company to build its road through to the terminus at Sioux City there are lands, a portion of the grant, which became subject to the operation of the general land laws, having reverted to the General Government, and therefore these people felt themselves included in the invitation which was extended by the general laws of the United States to all the citizens of the United States to go on the public lands for the purpose of acquiring homes thereon.

But, Mr. President, aside from all question in regard to the settlers who may now be upon these lands is the question of the right and the duty of the General Government to assert its own power as the original proprietor of these lands and as the grantor to whom these lands, by reason of the failure to build the railroad, have reverted; and in this bill the Government only seeks to bring all questions in relation to this grant so far as they relate to the lands beyond the limits of the completed sections of ten miles before the courts, in order that not only the rights of the Government but the rights of the railroad company may be fully and finally decided, and decided, as I said before, in the only tribunal in which they can be decided.

As I said before, there were patented to the State of Iowa by misadventure nearly 88,000 acres of land more than the company were entitled to by a strict construction of the terms of the granting act. These lands the State of Iowa refused to patent to the railroad company. The Legislature of the State of Iowa, by an act passed a few years ago, proposed to surrender to the General Government a portion of these lands, for the reason that the railroad company was not entitled to them; but while the order made by that law upon the governor was in the process of execution the railroad company, by an injunction obtained in a local court, sought to prevent, and has so far prevented, the governor from reconveying, according to the direction of the Legislature, any of these lands to the General Government. That question, therefore, is pending upon this incidental proceeding in a State court in the State of Iowa, a court practically without jurisdiction to settle the question that is at the bottom of this grant.

In addition to that, the Secretary of the Interior, in a letter written some time ago, recognized the fact that there were lands which had been patented to the State of Iowa, without expressing any opinion as to the quantity, which were public lands of the United States by operation of the law under which they were originally granted, because that law provided that if the railroad was not built according to the terms of the act so much of the lands as applied to the unearned portion should revert to the General Government. At once the question arises, what portion of these lands have reverted? Some of them have undoubtedly, because the railroad company can not claim land for more than the 6.13 miles built, under any circumstances, and there will still be a fraction over which the Government to-day is the owner by reason of this reversionary clause of the original granting act, leaving only to be determined the question as to the extent of the lands and their location, and that can not be done by any authority short of the courts.

Mr. President, it is idle for the railroad company to think for a moment that it can ever acquire a single acre of land which it has not now got, unless it gets it by reason of just such a proceeding as is here contemplated. The Legislature of the State of Iowa will never confer or authorize its executive to confer upon this railroad company a single acre of land not already patented to it. The General Government can not act directly under the law as it now stands in giving any land whatever to the company, because the law provides that all the land shall go to the State of Iowa, to be in turn patented according to the direction and the discretion of that State to the railroad company entitled to the same.

Therefore, Mr. President, for the interest of the Government, which undoubtedly has title to some of these lands, for the purpose of settling the question of that ownership under the reversionary clause of the original granting act, and for the purpose of the settlement and the only effective settlement of the claim of the railroad company, this proceeding must be come to finally.

There is another reason why not only the interests of the Government but those of the railroad company conspire to require the settlement of this question in this way. The suit to which I have referred as pending between this company and the Milwaukee and Saint Paul Company, a company which succeeded to the land grant to build a railroad from Dubuque to Sioux City, and whose road crosses this road at right angles, is now pending in the Supreme Court of the United States for hearing.

Mr. McMILLAN. Submitted to the court.

Mr. PLUMB. If it shall result from that suit that a portion of the lands heretofore patented to this Sioux City and Saint Paul Railroad Company go to the Milwaukee and Saint Paul Company, then, as I understand the position of the Sioux City and Saint Paul Company, it is ready to claim that by reason of losing these lands within the common limits it will be entitled to indemnity for them, and there will be a question of about 35,000 or 40,000 acres of land to which it will set up a claim, and which claim it can only enforce in the courts. These persons who have gone on these lands—for a portion of them have been settled upon—are themselves willing and anxious that this bill shall pass. They recognize in this authority for a judicial proceeding the only method whereby there can be an authoritative decision of the question whether the lands on which they have settled are public lands or not. It is due to them, to the men who have gone upon the lands on the faith of the failure or refusal of the Legislature of the State of Iowa to order a patent to be made to the railroad company, for they thereby ascertained the fact that they had not been earned and were still public lands, and because of the fact that the Secretary of the Interior, in a letter which has been made public, decided that some portion of these lands which had been patented by the State of Iowa were public lands, and any man with a piece of paper and a pencil could determine the fact that some of these lands at least were public lands. By reason of all these facts, I say this question ought to be sent to the courts.

In addition to that, the counties in which they are located are interested in the settlement of this matter, because in the present condition of things these lands are not subject to taxation. The naked legal right is in the State of Iowa, but it holds as trustee without benefit, and the lands can not be taxed while they remain in this condition. This unsettled condition of the title not only unfavorably affects the men who have settled upon the lands, but it also unfavorably affects the counties in which they are located. The administration of justice, the transaction of the county business can only be secured by taxes levied on the property within its jurisdiction; and the financial interests of the whole State of Iowa as well are affected, because if there were titles to these lands the State could levy upon them for necessary taxes for the administration of local and general affairs.

But besides all this there is the question of public peace, I may say. I do not say anything which is applicable alone to this locality when I declare that where there is no title to land there can never be stable government; where there is no title to land there can be no public peace, no social order, practically no civilization.

In addition to that, I think the railroad company itself has a greater interest, so far at least as money is concerned, in having this question disposed of now and in this way than any and all other persons whatsoever. However much mistaken they may be, and however ample authority they may have given to the Senator from Minnesota to speak for them in this particular and to obstruct the passage of the bill, I say what I shall recar to from now on until this bill shall become a law, if it shall fail to become a law at this session, that every day's delay is against the interest of the railroad company, and that they never can and never will get title to one single acre of land that they have not now got patented to them unless they get it as the result of the judgment of a court.

I do not need to say here that Congress will make no new land grant. That goes without saying. I do not need to say here that while measures of this kind are pending, while claims of this kind are open and subject to dispute, the State of Iowa will never confer on this railroad company a single acre of land. The Senator from Iowa can say that for his State better than I, but I think I know enough about the sentiment in that State to say that they will exercise no doubtful power for the purpose of conveying to this railroad company a single acre of land to which it is not entitled.

I may say, Mr. President, that when I first came to the examination of this question the bent of my mind was in favor of giving, if it could be done without affirmative legislation in any way which did not seem to confer a new right, to the railroad company lands for the 6.13 miles of railroad beyond the limits of the last ten-mile section; but the longer the subject was considered in committee, the more reflection I gave to it, the more I was driven inevitably to the conclusion that it was a question for the courts, and that it was a question for no other tribunal, and that until it was settled there we should be confronted by it year after year as we have been by the Des Moines River case, until finally it might get into as bad a title as that case has got into. That case is a solemn warning against any attempt to tinker by statute with rights that have from time to time grown up and attached to land, which rights can never be settled as they ought to be settled unless they are adjudicated by the courts. For that reason I have given my unhesitating assent to this bill as a matter demanded by every private interest that relates to these lands in any way, shape, or form, and for the reason also that apparently here is a great public interest which can never be settled so well, so wisely, so in the interests of peace and of order and of harmony and of justice as it can be settled now.

It will be said here that there are people who hold mortgages on these lands; and that is true. That I believe is the accompaniment of every land grant; but this bill provides that every person holding a mortgage bond and the trustees of all the mortgages, if there are more than one, can come into court and set up their rights in the premises and have them adjudicated as well; and I do not need to say to the Senate that no right could be conferred upon them by the act of the railroad company which the railroad company did not have itself; and if the railroad company has any rights, however slight, in these lands the courts will protect them as amply as it will protect those of the Government.

Mr. HOAR. Where is that provision to which the Senator refers about the mortgages going into court?

Mr. PLUMB. If the Senator will read line 7 of the first section of the amendment he will find that it is provided:

That jurisdiction is hereby conferred on the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of Iowa to hear and determine any controversy of either a legal or equitable nature that may exist between the United States and the State of Iowa, or any corporation or person who claims any lands under the laws of said State or of the United States, by reason of an act of Congress, &c.

Mr. HOAR. That would not permit the holder of a bond to come in.

Mr. PLUMB. If he claimed an interest in the land, would it not?

Mr. HOAR. I should doubt whether it would. The Senator can make it plain.

Mr. PLUMB. It can be made more ample. The Senator from Massachusetts, with that vigilance which always characterizes him here when the interests of his people or of his State are involved, is concerned about some people in the State of Massachusetts who hold bonds of the railroad company secured by mortgage upon these lands; but I ask him to say himself whether he believes there can ever be any effective settlement made of this question unless it is sent to the courts.

Mr. HOAR. If the Senator will pardon me, I might as well answer that now if he will allow me to do so.

Mr. PLUMB. Certainly.

Mr. HOAR. All I know about this case is that a gentleman, resident in Massachusetts, who was commended to me as a man of character and respectability—some of whose relatives I know, and I would infer from what I know of them what he is likely to be—called upon me with this story: He said that he and some others with whom he was interested held a considerable quantity—I think $800,000 was the entire interest—of mortgage bonds of a railroad company in Iowa, which, I suppose, is the railroad company named in this bill—I do not remember the name—the land having been mortgaged to a trustee and the trustee holding the mortgage for the benefit of the bondholders. They had not got any return either in principal or interest on their bonds for many years, and their only security was these lands, the railroad company itself not being responsible as a solvent debtor; that the railroad company had a grant of lands.

The next statement I am going to make I am not quite sure of, but the Senator will correct me if I state it wrong. I think the statement was that the company was entitled by the original charter to so much land for every mile it constructed; then a subsequent amendment to the charter stated that the patents should issue for so much land for every ten miles of road constructed.

Mr. PLUMB. There is a mistake about that.

Mr. HOAR. At any rate they were to have their patent for so many lands for every ten miles of road constructed. Thereupon another road was also constructed, with a conflicting land grant going side by side with this road to some extent and coming into it and crossing it at an angle; so that when this company constructed about six miles of the last ten miles that they were to construct the other road came in, making it in the first place unnecessary for this company to have their road completed, and in the next place making it impossible for them to get their land for the road they did build. If there is any incorrectness in this statement I beg the Senator not to impute it to the incorrectness of the statement of the man who made it to me, but to the imperfection of my memory, because, not supposing the bill would come up at this Congress, I have given it no further attention and the matter is a little vague in my memory. If I have got it wrong, I hope the Senator will not impute it to the gentleman who made the statement to me.

Mr. PLUMB. I do not think that there is anything to be mistaken about the facts of this case.

Mr. HOAR. If that is true that they have without their fault failed to build the remaining four miles of the ten, or whatever the distance is, the United States ought not certainly to pass a bill which would certainly authorize a court to consider this matter of legal right alone; for the technical title is now in the United States, open to public entry, letting in all the settlers who may choose to come in; and especially they should not say that everybody who has squatted upon the land shall be treated as if he were a bona fide settler at the time he went there. What they ought to do is, so far as is in the power of the United States, to grant the company the lands they are entitled to for the six miles. If the United States create a tribunal to determine the question, it seems to me the tribunal ought to be authorized to say what is the equitable or just or fair claim of these mortgagees, the bondholders, and creditors of the road to the land which had been earned by the building of the six miles. It should not be merely the naked question of whether the United States have patented the lands, because nobody doubts that they have not patented the lands for that portion of the road.

Mr. PLUMB. A portion of the Senator's statement is incorrect. I acquit the gentleman who made the statement of any design to misrepresent; but I have stated the case exactly as it was. I think the person alluded to is the same gentleman who came to me with a letter from a constituent of the Senator from Massachusetts whom I know very well, and who I know would not have given him a letter to me unless he was a person entirely worthy of credit. But there is no mistake about the facts in the case, and there can not be any. It is a question simply as to what rule should be applied to the facts as they are known to exist. There was no amendment of the original act, and it was provided in the original act in the terms which I shall read:

That the lands hereby granted shall be disposed of by said State for the purposes aforesaid only, and in manner following, namely: When the governor of said State shall certify to the Secretary of the Interior that any section of ten consecutive miles of either of said roads—

The two roads embraced in the act—is completed in a good, substantial, and workmanlike manner, as a first-class railroad, then the Secretary of the Interior shall issue to the State patents for one hundred sections of land for the benefit of the road having completed the ten consecutive miles as aforesaid. When the governor of said State shall certify that another section of ten consecutive miles shall have been completed as aforesaid, then the Secretary of the Interior shall issue patents to said State in like manner for a like number.

Mr. HOAR. Is there not a previous statement that there should be granted so much for every mile?

Mr. PLUMB. The act proceeds:

And when certificates of the completion of additional sections of ten consecutive miles of either of said roads are from time to time made as aforesaid, additional sections of land shall be patented as aforesaid until said roads or either of them are completed, when the whole of the lands hereby granted shall be patented to the State for the uses aforesaid and none other.

Then there is a further provision that if the road is not made at the proper time the State of Iowa may have the benefit of conferring the grant upon some other railroad company; and if not completed within a certain period of time, then the whole grant, all that remains unearned, shall revert to the United States.

Mr. HOAR. If I am not interrupting the Senator, let me ask him for information, is not the matter of issuing a patent when ten miles are completed merely a matter of convenience? Of course a patent could not be issued for every half mile or mile. Is not the provision which makes the earning for every mile and waiting until they get ten miles done merely an incident of administration?

Mr. PLUMB. There is some provision of the kind in the law.

Mr. HOAR. Does not the bill destroy in the railroad company the benefit of that provision?

Mr. PLUMB. Not at all; but it leaves to the court to decide what the legal effect of the provision was. If the Senator will read the bill and look at the committee's amendment he will find in line 5 that the court is to determine any controversy of either a legal or equitable nature.

Mr. HOAR. Would the Senator then object to have the bill amended by distinctly, in terms, giving to the court the power to determine whether the building of any portion less than ten miles gave the railroad company building it under the circumstances an equitable right to the land?

Mr. MORGAN. I will suggest to the Senator from Massachusetts—

Mr. PLUMB. Let me proceed. In the first place, I am reading the act. I read it before, but was not quite familiar with its terms. I am prepared to say now that I do not find in it, and I do not think there is in it, any provision that the company shall have so much per mile. The first section contains a general grant, in these terms:

That there be, and is hereby, granted to the State of Iowa—

I omit certain formalities which follow—

every alternate section of land designated by odd numbers for ten sections in width on each side of said roads.

Not ten sections per mile, or anything of that kind. But in case it shall appear that the United States shall have, when the lines of road are located, made a certain disposition of any part of the lands, then the grantee shall be entitled to indemnity. That is the general granting clause, and the application of that is made in the fourth section, which I have just read.

Even admitting what the Senator says, we are sending this question to the courts to decide upon the legal and equitable right of the company or of anybody else who claims these lands. That is all there is about it. I take it that with as much concern as the Senator has for his constituents, or anybody else who may be interested in the result of this litigation, he would not say that men who have money enough to build a railroad, who have sense enough to put that money into proper use in building the railroad, who built the railroad upon the faith of this act of Congress, should not be required to stand or fall by what they did in pursuance of the act of Congress. They could have built ten miles farther and had a tenth section completed and have got their land grant for building that ten-mile section. They chose not to do it. The Government was willing that they should build not only that much railroad, but build all the rest of the line up to the final terminus. They said, "No; we will stop here at this point, where we find another railroad built up to it; we can make arrangements with them to get to Sioux City, the south terminus of the road." They did stop there. They are there yet. They do not propose to build any farther. The time has gone by when they could legally build any farther; and I take it that the Senator himself out of no consideration for these people, personally or otherwise, would propose that we should give to them something which we can no longer give to them. What he wants and what I want is that this law shall be construed in the courts, and that the courts shall say whether the company was entitled to lands within the 6.13 miles or not. That I think the bill does; but if the Senator can provide ways more ample, direction more complete to accomplish this object, I beg him to propose it.

Mr. President, I am not willing that this question shall go to the courts with any direction except to do what the law requires to be done as it now stands. I am not willing to have these people go there with a new assertion on the part of the Government as to what originally was contemplated in the act under which they built their railroad, because if we open that door, and something now is to be added or something to be subtracted for the benefit of anybody, a lot of questions will come to the front that I fear will make this grant of very little avail to these people, their patents to the contrary notwithstanding.

Mr. McMILLAN. Mr. President, the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PLUMB], the chairman of the Committee on Public Lands, who reported the bill, understands some of the facts of the case, and has stated them, so far as he has stated them, in the main correctly. The grant of lands in this case was not for building a railroad from Saint Paul to Sioux City. The grant was to the State of Iowa, and the State of Iowa granted certain of those lands to the Sioux City and Saint Paul Railroad Company for the construction of a road from Sioux City to the Minnesota State line.

Mr. PLUMB. I know the Senator does not design to make any misstatement of fact.

Mr. McMILLAN. Certainly not.

Mr. PLUMB. I think we agree upon all the facts, but differ simply as to what was done.

Mr. McMILLAN. I was calling attention to the fact that the act making the grant of land was to the State of Iowa for the purpose of building a railroad running from Sioux City to the Minnesota State line.

Mr. PLUMB. That is precisely what I said.

Mr. McMILLAN. The Senator said that the road was built under a grant of land for a railroad from Saint Paul to Sioux City.

Mr. PLUMB. There was another grant for the purpose of building it from Saint Paul to the Minnesota line.

Mr. McMILLAN. Not at that time.

Mr. PLUMB. But the lands on that part of the line are not in controversy.

Mr. McMILLAN. I was just calling the attention of the Senator to the fact that so far as he is familiar with the facts he has stated them in the main correctly.

Mr. PLUMB. Does the Senator say that the other fact is material?

Mr. McMILLAN. It is in this connection, as I wish to show.

Mr. PLUMB. I do not think it is.

Mr. McMILLAN. That merely illustrates the fact that the Senator is not quite as familiar with the facts in the case as perhaps he might be.

Mr. PLUMB. Thank you.

Mr. McMILLAN. I wish to bespeak from the members of the Senate their serious and candid attention to this measure. If I am not mistaken the proposition of the bill is in the name of a popular prejudice to do a great violence to public rights and to private rights.

The efforts made to accomplish the passage of this bill are remarkable. It seems to me that the members of another branch of the Legislature of this nation have been more active in this measure than the members of this body. They are continually found upon this floor, they have been upon it constantly, they are upon it now urging, pressing, constantly forcing this measure. I think the members of the Committee on Public Lands of the Senate and the members of the Senate are capable of taking their own counsels and forming their own judgments in regard to any public measure which is brought before the Senate.

Let me state, if I can, correctly and clearly the facts in this case as they exist. Long before this land grant to the State of Iowa Congress granted lands to the State of Minnesota to aid in the construction of an entire system of railroads within that State. One of the branches of that system extended from Saint Paul southwest to the Minnesota and Iowa State line. That road was constructed by a company organized and incorporated under the laws of the State of Minnesota, and was known and designated as the Saint Paul and Sioux City Railroad Company. Their line of road extended from Saint Paul to the Iowa line, running directly southwest toward the Missouri River.

The land granted to the State of Iowa for a road from Sioux City to the Iowa State line was the completion of a line from the southwestern terminus of the Saint Paul road to the Missouri River. Sioux City is on the bank of the Missouri River; Saint Paul is on the bank of the Mississippi River; and these two grants furnished a complete line of road from Saint Paul through that State southwest, continuous through the State of Iowa to the Missouri River, making a complete line of road, bringing the prairies of Northwestern Iowa, of Southeastern Dakota, of Northeastern Nebraska, and the plains of Kansas, treeless and fit only for agricultural lands, into direct communication, first with the waters of Lake Superior, then with the great pine regions of Minnesota, giving to those portions of the country access to a market for lumber and furnishing to them the building material which they needed for the construction of their homes upon the beautiful and vast prairies of that section of the country.

It was for the purpose of giving such facilities to that country that this line of road was built. The men who formed the Saint Paul and Sioux City Company were not adventurers. They were not bondholders or rich capitalists of the East. They were men who had gone to the frontier. They had come to Minnesota; they had as settlers and business men there contributed their efforts, their enterprise, their integrity to building up all that portion of country. Under my own observation I have seen an empire grow up in the State of Minnesota and in the northwestern portion of the country. The men who entered into the Saint Paul and Sioux City Company were the men who contributed in large degree to that great object and have accomplished it nobly.

They are residents still of that country, the greater number of them. They have made whatever wealth they possess in their efforts to build up the country and to extend the business enterprises of all that region. They made the effort, and succeeded in extending these railroad facilities and in bringing to this prairie country all the advantages to which I have alluded. After going through a series of hardships and losses which I believe to be unequalled in the history of railroad enterprises, they succeeded in building the road as far as it is now completed.

After its completion, for a number of years in succession, Providence and all the elements seemed to be against their success. First, the harvests were destroyed by drought. Then came the locusts, as the locusts in Egypt, to destroy, year after year, the crops which in the early season promised to be fruitful and abundant. So they labored on, season after season, harvest after harvest, enduring great losses; but they were firm in their purposes to accomplish this great enterprise, and with some aid from abroad they procured means which secured at last its completion.

Of course it was necessary under these circumstances to issue bonds and execute mortgages upon these lands. Large numbers of those bonds are held now in the State which I have the honor in part to represent on this floor. They are held by widows and orphans there as well as by widows and orphans elsewhere throughout New England, throughout the financial centers of the East; and the only securities these people have for the payment of their bonds are the lands which this railroad company believe they honestly and fairly earned in accomplishing these great public enterprises.

The company proceeded to build this line of road. They built, in connection with the road from Saint Paul to the Iowa line, the road from the Iowa line to the town of Le Mars, which is twenty-four miles from Sioux City. When they built their line to Le Mars they found that another land-grant railroad company, having a grant of land to build a road from Dubuque in Iowa to Sioux City, had built their line directly through Le Mars and thence southwest in the direct line in which the Sioux City road extended would be built from Le Mars to Sioux City. When they reached Le Mars they found that line of road completed, and if they had built farther it would have been directly along the line of the Dubuque and Sioux City road, already built as a land-grant road and completed to Sioux City.

Under those circumstances this company did not believe they would be acting in good faith to the Government to proceed farther than Le Mars with the construction of their actual line.

But they did not leave the people of that region without a competing line of road over that portion of the route. They made arrangements with the McGregor road, by which they secured the right of way from Le Mars to Sioux City over that road, thus in all respects affording competition over that portion of the road to the same extent that would have been afforded had they built their own road. At the southwestern terminus of the road in Sioux City they secured all the terminal facilities for their own road that they would have done if they had built the intervening portion between Le Mars and Sioux City, twenty-four miles, and they have invested large sums of money in the erection of depots, shops, and other terminal works at that place. They are not dependent upon the McGregor road for their terminal facilities. They have built up and improved the town of Sioux City by these buildings and improvements to a very large extent, and are entirely independent of this other road; so that the community through which it passes has all the benefit of a competing line.

This company under those circumstances believed they were acting in good faith in refraining from building that portion of the line. They set up no claim for land for any portion of the road between Le Mars and Sioux City which they did not actually build. They might have expended their money in building that portion of the road which would have entitled them to the lands, and yet have given to the people of Iowa no greater railroad advantages than they now enjoy; but instead of that they used the money which might have secured them these additional lands in building other lines of road in Iowa and Nebraska for which no lands had been granted, but which give to the people of those States great advantages and contribute largely to the wealth and development of the resources of that region of the country.

They were not idle, and that section of country is indebted to the Sioux City and Saint Paul Company for the benefits which they now possess in railroad facilities in different directions, for which no grant was made and for which no claim has ever been set up. The people of Iowa have been treated honestly and fairly in every sense by this company, and it would be unjust and ungrateful in the Commonwealth of Iowa or in the people of that State to attempt to deprive it of one acre of land to which it may by any reasonable construction be entitled. These are not speculators who have gone in to rob a community; they are our own citizens, and men who are well known and respected by all who know them. Some of the men originally interested in this road are dead and have left their estates to their widows and children, some of whom are living in my own city, who hold the bonds of this company which are secured by the lands embraced in this bill.

In addition to the railroad from Dubuque to Sioux City there was another road, a land-grant road, authorized by Congress from a point on the Mississippi River, at McGregor, running directly west, which crosses the Sioux City and Saint Paul road at right angles at the town of Sheldon, which is nearly half way between Sioux City and the Iowa State line. This McGregor road is now a part of the Milwaukee and Saint Paul system, owned by the Chicago, Milwaukee and Saint Paul Company. That road crossing the Sioux City road claims a portion of the lands through which it passes and which are continuous with the line of the Sioux City and Saint Paul road. So these two roads crossing at that place claim this grant, both of them claiming the same lands.

That dispute having arisen between these companies, the State of Iowa refused to patent the lands to either company. The State of Iowa had certified to the Sioux City and Saint Paul road the lands lying north of those disputed lands, but these are lands lying midway between the Iowa line and Sioux City, continuous with the Sioux City road. They are good agricultural lands. The patent had been issued by the Government of the United States to the State of Iowa for all those lands, and the legal title is in the State of Iowa. The Government of the United States has no legal title whatever in them. It has parted with its title by a patent.

In regard to the lands which are in dispute between these two companies an action is pending in the Supreme Court of the United States, and, as I am informed, has been argued and is submitted to the Supreme Court, the determination of which will settle the title to these lands. That action will be determined by the court within a comparatively short period. The lands within the ten-mile limits must go to one or the other of these roads, whichever the court shall determine is entitled to them.

The legal title of the United States having been divested by this grant and patent to the State of Iowa, the lands embraced in the bill under consideration were withdrawn from market, and were not open to settlement under the pre-emption or homestead laws. No person had a legal right to go upon the lands and claim the benefit of the pre-emption law or the homestead law of the United States. Every person who entered upon the land was certainly a trespasser. They had no more right to enter upon those lands and attempt to make a settlement than the men who have attempted to go upon the territory known as Oklahoma. The Government of the United States has commanded her armies to prevent any American citizen from entering upon that land, and no more had these settlers a right to enter upon this land.

Yet having gone upon these lands because they were not certified to the railroad company and because the company had not constructed a portion of its line to which I have referred, these parties now claim that they are settlers upon the public lands, and that if any portion of the land grant of the Sioux City road had not been earned in time the lands to be forfeited must be the lands which lie continuous with the completed line of the road, because all the lands which are embraced in the settlements of these parties lie along the line of the completed road, and that portion of it was completed to Le Mars within the time authorized by law.

The Senator from Kansas, the chairman of the Committee on Public Lands, says there can be no relief to the company by granting them an allowance of lands for the portion of the road six miles and a quarter from Le Mars without making a new grant. The Senator seemed to rely very much upon the point of making a new grant. I am not aware that it would be any greater violation of right to make a change in the law which would permit a railroad company to have lands to which it is equitably entitled than it would be to legalize the settlement of persons who have gone upon the land as settlers under the homestead or pre-emption law when they had no right to do so. To grant to them the right to acquire a settlement is certainly a change of the law.

The bill proposes to relieve these settlers by making that change. It requires the courts to recognize them as having a right to settle upon these lands when under the existing law they had no such right. To grant to the Sioux City and Saint Paul Railroad Company the allowance of lands set apart by the grant of lands for the six and one-fourth miles northeast of Le Mars would not be making a new grant. The grant of lands to Iowa was a complete grant, an entire grant, but in determining the mode of certifying the lands to the company by the State of Iowa it was provided that the patent should only issue when ten consecutive miles of road were completed. The grant in this case is contained in the act approved May 12, 1864.

As I stated before, this was a grant of land of ten sections for each mile of road along this line of road from Sioux City to the northern line of Iowa. That I claim is a grant of the lands. In respect of the title to the land, it vested in the company under that general grant to the State of Iowa under the first section of the act of Congress and the grant from the State to the company. The fourth section of the act of Congress prescribes the manner in which the land shall be certified to the railroad company. The regulation prescribed by that section was that the lands should be certified upon the completion of each ten consecutive miles of the road. Under that provision five ten-mile sections extended from the Iowa line to within about six miles of Le Mars. The remaining six miles and a fraction to Le Mars was, of course, not a complete ten-mile section, and no lands have been certified to the company for that portion of the road.

To authorize the company to receive the legal title to the proportionate quantity of lands for those six miles of completed road would not be, as the Senator from Kansas argues, a new grant. The grant has already been made, and they are entitled to the land if they complete the road. The change removing the restriction to the certifying of lands to the company except upon the completion of ten miles of road would only be a change of the section which prescribes the mode in which the naked legal title to the lands shall be certified to the company. It would not be a new grant.

So there is no difficulty whatever in removing that restriction. They get but the portion of land to which they would be entitled for building each mile of the road, and not for any more road than is actually constructed. The Senate can do no less, it seems to me, than to adopt such an amendment as that.

I shall offer and move the adoption by the Senate of an amendment to the bill as reported from the Committee on Public Lands. I shall move to strike out of the first section of the substitute all after the word "company" in line 14 to the word "the" in line 16, and to insert in lieu thereof the following:

Except such of said lands as lie opposite to and continuous with the constructed road of said company built within the time limited by said granting act, and such of said lands as have been certified or conveyed to said railroad company.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed a joint resolution (H. R. 341) to authorize the printing of 50,000 copies of the second annual report of the Bureau of Animal Industry for the year 1885; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the concurrent resolution of the Senate to print the report of the National Academy of Sciences for 1884, with its appendices.

The message further announced that the House had passed a concurrent resolution for the printing of the report of the Director of the Mint on the production of the precious metals in the United States for the year 1884.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (S. 66) providing for allotment of lands in severalty to the Indians residing upon the Umatilla reservation, in the State of Oregon, and granting patents therefor, and for other purposes; and it was thereupon signed by the President pro tempore.

FRENCH SPOILATION CLAIMS ACT.

Mr. FRYE. Mr. Smith, of the document-room, informs me that the number of copies printed of the act to provide for the ascertainment of the claims of American citizens for spoiliations committed by the French prior to the 1st day of July, 1801, is entirely exhausted, and that there is a large number of letters on file asking for copies. I ask unanimous consent to submit a resolution providing that a thousand additional copies of the act may be printed, and that it may be done without reference to the Committee on Printing.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GARLAND in the chair). The Senator from Maine asks leave at this time to submit a resolution. If there be no objection it will be received and read.

The resolution was read, as follows:

Ordered, That there be printed for the files of the Senate document-room 1,000 additional copies of public act No. 13, "An act to provide for the ascertainment of claims of American citizens for spoiliations committed by the French prior to the 31st day of July, 1801," approved January 30, 1865.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

PRIVILEGES OF THE FLOOR.

Mr. HOAR. I ask unanimous consent that the rule of the Senate shall be so construed as to admit members-elect of the House of Representatives to the floor. That has always been the practical construction of the rule, and it is a courtesy which I am sure the Senate would like to extend to the members of the other House. The doorkeepers do not understand that they are authorized to admit members-elect.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate has heard the request made by the Senator from Massachusetts. Is there objection? The Chair hearing none, the request will be considered as granted.

PUBLIC BUILDING BILLS.

Mr. MAHONE. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Minnesota yield to the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. McMILLAN. I do.

Mr. MAHONE. I ask the Senate to take up at this time House bill 870.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no objection the bill will be read for information.

Mr. WILSON. There is objection if it tends to interfere with the regular order.

Mr. MAHONE. There are a few House bills on the Calendar relating to public buildings which it is necessary to have passed at this time in order that the Committee on Appropriations may be advised as to the necessity of certain appropriations.

Mr. KENNA. It will require only a few minutes to dispose of them.

Mr. MILLER, of New York. Let the pending order be laid aside temporarily.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to laying aside temporarily the existing order? If not, the Senator from Virginia will be recognized.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT ABERDEEN.

Mr. MAHONE. I move that the Senate take up House bill 870.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. I suggest to the Senator from Virginia to ask unanimous consent to proceed to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. MAHONE. I will ask unanimous consent that the bill be taken up.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 870) to provide for the erection of a public building at Aberdeen, Miss., for use as a post-office, United States court, and for United States internal-revenue officials, and for other Government purposes.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT READING.

Mr. MAHONE. I ask unanimous consent to take up the bill (H. R. 3593) for the erection of a public building at Chicago, Ill.

Mr. MILLER, of New York. I should like to have the bills taken up in their order on the Calendar.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. Yes; let them be taken up in the order in which they are on the Calendar.

Mr. MAHONE. All right. Then I ask unanimous consent to take up the bill (H. R. 1321) for the erection of a public building at Reading, Pa.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT LOUISVILLE.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask the consent of the Senate to proceed at this time to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 2722) for the relief of Martha Turner.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARRISON in the chair). Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Tennessee?

Mr. WILLIAMS. May I inquire if the bill in relation to the public building at Louisville was passed?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that it has not been passed.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I ask the Senator from Tennessee to allow that bill to be passed now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Tennessee withdraw his request?

Mr. HARRIS. I withdraw the request if that is one of the public-building bills.

Mr. MAHONE. I thought I had called up that bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerks inform the Chair that the bill has not been returned from the Printer.

Mr. HARRIS. Then I ask the Senate to proceed to the consideration of the bill I have indicated. The Senator from Kentucky will have no trouble in getting his bill up whenever it may come back from the Printing Office.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Tennessee to consider the bill (H. R. 2722) for the relief of Martha Turner?

Mr. WILSON. If that is to interfere with the bill on which we have been proceeding this afternoon I shall have to object.

Mr. HARRIS. In order that it should not interfere I ask unanimous consent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee has asked for unanimous consent.

Mr. WILSON. If it does not interfere with the regular order I do not object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. PLATT. Let the bill be read for information.

Mr. WILLIAMS. The bill in relation to the Louisville building is in the same position exactly as the other public-building bills we have passed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that while the bill referred to a few moments ago has not been printed, the engrossed bill is now on the Secretary's table. If it be the pleasure of the Senate that bill can be considered.

Mr. HARRIS. Then I withdraw my request in order to allow the Senate to proceed to the consideration of that bill.

Mr. MAHONE. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 4067) to change the limit of appropriations for the public building at Louisville, Ky.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

MARTHA TURNER.

Mr. HARRIS. I now renew my request for unanimous consent to consider the bill (H. R. 2722) for the relief of Martha Turner, and I will say that if it leads to any debate beyond the reading of the report I shall not insist upon continuing its consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understood that unanimous consent was given to proceed to the consideration of the bill referred to by the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. HARRIS. Then I hope the bill will be read.

Mr. McMILLAN. The confusion now is evidently so great, and there is so much business here that requires to be done, and which ought to be done, that the Senate certainly can not appreciate the merits of the question which is up for discussion on the Iowa railroad bill. I have been interrupted several times, giving way to Senators, and I see the necessity of doing so. I move that the further consideration of the bill be postponed until—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from Minnesota that unanimous consent has been given to the consideration of the bill referred to by the Senator from Tennessee.

Mr. McMILLAN. Then I will wait until that is disposed of.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 2722) for the relief of Martha Turner. It proposes to pay to Martha Turner, widow and beneficiary of John Turner, late of Union County, Tennessee, $2,000, in full payment for the services of her husband in piloting and conducting recruits from the confederate to the Union lines during the late war.

Mr. PLATT. Is there a report in that case?

Mr. HARRIS. There is.

Mr. PLATT. I should like to hear it read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed that there is a report, which will be read.

Mr. PLATT. Inasmuch as I desire to hear the reading of the report, I should like to have the Senate in such a condition that I can hear it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will request Senators and others on the floor of the Senate to cease conversation. Senators will resume their seats.

Mr. HARRIS. I would ask the attention of the Senate to the report of the Senator from New Hampshire upon this bill.

The Chief Clerk read the following report, submitted by Mr. PIKE January 29, 1885:

The Committee on Claims, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 2722) for the relief of Martha Turner, having considered the same, make the following report:

That John Turner, sr., late of Union County, Tennessee, petitioned the Forty-first Congress to allow him $2,000 in full for his services rendered in piloting and guiding recruits from within the confederate lines to the Union Army, and for all moneys expended by him while thus engaged; that the country in which he performed this service was the mountainous regions of East Tennessee and Southern and Eastern Kentucky; that upon the evidence it is clear that from the deceased Turner's knowledge of the mountain passes and the formation of the country generally he was of great service to the Union cause by so piloting large numbers of refugees and recruits over the mountains to the Federal Army at various points in Kentucky; that in doing this he experienced great hardships and many privations; that the testimony of several commissioned officers and many private citizens, in connection with other papers filed, shows that the said Turner commenced the work of piloting recruits, as above stated, about the 1st of January, 1862, and continued the same for all the time till about September 1, 1863, making full twenty months; that his services, as certified to by six commissioned officers of the Federal Army and six private citizens who had knowledge of them in various capacities, together with money paid out, were worth at least $100 per month; that he ought to be paid that sum at least, which is the sum he claims; and that in addition to this he was captured and imprisoned for some time by the confederates on account of his Union sentiments.

On the 18th of June, 1870, a bill passed the House of Representatives appropriating the petitioner the amount he claimed, but the bill was not reached in the Senate during that Congress and failed to become a law.

The Legislature of the State of Tennessee, fully recognizing the loyalty and devotion of the said Turner during the war, and the great services he had rendered the Government of the United States, in November, 1868, passed a joint resolution directing their Senators and Representatives in Congress to procure, if possible, an appropriation sufficient to recompense him for the hardships and privations endured and services rendered the Government.

It also appears upon the evidence that neither the said Turner nor any of his representatives have ever been paid anything for these services or the money expended while acting as a pilot to the Federal lines. It also appears that he was requested by several officers of the Federal Army to recruit for them, and was promised $2.50 for each recruit, and it further appears that at this price the amount his due would exceed the $2,000 claimed by him.

This bill is for the benefit of Martha Turner, the widow of the original claimant, John Turner. His children and all interested have waived all claim against the Government, and agreed that whatever allowance is made be given the widow, in her name and for her sole benefit.

Your committee therefore recommend that the bill pass.

Mr. PIKE. It became my duty to investigate this bill and make this report. I think it is a very just claim and ought long ago to have been paid. I hope the Senate will pass the bill.

Mr. DOLPH. I do not think the original claimant in this case ever had any just claim against the United States. If the parties who employed him to perform the service, which he is alleged to have rendered, had authority to employ him, they had authority to pay him. If he has any claim at all I think it is against the State of Tennessee before that State is reimbursed by the General Government. I can not distinguish it from other claims of a similar nature which have been rejected by the Committee on Claims. I did not agree to the report of the committee and I can not vote for the bill.

Mr. PIKE. This claim has been considered by half a dozen committees of this body and the other, and every one of them has reported favorably. It passed the House once before. The service of this man was in enlisting men in Tennessee and taking them to Kentucky, and he was agreed to be paid by the officers a certain sum. It was not for soldiers secured in the State in which he secured the soldiers, but in another, and therefore was not a proper claim against the State of Tennessee.

Mr. HARRIS. I desire to add to the remarks of the Senator from New Hampshire that if the State of Tennessee had paid this man for his services, they being of the character they were, it is just that character of claim which the State would have been reimbursed by the Federal Treasury for the money so paid. Hence I think there is no merit in the suggestion of the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. DOLPH. Just a word. It has been the uniform practice of the Senate to decline to pay claims of this kind until they have been assumed and paid by the States; and just the moment you make a precedent for the payment of such claims, we shall find all that class of claims where the State has not paid them presented to Congress for payment. This will be a precedent for them.

Mr. HOAR. May I ask the Senator from Oregon if we can with any propriety or justice insist on that rule in a State in a condition like Tennessee. We could not expect such a State to assume or pay the claim. I understand this man recruited in Tennessee.

Mr. DOLPH. I will answer the Senator from Massachusetts by saying that if this claimant was employed by the General Government he must have been employed by some officer having authority to make a contract, and it would be a dangerous precedent, I think, for the United States to recognize contracts made by every military officer during the war and to pay the sum agreed to be paid by any officer. Any officer who had authority to make a contract for services had authority to pay for the services, and he could have done it, and we ought not to be called upon after twenty years to pay a claim which has not before been paid. The presumption is against such a claim.

The bill was reported to the Senate, ordered to a third reading, and read the third time.

Mr. DOLPH. I call for the yeas and nays on the passage of the bill. The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. MANDERSON (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Florida [Mr. JONES].

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. MANDERSON. Understanding that the Senator from Florida [Mr. JONES] with whom I am paired would vote "yea" on this question, I vote "yea."

Mr. CONGER. My colleague [Mr. PALMER] is temporarily absent at this time, and I have forgotten with whom he is paired.

The result was announced—yeas 38, nays 5; as follows:

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8138) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes.

Mr. PLUMB. I move that the Senate insist on its amendments disagreed to by the House and accede to the request of the House for a conference.

Mr. CONGER. I desire to ask the Senator in charge of the bill whether the amendment in regard to the renting of premises for third-class post-offices was concurred in by the House or not.

Mr. PLUMB. It was non-concurred in.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Kansas.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. PLUMB, Mr. ALLISON, and Mr. BECK were appointed.

CAPT. VINCENT PHELPS.

Mr. PLUMB. I should like to have unanimous consent to ask that the vote by which the bill (H. R. 7805) granting a pension to Capt. Vincent Phelps was indefinitely postponed yesterday be reconsidered. Since that time new evidence has been discovered which I think will cause favorable consideration by the Senate. I ask unanimous consent that the vote by which the bill was indefinitely postponed may be reconsidered and the bill placed on the Calendar.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kansas asks unanimous consent that the vote of the Senate indefinitely postponing the bill (H. R. 7805) granting a pension to Capt. Vincent Phelps be reconsidered and the bill placed on the Calendar. Is there objection? The Chair hears none. It is so ordered.

REFUND OF LUMBER DUTIES.

Mr. MILLER, of New York. I ask unanimous consent to call up Order of Business 1253, being House bill 6087, reported favorably from the Finance Committee. It will take but a moment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New York asks unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 6087) authorizing the payment by the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States to Charles H. Getman, the firm of E. W. Rathbun & Co., the firm of Kinyon, Wright & Co., the firm of Bond & Co., and the firm of Page, Fairchild & Co. certain duties paid by them on imported lumber accidentally burned while in custody of officers of customs, and before the same had entered into consumption. Is there objection to the pending order being informally laid aside for the consideration of this bill?

Mr. WILSON. I will not object if it will not cause discussion, but if it will occupy much time I shall insist on the regular order.

Mr. MILLER, of New York. It will not take any time, I am sure. It is a favorable report of the Finance Committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there any objection to laying aside informally the pending order for the consideration of the bill called up by the Senator from New York? The Chair hears none.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider House bill 6087.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

HOUR OF MEETING.

Mr. HOAR. I move that when the Senate adjourns this afternoon it adjourn to meet on Monday at 9 o'clock. I understand that is the desire of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts moves that when the Senate adjourns to-day it be to meet on Monday next at 9 o'clock in the morning.

The motion was agreed to.

SARAH M. BISSELL.

Mr. BLAIR. I move that the Senate now proceed to consider House bill 6940, Order of Business 1300.

Mr. MILLER, of New York. I suggest that the Senator ask unanimous consent.

Mr. WILSON. Do not displace the regular order.

Mr. BLAIR. I ask unanimous consent.

Mr. McMILLAN. What is the bill?

Mr. BLAIR. House bill 6940.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will state to the Senator from New Hampshire that the Chair believes that bill was acted on this morning.

Mr. BLAIR. There was a close vote of the Senate which I moved to reconsider. I ask unanimous consent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Hampshire asks unanimous consent to proceed to the consideration of a motion to reconsider. Is there objection?

Several Senators objected.

Mr. BLAIR. I make the motion to take it up.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Hampshire moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the motion to reconsider the vote rejecting the bill (H. R. 6940) granting a pension to Sarah M. Bissell.

Mr. WILSON. What effect will that motion have on the pending bill?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will have the effect of displacing it, if the motion is agreed to.

Mr. WILSON. Then I hope it will not be done. Let the Senator ask unanimous consent.

Mr. BLAIR. I did ask unanimous consent and there was objection. The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection was made, and then the Senator made his motion in form.

Mr. WILSON. I hope the Senate will not take this up to the displacement of the regular order.

Mr. BLAIR. I do not desire to do that; but this bill—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Debate is not in order without unanimous consent. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from New Hampshire. [Putting the question.] The yeas appear to have it.

Mr. BLAIR. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question now is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from New Hampshire, on which the yeas and nays have been ordered, to proceed to consider the motion to reconsider the vote by which the passage of the bill (H. R. 6940) granting a pension to Sarah M. Bissell was refused.

The yeas and nays were taken.

Mr. SAWYER. My pair with the Senator from Delaware [Mr. SAULSBURY] is transferred to the Senator from Michigan [Mr. CONGER].

The result was announced—yeas 29, nays 22; as follows:

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate refused to pass the bill.

The question being put, a division was called for.

Mr. HOAR. May I ask the Chair what is the precise question?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The precise question is, Will the Senate agree to the motion of the Senator from New Hampshire to reconsider the vote by which the Senate refused to pass the bill?

Mr. HOAR. May I inquire of the Chair, is not a motion to reconsider a question which is itself debatable under the rules?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It would have been so except for the new rules which expressly provide, the Chair is quite sure, that such a motion is not open to debate. The Chair will have the rule read if the Senator desires.

Mr. HOAR. I should like to have it settled.

Mr. BLAIR. Do not let us take up time in this way.

Mr. PLATT. If reconsidered, the bill will then be open to debate, I suppose?

Several SENATORS. Certainly.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will read the paragraph of Rule XIII relating to this point. It is as follows:

Every motion to reconsider shall be decided by a majority vote, without debate.

The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from New Hampshire to reconsider the vote by which the Senate refused to pass the bill.

Mr. INGALLS. May I inquire what was the question on which the yeas and nays were just taken?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On taking up the bill.

Mr. INGALLS. Taking up the bill, it having been defeated?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Taking up the motion to reconsider. The bill having been defeated the Senator from New Hampshire entered a motion to reconsider, and the question was on proceeding to the consideration of the motion to reconsider, to which the Senate has agreed, and the question now is, therefore, whether the Senate will reconsider the vote refusing to pass the bill, on which the yeas and nays have been ordered.

The yeas and nays were taken.

Mr. HARRISON. I have left the Senator from Missouri [Mr. COCKRELL] upon a conference committee to prepare the report, and paired with him. I announce my pair with him and withhold my vote. I do not know how he would vote.

Mr. McPHERSON. I am paired with my colleague [Mr. SEWELL].

The result was announced—yeas 30, nays 20; as follows:

YEAS—30.

Aldrich, Blair, Bowen, Brown, Call, Cameron of Wis., Cullom,	Dawes, Dolph, Edmunds, Fair, Frye, Gorman, Hoar, Jones of Florida,	Lapham, McMillan, Mahone, Miller of Cal., Miller of N. Y., Mitchell, Morgan, Morrill,	Pike, Platt, Sabin, Sawyer, Voorhees, Walker.
--	---	--	--

NAYS—20.

Bayard, Camden, Coke, Colquitt, Garland,	Groome, Hampton, Harris, Jackson, Jonas,	Maxey, Plumb, Pugh, Riddleberger, Sherman,	Slater, Vance, Van Wyck, Vest, Wilson.
--	--	--	--

ABSENT—26.

Allison, Beck, Butler, Cameron of Pa., Cockrell, Conger, Farley, George, Gibson, Hale, Harrison, Hawley, Hill, Ingalls,	Jones of Nevada, Kenna, Lamar, Logan, McPherson, Manderson, Palmer,	Pendleton, Ransom, Saulsbury, Sewell, Williams.
--	---	---

So the motion to reconsider was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question recurs, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. BLAIR. I only want to say a word. Of all the cases that have ever come to my knowledge where an increase from $30 to $50 has been made by statute, this is the most pressing and the most worthy. By a very close vote this morning the Senate refused to pass this bill. The Senate was very thin at the time, and now I have nothing to say only that I hope the bill will pass.

Mr. CAMDEN. Mr. President, I move to amend the bill by striking out "fifty" and inserting "thirty."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. A motion to amend is not now in order, the bill having been read the third time, and the question being on the passage of the bill.

Mr. CAMDEN. Then I will state to the Senate that this application comes before us without having been submitted to the Pension Office. The Senate Committee on Pensions have no means of determining whether a pension should be granted or not. We have no means of getting the evidence. It is here against the unanimous rule adopted by the Committee on Pensions, which is not to consider a claim before that committee until the case has first been submitted to the Pension Office and the evidence presented there and the report of the Commissioner of Pensions had upon the case. This case is brought directly before Congress without going to the Pension Office at all and has been submitted to the Committee on Pensions, and in accordance with the unanimous rule of the Committee on Pensions it is presented to the Senate on an adverse report.

The highest pension that the claimant would be entitled to under the law is $30 a month, if she shows that she is entitled to a pension at all. It is admitted by the Senator from New Hampshire that the officer was placed on the retired-list about ten years before his death; and there is no evidence whatever before the Senate that he died from any disease contracted in the service or for any other cause than old age. And yet the Senate is not only asked, without any knowledge of the facts in this case, to grant a pension to the claimant, but it is asked to increase the pension allowed by law to nearly double its amount, from $30 up to $50 per month.

If we are to have any rules for the granting of pensions at all applicable to all cases alike, there must be some limit to the informal way in which pension bills are considered, as this is now being considered by the Senate. I hope the Senate will not add this precedent to the other precedents that have been established here for the last day or two which will flood the Committee on Pensions with innumerable applications of the same kind, and there will be no valid reason for rejecting them if such precedents as these are established.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill.

Mr. CAMDEN. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. McPHERSON (when his name was called). I am paired with my colleague [Mr. SEWELL].

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. COCKRELL (after having voted in the negative). I did not observe that the Senator from Indiana [Mr. HARRISON] had not voted. I am paired with him; I see he is absent. He would vote "yea" if present, and I should vote "nay." I withdraw the vote I cast.

The result was announced—yeas 28, nays 21; as follows:

YEAS—28.

Aldrich, Blair, Bowen, Brown, Call, Cameron of Wis., Chace,	Conger, Cullom, Dawes, Dolph, Edmunds, Frye, Hawley,	Hoar, Lapham, McMillan, Mahone, Miller of Cal., Miller of N. Y., Mitchell,	Morgan, Morrill, Pike, Platt, Sawyer, Voorhees, Walker.
---	--	--	---

NAYS—21.

Bayard, Camden, Coke, Colquitt, Fair, Groome,	Hampton, Harris, Jackson, Jonas, Maxey, Pendleton,	Plumb, Pugh, Riddleberger, Sherman, Slater, Vance,	Van Wyck, Vest, Wilson.
--	---	---	-------------------------------

ABSENT—27.

Allison, Beck, Butler, Cameron of Pa., Cockrell, Farley, Garland,	George, Gibson, Gorman, Hale, Harrison, Hill, Ingalls,	Jones of Florida, Jones of Nevada, Kenna, Lamar, Logan, McPherson, Manderson,	Palmer, Ransom, Sabin, Saulsbury, Sewell, Williams.
---	--	---	--

So the bill was passed.

LOSSES OF PROPERTY BY TROOPS.

Mr. COCKRELL. I rise to a privileged report. The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on House bill 5713 have met, and submit a report.

The Chief Clerk read the report, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5713) to provide for the settlement of the claims of officers and enlisted men of the Army for loss of private property destroyed in the military service of the United States, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, and 4, and agree to the same as follows:
No. 1. Page 1, line 4, after "officers" insert "and."

No. 2. Page 1, lines 4 and 5, strike out "and duly authorized laundresses."
 No. 3. Page 2, line 3, insert after "war" "or hostilities with Indians."
 No. 4. Page 2, line 7, after "reasonable" insert "useful, necessary, and proper for such officer or soldier while in quarters, engaged in the public service in the line of duty: And provided further, That all claims now existing shall be presented within two years, and not after, from the passage of this act; and all such claims hereafter arising be presented within two years from the occurrence of the loss or destruction;" and the House agree to the same.

F. M. COCKRELL,
 BENJ. HARRISON,
In behalf of the Senate.
 W. S. ROSECRANS,
 GEO. W. STEELE,
 R. M. MURRAY,
In behalf of the House of Representatives

Mr. COCKRELL. I was mistaken in presenting the conference report at this time. I ask leave to withdraw it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report is withdrawn.

WILLIAM H. DAVIS.

Mr. PIKE. I desire to call up House bill 4382, Order of Business 1126.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Hampshire moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Order of Business 1126, being the bill (H. R. 4382) for the relief of William H. Davis.

Mr. PLATT. Let the bill be read for information.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be read for information if there be no objection.

The bill was read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. PIKE].

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which appropriates $8,000 to indemnify William H. Davis for the destruction of his wharf and warehouse at San Diego, Cal., by the United States troops, during the winter of 1861 and 1862.

Mr. SHERMAN. I think the report had better be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read.

Mr. PIKE. I can state the substance of the report briefly.

Mr. SHERMAN. The Senator from New Hampshire says he can give the substance of the report. I do not ask for the reading.

Mr. PIKE. This claim is for wharf property at San Diego, in the State of California. The claimant was the owner of a large wharf and warehouse at San Diego, which was constructed in 1851 of redwood. During the winter of 1861-'62 the United States troops in service at that place used a large part of the material of which the wharf was constructed for fuel, building, and other purposes, by which the wharf was rendered worthless to him. The claim was sent by the act of Congress of March 3, 1881, for the relief of the claimant, to the Secretary of War, with authority to have it investigated by the Quartermaster's Department and to report to Congress. The Secretary of War reported that the claimant ought to be paid the sum of $6,570. The House has allowed him by the bill only $6,000, being less than the amount found due. An officer of the Quartermaster-General's Department, Colonel Saxton, was sent to make the investigation, and reported the facts which I have stated. The Committee on Claims further investigated it, and think that this is the least sum that should be paid.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DUCK VALLEY SETTLERS.

Mr. FAIR. I ask unanimous consent to call up Order of Business 1090, being House bill 3008.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nevada moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of Order of Business 1090, being the bill (H. R. 3008) for the relief of certain settlers on the Duck Valley Indian reservation, in Nevada. The question is, Will the Senate agree to the motion?

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It provides for payment to the settlers on the Duck Valley Indian reservation, in Nevada, of $5,400, as follows: To Levi Harris, $3,500; to William Harris, $200; to Henry Boyle, $1,500; and to J. H. Babb, $200, in full for their improvements on the reservation.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

SAINT PAUL AND SIOUX CITY RAILROAD LANDS.

Mr. WILSON. I now move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 7299, Order of Business 1071.

Mr. MORRILL. I ask the Senator from Iowa to give way for a single proposition.

Mr. McMILLAN. What is the bill proposed to be taken up?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa moves that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7299) forfeiting a part of certain lands granted to the State of Iowa to aid in the construction of railroads in that State, and for other purposes. The question is on agreeing to the motion.

Mr. WILSON. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and being taken, resulted—yeas 28, nays 22; as follows:

YEAS—28.

Allison,	Fair,	Harrison,	Plumb,
Bowen,	Garland,	Hill,	Slater,
Call,	George,	Jackson,	Vance,
Camden,	Gorman,	Jonas,	Van Wyck,
Cockrell,	Groome,	Kenna,	Yeat,
Coke,	Hampton,	Miller of Cal.,	Williams,
Colquitt,	Harris,	Morgan,	Wilson.

NAYS—22.

Blair,	Dawes,	Lapham,	Platt,
Brown,	Dolph,	McMillan,	Sabin,
Cameron of Wis.,	Frye,	McPherson,	Sawyer,
Chace,	Hawley,	Mahone,	Sherman.
Conger,	Hoar,	Mitchell,
Cullom,	Ingalls,	Morrill,

ABSENT—26.

Aldrich,	Gibson,	Maxey,	Riddleberger,
Bayard,	Hale,	Miller of N. Y.,	Saulsbury,
Beck,	Jones of Florida,	Palmer,	Sewell,
Butler,	Jones of Nevada,	Pendleton,	Voorhees,
Cameron of Pa.,	Lamar,	Pike,	Walker.
Edmunds,	Logan,	Pugh,
Farley,	Manderson,	Ransom,

So the motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill.

ALEXANDER D. SCHENCK.

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask the Senator from Iowa to yield while I obtain unanimous consent to pass a little bill giving an officer of the Army $107 for property stolen from him. I hope the Senator from Iowa will not object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GARLAND in the chair). Is there unanimous consent to taking up the bill indicated by the Senator from Ohio? The Chair hears no objection.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 1266) for the relief of Alexander D. Schenck. It provides for the payment to Alexander D. Schenck, a first lieutenant in the Second Artillery, of $107.65, being the amount he has been required to deposit with the Treasury of the United States to make good the loss of certain subsistence stores pertaining to the Commissary Department of the United States Army, for which he was responsible as acting commissary of subsistence at Fort Johnston, North Carolina, in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, its stores having been stolen or otherwise unlawfully disposed of by John V. Seyton, late a commissary-sergeant in the United States Army, without the knowledge, consent, fault, or neglect of Schenck.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (H. R. 2185) for the relief of Rosa Vertner Jeffrey and others;
 A bill (H. R. 5364) granting a pension to William H. Whitcomb;
 A bill (H. R. 5543) granting a pension to David M. Nagle;
 A bill (H. R. 5798) granting a pension to John E. Denham;
 A bill (H. R. 6011) granting an increase of pension to Robert Casey;
 A bill (H. R. 6029) for the relief of Jeremiah McCarty; and
 A bill (H. R. 7617) granting a pension to Mrs. Ann E. Gridley.

SAINT PAUL AND SIOUX CITY RAILROAD LANDS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 7299) forfeiting a part of certain lands granted to the State of Iowa to aid in the construction of railroads in that State, and for other purposes.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I rise to take the floor on the pending measure.

Mr. MORRILL. I wish to ask unanimous consent to call up a House joint resolution that merely allows one of the riflemen at Wimbledon to have a silver cup that has been presented to him.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GARLAND in the chair). Is there objection to passing over the pending order informally and taking up the joint resolution indicated by the Senator from Vermont?

Mr. MORRILL. It is Order of Business 968, House joint resolution 124.

A. B. VAN HEUSEN.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution (H. Res. 124) authorizing the collector of the port of New York to deliver, free of duty, a silver cup won by Sergt. A. B. Van Heusen, as a member of the American Rifle Team, at Wimbledon, in July, 1883.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

CARLISLE MILITARY RESERVATION.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President—

Mr. HARRISON. I ask the Senator from Massachusetts to yield to me for a moment while I ask unanimous consent to pass a bill. It is a bill that I called the attention of the Senate to the other day relating to a right of way through the Carlisle reservation. The Senator from Pennsylvania tells me that if it is passed now it can be got through the House. The whole enterprise is suspended on account of the want of this bill.

Mr. WILSON. The difficulty about that is that it may lead to discussion.

Mr. HARRISON. It can not in the smallest degree. If it leads to discussion I will withdraw the bill.

Mr. WILSON. The Senator will allow me to say—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. This debate is proceeding by unanimous consent.

Mr. WILSON. By this yielding in the earlier part of the day the bill taken up on my motion lost its place. If we had gone on with the bill when it was before the Senate, I think we should have completed it before this time. I certainly do not intend to occupy much time in submitting remarks upon it; and if we go right on now and close it up, then there will be abundance of time for other matters.

Mr. HARRISON. With the permission of the Senator and the Senate, I wish to say that I voted with him on his bill for its consideration; but the bill I refer to can be passed and engrossed and go to the House with some chance of being acted on.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] is entitled to the floor on the pending bill.

Mr. MAXEY. I ask the Senator from Massachusetts to yield to me one moment to ask the unanimous consent of the Senate to call up Order of Business 1425, being the bill (H. R. 6533) for the relief of Dr. Thomas J. Jones, a unanimous report of the Committee on Military Affairs.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there unanimous consent to laying aside the present order for the purpose of taking up the bill indicated by the Senator from Texas?

Mr. WILSON. I have just declined to yield in another case; I can not yield in this.

Mr. MAXEY. It will take but a moment. It is a very short bill.

Mr. WILSON. That has been said all the afternoon, but every bill called up took so many moments as finally to displace this bill. I think this bill can be disposed of in a short time.

SAINT PAUL AND SIOUX CITY RAILROAD LANDS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts is entitled to the floor on the bill (H. R. 7299) forfeiting a part of certain lands granted to the State of Iowa to aid in the construction of railroads in that State, and for other purposes; which bill is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I think I can say all I have to say on this bill in about three minutes. I trust it is not too much of a request to make of the Senate to ask them to listen for those three minutes, because this is a question of justice, and it is a very simple question as far as I wish to state it.

The persons who have called my attention to this bill are some persons dwelling in the State of Massachusetts who have loaned their money to build a railroad in the West at the rate of 6 per cent. The railroad company is insolvent and the only security they have got is the railroad's title to these lands which are now in dispute.

Mr. PLUMB. Will the Senator make his statement a little more complete by saying the lands granted to this railroad including this land, not this land alone?

Mr. HOAR. Including this land with the lands granted to the railroad company. The railroad company itself has not been able to pay any interest on the bonds for many years, and this bill affects the interest of these bondholders because these lands are practically the only security they have in the world, and they are not enough to pay the debt. The whole amount of it is about $800,000. I do not believe there is a gentleman in this body who thinks that a person who has loaned about $800,000 in the East to build a Western railroad at the moderate interest of 6 per cent. is a person who is not entitled to justice at the hands of this legislative body. If there be any person who entertains that opinion, I do not know how to address an argument to his mind.

That being the case, what is the point in this bill? Congress granted to the State of Iowa certain public lands, so many per mile, with the authority to the State of Iowa to give those lands to railroad companies who should build railroads through Iowa, and the State of Iowa selected the Sioux City road as one of those roads, which is the road that made the mortgage to the persons of whom I speak.

Congress went on to say in the original grant that whenever the governor of Iowa certified that ten miles of road had been built, then a patent should issue to the State of Iowa for the benefit of the railroad company that had built that much road. There were to be so many acres of land for every mile of road given to the State of Iowa, but for convenience in issuing the patents they were to be issued ten miles by ten miles. This company went on in good faith and built its road ten miles by ten miles and got its patent for each completed section of ten miles; but of the last ten miles they only built 6.13. The reason they did not build the other three miles and a fraction was that the Legislature of Iowa granted to another land-grant railroad, precisely under this same act of Congress having the same rights, a right to build its track along those three miles and a fraction.

This company, supposing that the Government did not expect to have two roads built over substantially the same track, and that it did not expect to have to give two land grants per mile where one would do, stopped and made its connection with the other land-grant road into Sioux City. The question with these mortgage bondholders is whether they can have some 85,000 acres—I think that is the quantity, but no matter what the amount is—which were earned by the company having faithfully and honestly and fairly built those six miles and a fraction of road. That is the point.

Mr. GEORGE. I wish to ask a question.

Mr. HOAR. At the end of my statement I will yield for a question. That being the case, the State of Iowa refused to make the certificate to this company, and it is in the Supreme Court of the United States, and expects early next fall to have the case argued on some legal proceeding which it has begun to settle whether it shall have this land or not. Now, then comes in this bill, and this bill says in substance that everybody in interest may bring a suit to see who has got the legal or equitable title to this land, and that the land that nobody has got a legal or equitable title to shall be resumed by the United States and open to settlement, and that persons who have gone in there and squatted and settled on it already shall have the preference, as if they had been bona fide settlers. Nobody has a legal title to this land, because the patent has not issued, and that is what is necessary to make a legal title.

Mr. McMILLAN. If the Senator will permit me—

Mr. HOAR. I think I can complete my statement better if I am allowed to proceed, though no doubt the Senator would fortify it.

That being the case, what I claim is that this bill should be amended by saying that the Supreme Court shall also determine, as you are making a special lawsuit for this particular road, whether these people are in justice and equity entitled to have their patent to these six miles and a fraction; and, if so, then that the land grant appertaining to the six miles and a fraction shall not be open to public entry and shall not be taken possession of by settlers, and that this road shall have it, or that a report shall be made to Congress and Congress shall say whether they will grant it hereafter.

My honorable friend from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN], one of the committee who reported this bill—I do not know but that he made the report himself—says that that is the substance of the bill now. I do not think so; I do not think the bill means any such thing now. I think when the bill says legal or equitable rights it means legal rights or such equitable rights as are enforced by courts of equity acting under the recognized equity jurisprudence, and that a man would not be supposed to have a legal or equitable title when it required the issuing of a patent from the Government for these 6.13 miles under a law which only entitled him to his patent when he had built ten miles.

If the committee will consent to put into this bill an amendment that will make that thing clear which the Senator from Alabama thinks is in there now, and which I think is not, my opposition to this bill will be withdrawn. If they do not consent to that I think it is an unjust bill which ought to be resisted and voted down.

Now I will answer the question of the Senator from Mississippi if I can.

Mr. GEORGE. I desire to know whether that was the only default committed by the company—failing to build those three miles and a fraction.

Mr. HOAR. Yes; that is all I know of.

Mr. GEORGE. How much land was granted to the company per mile?

Mr. McMILLAN. Ten sections a mile.

Mr. GEORGE. And it is the land adjacent to those three miles and a fraction that is now in controversy?

Mr. HOAR. No; they built over six miles of the last ten-mile section. They could not get a patent until they built ten miles. It is the land adjacent to the 6.13 miles that is in controversy. Of course they do not claim land for the 3.87 miles of road not constructed.

As I said in the beginning, these bondholders live in Massachusetts; some of them are widows and orphans. They are the sort of people who invest their money in securities of this kind at 6 per cent. only, and the presumption is that they are persons of invested property. There is the whole story, as I understand it.

Mr. HARRIS. If I understand the statement of the Senator from Massachusetts it is that the act granted these lands in sections of ten miles.

Mr. HOAR. Not exactly. It granted to the State of Iowa so much a mile, ten sections. Then it said that when ten miles had been built the governor of Iowa was to issue his certificate and the patent should go; and when another ten miles had been built the patent should go. I believe that meant that the company should get proportionately for the last ten miles. Suppose the road had turned out to be ninety-five miles long and they had built the whole ninety-five miles, would they lose the land grant for the last five miles?

Mr. HARRIS. Congress granted to the State of Iowa such an amount of public lands to be appropriated to purposes of public improvement. The governor of Iowa was authorized by the Legislature of that State to issue his certificate upon the completion of the construction of ten-mile sections.

Mr. HOAR. Authorized by the act of Congress to do that.

Mr. HARRIS. Then to a subsequent road a grant of three miles and a fraction on the same line was made.

Mr. HOAR. On the same line under the same authority.

Mr. HARRIS. That grant has been given by the State of Iowa?

Mr. HOAR. Yes, sir.

Mr. HARRIS. And the question in this bill is as to whether or not the original company should receive the land grant for the six miles and a fraction.

Mr. HOAR. That is it exactly; for what it did build.

Mr. BROWN. In that connection I wish to ask the Senator from Massachusetts a question. I understand him to say that the only reason why the other three miles and a fraction were not built was that the other road was already built, and it was no use for this company to build that portion.

Mr. HOAR. That is it exactly.

Mr. VAN WYCK. Now will the Senator from Massachusetts allow me to ask a question? He shows in his statement that there is a conflict of opinion as to what a law previously passed means, as I understand?

Mr. HOAR. Excuse me a moment. I omitted to say that these parties have got a suit in the Supreme Court of the United States to compel the governor of Iowa to give his certificate for these six miles and that suit is just about being reached for argument, and will be reached by next fall at all events. It was close at hand when the Supreme Court took its recess. It will be reached there this spring before adjournment or next fall, and if this new proposition comes in it will delay the settlement of that for four or five years.

Mr. CALL. I should like to ask the Senator from Massachusetts how many miles were built within the time required.

Mr. HOAR. All were. There is no question on earth so far as I know except what I have stated.

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President—

Mr. HARRISON. Will the Senator yield to me a moment, as I want light on this question, and probably it was his intention to try to diffuse some light?

If I understand the argument of the Senator from Massachusetts it is that this company under the bill as it stands would not be entitled to the conterminous lands along these six miles of road; that this bill would deprive the company of the lands conterminous to these six miles?

Mr. HOAR. Exactly.

Mr. HARRISON. Does the Senator understand that under the original law granting these lands to the State of Iowa this company would be entitled to these lands?

Mr. HOAR. I think so. It is just that question.

Mr. HARRISON. If there is that question, what I think is the fair thing to do is to leave that question to the courts for settlement.

Mr. HOAR. It is in the courts now.

Mr. HARRISON. If this bill does anything more than to refer to the courts the existing rights of parties, without attempting to change them in any way in the world, it goes beyond the scope I think it ought to have; but as I understand it, it is simply to send into the courts for adjudication the question whether this road is entitled to those lands as earned lands, and it does not profess to give to the United States anything but unearned lands.

Mr. HOAR. That is just the fallacy of the proposition, if I may be permitted to use such a phrase in regard to anything said by so distinguished a lawyer.

Mr. HARRISON. It is not my proposition.

Mr. HOAR. Suppose it to be true that the United States made a land grant to a railroad company and said that it should get its lands as fast as it built ten miles, and then the same authority made a land grant to another railroad which came and located and built half of the last ten miles of the road of company No. 1, and suppose it to be true that in strict law the company No. 1 was not entitled to its patent because it had not built the ten miles, though it was prevented from doing so by the act of the Government itself, would that be a just bill which merely referred the naked question of law to a court and came in and forfeited the claim for the five miles which were actually built? That is the very question.

Mr. HARRISON. I am not trying to debate this case or assert views of my own, but rather to obtain information. If I understand this case, the question would be, no new legislation having been had, to which road, if to any road, the original grant would appertain. If the road in which the Senator's friends are interested can not claim in law these lands which are said to be in dispute, then there would be no way for them to get them except by a new act of Congress which would confer some rights upon them.

Mr. McMILLAN. If the Senator from Indiana will allow me—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama [Mr. MORGAN] has the floor.

Mr. MORGAN. I yielded to allow the debate to run on over there.

Mr. McMILLAN. The Senator from Indiana, I think, does not know precisely the point at issue here. There is no counter-claim for the six miles and a fraction of land.

Mr. HARRISON. By the other railroad?

Mr. McMILLAN. None at all.

Mr. HARRISON. That is what I supposed.

Mr. McMILLAN. This road is the only road entitled to those lands if any road should get them.

Mr. HARRISON. The Senator from Massachusetts has stated the case, as I understood him in the beginning, quite differently from the statement made by the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. HOAR. Oh, no.

Mr. HARRISON. It seems as to the conterminous land along these six miles of road the question is simply between the United States or the State of Iowa and this railroad company, and that is not complicated by the claim of any other railroad company at all.

Mr. McMILLAN. Not at all.

Mr. HARRISON. Now, if I understand the situation, the Senator from Massachusetts must either claim that under the original grant this was given to his railroad company, and they are entitled to it—and if that is true then no legislation can take it away from them—or if he so construes the law as that they were not entitled to it under that law, then how can they get it, whether we pass this bill or not, unless we pass an affirmative law giving it to them?

Mr. MORGAN. Mr. President, I find that there is some misunderstanding about this bill. This is a bill of peace, intended to compose controversies in the State of Iowa that otherwise can not be composed. Legislation has been demanded in two directions from the Committee on Public Lands; one is that we shall give these lands by some direct act to what are termed the squatters upon them, another is that we shall give the lands by a direct act to the railroad company. These lands were patented to the State of Iowa by the Government of the United States. When I say "patented" I mean certified in such form as that the title was equivalent to a patent; and that action occurred under the fourth section of the act making this land grant, a part of which I will read:

That the lands hereby granted shall be disposed of by said State for the purposes aforesaid only, and in manner following, namely: When the governor of said State shall certify to the Secretary of the Interior that any section of ten consecutive miles of either of said roads is completed in a good, substantial, and workmanlike manner, as a first-class railroad, then the Secretary of the Interior shall issue to the State patents for one hundred sections of land for the benefit of the road having completed the ten consecutive miles as aforesaid. When the governor of said State shall certify that another section of ten consecutive miles shall have been completed as aforesaid, then the Secretary of the Interior shall issue patents to said State in like manner for a like number; and when certificates of the completion of additional sections of ten consecutive miles of either of said roads are from time to time made as aforesaid, additional sections of land shall be patented as aforesaid until said roads or either of them are completed, when the whole of the lands hereby granted shall be patented to the State for the uses aforesaid and none other.

It is upon the legal construction of that act of Congress that these questions all arise. A certificate came to the Department here, which was satisfactory to the officers of the Department, that this road had been completed in sections of ten miles according to the provisions of the fourth section of this act. Thereupon the Secretary of the Interior made a patent to the State of Iowa. Pending that arrangement persons in Iowa, who disputed that the Secretary of the Interior had made a proper construction of this law, entered upon the land and claimed it was part of the public domain of the United States, they claiming that only six-tenths of this last section of ten miles had been completed and that four-tenths remained incomplete, and, therefore, the State of Iowa held the land in excess to the amount of four-tenths of the ten miles in trust for the Government of the United States, and not in trust for the railroad company. The Legislature of Iowa, sympathizing with its own people, taking sides with the people who are called squatters, refused to make a patent for these lands to this railway company, refused it by act of the Legislature and left the lands in abeyance so far as the transfer by that State of the legal title was concerned.

Now, then, what is the attitude of Iowa as to the Government of the United States? It is the holder of the legal title to the land opposite to and conterminous with these four-tenths of this section of ten miles, and the Government of the United States is appealed to to institute some proceeding whereby these claimants under the Government can come forward to assert its rights upon this land. What is Congress to do if it does anything about this case? Congress must necessarily assert the authority, whatever it may be, of the Government of the United States as against its trustee, who holds these lands in its possession under a patent, refuses to convey to the railroad, and asserts that these lands rightfully belong to the squatters.

Mr. McMILLAN. The Senator from Alabama is mistaken in that.

Mr. MORGAN. In what respect?

Mr. McMILLAN. The State of Iowa refused to declare a forfeiture of this grant. On the application of these squatters it refused to do that.

Mr. MORGAN. It may have refused to declare a forfeiture; I do not know about that. I do not think that is a material question, but it certainly has refused to convey the lands to the railroad company.

Mr. McMILLAN. It certainly affects the rights of these claimants.

Mr. MORGAN. Whatever may have taken place beyond what I have stated does not affect the case in the slightest degree. The State of Iowa has refused to convey these lands to the railroad company, placing the construction on the law that it was not apportionable for the ten miles; that a section of ten miles must be complete under the act I have just read before the title of the railroad company was good to any part of the land.

Of course these settlers upon these lands can not assert any title in their own names, for the Government of the United States had put the title out of its own hands into the hands of the State of Iowa, a naked trustee, but the State of Iowa refuses to assert the title in favor of the railroad company, and is willing, I dare say, to transfer the title to the squatters, but she has not done it. The title remains there to-day in the hands of the State of Iowa, a naked trustee.

Mr. HARRISON. The Senator from Alabama will allow me a word. Of course the State of Iowa would have no power to transfer these lands otherwise than in the direction of the trust. She would have no power to transfer them to squatters.

Mr. MORGAN. No; I suppose she has not any such power. At all events she has refused to convey to the railroad company, and she holds the lands just in that plight. Now the squatters come here and insist that the Government of the United States shall declare that these lands have reverted in consequence of the fact that Iowa has refused to convey them to the railroad company in completion of the trust. They claim that it was quasi a public domain, but that the condition of it, the patent having issued, shuts them out from all rights in it, and they pray the Government to assert its rights upon it.

In this condition of affairs, to avoid another Des Moines difficulty and involvement there which will run on through a number of years, the Committee on Public Lands, responding to the bill that came from the House and altering it only in some particulars that we thought were important, concluded to organize a tribunal by conferring jurisdiction on the circuit court of Iowa to adjudicate this whole matter. The committee of the House and the committee of the Senate have been equally sedulous to get this matter before the courts of the country without the slightest change of any right of any person whatever.

Mr. McMILLAN. Will the Senator from Alabama allow me to ask a question?

Mr. MORGAN. Yes.

Mr. McMILLAN. Does not this bill propose to legalize the settlement of those persons, whom the Senator refers to as squatters, as bona fide settlers upon the public lands?

Mr. MORGAN. No, Mr. President, not any more than the law legalizes that now; for if it is public land every citizen of the United States has the unquestionable right to go on it.

Mr. McMILLAN. But the Senator will permit me to suggest to him that whether these lands were public lands or not there is no doubt whatever about the fact that they were withdrawn from market and were not subject to settlement under the public-land laws of the United States, and this bill proposes to recognize them as persons who had a right to go on there at the time they did go on and make their settlement.

Mr. MORGAN. That appears to be a phase of the case which impresses me with this idea, that the Senator's opposition is not because our action is benefiting the railroad company, but because it benefits the settler.

Mr. McMILLAN. It will not do for the Senator to put the matter in that shape. He has said that this bill confers no rights upon any persons that they do not now hold.

Mr. MORGAN. That is correct.

Mr. McMILLAN. I have already pointed him to the fact that it does relieve these persons from a disability under which they lie which must be fatal to their claim if it remains.

Mr. MORGAN. I do not understand this bill if it relieves them from any such disability, or if it confers upon them any new right or privilege not found in the general laws of the United States, for I reassert now—I do not wish to repeat it again, though—that the public domain of the United States is open freely to the settlement of the people, and if they may not make entries upon it either of homesteads, or pre-emption, or private entries, still there is a standing invitation under the laws of the United States to every man in this country to go upon the public domain and make settlement there.

Mr. McMILLAN. I do not wish to interrupt the Senator if it is disagreeable to him.

Mr. MORGAN. It is not disagreeable to me, but it must be to the Senate, because I can not get what really I want to say together.

Mr. McMILLAN. I call the Senator's attention to the fact that where public lands are withdrawn from market by the proper authority no citizen has a right under the law to go upon them to make settlement for any purpose.

Mr. MORGAN. That is new law to me.

Mr. McMILLAN. The Government of the United States is already sending its Army to prevent citizens from going onto lands because they are not subject to settlement.

Mr. MORGAN. No; the case the Senator refers to is because it is an Indian reservation.

Mr. McMILLAN. Because it is not subject to settlement.

Mr. MORGAN. No citizen has a right to go on an Indian or a military reservation, because that is excluded by express terms of statute from settlement by the people of the United States; but that which is the public domain and is not thus segregated from the public domain lies broadly and freely open to the settlement of any person who chooses peacefully to go upon it; and that is precisely the condition in which the citizens of Iowa found this land, if their assumption was correct that it was not a part of the land to which the railroad company was entitled, but a part of the land held in trust by the State of Iowa for the Government of the United States. That is the situation precisely.

Now, Mr. President, I reassert that the committee have presented a bill which does not in the slightest degree alter the rights of any person at all. What is the object of the bill? I have already called the attention of the Senate to the fact that a question of law arose here upon the construction of the fourth section of the act, which was whether the railroad company, having earned six-tenths of a section of ten miles, was entitled to any part of the land for that section. I have the same opinion upon that question that the Senator from Massachusetts has expressed, that it is an apportionable grant, and it ought to be apportionably administered, and this railroad company ought to have the six-tenths; but they do not stop there in their demands; they want the whole of it.

Mr. McMILLAN. No, Mr. President, they have never set up any claim or shadow of a claim to such a thing. They never claimed a foot or acre of land but for the exact amount of line of road completed and continuous with their line.

Mr. MORGAN. That will not do, because they have gone down the line some twenty miles and located for the purpose of making up compensation for lands that lie behind that they did not get.

Mr. WILSON. Involving about 27,000 acres.

Mr. MORGAN. I think the committee understand this controversy; they have had enough to do with it to understand it, surely. I speak of it as it appeared to the committee. Of course we are not deciding any right of the settlers here or of the railroad. We are trying merely to relegate the question to the courts, where it can have a proper decision in proper form.

Mr. HOAR. May I ask the Senator from Alabama a question?

Mr. MORGAN. Certainly.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator says he agrees with me that this is an apportionable grant.

Mr. MORGAN. I do.

Mr. HOAR. Suppose we are both in error in the construction of the law, and that the title would not be vested unless the company completed a section of ten miles, does not the Senator agree with me also in thinking that if they were prevented from completing the ten miles by the facts stated, the United States ought to give them the land for the six miles and a fraction they have completed?

Mr. MORGAN. That is precisely what we do in this bill.

Mr. HOAR. No. The next question then is, do you do it in this bill?

Mr. MORGAN. I have no doubt about it at all.

Mr. HOAR. I hope the Senator will not object to an amendment that I will propose to make that clear.

Mr. MORGAN. I do not know that I shall object to it until I see it; but if the Senator's amendment trenches on somebody else's right, I will object to it.

Mr. HOAR. If the Senator will allow me, I will read what I propose to insert. My desire would be to insert after the words "United States," in the eighth line of the first section, where the section gives jurisdiction:

And also to determine whether any person or corporation is in justice and equity entitled to such lands.

Then in the fifth section, where it says "that if any of the lands mentioned herein are adjudged to belong to the United States," I would insert the words "in justice and equity" after "belong;" so as to read:

That if any of the lands mentioned herein are adjudged to belong in justice and equity to the United States, the same shall constitute a part of the public domain.

These two amendments will make the bill to my comprehension what it already means to the Senator's.

Mr. MORGAN. We have had the difficulty throughout this case of the parties on each side claiming that certain words should go into the bill which they thought were necessary for the protection of their rights, for I am quite sure that the parties on both sides of this controversy are equally just and honest in all of their demands. I think there is no question about that. The squatters, who have been spoken about in a rather contemptuous way occasionally, are just as honestly impressed and convinced of the validity of their claim as if they had a patent from the Government of the United States, and so is the railroad company, and so are the mortgagees. I appeal now to the lawyers of this body as to these words. We are now conferring jurisdiction on a court to hear and determine the controversy between these parties without undertaking to shape it or to color it in any manner whatever, and we use these words:

That jurisdiction is hereby conferred on the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of Iowa to hear and determine any controversy of either a legal or equitable nature that may exist between the United States and the State of Iowa, or any corporation or person who claims any lands under the laws of said State or of the United States, by reason of an act of Congress entitled, &c.

Then in a subsequent section arranging the method of procedure we say that a bill in equity or a suit at law may be brought and shall be brought by the United States Government under the direction of the United States Attorney-General, the object of the bill being on the part of the Government of the United States to have justice done, the Government recognizing that it stands only in the relation of holding an equitable interest in this land for the benefit of those who may be equitably entitled to it. Now, when we have conferred that sort of jurisdiction for that purpose and accompanied it with that machinery, can there be any doubt in the mind of any lawyer that any right of an equitable or a legal nature in this controversy can be entirely settled by the court without more? I think there can be no doubt about that.

I appreciate the anxiety of the honorable Senator from Massachusetts to have the rights of the particular class of persons who have spoken to him about this clearly and definitively arranged and settled, but I submit to the honorable Senator that if he had the bringing of the bill in this court he would have no trouble in the world in finding a jurisdiction to invoke, and if he had a cause that appealed to the law or to equity to that jurisdiction his friends would be entirely safe.

When we go on further, and in order to show that the Government of the United States does not intend to take hold of this title for any other purpose than having justice and equity administered, we say:

The United States hereby asserting its reversionary right to all of said lands, or so much thereof—

That is the way I hope the bill will read. That is the meaning—as shall be found to have been patented in excess of the amount of land earned by said company—

Only to the extent of the amount patented in excess of that earned by the company. That brings up the question for the court to decide and which the committee did not wish to decide (and which I think the Senate and the House—I know the House—did not wish to decide) have these lands been earned by the company within the true meaning and intent of the fourth section of the act? Is this an apportionable grant? If they have built six of the ten miles, does it thereupon follow that the lands to the extent that the road has been constructed have been earned? If they have been so earned, the Government of the United States says, "We claim no interest in this; our forfeiture does not extend to these lands at all." If they have not been so earned, then, of course, the railroad company ought not to claim them, and the honorable Senator from Minnesota says they do not claim them.

That is a question for the court to decide. I would very gladly, if I was on the bench and had the case submitted to me upon evidence which I thought was entirely satisfactory, sit down and try to compose this great controversy which is about to crop out in a number of dangerous lawsuits. I would be very glad to try and give repose to that community. In this bill our committee came just as near to it as we knew how with perfect impartiality between these parties. The committee have set out those words and those phrases, those sentences and expressions which they thought would carry this question before the court in such a manner that the court could not discover that Congress had the slightest bias in favor of one person or another, except to this extent, that where the lands had been earned (leaving the court to determine what that phrase must mean) by the railroad company Congress asserts no right to them, giving, therefore, a perfect opportunity to the court to determine whether or not this is an apportionable grant, and if so how far and to what extent these lands have been earned.

I think that while the bill is open to sharp criticism, and must necessarily be in a body of lawyers as intelligent and bright as those who are in the Senate of the United States, it will upon examination be found to be a just and good measure. We found that the House bill was not in our estimation a complete measure, and so the committee took great pains to try to render and give an opportunity to these people to have justice done. Now, suppose that this bill does not pass. We are informed that a lawsuit is pending for the purpose of issuing a mandamus, I suppose it is, to the governor of the State of Iowa, to compel him to certify to this railway company certain lands. Nothing of that record has ever come before us; we know nothing about that.

Mr. McMILLAN. The only suit I know anything about is between two railroad companies.

Mr. MORGAN. I was quite surprised at hearing the honorable Senator from Massachusetts state anything else, and yet he did state, as I understand, that there is a lawsuit pending.

Mr. McMILLAN. That is a suit pending in the Supreme Court to determine whether the Milwaukee and Saint Paul road or the Sioux City road shall have certain lands conterminous with their line at the point where the two roads cross.

Mr. MORGAN. I understand perfectly well what that suit relates to, but the honorable Senator from Massachusetts so described it that I did not understand it, because he made it a suit applicable to these lands, whereas the truth is that the suit the Senator from Minnesota speaks of is a suit relating to an entirely different tract of land.

Mr. McMILLAN. No, sir; it does affect these lands.

Mr. MORGAN. In what way?

Mr. McMILLAN. It involves the lands that are conterminous with the line of this road between Le Mars and the Iowa line, and they must go either to the Milwaukee company or to the Sioux City company, and you get another suit to determine the title of those lands.

Mr. MORGAN. It is perfectly obvious that the object of the bill is not to supersede the jurisdiction of any court that has already cognizance of any question of law pending before it. It is to supply a remedy in respect of those lands which have been the whole subject of controversy here this evening, and those are the lands which lie opposite to and conterminous with the four miles which the railroad company did not complete because it formed a junction with another road, and its completion was therefore unnecessary. That is the whole of it.

Now, there is no suit, there is no mandamus proceeding against the governor of Iowa to compel him to convey these lands to the railway company, nor is there likely to be, I suppose, for such a suit could not originate elsewhere than in the State of Iowa, and I presume the statutory law there does not authorize it. What, then, is to become of these settlers? What is to become of this controversy? It will run on and run on. A will sue B, and in a collateral proceeding these questions will be settled perhaps after the lapse of years, and that community will be thrown into the unfortunate condition which we have belabored so much during the recent days of this session of Congress in the Des Moines case.

I repeat that this is a bill of peace, and if the Congress of the United States wants to stop litigation and wants to do justice to all concerned, it seems to me it will pass the bill. Of course I have no other interest in it than that of trying to secure peace.

I wish to say just one word more, and I am afraid I am debating this question entirely too long. You might strike out sections 5 and 6, all that relates to the method of disposing of these lands into the hands of settlers, and yet the principles of the bill would be entirely unaffected and their rights would not be affected very much. I do not think they would be affected at all; for the moment that these lands become, by the adjudication of the court, public domain, then of course they will be open to disposal under the general laws affecting the public domain.

Mr. McMILLAN. The Senator does not recognize the fact that even if that were the case yet these lands could not be opened to settlement, because they have been withdrawn from market by the Government of the United States.

Mr. MORGAN. If that is true, the Senator and I differing about what the effect of this measure would be, the committee have acted very wisely, and the House acted very wisely, in putting the provisions in the bill disposing of these lands, and they had better probably remain. I was not going to strike them out, but I was going to say that nothing had been done to give to these settlers any right or advantage in the world upon these lands until after the court should adjudicate that the lands are a part of the public domain. The United States Government merely asserts whatever right it has. It invites the court to take the subject into hand and to determine it. After final judgment has been rendered, then the proper department of the Government proceeds to dispose of it as public domain; and that is the whole bill. That is all I desire to say about it.

Mr. McMILLAN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 5691) amending section 764 of the Revised Statutes. It is a House bill reported from the Judiciary Committee, and affects the general statute of the United States in regard to appeals in habeas corpus cases. It is a very important matter, and it should be passed so that it may become a law. I submit the motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARRIS in the chair). The Senator from Minnesota moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill indicated by him.

Mr. WILSON. I ask unanimous consent to make a statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the Senator from Iowa making a statement in respect to the motion?

Mr. McMILLAN. Not if I may be permitted to make one subsequently.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the Senator from Iowa making a statement? The Chair hears none, and the Senator from Iowa is entitled to the floor.

Mr. WILSON. The greater portion of this day's sitting has been consumed in the consideration of the bill which it is now proposed to lay aside. If the motion of the Senator from Minnesota shall prevail, we shall have substantially lost all the time that has been given to the consideration of the bill to-day; whereas if we proceed with its consideration we may dispose of it to-day, and then the other measures can go on in their orderly method, or upon motions to take them from the Calendar for special consideration. Therefore, I hope that the Senate will conclude the consideration of the bill now pending.

Mr. McMILLAN. I ask unanimous consent to make a statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the Senator from Minnesota making a statement in respect to his motion? The Chair hears none.

Mr. McMILLAN. The very fact of the interruptions which have taken place this afternoon in the consideration of the bill, rendering its consideration almost unintelligible, shows the absolute necessity of disposing of the business upon the Calendar. It is because the bill was brought up at a time when it should not have been brought up, when the Senate should have had an opportunity of disposing of pressing business on the Calendar, needed to be brought to the attention of the Senate by every Senator in the Chamber. The bill which I seek to have passed is a House bill which affects seriously the liberty of citizens of the United States.

Mr. HOAR. What is it?

Mr. McMILLAN. It is the bill amending section 764 of the Revised Statutes so as to allow an appeal in habeas corpus cases to the Supreme Court of the United States—a right which was taken away under circumstances which at the time seemed to create a necessity for it. The bill proposes to restore the right of appeal of a citizen in habeas corpus cases to the Supreme Court of the United States to protect the liberty of the citizen. It is an important measure, which must fall unless we can have it disposed of at this time. It will take but five or ten minutes to dispose of the bill. It is a brief bill, and can be read in a minute.

Mr. WILSON. If the Senate will allow me to respond—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the Senator's proceeding? The Chair hears none.

Mr. WILSON. I will say that the motion of the Senator from Minnesota is not to informally lay aside the pending measure and to proceed to consider and dispose of a bill which will occupy but five minutes in his estimation, but it is to proceed to the consideration of another bill to the displacement of the pending bill. That has been done once before this afternoon, and I hope the Senate will not do it again.

Mr. SHERMAN. It is now getting late, and, as we are to meet at 9 o'clock on Monday morning, I move that the Senate adjourn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio moves that the Senate adjourn. Does the Chair understand the Senator from Ohio to fix an hour for meeting on Monday morning?

Mr. HOAR. The Senate has already agreed to meet at 9 o'clock on Monday.

Mr. WILSON. I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry. What will be the position of the bill the Senate has been considering in the event of an adjournment now?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In the opinion of the Chair it will remain as the unfinished business.

CIRILO PONBLE.

Mr. CALL. I ask unanimous consent to introduce a resolution, to have it printed, and laid on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Florida?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes; I will yield for merely formal business.

Mr. CALL submitted the following resolution; which was ordered to lie on the table:

Resolved, That the President of the United States be requested to investigate the facts relating to the arrest and confinement of Cirilo Ponble, a citizen of the United States and of the State of Florida, who was arrested on the 24th of November, 1884, while traveling under a passport from the United States, and is still held in confinement without trial in the city of Havana; and if it shall be found that he is a citizen of the United States and that he has committed no offense against the laws of Spain in the Island of Cuba, that he shall be released from confinement.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. MILLER, of California. I ask leave to offer an amendment to the sundry civil appropriation bill for the preservation of the bar at San Francisco. I move that it be referred, without printing, to the Committee on Appropriations, with the accompanying papers.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. SAWYER submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the river and harbor appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Commerce, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. GEORGE, Mr. MORGAN, Mr. PIKE, and Mr. PLUMB submitted amendments intended to be proposed by them respectively to the sundry civil appropriation bill; which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

MILITARY RESERVATION AT CARLISLE.

Mr. HARRISON. I ask unanimous consent to put upon its passage the bill (S. 2637) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to release a right of way across lands of the United States at Carlisle, Pa.

Mr. WILSON. Let the pending bill be informally laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Ohio [Mr. SHERMAN] yield for that purpose?

Mr. SHERMAN. Oh, yes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Indiana asks unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill indicated by him.

Mr. WILSON. Let the pending bill be informally laid aside for that purpose.

Mr. HARRISON. Very well.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the bill is taken up by unanimous consent, the pending bill is informally laid aside, and it leaves the bill referred to by the Senator from Iowa as the unfinished business still. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Military Affairs with amendments.

The first amendment was, in line 3, after the word "Interior," to strike out the word "be" and insert "is;" in line 4, after the word "such," to insert "terms;" and in line 5, after the word "think," to insert "proper and;" so as to read:

That the Secretary of the Interior is authorized and empowered, in his discretion, and on such terms, conditions, and restrictions as he may think proper and necessary to protect the interests of the United States, &c.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 6, after the word "to," to strike out the word "release" and insert "give;" so as to read:

To give to the South Pennsylvania Railroad Company, for railroad purposes only, a right of way.

Mr. HARRISON. I suggest that that amendment be disagreed to; I think the word "release" as it stands in the bill is better.

The amendment was rejected.

The next amendment was, in line 8, after the word "way," to insert "on such line as may be agreed upon;" so as to read:

A right of way on such line as may be agreed upon, not exceeding one hundred feet in width, over the lands of the United States at Carlisle, Cumberland County, Pennsylvania, and extending a distance of about nine hundred feet over said lands, or so much thereof as said company may require for said purpose.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to add to the bill:

Congress reserves the right to amend or repeal this act.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

TERRITORIAL ACTS OF INCORPORATION.

Mr. CULLOM. I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill (H. R. 3058) to amend section 1889 of chapter 1, title 23, of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relative to general incorporation acts of Territories. There will be no objection to it. It comes from the Committee on Territories.

Mr. PLATT. I ask for the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is objection.

Mr. CULLOM. I do not think the Senator from Connecticut will insist upon his objection if he will listen to me for one moment. I hope the Senator will not object, or at least that he will allow me to state what the purpose of the bill is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the Senator from Illinois making a statement? The Chair hears none.

Mr. CULLOM. The bill only proposes to change two words in the present law as it stands in the Revised Statutes, and it relates to the Territories. It adds to the present section of the statute the words "banking and canals," so that Territorial Legislatures may incorporate companies for those purposes. The Committee on Territories recommend the bill unanimously.

Mr. PLATT. I withdraw my demand for the regular order.

Mr. CULLOM. Then I ask that the bill may be put upon its passage. It comes from the Committee on Territories by a unanimous vote, and is very much sought for. It is exactly the statute as it stands except the words "banking and canals."

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It amends section 1889 of chapter 1, title 23, of the Revised Statutes of the United States so as to read:

Sec. 1889. The Legislative Assemblies of the several Territories shall not grant private charters or special privileges, but they may, by general incorporation acts, permit persons to associate themselves together as bodies corporate for mining, banking, manufacturing, or other industrial pursuits, or the construction and operation of railroads, wagon-roads, canals, or irrigating-ditches, and the colonization and improvement of lands in connection therewith, or for colleges, seminaries, churches, libraries, or any benevolent, charitable, or scientific association.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

KIRWIN (KANS.) CEMETERY.

Mr. PLUMB. I ask unanimous consent to proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 577) to donate a cemetery site on the public lands to the city of Kirwin, in the State of Kansas.

Mr. WILSON. That may interfere with the pending order.

Mr. PLUMB. It will only take a moment. I ask for unanimous consent.

Mr. McMILLAN. Let the bill be read for information.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be read for information subject to objection.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, &c., That the southeast quarter of the northeast quarter of section 29, township 4 south, of range 16 west of the sixth principal meridian, in the State of Kansas, now occupied by the city of Kirwin for cemetery purposes, be, and the same is hereby, donated to the said city of Kirwin for the use of a public cemetery.

Mr. HARRISON. May I ask the Senator from Kansas whether there is an emergency there for this cemetery?

Mr. PLUMB. Not more than that the land is occupied by the bodies of all persons who have died in the past twelve years in that neighborhood, and I think that on the whole the bill should be passed.

Mr. McMILLAN. There is a funeral waiting, I think.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JOHN P. PETERSON.

Mr. PIKE. I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill (H. R. 6270) for the relief of John P. Peterson.

Mr. PLATT. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. An objection is interposed.

Mr. SHERMAN. I renew my motion that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 5 o'clock and 25 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

SATURDAY, February 28, 1885.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. JOHN S. LINDSAY, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the Journal as read will be approved.

Mr. WELLER. I rise to a parliamentary question.

Mr. MILLS. I rise to a question of privilege.

The SPEAKER. The first question is to dispose of the Journal.

The gentleman from Iowa states that he rises to a parliamentary question. Does it relate to the approval of the Journal?

Mr. WELLER. I do not know whether it does specifically relate to the Journal or not. I desire to inquire whether the sundry civil appropriation bill, as passed on yesterday by this House, in truth and in fact results in retiring the one-dollar and two-dollar notes from circulation, so that speculators—

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa is not in order; that is not a matter relating to the Journal.

Mr. WELLER. I am informed that that is the result of the bill as it passed the House.

The SPEAKER. The only question before the House is the approval of the Journal.

Mr. RANDALL. I can answer the gentleman from Iowa—

Mr. WELLER. I am satisfied it does refer to the Journal.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is not in order; the only question is as to whether the Journal as read shall be approved.

The Journal was approved.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of personal privilege.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. THOMAS. On the day before yesterday, during the discussion of a resolution proposing to tender the thanks of Congress to Col. Thomas Lincoln Casey and the assistants under his command for the successful completion of the Washington Monument, I inadvertently did great injustice to that officer, having been misled by statements which I saw in the newspapers of the day, and in quite a number of newspapers at that; but as I did not preserve copies of any of them save one, I have not been able this morning to lay my hands on them. I ask, however, to have the Clerk read the paragraph which I have marked in the newspaper which I send to the desk, which will show the basis upon which I placed my statement with reference to Colonel Casey.

Mr. HAMMOND. I submit, Mr. Speaker, that the gentleman states no question of personal privilege.

Mr. THOMAS. It is a personal explanation.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not think the gentleman presents a question of personal privilege.

Mr. THOMAS. It is a statement which I desire to make in justice to this officer.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will entertain the request of the gentleman to make an explanation, if there be no objection.

Mr. HAMMOND. I withdraw the objection.

Mr. THOMAS. As I have said, I inadvertently misrepresented this gentleman and ask—

Mr. TOWNSHEND (interrupting). I must raise the question of order, Mr. Speaker, that the gentleman has not presented a question of privilege. Let us go on with the appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia was disposed to object to the request of the gentleman from Illinois to make this explanation, but afterward withdrew the objection. The Chair stated if there be no further objection the gentleman would proceed. The gentleman then proceeded by consent to make an explanation.

Mr. THOMAS. It will take but two minutes.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Very well; I shall not object.

Mr. THOMAS. Now I ask the Clerk to read the article to which I referred.

The Clerk read as follows:

Lieut. Thomas Lincoln Casey, of the Corps of Engineers, United States Army, was designated by President Hayes as the engineer in charge in the fall of 1878, after a commission of engineer officers, appointed by President Grant, had made preliminary examinations of the earth below the existing foundation. These foundations proved the inadequacy of the old foundation to support the weight of such a structure, and in the summer of 1878 Maj. George W. Davis, a captain in the Fourteenth United States Infantry, perfected a plan to build a new foundation below and under the old one. The new foundation is one of the greatest engineering feats in the history of the world, and has attracted the attention of all engineers of this time.

Mr. THOMAS. I have seen that statement repeatedly in different newspapers, and upon that basis I made the charge on the floor of the House that Captain Davis of the Army was entitled to the credit for the successful completion of the work on the monument by having submitted plans for the foundation instead of Colonel Casey. On yesterday I received a letter from Colonel Casey, transmitting a communication from Captain Davis, which is very short and which I ask the Clerk to read, showing that this officer disclaims the credit for having secured the foundation of the monument.

The Clerk read as follows:

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 27, 1885.

SIR: Will you pardon my calling your attention to the following letter of Capt. G. W. Davis, published in the National Republican of this city March 4, 1880? It was written and given to the public without any knowledge of mine:

"ENGINEER OFFICE, WASHINGTON MONUMENT."

"Washington, D. C., March 3, 1880."

"SIR: In your issue of to-day I have read an anonymous contribution on the Washington Monument. Your correspondent has fallen into an error on one point, when he states 'the work of strengthening the foundation is in progress under the charge of Capt. George W. Davis, United States Army, aided by competent assistants.' I beg to correct this statement by saying that Col. Thomas L.

Chief, Corps of Engineers, is the officer in charge, and his designs for strengthening the foundation are being followed. I am connected with this work as assistant engineer. Please give publicity to this correction.
"Very respectfully, &c.,

"GEORGE W. DAVIS,
"Captain, Fourteenth Infantry.

"To the EDITOR of the National Republican."
The Washington Monument has been substantially completed in accordance with my designs and project as contained in Miscellaneous Document No. 7, House of Representatives, Forty-fifth Congress, third session.
Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

THOS. LINCOLN CASEY,
Colonel, Corps of Engineers.

Hon. JOHN R. THOMAS,
House of Representatives.

Mr. THOMAS. Now, Mr. Speaker, I desire to give honor to whom honor is due, and therefore I have made this personal explanation so that it might be known that Captain Davis, notwithstanding the oft-repeated publications in the newspapers, does not claim this credit. I hope it will be given to Colonel Casey, to whom it seems to be due.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I now call for the regular order.

Mr. WELLER. I rise to a question of information.

Mr. HERR. For Heaven's sake, I hope the Speaker will grant the gentleman's request. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. The regular order is demanded.

Mr. MILLS. I desire to offer a privileged resolution.

Mr. WELLER. I ask if the demand for the regular order precludes the question which I addressed to the Chair?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa can not ask the Chair to explain the effect of a certain bill which has been passed by the House.

Mr. WELLER. I desire to know whether—

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Iowa rise?

Mr. WELLER. I rise to have the Chair inform me—

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. I object.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I insist on the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. STRAIT] rises to a privileged matter.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION.

Mr. COX, of New York. I desire to follow the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. THOMAS] in a single remark.

The SPEAKER. The regular order is demanded.

Mr. COX, of New York. What I desire to say is in continuation of the same personal explanation which was allowed by the House.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Does the gentleman from New York rise to a question of privilege?

Mr. COX, of New York. I do.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state his question of privilege.

Mr. COX, of New York. I made a similar remark as to Colonel Casey and Captain Davis, based on the statements which I had seen and which I supposed were official. I desire to disclaim now and here the casting of any shadow upon the fame of Colonel Casey in that regard.

SUPPLIES TO INDIANS OF MINNESOTA.

Mr. STRAIT. I call up the bill (S. 84) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to ascertain the amounts due to citizens of the United States for supplies furnished to the Sioux and Dakota Indians of Minnesota subsequent to August, 1860, and prior to the massacre of August, 1862, and providing for the payment thereof. I move that the House insist on its amendments to the bill and agree to the conference asked for by the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints as managers on the part of the House the gentleman from Texas, Mr. WELLBORN, the gentleman from Minnesota, Mr. STRAIT, and the gentleman from New York, Mr. STEVENS.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. WELLER. I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. WELLER. I desire to inquire if it will be proper for me under the rules to ask information of the Chair whether the bill passed yesterday failed to make appropriation for the continuation of the printing of the one-dollar and two-dollar Treasury notes—

The SPEAKER. That is not a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. WELLER. I desire to inquire further—

The SPEAKER (rapping to order). The gentleman from Iowa is not in order, and will be seated.

INAUGURAL CEREMONIES.

Mr. MILLS. I offer a resolution of the highest privilege.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That the Speaker appoint a committee of three members of the House to co-operate with the committee appointed by the Senate to take charge of the arrangements for the inaugural ceremonies at the Capitol on the 4th of March.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Is that the regular order?

Mr. MILLS. It is a privileged resolution.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas claims the resolution is privileged.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I raise the question of order.

Mr. MILLS. It relates to the part the House will take in the inaugural ceremonies.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not see that the resolution involves any matter of privilege. It does not relate to the legislative proceedings of the House or its duties under the Constitution.

Mr. MILLS. To raise the point of order on that resolution is unbecoming the dignity of this House.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California [Mr. ROSECRANS] rises to a privileged matter.

Mr. ROSECRANS. I move that the bill (H. R. 5713) which has been amended in the Senate—

Mr. MILLS. I move to suspend the rules and pass the resolution I have offered.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas has not the floor. The gentleman from California [Mr. ROSECRANS] has the floor on a privileged matter.

LOSSES OF OFFICERS AND ENLISTED MEN.

Mr. ROSECRANS. The Senate has returned to the House with amendments the bill (H. R. 5713) for the settlement of claims of officers and enlisted men of the Army for the loss of private property destroyed in the military service of the United States. I move—

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Is that a privileged matter?

The SPEAKER. It is. A conference has been asked by the Senate.

Mr. ROSECRANS. I move that the House insist on its disagreement to the Senate amendments and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints as managers of the conference on the part of the House the gentleman from California, Mr. ROSECRANS, the gentleman from Ohio, Mr. MURRAY, and the gentleman from Indiana, Mr. STEELE.

NAVAL OBSERVATORY REPORTS.

The SPEAKER, under the statute, laid before the House the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES, February 25, 1885.

MISUSE OF PIERS, BREAKWATERS, ETC.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting copies of the reports of such officers in charge of river and harbor districts as report instances in which piers, breakwaters, or other structures or works made or built by the United States in aid of commerce or navigation are used, occupied, or injured by a corporation or individuals, and the extent and mode of such use; which was referred to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed.

J. R. SANTOS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of State, transmitting dispatches from the vice-consul-general of the United States at Guayaquil relative to the imprisonment of J. R. Santos; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and ordered to be printed.

BIDS FOR MAIL SERVICE.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Postmaster-General, transmitting, as required by law, a report of offers received and accepted for carrying mails under advertisements of October 15, 1883, January 21, 1884, and March 1, 1884; also a report of mails established during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1884, other than those let to contract at the annual letting; also a report of additional allowances made to contractors for carrying mails during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1884; which were referred to the Committee on Expenditures in the Post-Office Department, and ordered to be printed.

ORDNANCE FOR CRUISERS.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting an estimate from the Secretary of the Navy for completing the ordnance of the new steel cruisers; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

WILLIAM SCHUCHARD.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a letter from the Secretary of State asking an appropriation to pay William Schuchard for services in procuring testimony before the United States and Mexican Claims Commission; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

SAMPSON P. BAILEY.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting an estimate from the Secretary of State for the relief of Sampson P. Bailey, United States consul at Palermo; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

DRY-DOCK, BROOKLYN NAVY-YARD.

The SPEAKER also laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting an estimate from the Secretary of the Navy for repairs of the stone dry-dock at the Brooklyn navy-yard, New York.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

Mr. REID, of North Carolina, by unanimous consent, was granted leave to withdraw from the files of the House the papers accompanying House bill 1008, there being no adverse report.

REPRINT OF A BILL.

On motion of Mr. DORSHEIMER, the bill (H. R. 8240) was ordered reprinted for the use of the House.

LEAVE TO PRINT.

On motion of Mr. RANDALL, by unanimous consent, leave was granted to members to print in the RECORD remarks on the sundry civil appropriation bill.

Mr. ROBINSON, of New York, by unanimous consent, was granted leave to print in the RECORD some remarks upon American citizenship.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. JONES, of Alabama, by unanimous consent, was granted leave of absence, on account of sickness, until Wednesday next.

FRENCH SPOILIATION CLAIMS.

On motion of Mr. DUNHAM, by unanimous consent, 2,000 copies of the law relating to French spoliation claims were ordered printed for the use of the House.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MILLS. Is not the special rule adopted some days ago by the House the first order of business after the reading of the Journal?

The SPEAKER. It is, unless the House be engaged in the execution of some other order. The House is now engaged in the execution of an order made yesterday by unanimous consent, to proceed at once, in the House as in Committee of the Whole, to dispose of the Senate amendments to the Post-Office appropriation bill.

Mr. MILLS. But does not the special order take precedence of the unfinished business? Is it not required to be taken up directly after the Journal is read?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks not. Yesterday morning a matter came over under a suspension of the rules which was proceeded with. The Chair thinks an order of the House made by unanimous consent is at least of as high dignity as one made by a two-thirds vote, and that the House must go on to the consideration of this business, subject only to interruption by privileged matters.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I desire to say to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MILLS] that I heartily concur with him in regard to the order of business he desires to reach, and as soon as the Post-Office bill is disposed of I will co-operate with him in that direction.

AMENDMENT OF RULES.

Mr. ANDERSON submitted the following; which was referred to the Committee on Rules:

Amend Rule XXI, paragraph 3, by adding to the paragraph the following: "The Appropriations Committee shall report all general appropriation bills to the House not later than the 1st day of May during a long session or the 1st day of February during a short session of Congress."

REPORT OF NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES.

Mr. ROGERS, of New York. I rise to present a privileged report. I am directed by the Committee on Printing to report back, with a recommendation of concurrence, the Senate resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the report of the National Academy of Sciences for 1884, with its appendices, be printed in the usual octavo form, but that the eight accompanying memoirs be printed in quarto form, and that 4,500 additional copies of the report and memoirs be printed; of which 1,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate, 2,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 1,500 copies for the use of the National Academy of Sciences.

The resolution was concurred in.

Mr. ROGERS, of New York, moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was concurred in; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

REPORT OF BUREAU OF ANIMAL INDUSTRY.

Mr. ROGERS, of New York, from the Committee on Printing, reported back with an amendment the joint resolution (H. Res. 341) to authorize the printing of 50,000 copies of the second annual report of the Bureau of Animal Industry for the year 1885.

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives, &c., That there be printed 50,000 copies of the second annual report of the Bureau of Animal Industry for the year 1885; of which 10,000 shall be for the use of members of the Senate, 35,000 for the use of members of the House of Representatives, and 5,000 for the use of the Commissioner of Agriculture; the illustrations to be executed, under the supervision of the Public Printer, in accordance with directions of the Joint Committee on Printing, the work to be subject to the approval of the Commissioner of Agriculture.

SEC. 2. That the sum of $—, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to defray the cost of the publication of said report.

The amendment reported by the Committee on Printing was read, as follows:

In line 1 of section 2 fill the blank by inserting $25,827.60.

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. ROGERS, of New York, moved to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

Several members called for the regular order.

Mr. BELFORD. I rise to a question of personal privilege.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BELFORD. Last night I made a speech in favor of building a hospital for the orphans of confederate soldiers. While doing so I walked down the aisle. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BROWNE] insisted that I should make my speech from the seat which I usually occupy. Now I ask the Speaker to read the first paragraph of Rule XIV and construe it. I am a member of this House and have a right, under the rule, to speak from any place on the floor, provided I do not drive any other member from his seat.

The SPEAKER. The regular order has been demanded. The Chair does not see that the gentleman from Colorado presents any matter of personal privilege.

Mr. BELFORD. This is a question of personal privilege.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is asking the Chair to give an opinion merely upon the construction of a rule which is not now presented as a practical question. There is no matter now before the House involving the construction of that rule.

Mr. BELFORD. Why should not the Speaker give a construction to this rule? By the order of the House he is the judge in such matters.

The SPEAKER. The Chair decides questions as to the construction of the rules when they properly arise in the course of business. It is not the province of the Chair to determine any question which is not directly presented in the course of the proceedings of the House.

Mr. BELFORD. Mr. Speaker—

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Colorado is not in order.

PRODUCTION OF PRECIOUS METALS.

Mr. SMITH, of Pennsylvania. I am directed by the Committee on Printing to report back with a favorable recommendation the resolution which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the report of the Director of the Mint on the production of the precious metals of the United States for the year 1884 be printed, and that 9,000 extra copies be printed, 4,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, 2,000 copies for the use of the Senate, and 3,000 copies for the use of the Director of the Mint.

The resolution was adopted.

Mr. SMITH, of Pennsylvania, moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER. The House resumes, in pursuance of the order adopted yesterday, the consideration of the amendments of the Senate to the Post-Office appropriation bill. The question is upon the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BINGHAM] to concur in the amendment numbered 11, which was pending at the time the House took its recess yesterday afternoon.

Mr. MONEY. Before this amendment of the Senate is acted upon I desire to offer an amendment to the whole paragraph, which I will send up to the Clerk.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I must raise a point of order upon that proposition.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the gentleman has the right to move to concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. But the House was dividing upon the question.

The SPEAKER. The tellers had made no report, and must necessarily make the count over again. [Cries of "Regular order!"] The Clerk will read the pending amendment of the Senate.

The Clerk read as follows:

Eleventh amendment of the Senate:
Strike out the words "to bona fide subscribers" and insert in lieu thereof "including sample copies;" so it will read:
"That all publications of the second class, except as provided in section 25 of said act, when sent by the publisher thereof, and from the office of publication, including sample copies, or when sent from a news agency to actual subscribers thereof, or to other news agents, shall, on and after July 1, 1885, be entitled to transmission through the mails at 1 cent a pound or a fraction thereof, such postage to be prepaid as now provided by law."

Mr. TOWNSHEND. My point of order is this: that the House is dividing on the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania, and after that is disposed of then the gentleman from Mississippi will be in order to move his amendment.

The SPEAKER. If the House concurs in the amendment of the Senate it closes the matter and precludes all amendments. This is the only time the amendment of the gentleman from Mississippi can be offered.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Can it be offered now?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks so. Otherwise it could not be offered at all. If the House concurs it closes the matter; if it non-concurs it closes the matter and there is no time to offer an amendment to the Senate amendment except while it is pending before the House.

Mr. MONEY. I do not think there will be any objection to it when it is read.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McCook, its Secretary, announced the adoption of the conference report on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. 8030) making appropriation for the Agricultural Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. DIBRELL. I ask the gentleman from Illinois to yield to me to submit a conference report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has the right to submit it at any time.

Mr. DIBRELL. Then I submit it now.

The Clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill of the House (H. R. 8030) making appropriations for the Agricultural Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 17, 18, and 19.
That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 10, 11, 13, 14, 15, 16, 20, 21, 22, and 23, and agree to the same.
That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 8, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$25,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.
That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 9, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$32,900;" and the Senate agree to the same.
That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 12, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$40,000;" and the Senate agree to the same.

G. G. DIBRELL,
LEWIS BEACH,
WM. CULLEN,

Managers on the part of the House.

EUGENE HALE,
P. B. PLUMB,
W. CALL,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

The statement accompanying the report, under the rule, is as follows:

The Senate recedes from its amendment increasing the appropriation under the head of division of agricultural statistics, $25,000; also in regard to engraving, &c., for Agricultural Department; and the increase in the appropriation for manufacture of sugar from sorghum, &c., to $50,000, and agrees to make that sum $40,000. They also agree to reduce the increase to the entomological division of $40,000 to $5,000. And the House agrees to the above changes.
The House recedes from all other disagreeing votes, which are principally a change of the word "bureau" to "division" where it occurs in the bill; and also to the increase of $5,000 for quarantine stations, and $1,500 increase for furniture, repairs, &c.
The total increase allowed over the amount in the bill as it passed the House is $22,500, and is $40,000 less than it passed the Senate.
Respectfully submitted,

G. G. DIBRELL,
LEWIS BEACH,
WM. CULLEN,

Conferees on part of the House.

The report was adopted.

Mr. DIBRELL moved to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. MONEY. I ask that my amendment be read, as it has not yet been read.

The Clerk read as follows:

In lines 125 and 126 of the printed bill strike out the words "except as provided in section 25 of the said act," and after the word "law," in line 133, insert: "Provided, That publications of the second class, one copy to each actual subscriber residing in the county where the same are printed, in whole or in part, and published, shall go free through the mails."

Mr. MONEY. Mr. Speaker, this amendment would have been put on in the House when the bill was under consideration before, but it escaped my attention as well as that of other gentlemen interested in the measure. Indeed, I thought it was a mistake in the print until I was informed to the contrary by the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. TOWNSHEND] in charge of it. For the bill as it stands now, even as amended by the Senate, re-enacts part of section 25 of the act of March 3, 1879, referred to, which repeals legislation had last year to this effect: That the rate of postage on newspaper and periodical publications of the second class, when sent by others than the publisher or news agent, shall be 1 cent for each four ounces or fractional part thereof, and shall be fully prepaid by postage-stamps affixed to said matter.

So it will be a re-enactment of this section 25, act of March 3, 1879, in the language of the bill, or it establishes a rate distinguishing between the publisher who sends his own publication and the citizen who sends a transient number of it. In other words, it provides a citizen may send a transient number for 1 cent for each four ounces or fractional part thereof, while the publisher shall be charged at the rate of 2 cents for four ounces. This is so manifestly unjust it will not be considered favorably a moment.

But a proper ruling on this subject would be that the law I have referred to was not exclusive but inclusive in its operations, and the publishers to whom Congress intended to be liberal, as shown by giving to them the privilege of sending out their publications at the rate of 1 cent per pound, could not have intended to charge them twice as much for transient numbers. Otherwise it would be so incongruous and unjust we can not consider for a moment Congress ever intended that any proper ruling of this kind would have such an effect.

But, Mr. Speaker, I want to be perfectly frank with the House in reference to this question, and will, therefore, state that there is something more than that in the amendment, and to which my friend from Illinois will doubtless object. If this amendment is adopted it will repeal also that provision of the act which provides that these papers shall not be delivered at letter-carriers' offices or delivered by carriers unless postage is prepaid at the rate prescribed by the act—that is to say 1 cent for each two ounces or fraction thereof, and not 1 cent for each four ounces, as provided for transient newspapers. That the gentleman from Illinois will object to, as I understand.

Now, this, in my opinion, and I call the attention of the House to it, is the most illogical portion of the whole postal law. You permit newspaper publishers in Brooklyn to send their daily publications to every solitary house in the city of New York at the lower rate of postage, while the New York publisher can not send his publications to his subscribers in his own city, except at the rate of 2 cents for each four ounces. Or, vice versa, the New York publisher can send to Brooklyn at the lower rate, while the Brooklyn publisher, to distribute his publications in his own city, has to pay 2 cents for each four ounces.

In the District of Columbia the New York daily newspapers are sent here at the rate of 1 cent per pound, but the Post, the Republican, the Star, the Critic, and other papers are required by the law to pay 1 cent for each two ounces on every newspaper that is sent through the mails to their subscribers in this District. You bring newspapers from Canada here and we distribute them at letter-carrier offices free of postage, because, according to the terms of the postal reciprocity treaty with Canada, we are compelled to admit them at their domestic rate, which is free, while our publishers in the same city where these papers are distributed must pay the higher rate of postage. They are distributed free of postage, and yet every newspaper publisher in the United States who mails a paper to his subscriber in the same city where the paper is published is compelled to pay 1 cent for each two ounces or fraction, notwithstanding the fact that there is no expense whatever for transportation. All the cities of the United States can send their papers into this city at 2 cents per pound now, and at 1 cent if this bill becomes law. It must be plain, therefore, that it is a question requiring careful consideration and correction at the hands of Congress.

Mr. BINGHAM. If this amendment is adopted it makes the law consistent with itself.

Mr. MONEY. Yes, sir; it makes it consistent with itself and also just and reasonable to all persons. I hope, Mr. Speaker, the proposition will be divided if an amendment should be offered by the gentleman from Illinois to the amendment which I have submitted, and that the whole proposition will not be condemned on account of the one objection which he may urge against it.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Mr. Speaker, I have no objection whatever to the first change that the gentleman from Mississippi suggests or wishes to make in this bill. If that was the sole object of his amendment I should not resist it, but, as he frankly states to this House, the amendment goes very much further. It would also enable newspapers to be distributed—their daily issues—by means of the letter-carriers of the cities where they are published. If, then, this amendment was incorporated in the bill, and became a part of the postal law, the newspapers would simply discharge the messengers or carriers who now convey their publications to subscribers and have them delivered by the mail-carriers at an enormously increased cost to the Government.

Mr. DINGLEY. But does not the gentleman know that that would be impracticable as far as daily newspapers are concerned?

Mr. TOWNSHEND. It would render a great increase of letter-carriers necessary, an immensely great increase over the present number.

Mr. BINGHAM. You accepted the same proposition exactly in the first session of this Congress, and it was passed in the bill word for word like this.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I must decline, Mr. Speaker, to be interrupted; the gentleman can have his own time.

Now, this question has been up before the House many times, and has been several times considered and debated in Congress. It has been always voted down and defeated.

Mr. BINGHAM (interrupting). Not in this Congress.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. For the reason that it is believed it would be too severe a tax upon the Treasury to authorize the letter-carriers to distribute the newspapers in the cities where they are published. Why, take the great daily papers of New York alone; it would require a larger force of letter-carriers to distribute them to daily subscribers than are now employed in the city for the free-delivery system. It would greatly enhance the number and largely increase the expense of the Government to allow the distribution by carriers of these papers.

Now I would be glad to accept the gentleman's proposition if it only extended the privilege of allowing newspapers to send through the mails transient copies at the same rate that other people are paying to send them; but when he couples with that proposition another one imposing upon the Government the duty of delivering to subscribers by carrier the daily issues of such papers I can not consent to it for the reason I have stated.

And now again I recur to my point of order. I desire to call the attention of the Speaker to the fact that this amendment does change existing law without retrenching expenditures. On the contrary, in my judgment it will cause an immense increase of expenditure.

Mr. HOLMAN. Will the gentleman yield to me for a moment on the point of order?

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Certainly.

Mr. HOLMAN. The point of order seems to be that the gentleman proposes an amendment which changes the original text of the bill as it comes from the Senate.

Mr. MONEY. No such point of order has been raised.

The SPEAKER. It would make no difference whether that particular reason has been stated or not; if it changes what has been agreed upon by the two Houses it would not be in order.

Mr. HOLMAN. It changes the text of the bill as agreed upon, and is not an amendment of the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER. The House can not now change a matter which has been agreed to by both Houses.

Mr. HOLMAN. That is the case here; and I supposed the attention of the Chair had been called to it. The last part of the amendment is right enough, because it relates to a portion which has been stricken out by the Senate; but the other part of the amendment relates to a portion of the bill that has been agreed to by both Houses.

The SPEAKER. That, of course, can not be done. Upon the other point suggested by the gentleman from Illinois the Chair does not understand that the second part of this proposed amendment actually increases the number of letter-carriers.

Mr. MONEY. It does not.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois simply makes an argument that it may result hereafter in a necessity for an increase of that force.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Will the Chair pardon me for saying this: The amendment does not retrench expenditures; and the rule is, unless an amendment retrenches expenditures, if it changes existing law, it is not in order? This amendment does not retrench expenditures. There is no need for an argument showing that it increases expenditures.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will call the attention of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MONEY] to the fact that this changes existing law and proposes to diminish the receipts of the Government by requiring the Government to perform a certain service free which is now paid for under the statute. The Chair thinks that objection is fatal to the amendment. The first point of order made by the gentleman from Illinois was simply that it was too late to offer the amendment because the vote was being taken—

Mr. MONEY. Will the Chair permit me one word? There is no proposition here to make this service free. The amendment is simply a repetition of the existing law as to county newspapers and no others.

The SPEAKER. But it provides that they shall be carried free.

Mr. MONEY. Only as regards papers in the county where they are printed, which are already carried free.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. The Chair has not ruled on my other point.

Mr. BINGHAM. The amendment that provides for the carrying of newspapers free within the limits of the county where they are published is simply the re-enactment or repeating of existing law. That is all.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Now will the Chair rule on my last point?

The SPEAKER. The Chair wishes to inquire what is the necessity for this amendment if it simply re-enacts existing law.

Mr. MONEY. Because the first amendment there repeals that section, and this re-enacts that portion of it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair, of course, will have to examine the statute.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. If I am allowed to make an explanation, I will say the text of the bill preserves the law as it now stands, prohibiting daily newspapers from being sent through the mail at the rate of 1 cent a pound in cities where they are published. Now the gentleman from Mississippi proposes to change that law by his amendment. I insist the rule says in peremptory terms that no change of existing law shall be ingrafted on an appropriation bill unless it reduces expenditures.

The SPEAKER. There is no difficulty as to what the rule is. But the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. MONEY] insists and other gentlemen insist that this makes no change whatever in existing law, while the gentleman from Illinois says that it does.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. One portion of the gentleman's amendment—that which relates to the circulation of newspapers free in the counties of publication—does not change the law; but the latter portion—

The SPEAKER. The Chair has already decided upon the other portion.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. The gentleman's amendment so operates as to enable these newspapers to be carried by letter-carriers, which is prohibited by law. That is the point I make. It so operates as to secure the carrying of newspapers by carriers.

Mr. MONEY. If the argument of the gentleman from Illinois proves anything, it proves an increase of revenue to the Post-Office Department. The gentleman says the carriers will be loaded down with newspapers, while they do not now carry any of them. As the law now stands, none of these papers are delivered by the carriers; and the gentleman argues that they will be loaded down with them if we adopt this amendment! But I assert no publishers of daily newspapers can afford to use the letter-carriers for the delivery of their papers; they must be their own carriers. They must have their newspapers on the breakfast-tables of their subscribers and not await the slow action of the mail.

Mr. SKINNER, of New York. The same remark would not apply to weeklies and monthlies, would it?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks this amendment does not change existing law. The Chair has already decided upon that part of the amendment which proposes to strike out matter agreed to by both Houses.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Now, if I understand the Chair and the gentleman from Mississippi correctly, he does not want to change in any wise the law at this time existing which prohibits the carrying of newspapers by letter-carriers.

The SPEAKER. The amendment does not refer to that subject at all.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I call for the reading of the amendment.

The Clerk read the amendment, as follows:

After the word "law," in line 133 of the printed bill, insert:
"Provided, That publications of the second class, one copy to each actual subscriber residing in the county where the same are printed in whole or in part where published, shall go free through the mails."

Mr. HOLMAN. Is that proposition germane to the Senate amendment?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks so. It relates to the rates of postage on mailable matter. But the Chair will call the attention of the gentleman from Mississippi to the fact which it has just discovered (because the amendment refers to the printed bill and the Clerk has before him the manuscript bill, the engrossed bill) that the gentleman's amendment does not relate to the Senate amendment at all, but to the text of the bill.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. That is one of the points that I have insisted upon ever since we began this discussion.

The SPEAKER. The Chair had already ruled out that part of the amendment which proposed to strike out the text; but it appears now that the other part of the gentleman's amendment as proposed does not affect any amendment made by the Senate, but changes the original bill and would insert new words in the original text.

Mr. HERR. Mr. Speaker, is it not in order now to have concurrence?

The SPEAKER. It is. The Chair thinks this whole proceeding is out of order. The difficulty on the part of the Chair arose from the fact that the gentleman [Mr. MONEY] was referring to the printed bill while the Clerk had before him the engrossed bill.

Mr. MONEY. I was going by the printed bill, because I could not indicate the lines by number in any other way.

The SPEAKER. Certainly. The mistake resulted from the fact that the gentleman was looking at the printed bill while the Clerk had the engrossed bill.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Regular order, Mr. Speaker.

The question was taken on concurring in the amendment; and there were ayes 95, noes not counted.

So the amendment was concurred in.

The Clerk read the next amendment (numbered 12), as follows:

Strike out the following:

"Provided, however, That publishers of second-class publications may mail sample copies of such publications at the rate of 1 cent for each four ounces or fractional part thereof, to be prepaid by ordinary stamps affixed thereto; and all acts, so far as they fix a different rate of postage than herein provided upon such first and second class matter, are to that extent hereby repealed on and after July 1, 1885."

Mr. HERR. Mr. Speaker, I move that we concur in that amendment.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Mr. Speaker, I hope that I shall be recognized as representing the Committee on Appropriations, and I desire to say that, in obedience to the order of that committee, I move to non-concur in that amendment.

Mr. BINGHAM. Mr. Speaker—

The SPEAKER. This is a proposition which may be debated five minutes on each side.

Mr. BINGHAM. I simply desire to say, Mr. Speaker, that concurrence in this Senate amendment now simply makes the action of the House consistent with the amendment adopted a few moments ago. That is all.

Mr. ADAMS, of Illinois. I did not understand the remark of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BINGHAM].

Mr. BINGHAM. I said that concurrence in this amendment now is the logical sequence of the action of the House just taken.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. It is true, Mr. Speaker, as stated by gentlemen here, that concurrence in this amendment would carry into effect the amendment adopted a while ago; but I want to say before passing from this question—for I have no doubt the House will sustain the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HERR]—that in concurring in this amendment the House is doing what I am satisfied it would not do if gentlemen would pause long enough to think of the effect of their action.

The Postmaster-General came before the Committee on Appropriations and said that under the law regarding sample copies of newspapers—no, I will take that back, not regular newspapers, but advertising sheets—sheets that are conducted in the interest of lottery schemes and used for mere advertising purposes were flooding the mails. He said that it was done under the clause of the law which permits sample copies to go through the mails at the rate of 1 cent per pound, and he desired to have that permission restricted; and the Committee on Appropriations agreed with him that it ought to be restricted. It is true that the Postmaster-General said he was willing to allow newspapers to send sample copies twice a year, but the Committee on Appropriations said: "If it is wrong to permit them to send sample copies oftener than twice a year, we should abolish the law altogether;" and the committee so acted.

My desire was that we should come to some agreement upon this question. I can see why allowing sample copies of legitimate newspapers, scientific journals, and other meritorious publications to go through the mails should be continued; but I am of opinion that it ought to be restricted to certain periods of the year. I am willing to allow publishers all facilities that are necessary in order to secure subscribers, and I am willing—

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HERR. Mr. Speaker—

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COX, of New York). Debate is exhausted.

Mr. HERR. I think not, Mr. Speaker. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BINGHAM] occupied only one minute, and I do not want to occupy more than another minute. I simply want to say that this is the sequence of the vote that we have just taken, and that it is necessary in order to carry out that amendment. It makes postage uniform for city papers, for country papers, and for all papers. It is right, and it ought to be adopted; and when the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. TOWNSHEND] says that if members would pause and think they would vote against it, he is mistaken. All that is required to make them vote for it is to pause and think—indeed, they will not have to pause—if they will simply think, they will vote for it.

The amendment was concurred in.

The Clerk read the next amendment (numbered 13), as follows:

Strike out the following:

"(13) That at the future lettings of contracts for the manufacture of postage stamps, stamped envelopes, postal cards, and other postal securities, the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, required to submit bids for the manufacture of said stamps, stamped envelopes, postal cards, and other postal securities by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing of the Treasury Department, which bids shall be considered in competition with bids from private parties: But provided, That the Postmaster-General may reject any and all the bids of private parties, and award the contracts, or any of them, upon the bid of the Secretary of the Treasury, if, in his judgment, it shall be for the best interests of the Government to do so."

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I am directed by the Committee on Appropriations to move that this amendment be non-concurred in. I make that motion.

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Fourteenth amendment:

Page 5, line 24, strike out "forty-nine" and insert "forty-five;" so as to read: "For manufacture of stamped envelopes and newspaper-wrappers and letter-sheets, $745,000."

Mr. TOWNSHEND. As directed by the Committee on Appropriations, I move that the House concur in this amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Fifteenth amendment:

Page 6, after line 11, insert "office of superintendent of foreign mails."

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I am directed by the Committee on Appropriations to move non-concurrence in this amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Sixteenth amendment:

Page 6, strike out in lines 12, 13, and 14 the following:

"For transportation of foreign mails, including railway transit across the Isthmus of Panama, $425,000."

And insert the following:

"For transportation of foreign mails, including railway transit across the Isthmus of Panama, $800,000. And the Postmaster-General is hereby authorized to enter into contracts for the transportation of any part of said foreign mails, after advertisement, with the lowest responsible bidder, at a rate not exceeding 50 cents a nautical mile on the trip each way actually traveled between the terminal points: Provided, That the mails so contracted shall be carried on American steamships, and that the aggregate of such contracts shall not exceed one-half of the sum hereby appropriated."

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I am instructed by the Committee on Appropriations to move non-concurrence in this amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Seventeenth amendment:

Strike out section 3, as follows:

"That a special stamp—"

Mr. TOWNSHEND (interrupting the reading). Mr. Speaker, this and all the remaining sections of this bill, except the last one, relate to the special stamped envelope which the House provided for. I think members will not insist that these sections be read. I am directed by the Committee on Appropriations to move non-concurrence in the amendments, striking out the third, fourth, fifth, and sixth sections. I ask unanimous consent that the reading of those sections be dispensed with.

Mr. KEIFER. The gentleman's motion is to non-concur in Senate amendments numbered 17, 18, 19, and 20.

Mr. ANDERSON. What are those amendments?

Mr. KEIFER. They all relate to this one subject.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. TOWNSHEND] asks unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the seventeenth, eighteenth, nineteenth, and twentieth amendments of the Senate, and that they be non-concurred in. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Now the only remaining amendment is to strike out the last section.

The Clerk read as follows:

Twenty-first amendment:

Strike out section 7, as follows:

"Sec. 7. That the Postmaster-General be directed to instruct his subordinates to publish on the foreign bulletin-board in the corridor of the post-office building in the city of New York the news of the sighting or arrival of foreign mail steamers, to the end that the public shall have such news in advance: And provided also, That no cost or charge to the Government shall be incurred in consequence of such instruction."

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I am directed by the Committee on Appropriations to move non-concurrence in this amendment.

Mr. KEIFER. Pending that, I move that the House concur.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois moves to non-concur, and pending that the gentleman from Ohio moves to concur. The question will be upon the motion to concur.

Mr. COX, of New York. I think that this section ought to provide a small appropriation for the purpose of carrying out its provisions. I move, therefore, to amend by striking out the proviso at the end of the section and inserting "and $500, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is appropriated for this purpose."

Mr. HOLMAN. I must make a point of order on that.

Mr. COX, of New York. I know it is subject to a point of order.

Mr. HOLMAN. This is a matter of purely local convenience.

Mr. COX, of New York. Will not the gentleman consent to an appropriation of $100?

Mr. HOLMAN. No, sir; I object to the provision.

Mr. COX, of New York. This is not a merely local convenience, for the information is sent all over the United States.

Mr. KEIFER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Cox] will himself admit that section 7 will be entirely inoperative without an appropriation; and it is not competent for him now to make an appropriation by way of amendment.

Mr. COX, of New York. Why not?

Mr. KEIFER. And it is quite anomalous to require the Postmaster-General through his subordinates to post a bulletin-board in the city of New York or anywhere else. The provision ought not to go into the bill; it does not belong there. By concurring in the amendment of the Senate the whole section will go out.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the point of order against the amendment proposed by the gentleman from New York [Mr. COX] is well taken. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. COX, of New York. As the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER] has discussed this question, I hope I may be allowed to say a word. All that we propose to do is simply to put this information on a black-board in the post-office building in New York city for the information of newspapers and the public as to the arrival of foreign mail steamers, so as to prevent a monopoly of news by individuals or corporations. I proposed to insert a small appropriation, lest the Postmaster-General, if no money were appropriated, might hesitate to carry out the provisions of the section. But, even without an appropriation, I would like the section to remain, not as mandatory but as directory to the Postmaster-General.

Mr. KEIFER. This provision would require the Post-Office Department to keep posted on a bulletin-board intelligence as to the arrival of foreign mail steam vessels.

Mr. COX, of New York. It is done, anyhow.

Mr. KEIFER. If the gentleman intends the section to be merely directory, let him appeal to the postmaster of the city of New York, and not make a directory law on an appropriation bill. The section ought to be struck out.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Ohio to concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. COX, of New York. I wish the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] would withdraw his point of order; this is a very little thing.

Mr. HOLMAN. No, I must insist on it.

The question being taken on the motion to concur, there were—ayes 48, noes 19.

Mr. COX, of New York. I call for tellers. I think members misunderstood the proposition on which they voted. I do not believe it was generally understood that the Speaker had ruled my amendment out of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair decided that the gentleman's amendment was not in order and it is not a part of the section.

Mr. COX, of New York. I think a good many members believed they were voting on my amendment.

The SPEAKER. The question was taken simply upon concurring in the amendment of the Senate to strike out the entire section. The gentleman from New York [Mr. COX] has demanded tellers.

Tellers were not ordered.

So the amendment was concurred in.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I move the House request of the Senate a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments to the Post-Office appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER appointed, as the managers of said conference on the part of the House, Mr. TOWNSHEND, Mr. HOLMAN, and Mr. HERR.

FORTIFICATION BILL.

Mr. HANCOCK. Mr. Speaker, I move to submit for adoption at this time the following resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the rules be suspended and that the House now resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the bill of the House 8279, making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, and for the armament thereof, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes; said bill to be subject to general debate for two hours and then be considered under the five-minute rule.

Mr. RANDALL. Will the gentleman from Texas yield to me for a moment?

Mr. HANCOCK. With pleasure.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. RANDALL. I move, Mr. Speaker, to take from the Speaker's table the Senate amendments to the Navy appropriation bill, for reference to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. TALBOTT. Will the gentleman from Pennsylvania intimate to the House when he will likely bring these amendments of the Senate back to the House for action?

Mr. RANDALL. Some time to-day, I hope.

Mr. TALBOTT. For action?

Mr. RANDALL. Yes, sir. I move, Mr. Speaker, that the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8239) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes, be taken from the Speaker's table and referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

The motion was agreed to.

FORTIFICATION BILL.

The SPEAKER. The pending question is on the resolution of the gentleman from Texas in reference to the consideration of the fortification bill.

Mr. SPRINGER. I wish to ask the gentleman from Texas whether in the consideration of the fortification bill it would not save time as the question is resolved into one point to move to suspend the rules and pass the bill now.

Mr. HERR. No, sir.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. TALBOTT. Have all points of order been reserved against the bill and amendments?

Mr. HERR. I did not understand the gentleman from Illinois to do anything but to make a request of the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. SPRINGER. It is too late to reserve points of order on it as the bill is in committee.

The SPEAKER. All points of order were reserved.

Mr. HERR. The gentleman from Texas has not made any such request.

Mr. SPRINGER. I make it myself.

Mr. HANCOCK. I will accept the suggestion of the gentleman from Illinois if it be acceptable to the House.

Mr. HERR. Oh, no.

Mr. SPRINGER. I suggest that the debate be limited to one hour instead of two hours.

Mr. RANDALL. We have no objection to that.

Mr. HOLMAN. Half an hour would be ample.

Mr. THOMAS. Say three hours.

Mr. HERR. Three hours is but a small time. I wish to say there are two bills presented here.

Mr. RANDALL. Only one bill.

Mr. HERR. I beg pardon, there is another bill submitted as a substitute which was the bill prepared by the subcommittee itself; and it is no more than fair they should have time to discuss it.

Mr. RANDALL. Nothing unfair is intended.

Mr. HOLMAN. We all understand this question, and can vote on it at once.

Mr. HERR. We ought to have some time. I do not wish to delay the House.

The SPEAKER. Gentlemen will speak one at a time.

Mr. SPRINGER. I move that general debate be limited to one hour.

The SPEAKER. It can not be amended. It is a motion to suspend the rules.

Mr. SPRINGER. I ask the gentleman from Texas to modify it so as to make it one hour.

The SPEAKER. It is impossible to hear what is going on. Gentlemen will resume their seats. It is a resolution to suspend the rules and is not amendable. The Chair has indulged gentlemen in making suggestions with a view of securing some agreement. That is the only purpose for which debate can be allowed.

Mr. SPRINGER. I understand the gentleman from Texas agrees to modify his resolution to make it one hour.

Mr. HANCOCK. I adhere to the resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded? If not, the question is on the adoption of the resolution which suspends the rules and takes the House into committee.

Mr. McMILLIN rose.

The SPEAKER. It is not debatable.

Mr. McMILLIN. I rise to make a parliamentary inquiry. Does it reserve all points of order?

The SPEAKER. It says nothing on the subject, and they are to be considered under the rules in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. PETERS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled a bill (S. 66) providing for allotment of lands in severalty to the Indians residing upon the Umatilla reservation, in the State of Oregon, and granting patents therefor, and for other purposes; when the Speaker signed the same.

FORTIFICATION BILL.

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania. What is the proposition before the House? It is utterly impossible to hear what is going on.

The SPEAKER. It is a resolution which has been read to suspend the rules and go into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union and consider the fortification bill with general debate limited to two hours.

Mr. RANDALL. And afterward under the five-minute rule.

The SPEAKER. And then be considered under the five-minute rule.

Mr. REED, of Maine. That is all right.

The House accordingly resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, Mr. BLOUNT in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The House is in committee for the purpose of considering the bill (H. R. 8279) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, and for the armament thereof, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes, and by order of the House all general debate has been limited to two hours.

Mr. HANCOCK. Mr. Chairman, before proceeding with my remarks it is proper that I should ask consent to dispense with the first formal reading of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection that order will be made.

There was no objection.

Mr. HANCOCK. It will be observed that there are two bills presented, the one by the committee and the other a proposed substitute offered by the gentleman from Louisiana. This bill is not responsive—the bill of the committee—to the estimates submitted by the Department making appropriations for our seacoast defenses. Nor is it responsive to the request for more money to make guns of larger caliber than those which have been purchased heretofore by the Government. For myself I do not profess to know very much about ordnance after you get beyond a double-barreled shot-gun. [Laughter.] I have had, therefore, to consider the subject, so far as I have had any connection with it, from the general practical effect of what has been done in this direction by the Government heretofore.

This bill has been drawn with a view mainly to try to avoid a needless and unprofitable expenditure of the public moneys in this direction, which has marked the policy of the Government for the last twenty or twenty-five years. Looking over the laws and the appropriation bills upon this subject we find that many millions of dollars have been used up by the Army and Navy without any profitable results to the Government, and I for one believe, and the majority of the Committee on Appropriations agree with me, that it would be better instead of going on making appropriations and spending money in fruitless efforts—efforts which amount to nothing as far as the necessary armament of war is concerned—to determine upon some plan and ascertain if possible what character of large ordnance can be made here which would be of a character suitable to us in the event of a war, and the like with reference to our seacoast defenses as to what fortifications would be necessary and the manner in which they should be constructed. To accomplish that purpose, Mr. Chairman, we have simply to follow the course which has been pursued by all of the great military powers of Europe, which we do in this bill in attempting to form a board with authority to take into consideration the question of construction, in fact, to consider the whole subject and to apply practical and thorough tests to the various kinds of ordnance up to as large sizes as those of 12-inch caliber and subject them to such tests as would determine their fitness for us in warfare.

To this end we have called in by this proposed bill all the branches of the Government at all connected with it in any way or responsible for the War Department of the Government. There is a proposition here, for instance, by the bill to bring together those from the Army whose business it is to inform themselves upon the subject, the Ordnance Department, and from the Navy, that they shall act in concert with the Secretary of War in examining whatever may be brought before their attention at all connected with the art of war. In doing this we also open the door wide to every individual citizen, whoever he may be, who supposes that he has the ability or the skill to produce a gun of the first quality to have it tested thoroughly in order to determine the question of its efficiency or not for the use of this Government.

Up to the present time and as late as last October, I believe, I noticed that the Secretary of the Navy, speaking of this subject, says that we have not a single gun of the first quality in this country; and he adds we have not a single vessel capable of encountering and resisting an attack from European vessels of the first class, or the war vessels belonging to any of the first class powers of the world. I, for one, am willing, and I think it is the disposition of Congress, to make liberal and generous appropriations for whatever may be found necessary to put the United States in a thoroughly effective condition when we have ascertained that we have the right character of weapons.

There is also a provision in the bill with reference to a uniform caliber of gun in all the branches of the service. At present in the Army and the Navy there is no uniformity in caliber. For some reason, which it is not necessary now to undertake to discover, the Army have adopted the even numbers, and consequently have guns of 6, 8, 10 inches and so on in caliber, all of even numbers; while on the other hand the Navy have 7, 9, 11, 13, &c., odd numbers. One of the great inconveniences arising from this difference, and an inconvenience not existing anywhere else on the face of the earth, especially among such nations as those we may without shame or blush look to for instruction in this respect, and whose rule in this regard is a uniformity of caliber which we may safely follow, is that now in the United States an officer in the Navy can not without instruction or experience handle guns of the Army, and vice versa an officer of the Army can not without previous training and experience handle guns of the Navy.

Another difficulty is that the ammunition for one class of guns will not do for the others. If the ammunition of one falls short, although the other may have a superfluity it can not be used to supplement the requirements of the other even in resisting an attack. The ammunition of the Army would be useless on board a vessel which was short of ammunition, and the ammunition of the Navy can not be used in a crisis by the Army. I find that the Military Committee of the House have thoroughly considered this subject and have formulated a report upon it, and I wish to invite the attention of the honorable gentleman from California [Mr. ROSECRANS], the chairman of that committee, to the subject.

The total amount appropriated by this bill is $955,000, as against $7,303,000 which have been submitted as estimates for 1886.

Before I conclude for the present I wish to state that I have consulted with a majority of the members of the Committee on Appropriations, and with the approval of those whom I consulted, and at the suggestion of General Benét, I will at the proper time offer this amendment in line 444: "For constructing and testing experimental gun-carriages;" and also in line 447, after projectiles, insert the words "gun-loaders." This, I think, is already included in the bill, but it is desired that there shall be no doubt upon the subject.

I reserve the remainder of my time until after I have heard the discussion from the other side.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. HANCOCK] reserves the balance of his time. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HERR] is recognized.

Mr. HERR. Mr. Chairman, I desire to be stopped at the end of fifteen minutes, when I will yield fifteen minutes to the gentleman from Maine [Mr. REED] and thirty minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. ELLIS], who will dispose of that half of the time as he sees fit.

Mr. Chairman, I antagonize the bill reported by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HANCOCK], and am in favor of the bill reported by the subcommittee of which I have the honor to be chairman, but which was rejected by the full Committee on Appropriations. The bill which I favor carries nearly $5,000,000—$4,935,000 is the exact amount. This is divided up upon the principle of trying to build some fortifications and trying to manufacture some guns in this nation which shall be for the protection of our frontiers and worthy of our people.

I wish to say to the House on both sides that in my judgment the bills on fortifications, which we have been passing for the last ten years here in Congress, have been of no practical benefit to the United States. We do not give money enough to enable us to manufacture anything in this country that can be called a gun of large caliber.

The bill which I propose, and which we prepared, appropriates money enough to commence building forts at the large cities of the United States—New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and San Francisco. The bill of the committee appropriates almost nothing—only a few thousand dollars to take care of the forts, if you can call them such, that we have in the United States to-day. There is not a fort to-day in the United States that is worth taking care of. There is not a gun in the United States, with the exception of two or three that are now being manufactured, that are of any use whatever for heavy work.

Mr. WELLER. Why have not you Republicans done something about this in the last fifteen years?

Mr. HERR. We have been having a Democratic House mostly for ten years. The gentleman from Iowa can interrupt me in a minute, for I am coming to something that interests him.

I had hoped—and now I want to talk to my good friends on the Democratic side of the House—I had hoped that we were to enter upon a new era in doing things for the benefit of the people of this country under this glorious administration that is about to be inaugurated. I can not say that at the election I had an overabundance of confidence in the man who was elected to manage the affairs of this nation for the next four years. But I will say to my venerable friend from Connecticut [Mr. EATON] that my admiration for that man in the last few days has been increased. I hold here, Mr. Chairman, a letter, the first message given by the incoming President to the Congress of the United States, if I may call it a message. You have got an early man, at least. He is the first President of the United States who ever sent a message to Congress before he was inaugurated.

But I find in this message nothing but words of wisdom. To my astonishment almost every line of it commends itself to my judgment, and the one thing I regret is that such pearls had to be cast before such—Congressmen. [Great laughter.]

Why, Mr. Chairman, this letter recognizes the fact that the American Congress ought to take care of the interests of this great nation. It recognizes the fact that this Congress ought to do something to prevent the impending difficulties that hang over us in the financial world before we are dissolved by law and leave this Hall. I do not know what the notions of the incoming President are on this fortification bill. Has any member here a message from him on that subject? [Laughter.] Did the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] speak to me?

Mr. SPRINGER. No, sir; I am not casting pearls now. [Laughter.]

Mr. HERR. It is to be hoped that the head of the incoming President is as level on this question of protecting this great American nation as it is on the question of whether we shall stop issuing the bogus dollars that now weigh down the vaults of our Treasury, and which you can not get into circulation among the people even by a high-pressure engine—it may go out for a day, but it will return again, and always must so long as it is not a good, honest dollar. I do hope that this new progressive party which is about to take charge of affairs will think of this matter seriously. Your President has started out right. It is not modest in me perhaps to tell you that you men who voted against his instructions have started out wrong, and that your President will have to rely on the business sense of this side of the House in order to run this nation. Do you know the danger you are in?

Mr. SPRIGGS. That would be very dangerous.

Mr. SPRINGER. It would be a great calamity.

Mr. HERR. You want to call a halt, Brother SPRINGER. You have labored along for a quarter of a century to gain what you have reached now. Let it not vanish away by this nonsense of trying to create value by legislative enactments. Take a little business sense with you and look at this question from the standpoint of American statesmen. It is not presuming too much to say you can do it. It may be presuming a good deal, but not too much. [Laughter.]

Now, Mr. Chairman, I call the attention of this House to the fact—

Mr. COSGROVE. Will the the gentleman from Michigan allow me a question?

Mr. HERR. Yes, sir.

Mr. COSGROVE. Would you accept a place in the Cabinet? [Laughter.]

Mr. HERR. I could not conscientiously do it. My friend wants me to be the one hundred and seventy-ninth applicant for a place in the Cabinet, and I will not take any such position. I do not fancy the crowd it would throw me into. [Laughter.]

I am frank to say that the President-elect thus far is not troubled for applicants for those places. What may trouble him, though I hope it will not, will be to find men in his party who will rise to the magnificent common sense contained in that short letter and run our Government in accordance with its principles. If he can do that the nation will bless him, though I fear such work will cast dismay among the majority of you gentlemen on the Democratic side of the House. [Laughter.] Your votes drive me to that conclusion.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Maine [Mr. REED], having said all that I care to say by way of admonition to gentlemen upon that side of the House, and hoping they will reflect upon what I have said as coming, not from me, but from their leader, who, I am frank to say, has disappointed me favorably. It has been refreshing to me to find so much good sense from a quarter so unexpected.

Mr. REED, of Maine. Mr. Chairman, I do not propose to continue in the vein of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HERR]. I only wish to point out, so far as they may be found within this bill, some grounds for the expression of a hope that somewhere in the Democratic party may be discovered more sense and reason than seem to exist in the Democratic portion of the Committee on Appropriations. The Democratic party now has thrust upon it the business of doing something. For the last twenty-five years the only duty it has had has been the business of finding fault with everything. Now it has to take a positive stand, and we have had, thus far, two illustrations of the Democratic party in positive action. One was on the Navy bill, where we undertook to construct a navy by dismissing everybody that legitimately belongs to the business of constructing a navy; and now we have a bill for the creation of ordnance by wholesale contract, and having in it what seems to me to be one of the most transparent jobs that ever was presented for the consideration of Congress.

The first thing this bill provides with regard to ordnance is that the calibers and sizes of the guns in the Army and in the Navy shall be the same. Now that presupposes, if it is founded in sense, that the conditions of managing guns are precisely the same in both branches of the service, and yet it does not need extraordinary knowledge to call the attention of members of the House to the fact that guns belonging to the Army, in the fortification and in the field, are managed upon terra firma, and that there are no problems of flotation connected with them; while the guns on board ship have to be constructed and managed with regard to the floating of the ships and with reference to the service that is to be performed. Nothing can be more absurd than to confine us to 6-inch, 8-inch, and 12-inch guns on shore, and then to say that no ship shall carry a gun of an intermediate caliber. A ship may not be constructed to carry a 12-inch gun, and yet may successfully carry an 11-inch gun; but this bill provides that no 11-inch gun shall be made.

This bill not only fixes the caliber of the gun, but it fixes the length of the gun and says that it shall be the same in the Navy as in the Army. What can possibly be more absurd than a proposition of that kind, except possibly this proposition: that no gun shall hereafter be created until a 12-inch gun has been produced—God knows how! the language is "produced"—which shall answer certain conditions. Why, does not anybody who knows anything about this business know that the problems connected with the smaller guns are entirely different from the problems connected with the larger guns, and that we can to-day in this country produce smaller guns; but that in order to produce a 12-inch gun we have got to change the plant of every establishment engaged in manufacturing either guns or large metallic objects, and yet the construction of all smaller guns are to be stopped until this 12-inch gun shall be "produced." Now, how is it to be produced? By the Government? No; because there is no appropriation to do it. Again, it is to be a single-charge gun, and yet this bill appropriates $400,000, among other things, for the purpose of buying multicharge guns!

Why, just consider a moment what the effect of that is in connection with the paragraph on the fifth page of the bill. Here is the gun that is to be "produced." As compared with a Krupp 12-inch gun our 12-inch gun is to weigh 60,000 pounds, is to carry a projectile of 600 pounds, and is to penetrate 13 inches; while a Krupp gun of 12-inch caliber weighs 109,000 pounds, carries a projectile of 1,000 pounds, and penetrates 24.3 inches. Now we are going to "produce," in some way or other, a gun that carries a projectile weighing only 600 pounds and penetrates only 13 inches, and when we have reached that marvel of ordnance science then at once and automatically this gun is to be bought in quantity, and one-half these guns are to be turned over to the Navy whether the Navy wants them or not, and the other half to the Army, and that is to be the pattern gun until another 12-inch gun is produced which will surpass that in some peculiarity. Why, sir, this is an attempt to make Government work automatically, and you will never succeed in doing that. You will never succeed wisely in eliminating the element of sound judgment, and the element of responsibility. The way to construct a gun, like the way to construct a navy, is to have the departments and the officers charged with that work fully informed, in full control, to have them manufacture or superintend the manufacture of guns, and be responsible for them and for the results.

I do not know precisely what kind of a gun these paragraphs cover or what contractor's maneuver it covers. But it does seem as if the language of the bill was arranged on purpose to fit a particular kind of gun and to give a particular contractor the benefit of all the manufactures of the Government hereafter; and all to result in the production of a gun, one totally inadequate to the demands of the Navy, of the Army, and of modern military science.

At its best here is a proposition to give us a gun which, as I have already said, carries only six-tenths of the weight of metal of the Krupp gun, and which penetrates only one-half the distance of the Krupp gun. If you look at the details of the tests which are to be made you will find that every one of them is involved in obscurity. A target, material not specified, is to be penetrated "fairly through." What do you mean by "fairly through?" I will tell you what you mean. You mean a dispute; you mean a pressure brought upon the examining board. You mean the clamor of contractors. Why do you say "fairly through?" Why do you employ such doubtful words?

Then again you limit the length of your gun by a proportion to the caliber and then apply that iron rule to both branches of service, and you limit the weight of your gun in direct proportion to the weight of the projectile. Why, that is to stop all future experiments in that direction; that is to limit and put in chains the progress of science upon these matters of practical importance.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, my objections to this bill and to its several provisions are noted down hastily in a memorandum which I shall read and which will convey to the House a better impression of the infirmities of the measure than I should be able to do if I spoke without notes.

Lines 54 to 66 inclusive provide that the calibers of guns for the Army and Navy shall hereafter be the same, that is, six inches, eight inches, ten inches, and twelve inches, and that no intermediate calibers shall be made; also, that all these guns shall be over thirty calibers long and shall weigh so much. Any given ship of war can carry a given number of guns of a given weight, and the space occupied by the guns and their weight, and therefore caliber, can not be determined by any such considerations as that the Army has guns of certain fixed dimensions. An ironclad of given displacement, for example, can carry two turrets with two guns in each turret. Now, supposing that 12-inch guns can not be carried, why should not 11-inch, or 11½-inch, be carried rather than 10-inch, as would be rendered necessary by the provisions of this bill? Given a certain weight for the ordnance outfit of a ship, and guns of a fixed caliber are the best, and that caliber, whatever it may be, should be used on that ship. The fact that all foreign countries build guns for their navies of irregular calibers is enough to condemn this part of this bill.

English naval guns are 4½-inch, 5-inch, 6-inch, 6.3-inch, 7-inch, 8-inch, 9-inch, 9.2-inch, 10-inch, 10.23-inch, 11-inch, 12-inch, &c.

The portion of the bill fixing the length and weight of guns would be well enough if ordnance development were at an end, but considering that a very small change in the nature of the powder used, or an improvement in the quality of the material of which guns are built, would at once render the present best length and weight of guns bad, it would seem that such restrictions were intended to prevent any further development of ordnance.

Lines 67 to 91 provide a test for guns to be manufactured by or for the United States. This test is both insufficient and so loosely drawn as to be uncertain in nature. What does "fairly through" mean? Is the plate to be backed; and, if so, with how much backing, and how braced? What is the quality of the plate to be? Some plates could be pierced by almost anything.

This clause also prevents any further work being done on the guns for the cruisers, and, in fact, puts a stop to all work on guns for the Army or Navy till a 12-inch gun has been made. For this the Navy has no money, the Committee on Appropriations having refused the money asked for the steel for a 12-inch gun.

Lines 115 to 141 provide for the purchase of 100 12-inch guns with 10,000 projectiles at an expense of $3,600,000 from the first person who shall make one of these guns to withstand the insufficient test previously stated. In other words, the Army and Navy are to have 100 12-inch guns of inferior power forced upon them. All that is required of these guns is that they shall each stand ten rounds fired rapidly. Those that burst are to be rejected and the rest accepted until 100 are taken. No matter if every other gun bursts the rest must be taken.

The practical result of the bill will be to saddle the United States with 100 useless cast-iron guns of inferior power and of unknown quality at an expense of $3,600,000, when if such guns were of any use they could be made by the United States at less than one-quarter this amount. Indeed these guns could probably be made by the Government from its old cast-iron smooth-bores for about one-tenth the amount asked in the bill.

Mr. ELLIS addressed the committee. [See Appendix.]

Mr. CURTIN. Mr. Chairman, I am sure I can not say in three minutes anything which will influence this committee. I am in favor of the substitute, and I regret very much the eloquent speech of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HORN] who opened the debate in opposition to the bill reported by the majority of the committee, and who I understand is in favor of this substitute. It was a fair and, as politics go, a reasonable political speech; but it was not in favor of the bill, and it may have excited prejudice on this side of the House, which I desire to dissipate by saying that in my judgment it was not in harmony with an occasion like this, involving the question of the defense of our country by the best and most enlightened modern methods. Sir, no man who reads can be insensible to the fact that there is a condition of unrest across the water. There are coalitions forming there which are inconsistent with peace in the near future. Before this year closes Europe may be involved in another war. It is about time; and how can we tell, Mr. Chairman, that we also may not be involved in that war?

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the opponents of this measure has been exhausted. There remain fifty minutes to be used by the advocates of the measure. Does the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HANCOCK] desire to occupy the time?

Mr. HANCOCK. I yield fifteen minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. ROSECRANS], if he wishes to use it.

Mr. ROSECRANS. Mr. Chairman, I desire to submit a few remarks upon this bill of the committee. First, I wish to call attention to what has been said concerning the preservation of our fortifications for sea-coast defense. It has been said that they are of no account whatever, and probably it is better that I should state at the outset in what sense that is true. At the time they were planned the theory was to bring to bear upon any channel leading to the place to be defended a sufficient number of guns to make it too perilous and damaging for the enemy to justify the loss and risk of entering, if not to make it utterly impossible, and to place those guns beyond the reach of a coup de main, beyond the reach of being grabbed by a land force. Our fortifications were planned on a calculation of the average speed attainable by sail propulsion, and the guns were the best that were then known. Since that time the substitution of steam propulsion has altered entirely the conditions of defense, making it impossible to deliver many shots from the same gun on any vessel entering a harbor at the speed at which she can go under steam.

The second, change of defensive conditions. Instead of wooden walls, easily penetrated by the shot of the guns with which we formerly armed our forts, we have now to contend with iron armor, which can not be pierced by these shots. But while on these accounts our fortifications are inadequate to meet the exigencies of defense at the present time, let it not be supposed they are entirely useless. The honorable gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. ELLIS], if I heard him aright, said that our fortifications were but "man-traps." But I have only to remind him of the resistance which Fort Sumter was able to oppose to all our attacks.

Mr. ELLIS. Against what kind of guns?

Mr. ROSECRANS. The best we had, and the best we have had since.

Mr. ELLIS. How would that fort have stood against modern artillery?

Mr. ROSECRANS. It offered such resistance that we were unable to take it.

Mr. ELLIS. Does the gentleman know the penetrating capacity of modern guns—that they penetrate sixty-three feet of sand?

Mr. ROSECRANS. These new exigencies, these new conditions required for the defense of our forts, necessitate the invention and application of new methods of protecting the guns both from being captured by escalade and from being dismounted and destroyed by the shot of the enemy. It is not to be imagined that we are without some idea of what we have to do—that we must have some kind of metallic protection against these heavy penetrating shot. But it has not yet been determined precisely what are the plans best adapted to secure the result with greatest economy and efficiency. Therefore this bill proposes to have that matter investigated between now and the 1st of next December. It seems to me the committee bill is very reasonable in this respect.

A few words now with respect to the provisions of the bill concerning heavy breech-loading armor-penetrating guns—the uniformity established by the bill in the construction hereafter of guns of the same caliber for the same class of guns or the same general dimensions, range, and penetrating power.

On this subject a great deal has been said which I think would not have been said if gentlemen had had more experience. When I took command of the Army of the Cumberland I had in a single brigade two, three, and in some instances four different calibers of muskets. There was just as good reason then for that variety of calibers as there is now for the existing varieties of calibers for guns of about the same power, or that we should have all sorts of calibers for the Army and the Navy. I was obliged with great care to shift and change the muskets of the troops under my command, so that the men of one brigade might be armed with guns using ammunition of one caliber, to prevent the perils and damage arising from mistakes in the distribution of ammunition which could not be used by the troops who had exhausted their supplies in action or being without ammunition because they could not get ammunition of the requisite caliber.

Mr. Chairman, on these points connected with heavy breech-loading guns I think I shall more completely reach the ears of this House by sending to the desk to be read the first and second pages of the report which I hold in my hand.

Mr. ELLIS. What report is it?

Mr. ROSECRANS. The report of the Committee on Military Affairs made at the present session; and I will state before the Clerk begins reading that it will be seen this matter has undergone investigations by Congress as long ago as the Fortieth Congress, when a powerful report was made setting forth the difficulties which this bill is intended to remedy. The passages which I ask the Clerk to read are brief but well-considered.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. ROSECRANS, from the Committee on Military Affairs, submitted the following report (to accompany bill H. R. 8242):

The Committee on Military Affairs, to which was referred the bill H. R. 8041, respectfully reports:

It has heard statements from the Chief of Ordnance, and the testimony of others respecting heavy ordnance, and has arrived at the conclusion that the best interests of the country demand that such tests be made as will enable us to determine the highest attainable standard of heavy ordnance.

Your committee sees many good theoretical reasons why the calibers, lengths, and projectiles of heavy breech-loading guns should be uniform, and no valid ones why they should not be so.

But it also perceives numerous practical reasons for such general uniformity. To prevent rival systems of constructing cannon for Army and Navy uses, from introducing useless varieties and rendering comparisons of relative utility difficult and indeterminate; to make ammunition for like calibers available both on land and sea; to simplify its preparation, reduce its cost, diminish liability to mistakes in sending supplies of ammunition, are ends very desirable to be attained.

This is well set forth in the following extracts from Senate report 226, third session, Fortieth Congress, the whole of which is printed in the appendix hereto:

"A further difficulty, calling for a remedy, lies in the want of co-operation between the War and Navy Ordnance Bureaus. Great diversity exists in the practice of the two branches of the service respecting the arms adopted, and the manner of proving, mounting, and using the same. The calibers, models, chambers, and ammunition of the Navy guns are entirely unlike those in use in the Army. For example, the Navy 12-pounder boat howitzer has a caliber of 3.4 inches, while the Army 12-pounder guns are of the calibers of 3.2, 3.67, and 3.8 inches. The chamber of the Navy gun is of parabolic form, while the Army gun either has a cycloidal chamber or none at all. The models of the two guns are entirely different, so that neither could be used on the carriage of the other; the Army guns being furnished with trunnions, and the Navy gun having, in some cases, the loop and loop-bolt of the old carronade. The system of sighting is also different. A gunner in one arm of the service, without special instruction, could not use a gun belonging to the other; one being graduated to seconds of time of the flight of the shot, and the other to degrees of elevation. The Navy has 8, 9, 11, and 13 inch smooth-bores, while the Army guns are of the calibers of 6, 8, 10, and 12 inches. In the guns of the two branches of the service there is no uniformity, in either rifle or smooth-bore, in the twenty calibers adopted below the caliber of the 32-pounders. It is impossible to use Navy ammunition in an Army gun or Army ammunition in a Navy gun.

"Co-operation between the Army and Navy while in active service is thus greatly restricted, and in some cases has been entirely prevented. Offensive operations on the part of a joint expedition of the two might be brought to an end by the want of projectiles for the land forces, while the ships of the Navy possessed a surplus of the very articles required, which could not be used by the land forces. Not a single advantage is claimed for this lack of uniformity, while the disadvantages are very numerous and apparent. It has grown out of the fact that officers in the two branches of the service have succeeded in securing the adoption of their own inventions, and the rivalry existing between them has prevented fair competitive trials of the various devices and systems advocated by each, neither being willing to admit the merit of the other's inventions, or to utilize the knowledge gained either by their successes or failures. The experiments, being duplicated on account of their jealousy, have been, necessarily, needlessly expensive. A further increased expense results, in time of war, from maintaining two separate organizations for the procurement of arms. The two ordnance departments are brought into competition with each other in the matter of contracts and purchases of war material from the private workshops and factories of the country, thus putting the Government in the attitude of bidding against itself."

An existing and natural tendency to minimize the available inventive talent of the country in heavy ordnance matters will be to some extent counteracted by the provisions of this bill, which encourages inventors, at their own expense, to construct and test heavy armor-penetrating, breech-loading guns, by insuring them a fair application of the Government tests, and, in case of success, a limited order for furnishing such approved guns at moderate prices.

The existence of the above-named tendency was set forth in Senate report 266, third session, Fortieth Congress, submitted by Mr. Howard, from which the following extracts are made:

"Instead of encouraging the inventive talent of the country, these officers seem to have constantly discouraged it, and many complaints of improper and oppressive treatment have been made before the committee by persons who have sought to draw the attention of the proper authorities to what were supposed to be vital principles connected with their art.

"Another difficulty that has retarded progress in the science of ordnance has been the fact that prominent officers have been inventors of arms, and have possessed sufficient influence to secure the adoption and retention in service of their inventions, frequently without due regard to the question of real merit, and to the prejudice of other and better devices brought forward by citizens, or developed in other countries."

The result of the testimony taken before your committee, and hereto appended, leads it to the conviction:

1. That the strains due to the expansive force of the gases generated in the gun by combustion of power are vastly modified by those which are due to molecular forces induced by the inequalities of temperature and of strains in the successive layers of particles proceeding from the interior to the exterior of the gun when heated by rapid service.

2. That the construction of breech-loading armor-penetrating guns is as yet unsettled, and must be tentative and expensive.

3. That guns of small caliber are less liable to these inequalities than those of larger mass, because these inequalities of temperature are more readily adjusted within thinner metal than when there is greater thickness and slower equalization of temperature within the resisting mass.

4. That therefore the well-attested facts are the success, in service, of guns of small caliber, made even of cast-iron, and the well-known failure of even steel guns of large caliber, when fired under conditions necessarily producing great inequalities of temperature within their mass.

5. That even steel guns which withstand the tests when the firing is slow and time is given for the equalization of temperature, fail when fired rapidly.

6. That these molecular strains exist in steel as well as in cast-iron, and when time enough has been given for the gradual adjustment of these molecular strains to equilibrium, even cast-iron may exhibit comparatively enormous resistance to the strains of firing.

7. That therefore the idea that our only hope lies in steel guns has been proven to be unsound by experience, and a careful consideration of the facts already known shows that it would be premature to commit ourselves to the construction of steel breech-loading guns of large armor-penetrating power.

In view of these facts the law should require uniformity in the calibers, construction, and projectiles used in all services, and inducements should be held out to private parties to compete for superiority by such acceptance and contract as the bill provides.

To accomplish these desirable results your committee recommends the passage of the accompanying substitute bill, which is amendatory of the original in a few important particulars.

[During the reading of the foregoing, when the time of Mr. ROSECRANS expired, Mr. HANCOCK yielded him additional time.]

Mr. ROSECRANS. I wish only to add that it is not at all certain we have reached conclusions that can be depended upon as to the usefulness of steel for heavy guns. It is quite certain that while other metals, even cast-iron, may answer when used for light guns, yet heavy guns made even of steel may fail. It is not to be assumed, therefore, that we ought to launch out at once upon large expenditures for this purpose when we know the Chief of Engineers has testified that we can not successfully prepare for the manufacture of steel guns, now supposed to be as good as can be gotten, without the expenditure of many millions of dollars running through eight or ten years. If we were to-day to make such expenditures as are proposed in the substitute bill we would be simply spending money. It seems to me far better for Congress to secure a clear, comprehensive summary of the results of the experience of other nations, and after getting this information to determine what we had better do—what plans can be adopted most economically and successfully.

Mr. ELLIS. Has the gentleman read the report of the gun-foundry board?

Mr. ROSECRANS. I have.

Mr. ELLIS. Does not that contain the conclusions of the world after the best experiments?

Mr. ROSECRANS. Not fully so; but it is the best report we have up to this time.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. MCADOO. Mr. Chairman, an intelligent foreigner, if he had been in this Chamber a few moments ago and listened to the learned and oracular gentleman from Maine and the irrepressible gentleman from Michigan, would, were he ignorant of the facts of the situation, have deplored that these gentlemen did not belong to a party that had entire charge of our fortifications, and that the country had been compelled to lose the services of men who know so much from a scientific point of view as to how our fortifications should be constructed and how our guns should be built. He would have said to himself: "If these gentlemen had charge as leaders of a controlling party of such matters for two or three years, surely the harbors of the country would have all the protection they require." But when he learned that these gentlemen have been the leading members of an administration that has had charge of the fortifications and guns of this Government for the last twenty-two years, his astonishment would know no bounds. That they should know so much, be so aggressive and progressive, and yet have accomplished so little, would puzzle any one a great deal. If we have no forts or guns or ships, whose fault is it? That the Democratic party should find itself on coming into power with worthless vessels, crumbling forts, and ancient, ineffective guns on its hands is certainly not its fault. Money enough has been expended to have had these arms of the service modern, efficient, and in excellent condition.

Why, they turn to this side of the Chamber and say, "Look at the guns you propose to build," and we retort, and I think we can do it with a great deal of force, "Look at the guns you have built." For what was the Government gentlemen were responsible for distinguished in the way of ordnance? Well, it produced one man known as the great gun-burster, and he burst about all the guns they made. Why, during the twenty-two years they have administered the Government they have not produced a single gun that is capable of taking place in modern warfare. The only thing they did was to leave on our hands a lot of old antedated and antediluvian smooth-bores, and apparently made them to burst at an enormous expense to the Government.

I am in favor of the committee's bill in preference to the substitute of the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. ELLIS]; and I wish to say right here in answer to the criticism of my distinguished and able friend and colleague on the Naval Committee, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. THOMAS], that I think the bill of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HANCOCK] is not defective in that it prescribes what shall be the caliber of guns and prohibits intermediate calibers. It says the caliber of our new guns shall be six, eight, ten, and twelve inches.

My friend from Illinois says some vessels will be able to carry 11-inch guns which can not carry 12-inch, and it is therefore unreasonable and is not a suitable proposition to limit the guns to those calibers. That would be true, Mr. Chairman, if we had a great navy upon which we were going to put these guns; but we are building a navy, we are laying the foundation of one, I trust; and while we are doing that we can plan our guns while we are building the vessels, for we have no vessels now worthy of carrying any good guns.

The gentleman says it is like putting an 8-foot man in a 6-foot bed—you would either have to lengthen the bed or shorten the man. But, sir, we neither have the bed nor the man, and we are going to make the bed and then the man—to make a navy and then the guns, and therefore it is not an unreasonable or unjust proposition in this bill to have the caliber of these guns restricted and classified. Such guns will make ammunition uniform and facilitate its distribution in both Army and Navy.

I object to the substitute for another reason. While I do not share the views of pessimistic gentlemen on the floor of this House who are always prophesying that war is upon us, that Europe is now to invade our coasts, that we are about to be embroiled in international difficulty, yet I do not share the opinions of optimistic gentlemen who cry war will never come. I wish to be reasonably prepared for war, and I tell gentlemen who are so alarmed and advocate so much the building of these fortifications, that the day of these old forts is past. The only way you can protect your harbors is by the torpedo-boat and the torpedo and submarine mining system. It has been demonstrated after elaborate, intelligent, and searching inquiry in England that torpedo-boats and the torpedo system are the only possible way for keeping out foreign invasion of your harbors.

I ask in this connection to have the Clerk read an extract in reference to torpedo-boats, from a recent publication which has stirred up the British Parliament. It is part of a series of articles in the Pall Mall Gazette and entitled "The truth about the navy."

The Clerk read as follows:

"Why do you worry so much about torpedo-boats?" we asked a first-class naval officer the other day.

"Worry about torpedo-boats!" said he, "I don't worry about torpedo-boats. It is our want of torpedo-boats that worries me, and would worry England if war were to break out. You have published Mr. Donaldson's paper on torpedo-boats, an excellent paper, but like every one who writes for you be understands his case."

"But are they really so indispensable? Many officers pooch-pooch them. For instance, Hobart Pasha in the North American Review for November."

"All the pooch-pooching in the world will not get rid of facts, and here are five facts about torpedo-boats which can not be disputed:

"1. Actual experiment has proved that on an ordinary night the boats can approach unperceived to within a thousand yards of the ship attacked, though the most powerful electric lights be kept bearing on their line of approach."

"2. From the time the torpedo-boats are first seen till they discharge their Whitehead torpedoes with absolute certainty of hitting is on an average about thirty-six seconds."

"3. During this thirty-six seconds the guns of the attacked ship fire at random, as owing to the darkness the sights can not be effectively used and the distance altered one hundred yards every six seconds."

"4. A foreign experiment has proved that on the torpedo hitting it makes a hole about seventy square feet in the bottom of such a powerful ironclad as the Hercules."

"5. The most powerful pumps mounted in any ironclad will only keep out the water which comes in through an 18-inch hole in the bottom of the ship. Yet with all that we have fewer boats than France."

Mr. MCADOO. I want to see as the crowning glory of the Democratic administration, which the gentleman from Michigan has so pleasantly hailed this morning, the restoration of the public domain, the preservation of the lands of the people, the upbuilding in an honest way of an effective navy, and the proper protection of our harbors. But I am in favor of doing it honestly.

I object to the substitute for this, that it limits proposals for building these guns, and guns are the only things in this bill, to two firms in the United States. The bill of the chairman of the subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations invites the whole United States to competitive contract for them. I read from the report of Mr. Benét, brigadier-general and Chief of Ordnance:

The South Boston Iron Works and the West Point Foundry are the only ones that have now any portion of the plant and experience. Both of these have made guns for the United States during the last half-century and have always given satisfaction.

Therefore we find that there are only two places in the United States where you can have a gun built if you spring the question on the public now. If to-morrow you gave contracts out to get guns by the terms of this substitute bill, you must go to the South Boston Iron Works, or to the West Point Foundry. There is no other place where you can get them. These are undoubtedly two most excellent establishments, of which all Americans may be proud, and I am in favor of American material and American manufacture against the world. We are too great, the national genius is too great, to allow of our paying tribute to England or any other country, whether in making guns or plows, monster engines or delicate machinery. Within our own country, with all due respect to these great enterprises, competition must be absolutely free and fair.

Here, under fair competition, the intelligent labor of American freemen shall, on American soil, from American material, build and equip an American navy. The ringing hammers of Elswick and the Clyde must not, as they fashion our shields of war, make mockery of our idle mechanics. Here the earth is rich in minerals, our artisans and officers fertile in resources, thousands of industrious hands ready for the task, and here our guns should be built to give employment and make happy the homes of the men whose courage and patriotism will make them invincible in war.

Now, what does the bill say on that point—that they shall make a contract? With whom? With the manufacturer who has the material. All you have to do then is that the Secretary of War should look around and find the place where there is the best plant at present, and where they have the best material, and there make the contract.

When he does look around, however, what does he find? He can see but two places where these conditions are complied with, and there he must make the contract. Moreover it says:

Provided further, That out of the first annual appropriation of $1,500,000, not exceeding $500,000 may be expended for such 12-inch mortars as may be approved, subject to the test of those mortars just completed.

I ask the gentleman from Louisiana, who built the mortars just completed? If I am not mistaken they have been built at these places. It is then virtually a contract by bill in favor of these two establishments. I ask the House then as between a bill giving fair, open, and frank competition and this substitute, which must, from the necessities of the case, be in favor of these two establishments, which is the fairest and which the better bill? If we are to build up the Navy, as I know we will; if we are to proceed reasonably and scientifically to protect our harbors, let the work be marked by Democratic honesty in the doing of it. I hope that when four years have rolled around, when the twenty-five years, and may be more, of Democratic administrations have rolled around, that there will not be a blot nor a stain of the old infamous contract system, of the old jobbery and robbery which have characterized the administrations of a period gone by on the records of the Democratic party in its administration of the Government.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. KEIFER. It is due to myself to say that when I take the floor in the time given me by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HANCOCK] it is with the understanding that I am not favoring the committee's bill in its full scope, but only in part of its details. I believe it has been held, under the rules of this House, that in general debate upon a general appropriation bill in Committee of the Whole a member may talk upon any subject he chooses to select within the range of legislative matters. And accordingly my distinguished friend from Michigan [Mr. HERR] has undertaken to discuss in some relation the silver question, and especially the relation of the President-elect, Mr. Cleveland, to the Democratic party. I do not have very much criticism to make upon what he said except that I do not wish it to go unchallenged that all the statements contained in the recent letter of Grover Cleveland are pure pearls. I do not suppose that he has had much time recently to examine this financial question in all its phases, but it is hardly fair to allow it to go forth as a statement uncontradicted that the greenback and United States Treasury notes are only redeemable in gold coin, which is assumed in the letter the distinguished gentleman from Michigan chooses to in his way compliment.

Mr. Cleveland also assumes that unless we suspend the coinage of the standard silver dollar the time will come when we will not have gold enough in the Treasury of the United States to pay all the "gold obligations of the United States and to redeem all the United States notes called greenbacks." I quote a portion of the letter:

Silver and silver certificates have displaced and are now displacing gold, and the sum of gold in the Federal Treasury now available for the payment of the gold obligations of the United States and for the redemption of the United States notes, called greenbacks, if not already encroached upon is perilously near such encroachment. These are facts which, as they do not admit of difference of opinion, call for no argument.

What gold obligations of the United States are outstanding? None were ever issued. United States obligations are all payable in coin. He could not have referred to gold certificates, for they are based on gold bullion or coin specially held for their redemption. I supposed that everybody knew that under the law the United States may redeem the greenback at pleasure in coin. I have supposed that under the law the greenback could be redeemed at the pleasure of the Government in gold or silver coin. Is not that right, my friend from Texas?

Mr. MILLS. I think so.

Mr. KEIFER. There then does seem to be some difference of opinion on what the writer chooses to call "facts."

Now, there is another thing I wish to say in relation to this matter and which relates to the central idea in the letter. He says in effect that we must suspend the coinage of the silver dollar in order that we may appreciate silver so as to prevent what he calls the grave calamity of the parting of the metals. According to the judgments of the most of men we suppose that so long as we utilize, use, and find a market for silver bullion that we are appreciating it and not depreciating it. But the statement of this letter is that if the United States ceases to coin silver bullion and quits the use of silver metal at all it will cause it to bear a higher price. That is simply absurd. My idea is, and it is demonstrated by the recent market quotations of the price of silver bullion in the markets of the world, and especially in the London market, that if we do suspend the coinage of the silver dollar silver bullion will cheapen and the difference between the gold coin and the standard silver dollar will widen. The breach will inevitably widen from the moment we demonetize silver in the United States, and gold will at once be at a premium.

Now I am about done with that letter.

Mr. BRUMM. I desire to suggest the inquiry whether that has not been demonstrated conclusively by the demonetization of silver in Germany and this country.

Mr. KEIFER. It has been demonstrated everywhere. But it is not entirely correct to talk about gold and silver in the way that is mentioned in the letter. We have, according to the last monthly statement, of gold coin and gold bullion in the Treasury of the United States and gold certificates that are held by the Treasury $259,567,000. There are outstanding gold certificates $134,279,000; the difference between the two being $125,288,000 gold in the Treasury as against $41,581,000 in silver in the Treasury over and above the outstanding silver certificates. The standard silver dollars in the United States Treasury over what is necessary to redeem outstanding silver certificates is only $41,581,000. We have coined under the act of February, 1878, $193,500,000 of standard silver dollars, and through the use of the silver certificates they are much more largely in use than is generally supposed.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. KEIFER. I am allowed two minutes more, and in that time I will close.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I am only giving some of these figures in order that gentlemen who may want to study this question may do it. I wish to say, for it is the only opportunity presented to me, that I am opposed to merely suspending the coinage of the standard silver dollar. I was willing that there should have been debate upon that subject in the House in order that we might have disclosed what we think is entirely in the business interest of this country.

Now, Mr. Chairman, recurring to this bill, I do not believe in spending any more money upon forts or guns that in the general judgment of the men skilled in warfare, both land and naval warfare, are utterly valueless. I must content myself in the limited time I have with saying that I am opposed generally to the bill reported by the committee.

I want to say one word with reference to the calibers that are spoken of in this bill and which have been criticised. I wish it were possible for us to have uniform calibers for guns, both in the Army and Navy, in order that there might not be difficulty in getting ammunition to suit the various calibers, as stated by the gentleman from California [Mr. ROSECRANS]. But I agree in the main with the criticism on this part of the bill offered by the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. ELLIS].

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HANCOCK. I have neither the time nor the inclination to depreciate the Republican or exalt the Democratic party. I do not know whether it is possible to meet the requirements of the gentleman from Maine [Mr. REED] or the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HERR] as to the degree of ability, intelligence, and statesmanship which they find deficient and so lamentably wanting in the Democratic party. Probably the only way that could be done, Mr. Chairman, would be by incorporating those gentlemen into the party; and that being an impossibility we will have to submit to the want of ability that characterizes the Democracy. No other individuals probably in America could supply that deficiency; and as they are not attainable we have to mourn the inability to meet the requirements. [Laughter.]

I do not pretend to be an expert in ordnance and may well submit to the severe animadversions of the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. ELLIS] in characterizing the bill reported by the committee as imbecile, brainless, and nonsensical. He speaks with that degree of confidence that no one can doubt his sincerity; but he might be very much in the category of a certain quadruped which is more characterized by courage than discretion.

I am not called upon to criticize the gentleman's bill. If it were passed I think I should not risk my reputation as a prophet if I should say no gun would ever be produced under it that would stand the test necessary for its being reliable when in use in actual battle. I do not think one gun would ever be produced at all; for, unless I mistake the provisions of the gentleman's bill, it does not provide there should be; but a very large amount of money would be taken from the Treasury for expenditure elsewhere extending over a period of five years.

Mr. ELLIS. The gentleman has not read the substitute or he would not make that assertion.

Mr. HANCOCK. I have read one substitute. I do not know how many there are.

Mr. ELLIS. Only one. It is the bill the gentleman agreed to.

Mr. HANCOCK. I did not agree to it.

Mr. ELLIS. The gentleman agreed to report it.

Mr. HANCOCK. I agreed that it might be offered as a substitute.

I do not know that I understand it correctly. I do not know that I understand this bill correctly. If I do, I do not think the gentlemen who oppose it understand it in the light that I understand it. It seems that the gentleman from Louisiana has become a monometallist, and thinks steel is the only thing that can be used; it is with him the metal of metals. Nothing else need be looked at as adequate to meet the requirements of the art of war except steel.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I do not give you my views upon this subject; for really I am not sufficiently versed in it to have a definite opinion of my own, but I have inquired wherever I thought I could get information on the subject. I have asked the ordnance officers of the Army for a single instance in which a steel gun had stood twenty consecutive fires as in battle without bursting, and even General Benét himself could not produce such an instance.

Mr. ELLIS. Do you want an instance as stated in the official report?

Mr. HANCOCK. Yes, sir.

Mr. ELLIS. The bombardment of Alexandria.

Mr. HANCOCK. I am to come to that in a moment. The gentleman need not get nervous.

Mr. ELLIS. I see no reason why I should get nervous.

Mr. HANCOCK. Then there is the more reason for keeping cool. The gentleman refers to the bombardment of Alexandria. I speak here from the official record, and it is proclaimed in the Senate of the United States, and incorporated in the appendix to this report, that there was no such firing in the bombardment of Alexandria as would be a sufficient test of the reliability of such guns in battle.

Mr. ELLIS. That Senator is your authority, is he?

Mr. HANCOCK. No, sir; the history of the transaction is the authority. And your own report shows that the intervals between the firing were from fifteen to twenty minutes. And then the Senator says—

Mr. ELLIS. What Senator is that?

Mr. HANCOCK. He is not from Louisiana.

Mr. ELLIS. Where is he from?

Mr. HANCOCK. I do not care about naming Senators. The gentleman can look for himself. He will find it on pages 208 and 209 of Senate Report 169, Forty-seventh Congress, second session.

Mr. ELLIS. Will my friend give me the name of the Senator?

Mr. HANCOCK. A distinguished Senator said in debate—

Mr. ELLIS. Will my friend give me the name of the Senator?

Mr. HANCOCK. It was Senator BUTLER, I believe. He said:

I wish to call the attention of the Senate to one fact. In the siege of Alexandria the other day, which is said to have been one of the most remarkable of all the naval exploits in history in the particular of its being an engagement in which the heaviest missiles were thrown, and in the largest number, one of the British ships, firing at very slow time, perhaps not repeating its fire oftener than twenty minutes' interval, was compelled to retire after one day's action and go to an island in the Mediterranean Sea for a new armament. * * * Every shot she expended cost the British Government a thousand dollars; and yet at the end of a single day of slow action that ship was compelled to retire to an island in the Mediterranean, where they had reserves of artillery, for a new armament. The result will be shown when the report of this naval engagement at Alexandria comes to be made up by scientific men, as the actual facts as stated prove that there is something, even among the English guns and German guns and French guns, which is still very imperfect, and which I trust very much will be supplied by American genius.

I have confidence in the capacity of our inventors to accomplish and master any improvement that needs to be mastered for the success of our Navy in the future and for the defense of our coast.

Mr. Chairman, I too have abundant confidence in American genius—abundant confidence that if it be permitted to enter the lists of competition it will be able to remedy this defect and secure the desired result. I do not think gentlemen need to disturb their souls by reason of the danger of Krupp coming over here and taking a contract to make these guns, and thereby depriving the American people of the advantage and the glory of supplying their own wants in this particular by their own productions. Why, sir, at the rate proposed to be paid you could head him off by the tariff you would impose so that he could not sell his guns for sufficient to pay the duty on them. No one supposes there is any purpose to go outside of this country to procure these guns. The idea is to develop our own resources and to do that in antagonism to this club which exists here and which is always found arrayed against every great individual enterprise that is proposed—I mean the Army and Navy. Sir, if I had the power (as unfortunately I have not power to do a great many things I would like to do) I would abolish both of those institutions before the sun went down. [Laughter.] I would abolish the Military Academy at West Point and the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

We pay large sums annually to graduate young men at those institutions, and yet now, when we have gone far into a century of their existence, we find that they have not graduated a single engineer of national repute—not one; and when the clouds of war gathered over this country (which can never be alluded to with any pleasure) where did you find your generals to lead your armies to victory? Everybody knows that they were not found in the ranks of the Army or in the service of the Government at that time.

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. How about General Lee?

Mr. HANCOCK. Oh, he led his army the other way.

Mr. JOSEPH D. TAYLOR. But he was a graduate of West Point all the same.

Mr. HANCOCK. Mr. Chairman, we are graduating young men at those institutions so rapidly that we can not find places for them. Of course there is nothing more delightful to them than to graduate there and get their diplomas and get their commissions and draw their pay, and then devote themselves to leading the German, in the matter of which they are said to attain a very high degree of proficiency [laughter], and whenever any proposition out of the ordinary rut is brought up this Army and Navy club comes forward to oppose it with some professional production like that which the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. THOMAS] has read here for the enlightenment of Congress—Congress, the body that should be ready to assume the responsibility of whatever legislation is necessary upon these subjects.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, I do not know by what authority the gentleman makes that statement as to what I read here.

Mr. HANCOCK. Oh, just from the character of the production itself, nothing else.

Mr. THOMAS. You thought it was a military academy production?

Mr. HANCOCK. It sounded very like it, and I have read a good many of them; but I do not know anything about the origin of that one, and probably I would not have taken this view of it if the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. THOMAS] had not found a "steal" in this bill. I do not know what particular facilities he may have for detecting steals, but I remember that on one or two previous occasions he has discovered "steals" in places where no one else expected their existence. The "steal" that he finds in this bill is the provision for securing, if it be possible, a 12-inch steel gun of a certain capacity, although for the construction of that gun the whole country is invited to come in and compete, and those who do compete are required to test the guns at their own expense. Mr. Chairman, if that is a provision for a steal I am inclined to think it is a kind of larceny that ought to be very much encouraged. [Laughter.] By this plan we shall probably be able to get a gun that will amount to something in less time than your Chief of Ordnance officially says it would take him to make one. As late as 1874 he testified as follows as to the time it would take him to make one or two guns—and he has not produced them yet. Speaking before the Senate committee, he says:

To return to the matter of steel guns, if Congress were to go into their fabrication I should begin by trying to make two 8-inch guns—

Mr. THOMAS. Whose statement is that?

Mr. HANCOCK. General Benét's. He goes on to say:

I presume that to make one with bands of steel and another wrapped round with wire would probably take me two years. If we succeed we should go on making steel guns of that caliber and at the same time take a step further—

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HANCOCK. Mr. Chairman, I thought I had retained about eighteen minutes.

Mr. BAYNE. I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HANCOCK] have ten minutes more.

Mr. THOMAS. If the opponents of the bill are given the same courtesy I shall not object.

Mr. HANCOCK. Mr. Chairman, we are engaged in a discussion under the five-minute rule, and I move to strike out the last paragraph.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee rose informally.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McCook, its Secretary, announced that the Senate had passed a bill and a joint resolution of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. 6089) for the relief of Moses F. Carleton; and Joint resolution (H. Res. 342) with amendments, to authorize the printing of 400,000 copies of the report of the Commissioner of Agriculture for the year 1885.

The message further announced that the Senate had concurred in the amendments of the House of Representatives to bills of the following titles:

A bill (S. 2316) granting a pension to Mrs. Cordelia Brainerd Thomas; and

A bill (S. 2262) granting a pension to Sedate R. Martin.

The message further announced that the Senate had passed a resolution providing for the printing of 5,000 copies of Executive Document 59, being the report of the delegates on behalf of the United States to the third international convention of the Society of the Red Cross of Geneva.

FORTIFICATIONS APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Committee of the Whole resumed its session.

Mr. ADAMS, of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, before the reading of the bill begins I wish to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ADAMS, of Illinois. I notice that this bill consists of only one section, and I desire to ask whether as the reading of the bill progresses I shall be at liberty to make a point of order against the proposition in any paragraph when it is reached.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman may make his point of order in the ordinary mode in which points are made during the consideration of general appropriation bills.

Mr. KEIFER. I ask unanimous consent to extend in the RECORD my remarks made this morning.

There being no objection, leave was granted.

Mr. HANCOCK. I ask that the first paragraph of the bill be read.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will proceed to read the bill by paragraphs for amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, &c. That the sums of money herein provided for be, and the same are hereby, appropriated out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, namely:

For the protection, preservation, and repair of fortifications and other works of defense for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, $100,000, the same to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War.

Mr. HANCOCK. For the purpose of continuing the remarks in which I was interrupted, I move to amend by striking out the last line of the paragraph last read.

I read further from the testimony of the chief of the Ordnance Department of the Army:

To return to the matter of steel guns,

If Congress were to go into their fabrication, I should begin by trying to make two 8-inch guns.

I presume that to make one with bands of steel and another wrapped around with wire would probably take me at least two years.

If we succeeded we could go on making steel guns of that caliber, and at the same time take a step further and try a 10-inch gun; that would take a year or two more.

Then if we were successful we could go to a 12-inch gun, which, of course, would require increased plant and heavier hammers.

I should say, if we had the means of going on, that in the course of eight or ten years we ought to have the requisite plant in this country to make guns of any size we might require; but we have not got it now: we have barely got heavy enough hammers for the smaller caliber of guns, such as 6 and 8 inch, and at several of our best establishments a steel ingot cast at one place has to be sent to another place to be forged; steel-making of a quality suitable for guns has not yet progressed beyond the experimental stage.

Mr. ELLIS. From what is the gentleman reading?

Mr. HANCOCK. From the testimony of General Benét.

Mr. ELLIS. When?

Mr. HANCOCK. Ten years ago.

Mr. ELLIS. Ten years ago!

Mr. HANCOCK. He stated that he might possibly be able to make such a gun as he described in two years if he had the money. Four million and a half of dollars have been expended; and as late as December 23, 1883, Hon. William E. Chandler, Secretary of the Navy, said in a speech at Philadelphia:

But for the restoration of the Navy, in the place of our obsolete wooden ships and smooth-bore guns, we need modern steel ships and high power rifled cannon, of which we have not one to-day.

This business takes a good deal longer than your paragon of ability in ordnance imagines. Ten years have gone by, and he has not yet completed the first gun; and I think it will take him the residue of this century to get out one gun according to the processes by which he proceeds.

In May, 1883, Admiral C. P. R. Rodgers, in an address at a banquet of the Society of the Army of the Potomac, at Washington, said:

We have not one large and efficient ship of war, and our few good sloops are not of the best type.

Mr. ELLIS. What is the date of that?

Mr. HANCOCK. I have already stated the date. The gentleman should come nearer; he is getting hard of hearing. Age is telling upon him, as it is upon myself. [Laughter.]

Admiral Rodgers says further:

So far as I know we have not one very good gun, of even moderate caliber, ashore or afloat, and what is more, I fear we have not the trained artisans and the forges to make them.

He did not know that General Benét had considered this subject in connection with the honorable member from Louisiana. That was Admiral Rodgers's opinion in May, 1883. So far as I can find there is no advance in this discovery of making everything out of steel and going to Krupp for it. I challenge the gentleman to bring forward an instance where one of the Krupp guns has stood the test of twenty consecutive fires, two or three a minute, as in battle. Krupp will not subject his guns to this test. He will send one of his guns down to the Italians, and let them have it as an ornament, afraid to fire it because the tests of these guns have usually killed more in the rear than in the front.

Mr. ELLIS. Why, Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman knew what he is talking about he would know that before Krupp ships a gun he tests it by rapid firing eight hours with battering charges.

Mr. HANCOCK. The gentleman will learn something if he will listen a moment, and not get impatient. I had several other short extracts which I had intended to read, but I will forego doing so because they irritate the gentleman. Here are some of the tests that Krupp himself makes:

In June, 1860, a 12-pounder Mersey steel gun was fired six rounds, at Shoeburyness, and burst.

What further do we have in the way of tests? Let me continue:

In November, 1861, a 20-pounder Krupp steel gun was fired two rounds, at Shoeburyness, and burst.

In March, 1862, a 30-pounder French steel gun was fired, at Gavres, and burst.

Mr. ELLIS. What was the date of that last test?

Mr. HANCOCK. You must listen a little closer as I read off the dates as it is a great trouble for me constantly to go back and repeat them. Besides I have not the time to spare. The last one was March, 1862. The next was in April:

In April, 1863, a 20-pounder Muesels steel gun was fired one hundred and thirty-two rounds, at Shoeburyness, and burst.

In 1864 a 9½-inch Krupp steel gun was fired sixty-six times, in Russia, and burst.

I believe the gentleman will admit that all the Russian guns burst. [Laughter.] They have ordered, I see, some more of them, although they find after a short time they burst and kill a great many at the breech of the guns, but they have a great many Russians and do not seem to mind it. [Laughter.]

In June, 1866, a 9-inch Krupp steel gun was fired fifty-six times, in Russia, and burst.

There is no excuse for that, except incompetency or infidelity. We can make 6 or 7 inch guns here, I am satisfied. I believe that Yankee ingenuity is able to make guns of such caliber that will not burst. The great difficulty has been that as you increase the caliber you render the gun more and more liable to burst, until with some people—not with General Benét or my friend from Louisiana—it is not a proposition simply whether the thing is practical or not, for they have not discovered—

Mr. ELLIS rose.

Mr. HANCOCK. You and General Benét have been working on this for a great while.

Mr. ELLIS. Will the gentleman answer me a question?

Mr. HANCOCK. Yes, if I am able to do so.

Mr. ELLIS. If that is so and steel is condemned, why has Krupp invested $30,000,000? Why has Sir Joseph Whitworth and Sir William Armstrong abandoned their own line and gone into it? Why has France and Italy and all the other great powers done the same thing?

Mr. HANCOCK. Do not make your question so long. In answer to the gentleman's question I will say that I suppose it is on the same principle that Worth, the great authority of female fashion in Paris, has invested everything he had on earth in his business [laughter] and so has made himself a millionaire. These other parties have got the world to believe, that is I suppose most of them have, that they are infallible—I know that you and General Benét do; that nothing but steel will do. I do not say that steel will not do. I say that all the experiments up to this time have proved to the satisfaction of my understanding that the best metal that can be used, that the best metal in the world according to experiments and experience of warfare, the best metal that can be used is bronze for guns from seven inches down. Whether it would resist the disposition toward elongation I do not know, but I have seen guns myself which had been reputed to be in use over a hundred years that were still sound.

Mr. ELLIS. Let me ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. HANCOCK. Certainly.

Mr. ELLIS. Is it the unanimous opinion of the report of the foundry board, the latest authority, that steel is the best metal out of which to make guns?

Mr. HANCOCK. The gun-foundry board is made up of such persons that I am not willing to see the money of the people of the United States entirely entrusted to them. I want the different branches of the service to come in. If I could have my way I would put in a few shrewd Yankees and run the risk of their putting up a job. [Laughter.] But I do not think they could succeed while my friend from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] is in Congress when they came to ask for an appropriation.

There is nothing to be got out of this bill. All these experiments have to be made at the expense of the party producing the gun. They have to bear the whole expense of the tests.

I wish to call the gentleman's attention to the remaining instances of experiments with these guns. They are as follows:

In 1864 a 9½-inch Krupp steel gun was fired sixty-six times, in Russia, and burst.

In August, 1865, a 9½-inch Krupp steel gun was fired, in Prussia, and burst.

In 1865 an 8½-inch Krupp steel gun was fired one hundred and nine times, in Russia, and burst.

In June, 1866, a 9-inch Krupp steel gun was fired fifty-six times, in Russia, and burst.

In 1866 a Krupp steel field-gun was fired, in Berlin, and burst, killing three cadets.

In January, 1867, a 7-inch Krupp steel gun was fired twice, at Woolwich, and burst.

On the 27th of September, 1867, a 4-pounder Krupp steel gun was fired, at Tegel, and burst, killing two men.

In July, 1867, a 9-inch Krupp steel gun was fired, on the Russian frigate Nywekl, and burst, killing twelve men and wounding thirty.

In November, 1876, a 7½ French steel gun was fired, at Havre, and burst, killing one man.

In 1868 a 9-inch Krupp steel gun was fired, in Russia, and burst.
In 1868 a 9-inch Krupp steel gun was fired, in Cadiz, and burst.
In January, 1869, a 13-inch Krupp steel gun was fired, in Prussia, and burst into twenty pieces.
On the 29th of September, 1871, an 11-inch hooped Krupp steel gun was fired once, at Cronstadt, and burst into several pieces.

All the above facts are found recorded in the Journal of the Royal United Service Institution.

Mr. BUDD was recognized and yielded his time to Mr. HANCOCK.

Mr. HANCOCK. Now, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Maine [Mr. REED], for whom I have the greatest admiration, criticised very severely in his remarks on this bill the provision with reference to the construction of 12-inch guns, and said that it was an unnecessary expenditure of money to get the gun; that it would open up a big job and an opportunity to impose upon the Government, when if he had read the bill carefully he would have found that it confined it solely and alone to one single breech-loading rifled gun of twelve inches caliber, which shall be produced and subjected to such tests of power and endurance as may be prescribed, and at the expense of the party, in all respects, who presents such a gun.

The bill also provides that this gun shall be constructed before any contracts are entered into for cannon for the armament of our fortifications, and that it shall receive the favor of the board composed of the officers in whom the members on this floor have great confidence, whose report must be satisfactory before any contract is made. There is no intention to enter into the manufacture of a lot of worthless 8-inch or 10-inch guns. I do not undertake to say it will be entirely satisfactory in all respects, but it is well worth a trial to see whether such guns can be made in this country of sufficient power and endurance for all the purposes of our seacoast and harbor defenses.

Mr. REED, of Maine. Will the gentleman permit an interruption?
Mr. HANCOCK. Certainly.

Mr. REED, of Maine. The sixty-seventh and sixty-eighth lines of this bill declare that before any further contracts are entered into or expenditures made for cannon for the armament of fortifications except as herein provided a breech-loading rifled cannon of 12-inch caliber shall be produced, &c.

Mr. HANCOCK. That is just what I said.

Mr. REED, of Maine. Does not that inhibit the building of other guns until this provision has been complied with?

Mr. HANCOCK. Yes, sir; and I think it ought to.

Mr. REED, of Maine. And that is just what I complain of.

Mr. HANCOCK. It is the opinion of some experts that the amount of money expended—and I think that statement will be found also in the testimony of many officers of the Army and in the report of the Secretary of the Navy—that after spending millions and millions of money we have not succeeded in getting a gun either afloat or ashore which is a first-class gun; not one.

Mr. ELLIS. Everybody knows that, and that is just what I want to get.

Mr. HANCOCK. Then if everybody knows it do not take up my time in calling everybody's attention to it; at least you need not take up my time to tell everybody what everybody knows. [Laughter.] But I was going on to say that after twenty-five years of experimental work and vast expenditures of money we have not yet a single gun afloat or ashore of a first-class character. I shall say nothing about ships, for that has been provided for under a similar provision in another bill that is attempted here in regard to our fortifications and armament. But I think it is wise policy to let the next Congress, of which I shall not be a troublesome member, I am sure, have some data on which to act, so that when money is appropriated, and I hope millions of dollars will be, they may know how to apply such appropriations.

For I desire, Mr. Chairman, to see the country properly prepared to meet any emergency that may arise; but I do not wish to see the interests of a great people left alone to the engineering skill of one person because he says that in ten or twelve years he thinks he can make a gun. Let us find out if somebody else can not do a little better, and if they do to the satisfaction of the board, then the duty on the part of the American Congress is simplified; we will simply make generous appropriations to provide our seacoast cities and towns with fortifications and armament ample to resist any probable attack.

Mr. ELLIS. Are you willing to see that work go on?

Mr. REED, of Maine. If the gentleman will permit another interruption, if he intends to rely upon that board, why this particularity of detail in regard to this gun? It provides certain conditions which at least may be characterized as unusual; some of them seem to be rather strange, and appear to point to a particular gun or a particular manufacturer. If my opinion be correct, this should be explained by the gentleman from Texas or some other member of the committee.

Mr. HANCOCK. I know nothing of a particular case. But where a bill is general or broad in its extent all through, where its light falls upon the just and unjust alike, like the dews of heaven, I can not think that there is much danger in it.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, the distinguished gentleman from Texas a few moments since referred to me as the gentleman always able to detect a steal—

Mr. HANCOCK. Not always.

Mr. THOMAS. He says now I have not always been able to detect all the steals going on. Now, I defy the gentleman to produce from the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD one remark of mine, during the six years of my service in Congress upon this floor, where I have ever charged upon any member of this House that he has been guilty of a steal.

Mr. HANCOCK. Oh, I never thought of such a thing.

Mr. THOMAS. I suppose the gentleman indulged in ridicule in alluding to my course, because of the fact of my having called attention on yesterday, in the debate on the sundry civil bill, to the gentleman from Texas, as a member of the Committee on Appropriations, having provided for the State of Texas in that bill by two appropriations for public buildings.

A MEMBER. What two?

Mr. THOMAS. The gentleman inquires what two. I will be glad to inform him. I refer to the court-house and post-office at Dallas, Tex., for one, and to the public buildings and grounds at Galveston, Tex., for the other. Now, that is exactly where the shoe pinches.

I found fault with the Committee on Appropriations coming in here with a bill making special provision for public buildings in the States represented by members of that committee, when the other members of the House who wanted such appropriations were compelled to rely upon getting special bills passed. I denounced that as unjust. I denounce it now as unjust. I did not say there was a "steal" in it, but I called attention to the fact that those gentlemen having an opportunity to make special provision for their own States provided for them, and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HANCOCK] is one of those to whom that remark applied.

Now, so far as my friend from Michigan [Mr. HERR] is concerned, although he is a member of that committee, I find that he did not provide specially for Michigan—why, I am unable to say, unless it is because the public service did not demand such an appropriation.

Mr. HERR. Will the gentleman permit me—

Mr. THOMAS. Just one moment.

Mr. HERR. Mr. Chairman, the fact that I got no extra appropriation in that bill for my State is owing to my excessive modesty, which has bothered me throughout my entire public life. [Laughter.]

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Chairman, we have often observed here that modesty upon which the gentleman so justly prides himself, and perhaps we have never seen it so strikingly exhibited as in this instance in his failure to get a special appropriation for his State—a thing surprising from any point of view, but especially so when we remember that the gentleman is from Michigan. [Laughter.]

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HANCOCK] says that I have found a "steal" in this pending bill. In the remarks that I made a little while ago I said nothing about a steal. I simply said that while this bill purported to appropriate $955,000 it was in fact a bill for the appropriation of $3,600,000 in addition, and I said that it held within its scope a scheme to allow the "great American gun-burster" referred to awhile ago by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. MCADOO] to buy guns of the Government at a quarter of a cent a pound and then sell them back to the Government slightly changed at 50 cents a pound.

I assert here, and I can demonstrate it by the highest authority, both naval and military, that the changes that are proposed to be made under this bill could be made at one-tenth of the proposed cost. Now, if the gentleman from Texas is caught with "the meat on his back" let him own up and not go around telling about "steals." [Laughter.] I have said nothing about steals in this connection; but I have said, and I say again, that while this bill pretends to appropriate $955,000 it really in fact appropriates $3,600,000, and involves apparently one of the worst jobs that has ever been proposed in Congress since I have been a member.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee rose informally; and a message from the Senate, by Mr. McCook, its Secretary, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. 870) to provide for the erection of a public building at Aberdeen, Miss., for use as a post-office, United States court, and for United States internal-revenue officials, and for other Government purposes;

A bill (H. R. 1321) for the erection of a public building at Reading, Pa.;

A bill (H. R. 1618) to provide for the construction of a court-house and post-office at Clarksburg, W. Va.;

A bill (H. R. 2123) for the erection of a public building at Wichita, Kans.;

A bill (H. R. 2949) for the erection of a public building at Fort Townsend, Wash.;

A bill (H. R. 3343) for the erection of a public building at the city of Auburn, N. Y.;

A bill (H. R. 3593) for the erection of a public building at Chicago, Ill.;

A bill (H. R. 4067) to change the limit of appropriations for the public building at Louisville, Ky.; and

A bill (H. R. 6089) for the relief of Mrs. F. Carleton.

FORTIFICATION APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Committee of the Whole resumed its session.

Mr. DORSHEIMER. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. HERR] who is a member of the Appropriations Committee took occasion a little while ago to deliver his valedictory address to this House. I think this is also a suitable time for me to deliver my valedictory address, and inasmuch as the measure before us relates to heavy weights and big guns, perhaps there is some propriety in the choice of the gentleman from Michigan and myself of the time for delivering our valedictory addresses. [Laughter.] The gentleman from Michigan took the opportunity which the debate afforded him to deliver a glowing eulogy upon a late public act of the President-elect. We all upon this side of the House observed the evidence which he gave of a friendly disposition toward us with great pleasure.

I think I may describe the gentleman from Michigan as a man of a somewhat exuberant humor; but during this entire session a melancholy seemed to have settled down upon his spirit, and he has not shown his characteristic good nature. I was therefore surprised to find that the old faculty had returned to him to-day, and that the speech which he made here in eulogy of Governor Cleveland showed more of his humorous characteristics than any other speech which he has made during the present session. Was it an indication, sir, that the gentleman who has been melancholy at the prospect of going out of power finds that he may have an opportunity of returning to power?

Is it possible that the gentleman from Michigan has indicated here to-day his intention to support Governor Cleveland's administration, and his ambition, perhaps, to return to this House two years hence, to sit upon our side of it, and to enjoy what he has so long enjoyed, the delights of political place and power?

I think I may say, although I shall not be here to welcome him, that if he should come he will receive a cordial welcome from this side of the House, for we should be glad to have his very unusual facilities for debate always displayed as they were this morning in the eulogy of Democratic statesmen and in the defense of Democratic doctrine. [Laughter.]

The public act which was the subject of the eulogy of the gentleman from Michigan was the letter addressed to certain members of this House by the President-elect. Now, I agree with the gentleman that that letter contained an abundance of sound doctrine. I will, however, say, because I propose to be perfectly frank, and from a long knowledge of and personal acquaintance with the President-elect I know that his character and disposition dispose all men to frankness who deal with him as to public matters—

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. HERR was recognized and yielded his time to Mr. DORSHEIMER.

Mr. DORSHEIMER. I should have preferred, inasmuch as the President-elect thought it desirable to address certain members of the House, that he had done what I have no doubt he will do upon the first occasion which the duties of his office shall furnish him, and that is to suggest to Congress some practicable method by which the circulation as coin of the two metals can be maintained and reconciled. For I do not believe it to be either desirable or possible that silver should be demonetized in this country. On the other hand, I think it is a part of true statesmanship to recognize the facts that exist and to bring about a reconciliation between these two currencies by a reconsideration of the ratio of their values.

In my judgment, the true solution is to make the silver dollar equal to the gold dollar, and if the silver dollar be made equal to the gold dollar there will be no reason for placing any restriction whatever upon its coinage. And indeed we might in that case safely make it the sole foundation of the paper money of the country. I believe in some such solution as the one I have suggested, although I wish to be deferential in expressing my views; for without reference to particular plans the result is what I would aim to accomplish, and that result in my judgment must be a reconciliation of this difficulty by placing the gold coinage and the silver coinage of the country upon an equality as to value.

How much time have I left?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has one minute of his time remaining.

Mr. DORSHEIMER. Mr. Chairman, the time at my disposal will not permit me to go into the subject of the bill. I will, however, briefly state that in my judgment the time has arrived when sufficient appropriations should be made for the re-enforcement of our fortifications and for the provision of new and improved cannon. I am sorry to say that I do not think the bill offered by the committee accomplishes this. We should place in the hands of the Administration such a law as will enable it to procure the guns that are needed and to give to the fortifications the strength that they should have.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HERR. I have been very much instructed, not to say amused, by the fact that my friend from New York [Mr. DORSHEIMER] should have taken the peculiar view he did of my remarks in reference to the good sense exhibited in the letter written by his distinguished friend who is to become very soon President of the United States. I was not astonished that he should think it was an intimation that I was about to leave my party and go over to the Democracy, because I recollect it is the most common thing in the world for people to judge others by what they do themselves. [Laughter.] And I recollect it was only a little while ago when my friend was a rousing good Republican; and the moment the Republicans did not, as he thought, properly provide for him he trotted out and joined the Democrats. [Laughter.] I wish to say that is not my style. I believe in the Republican party and its principles. I am proud of its history and its record, and I hope to die believing in the principles that I have advocated up to this day during my whole life. I do not leave a party because it does not at all times keep me in place, nor would I under any conceivable condition seek refuge in the Democratic party. [Applause.]

I do not think my friend should complain because I happened to discover a little sense in something coming from a Democrat in the United States. [Laughter.] You ought not to complain at my giving notice of such a discovery. I know it is extremely rare. [Laughter.] Oh! how rare! [Laughter.] But when I find a Democrat guilty of using good common sense and stating it in good common English, my nature is such that I can not be unjust and deny him full credit for so unusual a gift. [Laughter.] If his party friends here had taken my advice they would not have given their President thus early the "black eye" that they administered to him the other day. My word for it, he did not deserve it nor did he expect it. [Laughter.] I say again, he did better than I supposed it was possible for him to do. I give him credit for it. And have I not the right to do that?

Mr. DORSHEIMER. Certainly.

Mr. HERR. I wish I could say as much for the Democratic majority here—not for you; you voted with him; it can not be on account of any sly way you have of being in the warming rays of the rising sun. [Laughter.] Mr. Chairman, as I said in good faith, I hoped when I read this letter that we were to have a new era. I did not make that remark for the purpose of lugging in politics. I did it for the purpose of illustrating that on this fortification bill I hoped some good sense would be exhibited, and that we would have in this new Democratic administration—I will not say a return but a resort to business principles; that we would build forts and defend our great cities; that we would have American steel and American guns; that our own factories would be set running, and that this would be done under an administration that I did not expect any great things of. I hope such will be the result. Your President has started right. Let us all stand by him—when he is right. When he is wrong I shall take the earliest opportunity to say so, and shall do it (now, take notice) while staying in the Republican party. [Applause.] I shall not go over to the Democracy to preach my politics.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. WARNER, of Ohio, obtained the floor.

Mr. HANCOCK. I wish to remark that it is not proposed to build fortifications or fabricate guns of silver; and I submit that this debate should be confined to the subject before the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. ELLIS. I rise to a question of order. Is it in order, Mr. Chairman, upon amendments to this fortification bill to make political speeches upon silver?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks not.

Mr. ELLIS. Then I trust the Chair will confine gentlemen to the question under debate.

Mr. BLAND. That point ought to have been raised a little sooner.

Mr. WARNER, of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, this point of order is raised rather late. I understand very well that this is a fortification bill and that the question before the House relates to guns and fortifications—not to silver and gold. Nevertheless, Mr. Chairman, the silver question has been imported into the discussion; and I think it will not be considered out of place for me to say a word on it. Silver may come in play in payment of guns and fortifications.

The silver question is an economic question, not a political question. It is a question that concerns the world. It is not a question to be settled by reference to the opinion of any one. It is well understood that able men hold different views on this question. It is well understood, and has been I presume, that the President-elect entertained opinions not in harmony with all the members of this House. There is nothing strange in that fact. Republicans do not agree on it, and never have. Distinguished Republicans hold opinions entirely at variance with a majority of their party. There is nothing strange in that. The silver question belongs to a class of questions on which there are certain to be differences of opinion. It is a question of monetary science.

But I rise, Mr. Chairman, to say a word rather upon the alarm that has been sounded throughout the country that a financial crisis is about to overtake us unless the coinage of silver is stopped. I regret that time does not permit me to give reasons at length for the belief that there is no real foundation for such fears. A certain letter of the President-elect has been referred to. It is a letter evidently prepared with care and doubtless expresses his views on this important question. But that does not deprive a member on this floor from holding different views, and I frankly say that I hold views very different from those expressed in the letter referred to, and especially as to the danger of a financial crisis being about to take place.

I do not believe gold is going to a premium or that it is about to be expelled from this country. Our entire circulation, aside from gold, does not exceed $725,000,000.

Mr. BAYNE. I rise to a point of order. Unless these guns are to be constructed of silver the gentleman's remarks are out of order.

Mr. BUDD. The bill before the House provides for obtaining guns by competitive examination, without any regard to caliber or metal, and I submit that gentlemen have the right to propose brass if they wish to do so.

Mr. WARNER, of Ohio. I have no time to reply to interruptions of that kind, as they are not worth replying to. I was about to remark, Mr. Chairman, that with a currency aside from gold of less than $725,000,000 it is impossible that this currency should go below the par of gold. It is not in the power of the banks of this country, aided by all the banks of London, to put gold to a premium and keep it there so long as the volume of money in this country is kept down to as low a limit as $725,000,000. In other words, if that volume of money is not larger than is necessary to maintain prices in the United States at a level with international prices, then it is impossible for gold to go to a premium and stay there.

If the volume of money which any country has put into circulation is less than its distributive share of the world's money, then gold will flow to that country and stay there in sufficient amount to fill its channels of circulation to the international level of prices. That is our condition now. Six hundred million dollars of gold remain here because that amount falls to us as our share as supplemental to paper and silver. There is no instance in the history of the world where gold under circumstances that exist here now went to a premium.

Why, Mr. Chairman, the very attempt to put gold to a premium would put prices down here and gold would then come here as the cheapest market to buy in.

When prices go down, money goes up. To take gold out of circulation, then, would be to raise the value of silver and paper. Who ever knew of gold rising to a premium in a country where prices were falling? When money is cheap and abundant, prices rise; when it is scarce and dear, prices fall. When gold rises to a premium over other money it is because other money is cheap, not because it is dear or becoming dear—exactly the reverse of the conditions that exists here now. The alarm that has been sounded, therefore, is without foundation. The same thing was predicted a year ago, but the crisis did not come.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. REED, of Maine. If the Chair will recognize me I will yield my time to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. WARNER, of Ohio. I hope the Chair will do so.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair has already recognized the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. CURTIN].

Mr. CURTIN. Mr. Chairman, as I am in favor of some measure to arm this country for its protection, I have not time in the allotment made me to make a political speech, as gentlemen make this discussion the occasion. I at times have made political speeches in my life [laughter]—occasionally for other people to get votes for them and frequently for myself, and have always found myself more zealous when I could secure votes for myself than for the opposing candidate. [Renewed laughter.] That is the case, no doubt, with the politicians who attempt to inject into this debate political matter having nothing at all to do with this bill. I, too, would be glad to make a political speech if this august assemblage could resolve itself into a town meeting, and I was a candidate for office. If that were the case, I would convince you of my right to your votes. [Laughter.]

But such is not the case, or this the place or occasion. This fortification bill is before the House and under discussion, and soon we will be called upon to vote upon it. I wish to say in the first place that I am in favor of liberal appropriations for the armament of this country for the defense of our extended coast line.

You must not drop into fancied security of peace so eloquently depicted by the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. MCADOO]. Wars come suddenly upon humanity, and all nations should be prepared for such a calamity. The first man born into the world killed the next who followed him, and he was his brother, and from that day to this there has been no hour of the world's history when the people on the face of this earth were not somewhere engaged in warfare in some part of it. Historians and those who study the subject have ascertained the average length of peace among the most civilized nations is about twenty-five years, and that will be found to be the lessons of the past.

The war out of which grew our claims on account of French spoiliations, and which claims remained unrecognized for eighty-five years, or until in this session, when Congress provided for their adjudication—that war burst as suddenly and unlooked for as lightning in January from the sky in the frozen north. It arose from the fact that this country, then in its infancy, negotiated treaties with other countries instead of regarding France as the exclusively favored nation, and the First Consul, with all the power at his command, proceeded to destroy our commerce on the high seas, and enlisted armies which threatened with war by invasion. The war of 1812 with England found this country without preparation. Their forces landed upon our shores, burned the old capitol standing where this building is now located, and ravaged the shores of the Chesapeake Bay and the Potomac River, closed the entrance to Philadelphia and all the ports along New England, and would have captured Baltimore but for Fort McHenry. In the poverty of the country, when her armies were defeated, peace was made with that country and concessions never again to be made with any nation. We had war with Mexico in 1846, and it came suddenly upon us. And who in this country can reflect without emotions of profound sorrow on the bitter war which broke out among our people in 1861 when in civil strife the country was drenched with fraternal blood. That unhappy war was far beyond the wisdom of mortality.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. ELLIS. I will take the floor and yield my time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. CURTIN].

Mr. CURTIN. Now, Mr. Chairman, when Frederick the Great penetrated into Silesia it was done so suddenly he was in the center of that country before his enemies were aware of it, and then he declared war against Austria. So, too, the war of 1866 fell suddenly on Europe. The French and German war, which resulted in the unity of the German Empire and the prostration of the French Empire and a change of government, came suddenly, and the success of the Germans followed preparation while in peace. I say, therefore, there is no sensible man on this floor—and I am aware I speak in the presence of enlightened men—who can look calmly and with philosophy on the coalitions forming in Europe who will not conclude they are not in harmony with the continued peace of that continent.

I do not suppose that 3,000 miles away we can be drawn into war if there should be hostilities in Europe, but nevertheless it may break suddenly upon this nation. With the telegraph and telephone, with rapid transit by steam, with the perfect preparation of the nations of Europe, ten days would bring to the harbor of New York a naval force which would pass the guns stationed in the fortifications there and lay under tribute that metropolitan city. I do not wish to say that may occur, but in the affairs of humanity we must stand prepared for national protection; for, gentlemen of the House of Representatives, under the Providence of God we are not exempt from the destiny of nations, and sufficient and prudent preparation in time of peace may save us millions of money in time of war as well as thousands of valuable lives.

I say the time for forts is not passed. Guns of sufficient caliber should be stationed in proper fortifications impenetrable, in casemates, in our harbors for their protection. You can station barbette guns of any weight and caliber protected from any ordnance that can be floated. You can make your forts of sand and mortar; you can make them iron-clad, or in turret, and by such works and ordnance the entrance to your great commercial cities shall be protected in time of peace for any emergency that may occur suddenly in time of war. For this I refer the House to the report of the Lieutenant-General, and refer to General Sheridan, the peer of any living soldier.

We are a great nation. Our commerce and our trade are with all the world. We are prosperous, with 60,000,000 of people; we are powerful, with men and money; and I regret all that has been said of the high regard and friendship of the people of Europe for the government of this country and its people. It is puerile sentimentality. I lived abroad for four years, and my association satisfied me there is not a government in Europe that has any partiality or friendship for this form of government. How can they? We never have been the propagandist of our ideas of government, and yet insensibly, constantly, and powerfully we have undermined the foundations of all the legitimist governments of Europe by our examples of liberty, social deal level, and equality. We have extended by our example of free government the influence of the masses of the people by giving them power heretofore centralized and held by legitimate, hereditary, traditional authority.

We have never attempted to preach the gospel of our political faith to foreign nations; our example and our success in the formation of this Government has demonstrated that, without the necessity of our becoming propagandists of our political faith; and with such teaching to all humanity, with the conflict of interests of the nation in which we are involved as an active agent, how can the governing classes look upon us with other than jealous eyes; and is it not wisdom not to be parsimonious in economy in peace and make preparation for the uncertainty of the future?

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Chairman, this annual scare in behalf of large appropriations has lost its novelty so far as I am concerned. The bill which the committee recommend is in the main based on the bill of a year ago. It was then accepted promptly by the Senate.

I want, for one, before I enter upon a system of seacoast defenses or the construction of new systems of fortifications, to provide that a plan shall be adopted which has been properly matured, so that I can judge of the amount of money required to be expended, and determine whether it is judicious to expend such an amount or not. Until that is done we have no guide.

That is one of the features of this bill proposed by the committee. Another is that it provides a thorough test as to the manufacture of large ordnance before embarking upon a wide sea of expenditure in that direction; for up to this time I have not been aware that there has been a successful termination of any of the experiments heretofore made.

Therefore it is desired that an effort shall be made to induce those interested in this character of manufacture to see whether they can give us a sample test-gun that we can safely follow as our model in future.

Mr. ELLIS. Does the gentleman expect that anybody will provide money for the manufacture of that gun until some inducement is offered to do so?

Mr. RANDALL. I believe distinctly, under the provisions of this bill, there will be a test made of a 12-inch gun. I believe the inducements are such as to warrant it.

Mr. ELLIS. Then I understand the gentleman gives his adhesion to the committee's bill.

Mr. RANDALL. I undoubtedly aided, with the rest of my colleagues on this side of the House, with the exception of the gentleman from Louisiana himself, in securing the reporting of this bill to the House. But I am not tenacious of my views in that respect. If there be a fault in the committee's bill let us amend it. I always stand open to enlightenment and to reason, and am ready to listen at all times and surrender my views to the views of gentlemen who know more of such subjects than I do.

I think this rule should be adopted on all questions of public policy. But gentlemen propose here in this substitute an expenditure covering a period of five years. They propose something entirely new in legislation. I am unwilling to give it my support. On the contrary, I think we have given ample power to the incoming administration to test a system or character of gun to be purchased and adopted as a governmental model of guns; and that the plan proposed in the majority report will give us through a board of engineers and competent officers some system of fortifications and armament of which we have not now the knowledge.

Mr. REED, of Maine. I desire to call to the attention of the gentleman from Pennsylvania the actual provisions of this bill. They provide that a cannon shall be produced of 12-inch caliber of 60,000 pounds weight, and fulfilling certain conditions. Now, there is no method of production provided. How can it be produced? Obviously in but one way, and that is by private enterprise. Now, will the gentleman from Pennsylvania tell this House what will be the probable cost of a plant necessary to produce a 12-inch gun of 60,000 pounds weight?

Mr. RANDALL. I answer that I am in favor of private enterprise taking hold of the matter, because—

Mr. REED, of Maine. Will the gentleman answer my question?

Mr. RANDALL. I am going to answer it.

Mr. REED, of Maine. I do not want the gentleman to occupy my time in making an argument.

Mr. RANDALL. I will answer the gentleman in my own way.

Mr. REED, of Maine. The gentleman declines to answer.

Mr. RANDALL. No, sir; I do not. I will answer in proper time.

Mr. REED, of Maine. I ask the gentleman to say whether $500,000 will purchase such a plant. He knows that it will not. What then is the proposition? As a practical man I ask him the question. It is that a gun shall be produced by competition among manufacturers, and the preliminary to that competition is the expenditure of from a half million to one million of dollars. Is that going to be done? Is any manufacturer in this country going to purchase a plant costing $500,000 or a million of dollars on the chance of his beating the gentleman who invented this description of gun? Everybody knows that there is going to be no practical result from this measure. We are only setting up and following a chimera. There is nothing in it. The gun is to be produced by competition, and the very entrance-money to the competition is at least a half million of dollars, probably a whole million. Now what do you say to that as practical men?

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Chairman, I want to say that I am all the time for throwing the door open to private skill and energy, as well as private enterprise.

Mr. REED, of Maine. So am I.

Mr. RANDALL. And I believe that this bill will do it. And I want to go upon a new road, to bring in the skill and the enterprise and the capital of private individuals in this country. That road I believe will reach success as against a costly governmental failure. [Applause.]

Mr. BUDD. The gentleman from Maine [Mr. REED] a moment since spoke of the gun-factory plant as costing half a million dollars.

Mr. ELLIS. Nine hundred and sixty thousand dollars.

Mr. BUDD. The gun board, on page 43 of the report which I have in my hand, puts the cost at $150,000 only.

Mr. ELLIS. The gentleman can not be reading the report correctly.

Mr. BUDD. After giving that estimate they say:

This plant is capable of producing one 12-inch gun every three weeks or a proportionally larger number of smaller calibers.

Mr. ELLIS. From what page is the gentleman reading?

Mr. BUDD. Page 43, Senate Executive Document No. 13. There is shown there the cost of gun-factory plant up to 12-inch caliber, and it is said:

This plant does not include rough boring and turning.

Mr. REED, of Maine. Nor all the rest of it, either; that is the mere assembling.

Mr. BUDD. The report proceeds:

The parts are supposed to be supplied ready for finishing.

Mr. REED, of Maine. That is the mere assembling. I venture to say that instead of half a million dollars a million dollars is inside the figure.

Mr. BUDD. The gentleman asks where any inducements are offered in this bill to stimulate production of guns. I desire to state that according to this bill if a gun can be furnished that will stand the battle test the first producer of such a gun is entitled to a contract from the Government of the value of $3,600,000; and if that be not a sufficient inducement for private enterprise, then there can be none whatever. Three million six hundred thousand dollars is the first inducement offered to the successful American producer. Though the total plant might cost a million dollars, it must be remembered that after the manufacturer has produced his first hundred successful guns if he can furnish a gun answering to a better test than the test prescribed by this bill then he is entitled to a further contract. In other words, the bill itself provides a sufficient inducement for the establishment of a factory.

So far as the question of the best kind of metal for large guns is concerned that is a matter still in doubt. The bill proposed here by the gentleman from Louisiana, the substitute bill, provides for $7,500,000 to be given under direction of the Secretary of War to any person who may produce the material necessary for a gun, or who will produce a blank gun. I suppose the gentleman intends who will produce a finished gun. In other words, the committee's bill provides sufficient compensation for a gun which stands a prescribed test, what is known as the battle test; the substitute bill provides $7,500,000 for any man who will produce the material fit for a gun, or who will provide a blank, not a finished, gun. In either or any of these latter cases, if the substitute be adopted, that producer is entitled to and shall have the $7,500,000.

Mr. ELLIS. Provided he is the lowest bidder—

Mr. BUDD. And there are but two possible bidders in the United States.

Mr. ELLIS. And produces the material.

Mr. BUDD. Now, Mr. Chairman, a word more on this proposition. There has been no valid objection to the test provided here. The gentleman from Maine in speaking of the penetration of the celebrated Krupp gun states it is double this. I will ask the gentleman from Maine for his authority for the statement that the Krupp gun will penetrate three calibers.

Mr. REED, of Maine. I said twenty-four inches.

Mr. BUDD. That is the same thing.

Mr. REED, of Maine. The authority I give is the chief of the bureau of the Navy Department.

Mr. BUDD. I understood the gentleman to state it would penetrate double the amount required here as the war test.

Mr. REED, of Maine. That being thirteen inches.

Mr. BUDD. I make the assertion, and defy any member to produce an authority to the contrary, that the Krupp gun will not stand the test herein contained.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. ELLIS. When the substitute I have offered shall come before the House I will try to speak to it. At present we have the bill of the committee.

Now I want to reply to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL] who indorses the bill of the committee. In the first place, it tempts the foreigner to compete with your laborer. Does the gentleman approve of that? I want the people to know where he stands. Under the provisions of this bill the foreigner may compete; the Englishman, the German, the Frenchman may compete. Under this bill all the materials may come from abroad. Does the gentleman sanction that?

Mr. HUTCHINS. Will the gentleman from Louisiana allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. ELLIS. Yes, sir.

Mr. HUTCHINS. If the foreigner has stronger material than we can produce, can he not with that material beat us if we have an inferior article?

Mr. ELLIS. I will not suppose impossibilities. I know our ordnance officers tell me that within the last three months a concern in the district of the gentleman from Pennsylvania, or in his State, the Midvale Steel Works, has produced steel equal to the best English steel.

Mr. HUTCHINS. Now will the gentleman allow me to ask this question, which I asked him before? Would you use an article in the manufacture of a gun, or a ship, or a fortification inferior to that you could get abroad?

Mr. ELLIS. No, sir; I would not. Iron is iron, and steel is steel, and our mountains are full of iron, and our mechanics are full of genius, and our manufacturers are full of enterprise, and we can produce the best steel in the world.

Mr. HUTCHINS. Very well; but even with all this skill and genius, and with our mountains full of iron and coal, if you could get better guns abroad would you not purchase them?

Mr. ELLIS. I will not suppose such a case. I tell the gentleman no; I tell him emphatically no.

Mr. HUTCHINS. You would not even in time of war?

Mr. ELLIS. No; I would not permit such competition.

Mr. ELLIS. The provision of the bill as well as the section which I propose to substitute provides for a board under whose direction whatever money may be expended in these examinations shall be disbursed.

I believe that my substitute is best inasmuch as it provides that this board shall be composed of officers of the highest grade—the very heads of those departments charged with this work of defense.

Mr. RANDALL. The gentleman's amendment would limit the scope of selection of the officers to compose this board.

Mr. ELLIS. I want to have on this board the very heads of the engineer, ordnance, and torpedo branches of the service.

Mr. RANDALL. I want the selection open so that skilled officers may be chosen from the whole Army; that the selection shall not be confined to designated officers.

Mr. BUDD. A few moments ago the gentleman from Maine stated that no company could go into the manufacture of these guns without an expenditure of half a million dollars. I said that the necessary additional plant, as stated by the board, need not exceed $150,000, and that there are companies in the United States having all the necessary plant. I desire now to call attention to the statement of Mr. William P. Hunt, president of the South Boston Iron Company, that his company has all the material necessary to turn out the largest guns.

Mr. ELLIS. Cast-iron?

Mr. BUDD. Yes, sir; but the additional cost to produce steel ones is not so great.

Now, the gentleman, speaking of the Krupp gun, gives, as I understood him, as authority General Benét, the present Chief of Ordnance of the Army of the United States.

Mr. HANCOCK. I rise to a question of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HANCOCK. The point I make is that the debate has been closed, and the gentleman therefore is out of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee has passed from the paragraph on which debate was closed.

Mr. HANCOCK. I intended to embrace the whole thing.

Mr. BUDD. Now, Mr. Chairman, the report of the committee, as I understand it, shows that this same able officer, two or three years since, went before an ordnance committee and staked his reputation upon the four guns of the Crispin pattern. Congress required a test of the guns on which General Benét, whom I highly regard as authority, thus staked his reputation, and those guns were tested and three out of the four burst; and the parts of the three guns which gave way were not those of cast-iron, but the steel parts. And yet this substitute bill provides for steel guns only.

At the time of the interruption I stated that the Krupp guns would not stand the battle test herein required. They may penetrate at slow shots two calibers and a little more; but I doubt whether there has ever been any large steel guns made or produced or offered or suggested that could fire the number of shots and deliver the amount of weight of projectiles per inch of caliber prescribed here, and within the same time. Krupp himself, with his larger steel guns, of which they speak, requires between the first and second shot an interval of from fifteen to twenty minutes. The unequal expansion and overheating from rapid firing would cause the steel portion of the guns to give way. I doubt whether there is any steel gun produced that can stand the test prescribed by this bill. Whether cast-iron guns can stand the test or not I do not know, but it is not proper, nor is it wise, to provide only for a metal that has not yet stood the test, in a bill giving seven and a half millions of dollars.

Mr. ELLIS. Does the gentleman know anything about the relative strength of steel and iron?

Mr. BUDD. I certainly do.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from California yield to an interruption?

Mr. BUDD. Certainly; I will answer any question put to me.

Mr. ELLIS. Does not the gentleman know that the best iron guns, the 8-inch converted guns, which I am informed are shown hardly to be as strong as the original guns—does the gentleman know how much the charge of that gun is?

Mr. BUDD. No, sir; not exactly.

Mr. ELLIS. Does he know what its extreme charge is?

Mr. BUDD. I have not the data at hand. The gentleman asks me in regard to tensile strength, and I wish to inform the gentleman that the tensile strength of a gun is not the only necessary element in rapid firing. There is no strength in the world which will resist the expanding power of heat. It is not alone the force exerted on a gun, it is not alone the amount of the charge, it is not alone the weight of the projectile that will cause a gun to burst, but it is also the unequal expansion of metal from rapid heating. Weight, size, and metal have nothing to do with it, generally.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. ELLIS. If the gentleman will now listen I will give him some figures, taken from actual experiment, showing the difference between the strength and power of iron and steel guns. An 8-inch iron gun carries a charge of forty-five pounds of powder. An 8-inch steel gun carries a charge of one hundred pounds, or twice as great. The projectile of an 8-inch cast-iron gun is one hundred and eighty pounds, while the projectile of the steel gun is three hundred pounds. The penetrating power of the 8-inch cast-iron gun is eight inches of iron at a thousand yards. The penetrating power of the steel gun at a distance of a thousand yards is twelve to fifteen inches. The range of the iron gun is four miles, while the range of the other is seven miles.

Mr. BUDD. The gentleman from Louisiana yields the remainder of the time to me?

Mr. ELLIS. I do.

Mr. BUDD. Now I ask the gentleman if these steel guns have been fired rapidly?

Mr. THOMAS. I will answer the question if the gentleman yields to me.

Mr. BUDD. I will.

Mr. THOMAS. There is one 6-inch gun, built at the navy-yard in Washington—a high-power breech-loading 6-inch gun—now at the naval testing-ground at Annapolis, Md., which has been fired two hundred and thirty times, and shows not the least sign of breaking up or giving way—a gun showing a muzzle initial velocity of 2,000 feet. That is the highest power ever reached.

Mr. BUDD. Oh, yes; that is a 6-inch gun, and the rule is that the thickness of the barrel is equal to the caliber of the gun, and hence the thinness of the outside metal of the small gun allows it to heat through rapidly, and it does not burst as readily as a large gun. Take a thin glass vessel, as thin as it can be made, and pour boiling water into it and it will not burst, though its resisting strength is slight. But if you take a thick glass and pour water of the same temperature into it you will find that it will not stand the strain, but will burst, though the resisting strength is great. The thinness of the inclosing walls allows the heat to expand the material equally, while thick walls restrain it, and the unequal expansion caused by the heat of the chamber causes the bursting of the shell.

You can not produce, and I defy any man supporting this substitute bill to give an example of it, a thick steel gun, I mean with a thick inclosing shell, which has been subjected to rapid and repeated firing that has not burst before it became thoroughly heated. It has not been done, and I will ask the gentleman on my right, Mr. THOMAS, who talks about these guns with six inches thickness of metal, if it is not a well-known fact that these re-enforced guns, what are known as the Crispin guns, burst—three out of every four of them—when subjected to the tests which I have just mentioned?

Mr. THOMAS. I understand that is true, and the reason was that they were made of two different metals of different textile strength and different degrees of ductility; hence the re-enforced guns, so far as this goes, have not proved successful. But we ask that they shall be made of steel of a certain quality, and that difficulty will disappear.

Mr. BUDD. You say that two metals were employed in the manufacture of these guns; now let me ask which gave way—was it the cast-iron or the steel that gave way?

Mr. THOMAS. It was the cast-iron in every instance.

Mr. BUDD. No, sir; the gentleman is mistaken. The steel gave way in every instance, as the reports show. I am perfectly willing to leave it to the gentleman from Louisiana, who proposes this substitute bill, whether I am not correct.

Mr. ELLIS. I handed to the gentleman from California the official report of the bombardment of Alexandria to which I wish again to ask his attention, and I think he will find his error.

Recently the report of the bombardment of Foo Chow by the French has been received where the modern steel gun was used continuously in action without injury, and with the most powerful results, against the opposing fortress—the most effective ever known in modern warfare.

Mr. BUDD. The report as I understand it makes quite a different showing.

Mr. ELLIS. The gentleman has the report.

Mr. BUDD. No; I handed it back to the gentleman. But that very report shows that one of the vessels, the Achilles, engaged in the bombardment of Alexandria had its steel guns disabled and it had to retire out of range to get a new armament.

Mr. ELLIS. I defy the gentleman to produce the evidence that the steel guns resulted in such a failure.

Mr. BUDD. The gentleman has the document before him, and I refer further to the London Times's account as stated in the committee's report.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. BRUMM. Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that the material difference or the most important difference in the two bills rests upon this ground: The committee's bill says we do not know which is the best gun; and inasmuch as we are not sure which is the best gun, therefore we must build no guns at all but must experiment to find out which is the best; while the proposition of the minority bill is that we should go on and build guns under the best lights that we have, not only from our own experience but from the experience of other countries; and if that be true the distinction between them is in that. Why should gentlemen want us to wait, Micawber-like, until something may turn up and give us actually a perfect gun?

Mr. Chairman, it is the duty of Congress to provide for making guns for our defenses, and to make them now, and to make them of the best material and in the best manner known. As to the second proposition, that we must permit foreign competition in the manufacture of these guns, I want to say that our American manufacturers can produce the steel and can make the guns equally as well as, if not better than, any foreign manufacturer.

But the danger in competition is this, that if we allow that competition the difference will be only in the price, not in the quality. If this Government is going to allow competition it will give the contract to the man who will make the guns cheapest; and the foreign manufacturer can make them cheaper, although he can make them no better. I believe it is the policy of this Government to encourage home manufacturers in this line as in all others, not only for the benefit to be derived, but that we may be able to make them, no matter with what country we may possibly get into a war. We should be able to rest upon our own resources, make our own guns, even though it should cost a farthing or two more. That is, in my judgment, all the difference there is between the two measures; and the question is whether Congress is going to take hold of the matter now or do nothing.

Mr. HANCOCK. Unless we can by consent close the debate I move that the committee do now rise.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will submit the motion, as no gentleman asks recognition for further debate. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the gentleman from Louisiana to strike out and insert, which has been stated.

Mr. ELLIS. I propose to substitute for the paragraph of the committee's bill constituting the board the section of the substitute bill making provision for the same purposes. My motion is to strike out from line 11 to line 28 in the committee's bill, on page 2, and substitute the second section of the substitute bill which has been read, which is the mere substitution of one board for another, only the board I propose is made of much better timber and more highly finished than the other.

The question was taken; and on a division there were—ayes 35, noes 97.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. No quorum.

Mr. ELLIS. I will have to take tellers, I think, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The point of order being made that no quorum has voted, the Chair will appoint tellers.

Mr. HANCOCK and Mr. ELLIS were appointed tellers.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 52, noes 112.

So the amendment was not agreed to.

The Clerk read the following paragraph:

For the expenses of said board, and for such plans, tests, and experiments as may be required to enable said board to determine upon the best methods of protecting batteries for defensive works, and for the purchase and erection of iron, steel, and composite armor in the form of sections of turrets, gun-shields, and iron embrasures, for actual competitive tests, or any other question connected with their duties, $300,000, the same to be immediately available.

Mr. ELLIS. I am hopeless of accomplishing anything by moving to strike out this paragraph. Yet, in the interest of economy, and informing the committee that these tests have been made and the engineering thought and information of the world is full of this question, I propose to try to save that $300,000 that some future legislators may make fortifications out of it. I therefore move to strike out the paragraph.

The question being taken on the motion to strike out, there were—ayes 23, noes 63.

So (further count not being called for) the motion was not agreed to.

The Clerk read the following paragraph:

For the purchase and competitive test of specimens of the various kinds of machine-guns now in use, and of any others which may be presented and deemed worthy of consideration; for the armament of seacoast fortifications, including the manufacture of heavy guns and carriages; for the purchase or manufacture of multicharge guns, and testing the same; projectiles, fuses, powder, and implements, their trial and proof, and all necessary expenses incidental thereto, including compensation of draughtsmen on gun construction while employed in the Ordnance Bureau, $450,000; and not exceeding $15,000 thereof may be used for the expenses of experiments in the use of dynamite or other high explosive projectiles.

Mr. HANCOCK. I offer the amendment which is in the hands of the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows:

After the word "consideration," in line 44, insert "for constructing and testing experimental gun-carriages."
In line 47, after "projectiles," insert "gun-loaders."

Mr. HANCOCK. This is a little more than a verbal amendment. It is offered at the instance of the committee.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LONG. I move to strike out the last word.

So far, Mr. Chairman, this bill reported by the Committee on Appropriations is intelligible. In the first paragraph it provides for the preservation and repair of existing fortifications. In the following paragraphs it provides for the creation of an intelligent and capable board which shall examine this whole important question of a further general and adequate system of fortification, what defenses are necessary, the character and kind best adapted, the utilization of torpedoes, the purchase of movable submarine torpedoes, competitive tests, the investigation of multicharge guns, &c. I believe the Committee of the Whole realize the importance of these matters, both with a view of preserving what we have and of making intelligent provision for future work.

Further than that I for one am not willing to go in favor of this bill.

But I give notice, and I believe I represent others on this floor, that if a motion which is proposed shall be made and carried to strike out all of the bill that follows, namely, all after line 53, I shall heartily give my vote for the previous paragraphs.

Why strike out the remainder of the bill? First, because it undertakes to deal with matters that are in some respects just the matters on which the board created in the second paragraph are to report to us next year for our consideration and action then. Second, because the provisions of the bill after line 53 are experimental in their nature, of doubtful utility, of uncertainty, and liable to create great expense. Suppose some manufacturer accumulates the plant necessary for and with a view to producing one of these great guns. Suppose he almost succeeds but barely fails. Suppose then he comes to Congress with a claim, saying he was induced to enter upon the experiment by this bill; that he went to an expenditure of nearly a million of dollars in getting his plant; that he is not satisfied with the examination and verdict of the board who have been appointed to test his work.

Taking into consideration the possibility of a claim of that kind, the uncertainties which attend the bill, the objections which have been made by members who have already spoken, the experimental character of the whole thing, and the fact that in the second paragraph you appoint a board who are to consider and report upon the whole question of fortification improvements, I believe our legislation will be wiser, more intelligent, and more beneficent if we stop at line 53, strike out the rest of the bill, and be content with it up to that point.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Massachusetts withdraw the formal amendment?

Mr. LONG. I withdraw it, at the same time asking if there is unanimous consent to move to strike out all after line 53?

Mr. ELLIS. Before we part from the section which has been last read I would like to amend it.

Mr. REED, of Maine. I ask unanimous consent that a motion may be now entertained to strike out the remainder of the bill after line 53.

Mr. ELLIS. Wait until we get there. I want to amend this paragraph.

Mr. RANDALL. I have no objection myself to including all of it in a single vote.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Louisiana yield?

Mr. LONG. I ask unanimous consent—

Mr. ELLIS. I want to know from the gentleman who drew this bill if he proposes to purchase every machine-gun that comes along before it is tested.

Mr. HANCOCK. I do not propose to purchase a single gun; but I do think it wise to provide a board to pass upon the quality of these guns and to say whether they are worthy to be purchased or not.

Mr. ELLIS. That is all right. Now make the language plain that these guns may be tested but not purchased.

Mr. HANCOCK. If they are tested and found satisfactory why not purchase them?

Mr. ELLIS. And there is a provision here also for purchasing the multicharge gun, when that gun has been reported against elaborately by our own ordnance officers.

Mr. BUDD. It is a fact shown by the experiments that the multicharge gun made a greater penetration per caliber than any other gun in the world. The officers of the Army in reporting against the multicharge gun compared it with 8, 10, and 12 inch guns to show the amount of penetration and they refused absolutely to compare it with guns of like caliber.

Mr. ELLIS. I ask the gentleman to produce his official authority for that statement.

Mr. BUDD. It is in evidence taken by your committee. When the gentleman says "produce your authority," I will state it is often impossible to get a report of the committee till some days after the bill is passed. I will refer to the report of the ordnance board of June 4, 1884, which says:

There seems to be no doubt that a higher energy has been obtained with this gun with its successive charges, and with moderate and safer pressure, than can result from any gun of the same caliber using only one charge.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee rose informally; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, a message from the Senate, by Mr. McCook, its Secretary, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles:

- A bill (H. R. 1266) for the relief of Alexander D. Schenck;
- A bill (H. R. 2722) for the relief of Martha Turner;
- A bill (S. 3000) for the relief of certain settlers on the Duck Valley Indian reservation, in Nevada;
- A bill (H. R. 4382) for the relief of William H. Davis;
- A bill (H. R. 6087) authorizing the payment by the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States to Charles H. Getman, the firm of E. W. Rathbun & Co., the firm of Kinyon, Wright & Co., the firm of Bond & Jenkins, and the firm of Page, Fairchild & Co. certain duties paid by them on imported lumber accidentally burned while in custody of officers of customs, and before the same had entered into consumption;
- A bill (H. R. 6940) granting a pension to Sarah M. Bissell; and
- Joint resolution (H. Res. 824) authorizing the collector of the port of New York to deliver free of duty a silver cup won by Sergt. A. B. Van Heusen as a member of the American rifle team at Wimbledon, in July, 1883.

The message further announced that the Senate insisted upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 8138) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes, and asked for a committee of conference upon the same.

FORTIFICATION APPROPRIATION BILL.

The committee resumed its session.

Mr. BAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I hope that unanimous consent will be given to entertain a motion to strike out all of this bill after line 53. We shall then know whether we are to go on and perfect this measure or not, instead of being detained here striking out paragraph after paragraph. If one paragraph should go out, all should go out. Let us have unanimous consent to that effect, and let us have a vote upon it. If we strike out the remainder of the bill after line 53 our labors are finished. The committee can rise and the chairman can report the bill to the House.

Mr. REED, of Maine. I think that is what we had better do.*

Mr. BAYNE. The contents of this bill, after line 53, are such as can not be considered judiciously or properly at this short session of Congress. We want more knowledge, more light, than we can get in this short session of Congress to give to this proposition an intelligent consideration. Therefore I hope that no member of the committee will object to the motion to strike out all after line 53.

Mr. REED, of Maine. I ask unanimous consent that that may be done.

Mr. ELLIS (to Mr. REED). It will take but a minute to perfect this paragraph.

Mr. REED, of Maine. If we do not strike it out, then the gentleman can perfect it.

Mr. ELLIS. But I am trying to perfect the preceding paragraph, and I ask the gentleman to withhold his request for a few minutes.

Mr. REED, of Maine. Oh, certainly; I will wait for that.

Mr. ELLIS. Mr. Chairman, I propose to amend by inserting in line 44, after the word "consideration," this provision: "No machine-gun shall be purchased until tested and approved by the board herein provided for."

Mr. RANDALL. Does the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HANCOCK] object to that?

Mr. HANCOCK. Yes.

The question was taken on the amendment; and there were—ayes 30, noes 43.

Mr. ELLIS. Mr. Chairman, I can not believe that the committee wants to buy inventions before they are tested—inventions which may prove useless; and I therefore must ask for tellers.

The CHAIRMAN. Tellers are demanded, and the Chair appoints the gentleman from Texas, Mr. HANCOCK, and the gentleman from Louisiana, Mr. ELLIS.

Before the count by tellers was completed,

Mr. ELLIS. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the demand for tellers, and I will modify my amendment so as to read: "But no gun shall be purchased until tested and approved by the board herein provided for."

The amendment as modified was agreed to.

Mr. ELLIS. Now, I want to add the same proviso at the end: "That no gun shall be purchased until thoroughly tested and approved by the Department."

Mr. BUDD. I move to amend the amendment by striking out the words "and approved." The insertion of these words may defeat the entire purpose of the bill. The amendment of the gentleman from Louisiana rightly provides that no gun shall be purchased until tested; but the insertion of the words "and approved" would allow the Department to pass upon the metal itself.

A MEMBER. Oh, no.

Mr. BUDD. Yes, sir; I have no objection to a provision that any gun before being accepted shall conform to the test—

Mr. ELLIS. My object is to prevent the Government from purchasing or accepting under the provisions of this bill guns which may be useless.

Mr. BUDD. That is right.

Mr. ELLIS. Now we have organized Departments to which these subjects are committed. We must trust somebody. I think we should provide that no gun shall be purchased until it has been thoroughly tested and is approved by the Department.

Mr. BUDD. The Committee on Appropriations have provided for a test, and a gun which does not conform to the test should not be purchased; but the amendment of the gentleman from Louisiana requires the type of the gun to be approved by the Department, and this language may include the metal and everything else.

Mr. ELLIS. Ought it not to be approved?

Mr. BUDD. Not necessarily.

Mr. ELLIS. Why not?

Mr. BUDD. If it meets the requirements of the test—if it will throw the number of pounds of projectiles required by the test—why should not the gun be accepted?

Mr. ELLIS. Are not the officers of the Department proper judges of such matters?

Mr. BUDD. Does not the gentleman remember that the officers of the Ordnance Department during the late war refused to accept the breech-loader upon the ground that it was unsafe, until long after it had shown its superiority to the muzzle-loader, and that therefore the late civil war was fought with muzzle-loading guns?

Mr. HANCOCK. Mr. Chairman, the effect of this amendment, whether that be its object or not, would be to neutralize the entire bill; and probably it is intended for that purpose. This amendment would take the jurisdiction of this matter out of the hands of the board provided for in the bill, and would allow the Department to pass upon any gun without having it tested by the board. I presume the object of the amendment was to undo and cancel the preceding portion of the bill. I trust the Committee of the Whole will vote down the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is upon the amendment of the gentleman from California [Mr. BUDD] to strike out in the amendment of the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. ELLIS] the words "and approved."

Mr. BUDD. I modify my amendment so as to strike out the words "and approved" and insert "and found to conform to the requirements of this act."

Mr. ELLIS. All right; I accept that; it amounts to the same thing. The question being taken, the amendment of Mr. BUDD was agreed to; and the amendment of Mr. ELLIS as amended was agreed to.

Mr. ELLIS. I move to amend by striking out in lines 44 and 45 the words "including the manufacture of heavy guns and carriages." It must be obvious that this language is mere surplusage. There is not money enough provided in the bill for this purpose. We have not determined the type of heavy gun that shall be constructed, nor even the kind of material that shall be used. Therefore this language is mere surplusage.

Mr. ROSECRANS. Mr. Chairman, this provision was inserted in view of the fact that a pneumatic gun-carriage for the purpose of handling heavy breech-loading guns has been invented, and after examination by the Ordnance Department an appropriation has been recommended for construction and test. Such a carriage is of vast importance. The invention appeared to be promising, and the inventor was too poor to try the experiment himself; hence the Department was willing to recommend an appropriation of $10,000 for the purpose of constructing a carriage of this description, with its appurtenances, and mounting the gun, if necessary.

Mr. ELLIS. I do not object to any test; but I do emphatically enter my protest against the purchase or manufacture by the Government of any patented invention until it is tested.

Mr. ROSECRANS. I think the gentleman did not understand my statement. The object is not to purchase this patent, but, as the inventor is too poor to make the experiment himself, and as the invention is one of probable utility, the proposition is to expend money enough to make one test of a pneumatic carriage for heavy breech-loading guns.

Mr. ELLIS. I do not believe the Government of the United States should embark in anything of the sort. If there be merit in it science will not be wanting in sight to see it and capital will not be wanting to carry it out. I do not believe the money of the whole people should be embarked for the private advantage of any one. While I want the Government to have the best, I want it to make a proper test before it purchases.

Now as to the manufacture of heavy guns, my friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL] will agree with me, and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HANCOCK] must agree with me, in favor of striking out the words "including manufacture of heavy guns and gun-carriages."

Mr. RANDALL. I would suggest to the gentleman he should insert a provision that they should be tested before they are purchased. There is no harm in that.

Mr. ELLIS. One amendment at a time.

Mr. RANDALL. Do not strike them out, but let there be a provision put in that they shall be tested before they are purchased.

Mr. ELLIS. Does the gentleman refer to gun-carriages?

Mr. RANDALL. Both, for guns and gun-carriages.

Mr. ELLIS. I have moved that the words "including the manufacture of heavy guns and gun-carriages" should be stricken out.

Mr. RANDALL. Yes, and I suggest instead that the gentleman shall insert the words that they shall not purchase until tested.

Mr. ELLIS. That is already in the bill and this provision ought to go out.

Mr. RANDALL. There ought to be the same test for gun-carriages that there is for guns.

Mr. ELLIS. Unquestionably.

Mr. RANDALL. Then insert those words.

Mr. ELLIS. But you have not a gun to test.

Mr. RANDALL. I propose we shall test it before we proceed to purchase it.

Mr. ELLIS. But you have not any to purchase, even. The clause reads now, "including the manufacture and purchase of heavy guns and carriages."

Mr. BUDD. The word "purchase" is not there.

Mr. ELLIS. The words I move to strike out are "including the manufacture of heavy guns and gun-carriages."

Mr. RANDALL. What I wish to provide for is that no more than one gun of any type shall be manufactured until that type has been fully tested. I do not want to cut off the gun if it comes up on the test to what is desired.

Mr. ELLIS. Does the gentleman also propose to put in the test for gun-carriages?

Mr. RANDALL. Certainly; to test the gun-carriage as well as the gun.

Mr. ELLIS. That is already in, and I therefore insist on my motion to strike out the words "including the manufacture of heavy guns and carriages."

The CHAIRMAN. The noes seem to have it.

Mr. ELLIS. I demand a division.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 5, noes 63.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. REED, of Maine. I now ask that motion be stated to the committee.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Maine moves by unanimous consent that the question shall be taken on striking out all after line 53 in the bill.

Mr. HAMMOND. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HAMMOND. Does it include that the words proposed to be stricken out shall be considered as read?

Mr. BUDD. That is the purpose.

Mr. HAMMOND. I do not object if it includes all purposes.

Mr. REED, of Maine. I merely propose to test the sense of the committee. If the words are stricken out that is the end of it; but if they are not stricken out, then as now that portion of the bill will be open to amendment.

Mr. HAMMOND. I wish to have it considered as read. Really no motion is in order to strike out what has not yet been read.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the proposition of the gentleman from Maine [Mr. REED]?

Mr. HAMMOND. If modified in that way I do not object.

Mr. BUDD. Of course we all consider it as having been read.

Mr. REED, of Maine. Yes; that is understood, but if that portion of the bill is not stricken out, then it is to be open to amendment.

Mr. THOMAS. Points of order can also be made if those words are not stricken out.

The CHAIRMAN. It will be considered subject to points of order also. Is there objection to the proposition of the gentleman from Maine?

Mr. HANCOCK. I object. [Cries of "Read!"]

Mr. REED, of Maine. I make the point of order that the pending paragraph is new legislation and obnoxious to our rules. I ask for a ruling of the Chair, and will not take up the time in the discussion of the point of order.

Mr. HANCOCK. There has been a misapprehension in reference to my objection. I do not object to testing the sense of the committee, but merely express my hope that the proposition will not be agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there further objection to the proposition of the gentleman from Maine, that all after line 53 in the bill shall be stricken out?

Mr. HAMMOND. The understanding being that that portion of the bill has been read through.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

Mr. REED, of Maine. And all points of order are reserved.

Mr. HANCOCK. I hope that motion will not prevail. The effect would be to neutralize almost entirely everything that has gone before. There would be little or nothing left for the board we deem so important and for whose establishment we have provided to act upon. Nor would there be any inducement to any persons to establish plants for the purpose of producing guns of a desirable character. You in effect strike out the object, the purpose, the aim of all the preceding portion of the bill if the motion of the gentleman from Maine shall prevail. It seems to me most remarkable, if it be the sentiment of this House we shall ascertain the proper gun, that it will agree now to strike out all this portion of the bill, the effect of which will be to render nugatory all that has gone before. Where will you get your guns for this board to test? Where will you get your ammunition?

Mr. LONG. Three hundred thousand dollars is appropriated for actual competitive tests in the preceding portion of the bill.

Mr. HANCOCK. But that does not apply to this subject.

Mr. LONG. Yes, it may be used for this purpose; it says for actual competitive tests, or any other questions connected with the duties of the board.

Mr. HANCOCK. And who is going to produce guns on such conditions? What inducement do you offer to any person to undertake the work? Let me ask the gentleman from Massachusetts, would any of your great manufacturers, would the gun foundry in Boston produce guns to have them tested at their own expense when there is nothing in the way of remuneration or inducement or advantage in the bill to give them any hope of repayment for the work if successful? The gentleman proposes to strike out all in the bill that provides any inducement to men to embark in this enterprise. He strikes out all that is likely to bring about the tests of the character that we desire and which can be accomplished in no other way at present in this country.

It leaves the bill a perfect waste and blank, without the remotest inducement to invite competition or excite emulation among manufacturers to provide the best quality of guns for the use of the Government. There is nothing to be accomplished by the bill with this stricken out. There is no object in being able to furnish guns to the Government, for there is no reward for successful enterprise. These provisions of the bill we believed to be absolutely essential to bring about some satisfactory results, and if stricken out the inevitable result is that nothing can be accomplished. I trust, therefore, the motion will not prevail; I hope it will be voted down, and the portions of the bill proposed to be stricken out will be adopted by the committee and made a part of the law.

Mr. REED, of Maine. Mr. Chairman, it is perhaps not necessary to repeat anything I have already said; but I want to call the attention of the House to the fact that this strikes out of the bill a proposition which seems to me to be futile, and which I am of the opinion has been already demonstrated clearly to be futile. It is a proposition which in a few words may be stated this way: We offer the manufacturers of guns a proposition to buy of them a certain kind of gun provided they come up to certain tests. Well, now, in order for them to compete for the contract of manufacturing these guns there is not a single one of them in this country that must not spend from $1,000,000 to $1,250,000 to get the plant. I have said before, and I repeat, that this is only following an illusion, and that we are sure simply to waste time by adopting a proposition of that kind.

My second objection is that the test of the gun is so worded that it will only lead to disappointment and disaster, and I think the terms of the test are such that there has been put upon the committee a set of words, a set of terms, which will result in the benefit of a single manufacturer, and one who has hitherto been a failure as a manufacturer of guns. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. ROSECRANS. Mr. Chairman, in reply to the remarks of the honorable gentleman from Maine, I wish to call the attention of the committee to the first proposition he makes. He says it is entirely futile to attempt this. I want to ask the committee and gentlemen on this floor whether they think it futile to provide some regular dimensions of calibers for our guns? Why is it futile? You might as well say it is futile to provide regular calibers for muskets in the Army as for ordnance? It is ridiculous to assert the futility of such provisions for guns and at the same time to admit the utility of prescribing uniform calibers for muskets and small-arms.

Mr. REED, of Maine. Why have similarity in caliber both in the Navy and Army, and prohibit all else? That I discussed before.

Mr. ROSECRANS. In the first place, if you understand gunnery as well as other people do you would know more about it. You made it appear impossible or wonderfully strange that there should be any uniformity whatever. I would like to ask any gentleman on this floor to give any reason why there should not be uniformity when it facilitates the use and interchange of ammunition in use for like calibers in the Army and Navy.

Mr. REED, of Maine. I will give the gentleman an answer if he wants it.

Mr. ROSECRANS. Why not have uniformity to permit of interchange of ammunition on land and sea so that by manufacturing fixed sizes we can make no mistakes? Take, for instance, the ammunition for one of our 6-inch guns and see the advantage of uniformity of caliber. When a requisition is made for this character of ammunition it can go either for use by sea or land. Now, with regard to uniformity of length. There are cases where a manufacturer of ordnance makes a gun in which there is a slight variation sometimes in the length, or slight variance in the size of the bore. It creates the idea in the testing of the gun that there is an indetermination in the result or character of the tests; that they are not satisfactory, because it is said that perhaps one gun is an inch or two longer in the bore or there may be some little difference between them in other respects which gives a slight advantage. This difference leads to uncertainty in the tests. What we want in these engines of war is that they shall produce the desired effects with uniformity and that the projectiles, ammunition, and all that is needful for their service shall be as simple and uniform as possible, and equally available whether used by the Army or Navy.

Mr. ELLIS. Upon that same question this board is to pass.

Mr. ROSECRANS. The next proposition of the gentleman is that it is uncertain. We know enough about ordnance and heavy ordnance to know that, if we can get a gun which will discharge a projectile with muzzle velocity sufficient to penetrate one and a half calibers into a steel plate, we shall have accomplished something in the right direction and something which we have not before accomplished.

We know that this penetrative power depends upon two things. First, on the square of the velocity; secondly, on the mass of the projectile. Now, if a man comes and says, "Allow me to double the mass and diminish the velocity proportionately," we are willing he should do it.

I want further to call the gentleman's attention to this also: The passage of this bill does not in the least interfere with any operation we have in hand, nor any examination, nor any steps that we need to take for the future defense of our country. It only invites those gentlemen who have such confidence in their inventions and in their means of bringing those inventions to perfection that they are willing to accept of the inducement we offer, namely, "Gentlemen, if you want to make a gun, and if you can do it, set about it, and when ready apply for a test and you shall have it; and this is the test you shall have." And it gives a test, and it is a good test; there is no vagueness about it. The offer of pay for the accepted type-gun at a reasonable price, and a contract for fifty such, is only made to the first successful competitor, and to no others.

The price to be paid for these guns is not fixed, but the greatest which the act allows is less than what we are now paying, while any gun which will stand the required tests would be greatly superior to even the Krupp gun, the price of which, General Benét stated to our committee, is now about 55 cents per pound at the manufactory.

It is well to remember in this connection that to prepare and produce the Krupp guns here would require an outlay of many millions of dollars and ten years of time, and even were the attempt to be made it is uncertain when we should acquire the secrets of handling and of annealing such heavy masses so as to have a guaranteed success.

What then becomes of the claims made by the honorable gentleman from Louisiana, that to start upon this line of operation would be to benefit home labor and native genius?

Why, the committee's bill proposes to open the doors to American genius and American labor immeasurably in comparison. And the gentleman in one breath expresses his confidence in the superiority of our native genius and capacity to meet the national requirements for heavy armor-penetrating guns, and in the very next deprecates opening their production to competition for fear the foreigner would compete for and carry away the prize. [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Maine [Mr. REED].

The question being taken, the chairman stated that in the judgment of the Chair the ayes had it.

Mr. BUDD. I call for a division.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 74, noes 42.

Mr. BUDD. No quorum.

Mr. RANDALL. I hope the gentleman will not insist on that point.

Mr. BUDD. I withdraw the point as to a quorum.

So (further count not being called for) the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HANCOCK. I move that the committee rise and report the bill to the House with the amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

The committee accordingly rose; and the Speaker having taken the chair, Mr. BLOUNT reported that the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union having had under consideration the bill (H. R. 8279) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, and for the armament thereof, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes, had instructed him to report the same back to the House with sundry amendments.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McCook, its Secretary, informed the House that the Senate had passed without amendment bills of the House of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. 577) to donate a cemetery site on the public lands to the city of Kirwin, in the State of Kansas; and

A bill (H. R. 3058) to amend section 1889, chapter 1, title 23 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, relative to general incorporation acts of Territories.

The message further announced that the Senate had passed a bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House was requested:

A bill (S. 2637) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to release a right of way across lands of the United States at Carlisle, Pa.

FORTIFICATION BILL.

Mr. HANCOCK. I move the previous question on the amendments and upon ordering the bill to be engrossed and read a third time.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there a demand for separate votes on the amendments?

Mr. BUDD. I only demand a separate vote on the amendment to strike out the last portion of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there a demand for a separate vote on any other amendment? [After a pause.] If no other separate vote is demanded the question will be taken on the other amendments in gross.

The question being taken on the other amendments, they were agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will now report the last amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out all of the bill from line 54 to line 141, inclusive.

The portion of the bill which the amendment of the Committee of the Whole proposed to strike out is as follows:

That hereafter the calibers of all heavy single-charged rifled cannon shall be uniform for the Army and Navy, and shall be guns of six inches caliber, with projectiles of not less than one hundred pounds weight; eight inches, with projectiles of not less than two hundred pounds weight; ten inches, with projectiles of not less than three hundred pounds weight; and twelve inches, with projectiles of not less than six hundred pounds weight.

That hereafter no intermediate calibers shall be made; and all such cannon hereafter manufactured by or for the United States shall be breech-loaders, not less than thirty calibers in length of bore; and in all cases the cannon shall be one hundred times the weight of the rifle-projectiles therefor.

That before any further contracts are entered into or expenditures made for cannon for the armament of fortifications, except as herein provided, a breech-loading rifled cannon of 12-inch caliber shall be produced and subjected to satisfactory test of its power and endurance, under such conditions of rapid firing as to resemble, as nearly as possible, those existing in actual battle, by firing continuously for at least one hour at such rate as to deliver not less than 18,000 pounds of its proper projectiles in that time, or at the rate of 1,500 pounds per hour for each inch of diameter of its bore, and with such charges of powder as will impart to the standard weight and kind of projectiles such initial velocity as would be required to penetrate fairly through a solid iron target equal in thickness to one and one-half times the caliber at one mile range, which extreme proof is hereby declared to be the standard test to be applied to all single-charge trial guns hereafter to be manufactured by or for the United States. No single-charge gun shall be introduced into the service of the United States, of whatever kind, standard, caliber, or material, before a trial gun of the same material, caliber, and kind has been subjected to and has withstood this standard test, at the cost of the projector or producer of the gun, and under the inspection and direction of a commission of officers to be appointed for each test as hereinafter provided for.

That whoever shall first present such a breech-loading rifled cannon of 12-inch caliber, with the necessary projectiles of six hundred pounds weight, powder, implements, and ordnance supplies, shall, upon giving proper notice in writing to the President that he has it ready for trial at some convenient place, have the standard test applied by a commission to be appointed by the President for the purpose, and be composed of one officer of the Ordnance Corps, two officers of the artillery corps of the Army, and two line officers of the Navy; and in case it conforms to the standard herein established in all particulars and successfully endures the test, it shall be adopted as the standard type, and thereafter no other kind of 12-inch or any other smaller single-charge standard-caliber gun shall be procured for service until another and better 12-inch or other standard-caliber rifled cannon has been produced, and has successfully withstood the specified test, and has proved equal in all respects, and superior in some important particulars, such as power, endurance, or economy, to all previous ones tested and adopted as a standard, when the last and best of all shall be the standard for all guns of such calibers until one of higher standard shall have been produced and accepted as aforesaid.

That whoever shall first produce any such tested and accepted standard breech-loading rifled cannon as aforesaid shall have such gun received and paid for at a fair and reasonable cost by the Secretary of War, who, moreover, shall contract with said producer to furnish, within one year thereafter, fifty such guns and one hundred projectiles of the standard therefor for each gun, to be paid for, the guns at not to exceed 50 cents per pound and the projectiles at not to exceed 10 cents per pound. Each gun shall be tested by firing ten rounds with standard projectiles and powder used in the testing of the standard gun, and fired, as nearly as possible, with the rapidity required in actual practice in war; and no gun shall be received which does not withstand this test, and no gun shall be rejected which does withstand it; and he shall be entitled to have a like contract for the delivery of fifty such cannon, with projectiles, from the Secretary of the Navy.

That in case the said successful gun or guns shall have been produced by conversion of cast-iron smooth-bore guns now the property of the Government, the person or persons producing the same shall have the option of purchasing such other cast-iron guns belonging to the Government, for his use, as he may select, at the prices and on the terms now fixed by law. And the Secretary of War shall report to Congress, at the beginning of next session, all that has been done under the provisions of this act, with such recommendations as he may deem necessary.

The question being taken on agreeing to the amendment, there were—ayes 76, noes 51.

Mr. BUDD. No quorum.

The SPEAKER. The point being made that a quorum has not voted, the Chair will appoint as tellers the gentleman from California, Mr. BUDD, and the gentleman from Maine, Mr. REED.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 131, noes 48. So the amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and being engrossed, it was accordingly read the third time.

Mr. HANCOCK. I demand the previous question on the passage of the bill.

The previous question was ordered.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. PERKINS, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that the committee had examined and found duly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. 870) to provide for the erection of a public building at Aberdeen, Miss., for use as a post-office, United States court, and for United States internal-revenue officials, and for other Government purposes;

A bill (H. R. 1813) granting an increase of pension to Ann Cornelia Lanhan;

A bill (H. R. 2722) for the relief of Martha Turner;

A bill (H. R. 3008) for the relief of certain settlers on the Duck Valley Indian reservation, in Nevada;

A bill (H. R. 6087) authorizing the payment by the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States to Charles H. Getman, the firm of E.W. Rathbun & Co., the firm of Kinyon, Wright & Co., the firm of Bond & Jenkins, and the firm of Page, Fairchild & Co., certain duties paid

FORTIFICATION BILL.

Mr. HANCOCK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the yeas and nays on the passage of the fortification appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] No objection is made. The question is, Shall this bill pass?

Mr. RANDALL. I call for the yeas and nays. [Cries of "Too late!" "Too late!"]

The SPEAKER. The Chair asked for objection and none was offered.

Mr. RANDALL. There was so much confusion that I did not hear the Chair. [Renewed cries of "Too late!" "Too late!"]

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the objection comes too late.

The bill was ordered to a third reading; and it was accordingly read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HANCOCK moved to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed; and also moved to lay the motion to reconsider on the table. The latter motion was agreed to.

POST-OFFICE BUILDING, WASHINGTON, D. C.

Mr. DIBBLE, by unanimous consent, introduced a bill (H. R. —) to authorize the purchase of the real estate known as square No. 406 of the city of Washington for the enlargement of the Post-Office Department building, and to provide accommodations for the city post-office; which was read a first and second time, referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and ordered to be printed.

Mr. EATON. I move that the House adjourn.

Mr. RANDALL and others. Oh, no.

Mr. EATON. I withdraw the motion.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. FORNEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to present a conference report, which I send to the Clerk's desk to be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate, numbered 23, to the bill of the House 8120, making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 23, and agree to the same.

WILLIAM H. FORNEY,
R. W. TOWNSHEND,
J. WARREN KEIFER,
Managers on the part of the House,
WILLIAM B. ALLISON,
P. B. PLUMB,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the statement of the House conferees which accompanies this report.

The Clerk read as follows:

The managers on the part of the House of the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate, numbered 23, to the bill (H. R. 8120) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year 1886, submit the following in explanation of the action recommended by the conference committee in the report submitted herewith.

The effect of the action recommended strikes from the bill as it passed the House the provision to amend article 94 of section 1342, so as to permit court-martial to sit during such hours as they might determine.

WM. H. FORNEY,
R. W. TOWNSHEND,
J. WARREN KEIFER,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. KEIFER. Mr. Speaker, I desire one minute to say that the conferees on the part of the House were induced to agree to strike out the last section of the Army bill for the reason that they were persuaded that the articles of war to which that section related may need at an early time very general and substantial revision. That section (which was incorporated in this bill on my motion in the House) was in the right direction, and if the one to which it related were the only article of war needing revision we should have insisted upon the Senate agreeing to that provision of the bill; but, in view of what will be necessary in that direction in the near future, we thought it was best to ask the House to recede from its position, and we are unanimous in favor of the report.

Mr. FORNEY. Mr. Speaker, I move the adoption of the report.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. FORNEY moved to reconsider the vote by which the report of the committee of conference was adopted; and also moved to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

SALE OF SAC AND FOX RESERVATION.

Mr. PERKINS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House insist upon its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6658) to provide for the sale of the Sac and Fox reservation in the States of Nebraska and Kansas, and for other purposes, and consent to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will appoint as managers on the part of the House the gentleman from Texas, Mr. WELLBORN, the gentleman from North Carolina, Mr. SKINNER, and the gentleman from Kansas, Mr. PERKINS.

CLAIMS OF OFFICERS AND ENLISTED MEN.

Mr. ROSECRANS submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5713) to provide for the settlement of claims of officers and enlisted men of the Army for loss of private property destroyed in the military service of the United States, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3 and 4, and agree to the same, as follows:

No. 1. Page 1, line 4, after "officers," insert "and."
No. 2. Page 1, lines 4 and 5, strike out "and" and insert "or hostilities with Indians."
No. 3. Page 2, line 3, insert after "war" "or hostilities with Indians."
No. 4. Page 2, line 7, after "reasonable," insert "useful, necessary, and proper for such officer or soldier while in quarters engaged in the public service in the line of duty: And provided further, That all claims now existing shall be presented within two years, and not after, from the passage of this act; and all such claims hereafter arising be presented within two years from the occurrence of the loss or destruction."

And the Senate agree to the same.

W. S. ROSECRANS,
GEORGE W. STEELE,
R. M. MURRAY,
Managers on the part of the House.
F. M. COCKRELL,
BENJAMIN HARRISON,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The report was adopted.

Mr. ROSECRANS moved to reconsider the vote by which the report was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

PAYMENT FOR INDIAN SUPPLIES.

Mr. STRAIT submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 84) entitled "An act to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to ascertain the amounts due to citizens of the United States for supplies furnished to the Sioux or Dakota Indians of Minnesota subsequent to August, 1860, and prior to the massacre of August, 1862, and providing for the payment thereof," having met, after full and free conference agree to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the House numbered 1, 2, 3, and 5, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its amendment numbered 4, and in lieu thereof agree to the following:

"Provided, however, That said sum shall be charged to the unpaid annuities stipulated to be paid to the said Sioux Indians under treaties, but abrogated and annulled by the act approved February 16, 1863;" and the Senate agree to the same.

OLIN WELLBORN,
H. B. STRAIT,
R. S. STEVENS,
Managers on the part of the House.
ANGUS CAMERON,
JAMES H. SLATER,
H. L. DAWES,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The report was adopted.

Mr. STRAIT moved to reconsider the vote by which the report was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I now move that the House take a recess until 12 o'clock to-morrow for the consideration of such business as may come before it other than contested-election cases.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. I move to amend by providing for a recess until Monday morning at 9 o'clock.

Mr. TURNER, of Georgia. Does this proposition require unanimous consent?

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state that the latter part of the motion of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN], excluding a particular class of business from consideration, requires unanimous consent.

Mr. BLACKBURN. Then I will make the motion that the House now take a recess until 12 o'clock to-morrow, and will state that so far as I can aid in preventing their consideration election cases will not be considered.

Mr. HUTCHINS. There is no such pressing necessity as to justify this proposition, and I protest in the strongest terms against this desecration of the Sabbath.

Mr. BLACKBURN. I withdraw the motion I have made, and substitute a motion that the rules be suspended so that the House now take a recess until 12 o'clock to-morrow, to proceed with legislative business other than contested-election cases.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. I demand a second on the motion to suspend the rules.

Mr. BENNETT. I rise to a question of privilege, and call up the contested-election case of Frederick vs. Wilson, from the State of Iowa.

Mr. HAMMOND. I move that the House do now adjourn.

Several members addressed the Chair.

The SPEAKER. Debate is not in order. The Chair will state the position of the question. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BLACKBURN] moves to suspend the rules so as to take a recess until to-morrow at 12 o'clock for the transaction of business other than contested-election cases. Pending that motion the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BENNETT] calls up the contested-election case from the State of Iowa; and then the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HAMMOND] moves that the House adjourn, which is the first question to be voted upon and is not debatable or amendable.

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. I demanded a second on the motion of my colleague [Mr. BLACKBURN].

The SPEAKER. The Chair has not reached that point yet.

Mr. REAGAN. I suggest to the gentleman from Georgia to change his motion from that of adjournment to taking a recess until 9 o'clock Monday morning. [Cries of "Regular order!" "Vote!"]

Mr. BLACKBURN. If the Chair will hear me a moment [cries of "Regular order!"], I want to submit a motion that takes precedence of the motion of the gentleman from Georgia. I move that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet to-morrow at 12 o'clock.

The SPEAKER. That changes an order of the House, which is to meet at 11 o'clock. The question is on the motion to adjourn.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 80, noes 85.

Mr. HUTCHINS. I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the affirmative—yeas 108, nays 83, not voting 133; as follows:

R. 6658) to provide for the sale of the Sac and Fox Indian reservation in the States of Nebraska and Kansas, and for other purposes, asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. OLIN WELLSBORN of Texas, Mr. T. G. SKINNER of North Carolina, and Mr. B. W. PERKINS of Kansas managers at the conference on its part.

The message further announced that the House had concurred in the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 84) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to ascertain the amounts due to citizens of the United States for supplies furnished to the Sioux or Dakota Indians of Minnesota subsequent to August, 1860, and prior to the massacre of August, 1862, and providing for the payment thereof.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a supplemental list of claims allowed by the accounting officers of the Treasury under the act of March 3, 1849. The Chair is not sure, but thinks the letter ought to be referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. JACKSON. The Committee on Claims has usually acted upon that class of cases. I suggest that the communication be referred to that committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection, the communication, with the accompanying papers, will be referred to the Committee on Claims and ordered to be printed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting an appropriation estimate received from the Secretary of the Navy for a combined coal-shed and store-house for the naval station at Port Royal, S. C.; which, with the accompanying papers, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

LAND TITLES IN NEW MEXICO.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, in answer to a resolution of the 4th and 20th instants, a letter from the Commissioner of the General Land Office, with accompanying papers, upon the subject of the fraudulent acquisition of titles to lands in New Mexico. The letter with the accompanying papers will be printed and referred to the Committee on Public Lands. [A pause.] The Chair sees that the documents are very voluminous, and will direct, if there be no objection, that the letter of the Secretary of the Interior and the letter of the Commissioner of the General Land Office be printed, and with the accompanying papers referred to the Committee on Printing, in order that the Committee on Printing may determine the question of printing them.

Mr. HILL. The time is very short now in which this matter can be considered. These papers are of very great importance, and I hope an order will be made to print them without a reference to the Committee on Printing, as it is so near the close of the session.

Mr. INGALLS. I should regret exceedingly to have an order made for the printing of the mass of papers sent in under the resolution, without their being examined by the proper committee. I think the rule requires it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The first paragraph of the twenty-ninth rule leaves it in the discretion of the Senate whether to order the printing without a reference. It requires that such papers as these shall be referred to the Committee on Printing unless the Senate shall otherwise order. The Chair understands the Senator from Colorado to move that the Senate order that the papers be now printed. Is that the motion of the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. HILL. Yes, sir.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion.

Mr. HAWLEY. The Senator will allow me to suggest that that is rather a formidable pile of papers, as the Chair has remarked. With the charge that is now upon the Printing Office anyhow, by reason of the particular time, I will not say that it would be impossible for the Printer to print those papers at once, for of course if everything else is sacrificed he can have them here to-morrow morning. The Printing Office can have almost anything in the world here in print in the morning, but in the course of proper business we should not get them under a week or ten days.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands the Senator from Kansas to move that the papers be referred to the Committee on Printing.

Mr. INGALLS. That is my motion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Pending the motion of the Senator from Colorado the Senator from Kansas moves that the papers be referred to the Committee on Printing.

Mr. HILL. Is this subject open to debate?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks it is. The Chair will state the question. The Senator from Colorado has moved that the papers be printed. The Senator from Kansas thereupon moves that the papers, together with the motion or resolution to print them, be referred to the Committee on Printing. The Chair thinks that the motion of the Senator from Kansas is first to be put, so that the question is first on the reference.

Mr. HILL. I desire to offer briefly some explanation.

Mr. HOAR. Will the Chair be good enough, before the Senator from Colorado proceeds, to state what the papers relate to?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. They relate to alleged frauds in respect of public lands in New Mexico. The mass of papers sent up is so large, it being the mass here on the table, that the Chair thought it fit to refer them to the Committee on Printing, but the Senator from Colorado desires that they be now printed.

Mr. HILL. Mr. President, on the 4th of February the Senate adopted a resolution, offered by me, directing the Secretary of the Interior to furnish to the Senate copies of the reports of F. D. Hobbs and R. A. Green, who held the official position of inspectors of land offices, in respect to the fraudulent acquisition of titles to the public lands in New Mexico, and of the testimony accompanying the reports.

The resolution further directed the Secretary of the Interior to furnish copies of "all papers on file relating to this subject."

I offered this resolution in consequence of information communicated to me by letters from well-known citizens of New Mexico, to the effect that the reports of Messrs. Hobbs and Green exposed great land frauds in New Mexico, in which the register of the land office at Santa Fé was an active participant, and involved the integrity of persons holding much higher official positions than that held by the register. These reports recommended not only that the register should be dismissed from the office, but that the United States attorney in New Mexico should be instructed to take measures to prosecute him and secure his proper punishment for various crimes and misdemeanors. Whether by a mistake or by inadvertence, it would appear that honest men were selected by the Secretary of the Interior to investigate these frauds, or at least that Hobbs and Green went to New Mexico with the intention of dishonestly discharging their official duties.

No action was taken on the reports, the one relating to the land office having been sent to the Interior Department on the 17th of July. The register was retained in his office by the Secretary of the Interior, boasting that he was "solid," to use his own expression, with the Secretary of the Interior, and would therefore be left undisturbed in his official position.

About the 16th of last month I received a letter from a prominent citizen of Santa Fé, from which I quote the following words:

In conversation with United States Prosecuting-Attorney Prichard, for New Mexico, yesterday informed me that he had made application some six weeks or two months ago for copies of the reports of Messrs. Hobbs and Green, for the purpose of aiding him in prosecuting suits against certain parties indicted for irregular land transactions, whom he has reason to believe were mentioned in said reports, but up to this time has not been able to extort a reply from the Interior Department. He also informs me that by reason of said failure to respond to his request he finds himself sadly crippled in the discharge of his duties.

On the 20th day of February, ten days ago to-day, the President nominated Charles F. Easley to be register of the Santa Fé land district, in place of Max Frost, resigned. His resignation was plainly in consequence of the resolution of February 4 and of the disclosures sure to result from it. As strange as it may appear, it did not occur till nearly eight months after the report of Hobbs was received at the Interior Department, so much time being generously allowed him apparently to aid the parties who were extensively engaged in plundering the public domain to close up their transactions.

On the 19th of February, no copies having been sent to the Senate in compliance with the resolution of February 4, I called at the Interior Department to inquire as to the cause of what seemed to be an extraordinary delay. I was then informed that copies had been made of the reports of the inspectors, Hobbs and Green, and of the evidence accompanying the same, but that further time would be required to comply with the closing part of the resolution which called for copies of "all papers on file relating to this subject."

On the next day, February 20, the resolution was modified by the Senate, on my motion, by striking off the words which I have just quoted.

On the 24th of February, the copies not yet having been received by the Senate, I again went to the Interior Department to ascertain the cause of the continued delay.

I was then informed that the copies of all the papers called for by the resolution of February 4, as modified by the Senate, were complete, and nothing remained to be done except the writing of the formal letter of transmission to the Senate. The papers were not, however, sent to the President of the Senate till last Saturday, the 28th.

Now, Mr. President, I believe I am justified in saying that the resolution of the Senate has been complied with reluctantly and with unnecessary delay, and finally, when the papers come, within two or three days of the close of this Congress, a large mass of material is thrown in, which in no sense was called for under the modified resolution, to embarrass the action of the Senate in the matter of ordering the papers printed.

The papers are of a character which requires that they should be printed for the information of Congress and the country. They embrace reports of important officials of the General Land Office and of evidence officially taken by them, which have been hidden from sight in pigeon-holes for nearly eight months, and the threatened publication of which has caused the flight of one of the implicated parties by a resignation of his office. It is true that this is only one of hundreds of cases of criminal misconduct, on which there is an imperative necessity that light should be thrown.

These papers relate to a subject about which the public mind is very sensitive, the administration of the public domain. There is a widespread belief that it is preyed upon and plundered by those who have no just right to it and in violation of the rights of the Government and of the people.

I trust that with this explanation the papers may be allowed to be printed. It is not necessary that they should be furnished to the Senate by the close of the Congress, but if they are ordered to be printed now they will come out in due time, and it is information which the public ought to have.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARRIS in the chair). The question is, Will the Senate agree to refer the papers, with the motion to print, to the Committee on Printing?

The motion to refer was agreed to.

HOUSE BILLS REFERRED.

The bill (H. R. 8279) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, and for the armament thereof, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The joint resolution (H. Res. 341) to authorize the printing of 50,000 copies of the second annual report of the Bureau of Animal Industry for the year 1885 was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Printing.

REPORT ON THE PRECIOUS METALS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution, received on Saturday from the House of Representatives; which was referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring). That the report of the Director of the Mint on the production of the precious metals in the United States for the year 1884 be printed, and that 9,000 extra copies be printed; 4,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, 2,000 copies for the use of the Senate, and 3,000 copies for the use of the Director of the Mint.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT COUNCIL BLUFFS.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. There is one House public building bill remaining on the Calendar. I ask unanimous consent that that may be taken up and considered at this time.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 441) for the completion of a public building at Council Bluffs, Iowa.

The bill was reported from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds with an amendment, in line 3, before the word "thousand," to strike out "one hundred" and insert "fifty;" so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, &c., That the additional sum of $50,000 is hereby appropriated to erect a post-office, court-room, and internal-revenue building at Council Bluffs, Iowa, to be expended by the Secretary of the Treasury, subject to the requirements of an act for that purpose approved May 23, 1882. The limit of cost prescribed in said act is hereby extended, and no plan shall be approved which will involve an expenditure for site and building complete, including approaches, greater than the limit herein fixed.

Mr. ALLISON. I hope the amendment will not be adopted.

The amendment was rejected.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMENDMENT TO SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HOAR. I ask unanimous consent that it shall be in order to offer to the sundry civil appropriation bill when it comes up for consideration this amendment:

For the woman's department of the World's Industrial Exposition now held in New Orleans, $15,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts asks the unanimous consent of the Senate that it shall be in order to offer the amendment which he has just sent to the desk. Is there objection?

Mr. GIBSON. I should like to hear the amendment read.

Mr. HOAR. It is merely to appropriate an additional $15,000 for the woman's department.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be read for the information of the Senate.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

For the woman's department of the World's Industrial Exposition now held in New Orleans, $15,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. SHERMAN. What is the request?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That the amendment just read shall be considered in order as an amendment to the sundry civil appropriation bill. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

JOHN F. SEVERANCE.

Mr. DAWES. I am obliged to be absent from the Senate to-day, and I ask the Senate to take up the bill (H. R. 2268) for the relief of John F. Severance. It is a little House bill appropriating only $85.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It appropriates $85, to be placed to the credit of the Post-Office Department, and directs the proper accounting officers of the Post-Office Department to credit John F. Severance, of Shelburne, Mass., in his account as postmaster, with that sum for loss by robbery of his post-office on the night of the 19th of June, 1878, without fault or neglect on the part of the postmaster.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Mr. HOAR. I give notice that to-morrow morning, after the reading of the Journal, at the first convenient opportunity, not to interfere with an appropriation bill, I shall ask the Senate to take up for consideration Senate joint resolution No. 19, being a resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States to secure the right of suffrage to women. It is not proposed to debate that question, but merely to get a vote on it without debate.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask leave to report from the Committee on Appropriations the sundry civil appropriation bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection the report will be received at this time.

Mr. ALLISON. I am directed by the Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8256) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes, to report it with amendments.

The bill is on the table of Senators in print, with the amendments. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the consideration of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. McMILLAN. I rise to make an inquiry as to the effect of assent to that proposition. Does it affect the unfinished business of Saturday? Does it imply an assent that that shall be laid aside informally?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It does not affect the status of the bill referred to by the Senator from Minnesota at this time in any manner whatever. If, however, the sundry civil appropriation bill should continue under consideration through the day and the Senate adjourn with it pending it would become the unfinished business.

Mr. McMILLAN. I have no objection to make to taking up the bill informally if it does not include an assent to laying aside informally the bill which was under consideration by the Senate on Saturday.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will suggest to the Senator from Minnesota that even if the sundry civil appropriation bill is not finished to-day, if the bill he refers to shall be laid before the Senate prior to adjournment it would be continued as unfinished business.

Mr. ALLISON. Do I understand the Senator from Minnesota to object?

Mr. McMILLAN. I do, if it implies assent that the bill forfeiting the land grant to the State of Iowa shall be laid aside informally.

Mr. ALLISON. I will say to the Senator from Minnesota that I do not wish to interfere with any of the pending business before the Senate further than is absolutely necessary to continue the consideration of the appropriation bill to-day until it is completed, as I am of the opinion that unless we complete the bill to-day we shall have an opportunity of sitting here some days after the 4th of March.

Mr. HARRISON. The Senator from Iowa will allow me to suggest that as I understand the Senator from Minnesota he is not apprehensive that the bill he has referred to may be interfered with, but his apprehension is that it may not be, and he desires the Senator from Iowa to move to proceed to the consideration of the appropriation bill so as to displace the other bill.

Mr. McMILLAN. For that purpose I will object to the consideration of the appropriation bill.

Mr. ALLISON. Very well; the Senator objects.

Mr. McMILLAN. Now I move to lay aside the unfinished business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That motion is not now in order.

The morning business has not been completed, and the time for entertaining such a motion has not yet arrived.

Mr. HOAR. I ask unanimous consent to make a suggestion to the Senator from Minnesota.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection the Senator from Massachusetts will be heard. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. HOAR. The Senator from Minnesota knows very well that I am opposed to the bill which he opposes, but it is always a mere question of a vote of the Senate. If the land-forfeiture bill remains the unfinished business, a vote of the Senate can lay it aside without debate. If, on the other hand, it does not remain the unfinished business but is displaced by the request of the Senator from Iowa to proceed to the consideration of the appropriation bill, a vote of the Senate can take it up without debate.

Mr. McMILLAN. Certainly; that is all I desire.

Mr. HOAR. So I suggest that it is hardly worth while to postpone the appropriation bill for an hour, which would be the effect of the Senator's position, because the Senator from Iowa can not get the bill up without unanimous consent until all the morning business is disposed of. It can not be done on motion, and as it runs the risk of some inconvenience to the Senate I hope the Senator from Minnesota will withdraw the objection.

Mr. McMILLAN. I desired to make an inquiry as to the effect of taking up the appropriation bill. I will withdraw the objection for the present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota withdraws the objection heretofore made. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Iowa that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill?

Mr. CALL. I gave notice on Saturday that I should occupy the time of the Senate for a few minutes to-day in the consideration of a petition for the forfeiture of a land grant in the State of Florida. I make no objection to the request of the Senator from Iowa, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, to take up the appropriation bill, but I renew the notice I gave that when the bill is terminated I shall ask the Senate to give me the opportunity of being heard for ten or fifteen minutes upon the petition, which is lying on the table.

Mr. ALLISON. After the appropriation bill shall have been concluded, of course it is not my purpose to interfere with the wish of the Senator from Florida.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Iowa that the Senate do now proceed to the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill? The Chair hears none.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 8256) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask unanimous consent that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with, and that as the reading progresses the amendments reported by the Committee on Appropriations may be considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa asks the unanimous consent of the Senate that the first or formal reading of the bill be dispensed with, and that it be read by paragraphs for amendment. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The Secretary proceeded to read the bill.

The first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in the appropriations for the "Botanic Garden," in line 12, after the word "Congress," to strike out "four thousand six" and insert "seven thousand four;" so as to read:

Botanic Garden:

For concreting walks, reconstructing plant-house No. 13 with iron ribs, extending water supplies, and for general repairs, under the direction of the Joint Library Committee of Congress, $7,400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 13, to insert:

UNDER THE STATE DEPARTMENT.

For payment, under the final award made by the late French and American Claims Commission against the United States, of the claims of French citizens against this Government, under the treaty of January 15, 1880, between this country and France, $623,566.35.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 21, to insert:

International boundary survey, United States and Mexico: To enable the President to execute the engagements of the convention of July 29, 1882, between the United States of America and the United States of Mexico, providing for an international boundary survey to relocate the existing frontier line between the two countries west of the Rio Grande, $224,556.75, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the appropriations for public buildings "under the Treasury Department," after line 32, to insert:

For court-house and post-office at Abingdon, Va.: For completion under present limit, $25,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 35, to insert:

For fitting up the building known as the "club-house," Sitka, Alaska, as a temporary jail, $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

• The next amendment was, after line 37, to insert:

For repairing Government building for court-room at Sitka, $1,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 39, to insert:

For repairing Government building for court-room at Wrangel, $300.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 41, to insert:

For repairing court-room and jail at Ounalaske, $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 43, to insert:

For constructing a frame or log court-house and jail at Juneau City, $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out the clause from line 60 to line 82, inclusive, in the following words:

That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to sell at public auction, in the city of Boston, Mass., to the highest bidder, after thirty days' notice in six of the principal newspapers published in the city of Boston, the land and premises known as the old United States court-house in said city, on the corner of Tremont street and Temple Place, the time and place of said sale in said city to be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury at a date not later than ninety days after the passage of this act, and at a price not less than $225,000, with power to reject any or all bids and to readvertise and offer the said property in like manner as often as may be necessary to secure the value thereof; and the cost to be paid from proceeds of sale. And it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to cause inquiry to be made as to the value of this property; and if it shall appear that the price above named is inadequate, he is authorized and directed to appoint a board of three persons in the employ of the United States to assess the value of the said property, and report the same to the Secretary of the Treasury, when the sum fixed by this board shall be the minimum price at which the property may be thus sold.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 82, to insert:

For post-office and subtreasury at Boston, Mass.: For completion, $15,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 90, to insert:

For marine hospital at Cairo, Ill.: For completing hospital buildings, $7,000; and for filling and grading, $20,000; in all, $27,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 106, to reduce the appropriation "for court-house and post-office at Columbus, Ohio: For completion of building," from $110,000 to $50,000.

Mr. SHERMAN. I hope the Senate will not agree to this amendment. Indeed I am somewhat surprised that the amendment finds its place in this bill. So far as I know this is the only local item for the State of Ohio in the sundry civil bill, although I have not looked through the bill and can not say positively. This item of $110,000 is an increase of $60,000 beyond the legal limit fixed by the law originally for the construction of a public building at Columbus. The original plan, however, recommended by the Secretary of the Treasury, included this sum and more, but the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds reduced the estimate of the Treasury Department without rhyme or reason, and reduced the building to a two-story structure in the capital of the State of Ohio, under the shadow of the State capitol, so that any one who saw the plan proposed which the Department was compelled to adopt for the public building at Columbus was ashamed that the United States should occupy such a position in such a place, it being the capital of the State where the State courts are held and where there are a great many public offices. It ought to be a building commensurate with the size of the city, the importance of the State, and the importance of the location.

It was some time before we could get the attention of Congress to the subject, the Treasury Department continually insisting that the plan they were compelled to adopt was inadequate to the place, and three times recommended an increase of the appropriation for the Columbus building; but for some reason it could not be adopted. Finally at the present session of Congress the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds reported a bill increasing the allowance $60,000 upon an urgent estimate made by the Secretary of the Treasury that that was necessary to add an additional story to the building and give it a height somewhat proportionate to the surrounding buildings. That bill passed the Senate unanimously. The House of Representatives not being able to reach that bill on its Calendar, it being lumbered up with a multitude of bills on the Speaker's table, inserted the increased amount of appropriation necessary for that story in the sundry civil bill, so that it comes to us from the House. The House Committee on Appropriations, knowing that the House could not act on the Senate bill, knowing that that $60,000 additional was for the additional story required by the estimates of the Treasury Department, put it in on this bill.

Both Houses have agreed to the measure after debate and it now comes to us, and the Committee on Appropriations, I do not know for what reason—certainly they could not have known the facts which I have mentioned—have proposed to reduce the amount to $50,000, and thus compel the construction of a two-story building right at the corner of the great edifice built by the State of Ohio and at a less altitude than the surrounding stores and shops. If this amendment is adopted I would rather you should discontinue the building at Columbus. I suppose it was proposed probably pursuant to some general idea. At all events I trust this amendment will not be adopted.

Mr. ALLISON. The Committee on Appropriations are thoroughly familiar with every statement made by the Senator from Ohio. We understand from all the data in our possession that unless the sum allowed is enlarged as proposed in this bill the building at Columbus, Ohio, will be a two-story building, but that building stands precisely in the same relation to this bill that four or five or six other buildings do.

The rule adopted by the Committee on Appropriations is the rule of the Senate. We felt obliged in making these reports to stand by the rules of the Senate which require us not to interfere in these appropriation bills with the general legislation of Congress. What the Senator from Ohio says is perfectly true; the Senate did pass unanimously at this session a bill looking to the enlargement of the limit, that is, looking to the change of the law, but the House of Representatives have not passed that bill.

Mr. SHERMAN. They put it here.

Mr. ALLISON. I know they have made a provision here for the enlargement of the building; but the Committee on Appropriations believed that, so far as we were concerned, it was our duty to report these bills according to existing law, and we have done so in every instance. Of course Columbus had to stand with the other instances in this bill, and there are five or six of them. They ought all to stand or fall upon the decision of the Senate with reference to this particular amendment now under consideration. I think they substantially stand upon the same condition of facts.

Mr. MORRILL. Will the Senator allow me to ask him whether his committee hold that the recommendation of an amendment by a standing committee is not in order whether there is any previous law for it or not?

Mr. ALLISON. Our committee were not required to decide that question. Of course—

Mr. DAWES. There is a law against it; not the absence of a law for it.

Mr. MORRILL. There is a rule which provides that a standing committee may move amendments.

Mr. ALLISON. The Senator from Vermont is asking me a question which does not come up in this discussion. He asks me whether an amendment reported by a standing committee of the Senate is in order in the judgment of the Committee on Appropriations. We do not decide that question. If an amendment is proposed by a standing committee of this body, it is in order to offer it whether the Committee on Appropriations agree to it or not, and therefore we deprive no committee and no Senator of its or his just rights under the rule.

I believe the statement made by the Senator from Ohio to be substantially true. I believe that this appropriation for the building at the city of Columbus, Ohio, is a wise appropriation, but that we could not consider it in the Committee on Appropriations under the rules which the Senate has laid down for our guidance, and we have rigidly adhered to the rules established by the Senate for our conduct, and merely appropriated according to existing law. If the laws are to be changed let them be changed by the Senate acting on reports of committees of the Senate having authority to change them. That is the only reason why this amendment is proposed by the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. BECK. Supplementing what the Senator from Iowa has said somewhat, I desire to say that I hope the Senate will consider this case carefully, because it will settle all the disputed questions relative to public buildings. All stand upon the same footing, and this is as meritorious as any of those which will be affected by the decision of the Senate.

The Supervising Architect of the Treasury came before us in this and other cases, and especially in this case at Columbus, and said if we would give the $60,000 additional beyond what is provided by law he could make a fire-proof building with an additional story, a building which would be a credit to the country, and if he did not get that amount he could not. I state it as broadly as the Senator from Ohio stated it, I believe it ought to be done; but the law prohibits it as the law stands to-day, and the Committee on Appropriations have been told over and over again that we had no right to make appropriations in violation of law, for it is in violation of law, as we understand it, until Congress passes an act extending the limit, which I think they ought to do in this case. If the Senate see fit to vote that this provision ought to go in extending the limit in this case, then I for one will move in five or six other cases that the limit shall be extended, because they are meritorious cases as well as this.

If we can make appropriations in excess of the limit provided by law and in violation of law, then we shall be at sea and get back to where we were ten or fifteen years ago. I remember once—and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. DAWES] will recall the fact—we limited the New York post-office to $3,000,000, and we put penal clauses in the law to punish those who exceeded the limit. It was not a year before they spent the $3,000,000, and had not progressed beyond the first story.

We then gave them $1,500,000 more, making $4,500,000, and we put other penal clauses in, but they paid no attention to them. They got up to $6,000,000, and after three laws passed against giving beyond the limit, they got it up to $9,000,000 before completing the building.

The Boston post-office had a limit of a million and a half, and I think it got up to $1,000,000 before it was through, just defying the law. The Committee on Appropriations were denounced in both Houses because they were compelled to yield to pressure; and this committee determined—I was one of them—to make the statement that this building ought to be made three stories and fire-proof, that a law ought to be passed by both Houses authorizing the extension of the limit; and if the Senate desire now to order the committee to add $60,000 to this when there is no law authorizing it but a law prohibiting it, I for one shall willingly acquiesce in all the other cases; but the difficulty is that if you do that then we shall originate public buildings. If the committee reports in favor of one, we can fix no limit to the power of the Committee on Appropriations. The moment you break down the rule and adopt the suggestion of the Senator from Vermont that when a committee favorably recommends a building we can go on and erect it for what we please and extend the limit ad infinitum, there is no telling what the Committee on Appropriations can not do.

Mr. VAN WYCK. Will the Senator allow me to ask a question?

Mr. BECK. Yes, sir.

Mr. VAN WYCK. I ask the Senator if he thinks it worth while to discuss the binding force of a rule made by the Senate when the Senate violates that rule day after day whenever it suits its purpose?

Mr. BECK. The Senator can answer that as well as I can. I do not propose to go into that. I have said all I care to say. I believe the motion is right; and if the Senate think they can do it and keep a proper check on appropriations for public buildings hereafter, I have no objection; but it is a dangerous thing.

Mr. COCKRELL. I desire to say that as a member of the Committee on Appropriations I dissent in toto from the supposed rule of the Senate and of the committee. I say that the Committee on Appropriations had a perfect right to adhere and agree to this provision of the House bill, without any violation of law or the violation of any rule of the Senate; and I desire to say now that that committee was not unanimous in its recommendation, and I disclose no secret of the committee when I say that, and I think if it had been polled it would have been very difficult to tell on which side the majority would have fallen.

Mr. President, it is a question of business and common sense. The Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department has in this case, in a case at Saint Joseph, Mo., one at Hannibal, Mo., and one at Jefferson City, Mo., and one in nearly every State in the Union made an estimate of the amount necessary to complete public buildings according to the law authorizing their construction. The officers have partly done the work of completing them according to that, but they find that to make those buildings fire-proof and what they ought to be they must have an additional appropriation and they have estimated the amount, and the Secretary of the Treasury and the Architect recommend the appropriation of it.

Now they say here that in Columbus, Ohio, they can complete the building two stories high and not fire-proof, according to the original law. The question is, shall we force the completion of the building two stories and not fire-proof, and inside of a few years have to put on another story or two or construct a new building? That is the question. We have already abandoned a number of inferior and too small buildings which had been erected at the public expense and that amounted to nothing. You take the case at Hannibal, Mo. Seventy-five thousand dollars was appropriated there. They have partly constructed the building—it is not fire-proof—with $75,000, but with the addition of $18,000 they can make a fire-proof building, one that will stand indefinitely, and the Architect says that it is for the best interests of the public service and the Government that the increased appropriation of $18,000 shall be made. And will the Senate say that in order to conform to some mysterious law or rule which some one has established we will disregard the public interests and put up an indifferent and inferior building, one that in a few years will necessarily have to be repaired?

It does seem to me the plainest proposition that was ever submitted to the Senate, that the very best interests of the public service, the interests of the tax-payers of this country, require that we shall not accept this amendment proposed by a bare majority of the Committee on Appropriations, and which I do not conceive is required by any law or rule of the Senate.

Mr. BECK. One word more and I am done. The Senator from Missouri and myself do not differ at all except in this: I claim that when the necessity for changing these buildings and making them fire-proof was made so apparent the Supervising Architect of the Treasury and the persons interested ought to have laid those facts before the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and a bill ought to have been reported which could be passed through both Houses in two days, extending the limit fixed by law. Then the Committee on Appropriations would have had no trouble about it; but when there is a law prohibiting us from doing anything—

Mr. SHERMAN. Will the Senator from Kentucky allow me to interrupt him? I am not quoting the proceedings of the House of Representatives when I state to the Senate that I know from the best information possible that after we passed the bill extending the plan and requiring a third story to be built it could not be taken up in the House. It was covered over by the mass of bills there; and the Committee on Appropriations of the House adopted this as a means of carrying out and really passing the Senate bill. It was because they could not get at that bill.

Mr. BECK. The Senator from Ohio understands exactly the difference between the Senator from Missouri and myself, that we as a committee were compelled to obey existing law and could not make new ones.

Mr. SHERMAN. What law?

Mr. BECK. The law limiting the total cost of the building at Columbus to $150,000.

Mr. SHERMAN. This bill is full of change of the law. Take the very next page, to which I call the attention of the Senator. On that page I find an appropriation for the extension and completion of the public building at Des Moines.

Mr. BECK. Congress has passed an act authorizing it. There are a dozen cases of that sort. There were eight bills passed by the Senate on Saturday authorizing such increases.

Mr. SHERMAN. The changing of a plan by law is a violation of our rule, according to this construction.

Mr. BECK. Oh, no! Whenever a law is passed authorizing it, the Committee on Appropriations appropriate according to law.

Mr. SHERMAN. Let me answer one other point made by the Senator from Kentucky, if he will allow me.

Mr. BECK. Certainly.

Mr. SHERMAN. The Senator says, with great propriety and force, that ten or twelve years ago there was the grossest abuse by the Executive Departments in regard to appropriations for public buildings. They disregarded all limits of laws, and if a million dollars were appropriated they would go on and devise plans for four millions. But that was all corrected, and the Senator from Kentucky will, I think, bear witness that during the time I held the office of Secretary of the Treasury we required the law to be followed in every case, and there was not a solitary case where the expenditure went one single dollar beyond the amount limited by law. But that does not prevent Congress from making these changes, and I do not see why Congress may not do it here.

Mr. BECK. I think Congress can do it here if they see fit, but I do not think the Committee on Appropriations could report in favor of it without reporting a violation of law. Congress can make the change.

Mr. SHERMAN. If the committee have any trouble about it, the Senate may solve the whole matter.

Mr. FRYE. There is no rule of the Senate preventing it.

Mr. SHERMAN. No rule prevents it.

Mr. CONGER. Mr. President, I think the committee misunderstand the law on this subject. There is no limitation upon the committee and no limitation upon the Senate by any law which I know of which has been passed as to the amount that is to be appropriated for a public building. It is as much open to the exercise of the discretion of the Senate as is the passage of any other law. To prevent the abuses which have been referred to there is a limitation upon the Architect in preparing the plans that he shall not prepare plans which will require a greater expenditure than the amount appropriated.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. Will the Senator yield to me on a privileged matter?

Mr. CONGER. I yield to the Senator from Wisconsin without losing my right to the floor.

SUPPLIES TO MINNESOTA SIOUX INDIANS.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin, submitted the following report, which was read:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 84) entitled "An act to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to ascertain the amounts due to citizens of the United States for supplies furnished to the Sioux or Dakota Indians of Minnesota subsequent to August, 1860, and prior to the massacre of August, 1862, and providing for the payment thereof," having met, after full and free conference agree to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the House numbered 1, 2, 3, and 5, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its amendment numbered 4, and in lieu thereof agree to the following:

"Provided, however, That said sum shall be charged to the unpaid annuities stipulated to be paid to the said Sioux Indians under treaties, but abrogated and annulled by the act approved February 16, 1863."

And the Senate agree to the same.

AMENDMENT TO AN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. GROOME submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 5713) to provide for the settlement of claims of officers and enlisted men of the Army for loss of private property destroyed in the military service of the United States.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (H. R. 847) for the relief of Francis B. Van Haesen; and it was thereupon signed by the President pro tempore.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8256) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes, the pending question being on the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations, in line 106, to reduce the appropriation "for court-house and post-office at Columbus, Ohio: For completion of building," from $110,000 to $50,000.

Mr. CONGER. Mr. President, I was stating when I was interrupted that the limitation referred to by the committee was a limitation upon the Supervising Architect of the Treasury commanding him not to make plans for a building that would cost more than the amount appropriated. There is no restriction upon the Senate; no restriction in that law upon Congress. Under our rules amendments to increase appropriations are provided for, and there is nothing to limit making an amendment in this respect in the Senate, provided it is not new legislation. If the Supervising Architect reports to Congress that if he does make an estimate according to the appropriation which has been made the building would be unfit for the service, that the amount is not sufficient, then it comes back to Congress again to say whether they will make an additional appropriation, and it is no violation of law for Congress to entertain the proposition to increase an appropriation to such an amount as may be deemed necessary. I do not think the Committee on Appropriations have any right to construe a limitation upon the Architect of the Treasury as a limitation upon their power to recommend legislation to the Senate.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, for one I am entirely at a loss to understand how the Committee on Appropriations can find any difficulty under our rules in agreeing to this legislation proposed by the House. The chairman of the Committee on Appropriations says it changes existing law. What if it does?

Mr. ALLISON. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. HARRISON. Certainly.

Mr. ALLISON. Does the Senator think the Committee on Appropriations could have increased this appropriation to a million dollars?

Mr. HARRISON. I think the Committee on Appropriations could have suggested any limit they pleased, and if the Senate ratified it that would be the law.

Mr. ALLISON. No doubt of that; I suppose we can do it; but was it within our province to make appropriations beyond the limits of existing law? That is the question.

Mr. HARRISON. There is no rule of the Senate that prohibits the change of existing law in an appropriation bill, and never was. That is the rule of the House as we understand it, but the rule of the Senate simply is that general legislation shall not be proposed on an appropriation bill. Our Rule XVI makes explicit provision for introducing new items of appropriation and for increasing items of appropriation upon the recommendation of standing committees of the Senate. Now, this appropriation and others like it in this bill—there is one which is local to Indiana—have not only been recommended by the particular committee having this subject in charge, the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, but the Senate has ratified the recommendations of that committee by the passage of several bills. So these propositions to increase the appropriations for these public buildings are not only recommended to the Committee on Appropriations by the appropriate standing committee of the Senate, but the Senate has added its sanction by passing the bills as separate propositions.

This is not general legislation, and that is the only limit upon our committee. It has been decided by the Chair, and by the Senate upon appeal, that any legislation which exhausted itself with the expenditure of an appropriation was not general legislation.

Mr. HARRIS. Will the Senator from Indiana allow me to ask—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Indiana yield?

Mr. HARRISON. Certainly.

Mr. HARRIS. I quite agree with the Senator that Congress having passed a bill authorizing the construction of a public building, if it had done no more it would have been perfectly legitimate, in my opinion, for the Committee on Appropriations to have made such appropriation as, in the light of all the facts, they deemed necessary to carry out that object; but where Congress authorizes the construction of a public building and by statute prohibits an appropriation beyond a given amount, does the Senator from Indiana hold that in the face of that statutory limitation the Committee on Appropriations is justified in appropriating or proposing to appropriate money that goes beyond the limit fixed by law and stands upon the statute-book so fixed and unchanged?

Mr. HARRISON. I will adopt the New England fashion of responding to the Senator from Tennessee by asking him a question. I ask the Senator what rule of the Senate prohibits it?

Mr. HARRIS. I have not asserted that any rule of the Senate prohibited it, but a statute prohibits it is the point I suggested to the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. HARRISON. It is a novel doctrine that a statute puts a limitation upon the power of Congress, that an act of Congress limits the power of Congress to change it. The limitation put by that statute is a limitation upon the executive officers of the Government; it is not a limitation upon the power of Congress to change it at any moment it pleases by a concurrent vote of the two Houses. We have prohibited the Supervising Architect from making an estimate or from making plans beyond a certain amount; it is a limitation upon the power of the executive officers; and I do not think the Senator from Tennessee, when he reflects a moment, will hold to the proposition that that limitation of law binds us or binds any committee of this body as to recommending a change of the existing law.

So, then, there is no limitation under our rule; we are perfectly free. The Committee on Appropriations was and the Senate is, in the aspect in which this stands, perfectly free to deal with this question, and it seems to me that the reason sometimes given why the Committee on Appropriations should not deal with these questions does not at all apply in these questions, because as I have said we are not throwing upon the committee the duty of investigating the proper cost of a public building anywhere. The appropriate committee has done that, and not only has it done it and recommended this increase, but the Senate has already given its concurrence in that recommendation. So I submit that the Committee on Appropriations were amply equipped to deal with this question, in the first place because the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds had dealt with it, and in the second place because the Senate itself had dealt with it.

Mr. INGALLS. Mr. President, I do not understand that the Committee on Appropriations differ materially with those Senators who have spoken upon this subject. I listened with much interest to what the Senator from Kentucky said when he was replying to the Senator from Ohio. It appeared to me that he must have listened with great attention to the prayer of the Chaplain this morning, for his appeal appeared to be "lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil." He said there was really no objection whatever to the suggestion made by the Senator from Ohio that the building ought to be enlarged, that additional stories should be placed upon it, and that it should be made fire-proof; but he said the Senate should not yield to this importunity because, if it did, the last safeguard to the virtue of the Committee on Appropriations would be swept away; there was no longer any hope that they would refuse to yield to the solicitations from every quarter unless the Senate acceded to the amendment reported by the committee, and refused to listen to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. President, that is a pretty feeble appeal to make to this body. If the Senator from Kentucky has no stronger foundation on which to stand than that, I must say that I think his appeal was one rather to disregard the amendment than to agree to it.

Mr. President, this is not in any manner whatever general legislation. It can not be construed into general legislation. The Senator from Indiana has properly placed that before the Senate. It is not that species of legislation against which the rule of the Senate was intended to guard, and the Committee on Appropriations themselves appear to have acted with singular disregard of the rule. I observe that they have placed in this bill changes of existing law by their own motion. They affirm that it is a rule that should govern them, to the violation of the provisions of which attention has been called in a case where Congress during the session has enacted a bill for the construction of a public building. Now they place on page 12, for instance:

For court-house and post-office at Troy, N. Y., $100,000.

For court-house and post-office at Tyler, Tex., $50,000.

For court-house and post-office at Wichita, Kans., $50,000.

These are absolutely new appropriations. They are not provided for by law, because I heard the bill for the appropriation for the public building at Wichita read this morning at the Secretary's desk. It has passed both Houses of Congress, but it has not been approved by the President, and therefore is not a law of Congress. It is no more a law of Congress than the appropriation for the building at Columbus is a law of Congress. It will be a law of Congress whenever it is approved by the President; but the Committee on Appropriations have no right to assume that these enactments are to be approved by the President. It is just as much a violation of the rules of the Senate to put those appropriations in here as it is to disregard the appropriation that came from the House of Representatives about the Columbus building. I hope we shall have some consistency about this matter; that the Committee on Appropriations will adhere, if they intend to enforce this rule, logically to the suggestions of the rule, and not refuse to agree to one appropriation and at the same time insert others upon grounds that can not be supported by the facts.

I trust, sir, that the Senate will agree with the Senator from Ohio, that they will permit the appropriation to stand as it came from the House, because we have just as much right to say in this bill that the limitation for the construction of a public building shall be extended as we have to say that an appropriation for a building not warranted by law shall be inserted in the bill.

Mr. CALL. Mr. President, with all the constructions which have been placed on this rule of the Senate, it has never before been contended that it prohibited the Committee on Appropriations or the Senate from accepting a provision that came from the House. The point has been made that we could not amend, by inserting general legislation upon an appropriation bill, the action of the House on a bill coming here; and in this case this is the action of the House, and it is only proposed to accept that action and concur in it by adopting the bill as it came from the House. But the Committee on Appropriations is now holding that it was not competent for that committee to report to this body accepting the provision which came from the House of Representatives.

It has never before been contended that the rule of the Senate went so far as that. Certainly, however, the committee were justified in saying that this was a proposition to impose general legislation upon an appropriation bill, for the statute which provides for a public building and proposes that it shall not exceed a certain amount is a law; and it only illustrates the impropriety of that rule of the Senate, for it can not be distinguished from general legislation. It does not exhaust itself any more than any other appropriation does. It is simply a law providing for a public building and declaring that that public building shall not exceed a specified amount. Sir, I hold that there is a duty of the Senate imposed by the Constitution, and that the committee have no right to withhold their assent from such a proposition when it is a matter of public interest, when the good of the public service requires that an appropriation shall be increased and the proposition is sent here from the House in an appropriation bill increasing it, and we are required by the public necessities to increase it. In such a case I think it is the duty of the committee to report that increase and to adopt it.

So far as this provision is concerned coming here from the House and requiring a mere acceptance of the provision by the Senate, not being an amendment, which might be prohibited under the strict technical construction of the rule, there can be no ground of reason for objecting to the clause. It is a heresy in reasoning as it is in law to suppose that the functions of this body in appropriating public money are limited by the action of any past Congress, and I shall not cease so long as I remain here to protest against the idea upon which our rule is based, that there is anything in the action of any past Congress which can limit this Congress in its action.

Mr. MILLER, of New York. This seems to me to be a very plain and simple matter. Congress in its power exercised for years has passed a number of bills for the erection of various public buildings. The bill in this case limited the amount of money which could be expended by the Secretary of the Treasury in obeying the law and in erecting the building, and by law the Supervising Architect has been restrained from making a plan for any building which would exceed the amount of money appropriated in the various bills; but in the exercise of his duties and powers as Supervising Architect he has reported to the Secretary of the Treasury that a number of buildings have been ordered by Congress which can not be properly constructed for the amount of money to which they were limited in the original bills, and he has recommended an additional appropriation in a number of cases. His recommendations go to show that the buildings ordered heretofore can not be constructed in a fire-proof manner; that several of them can not be constructed of sufficient size to accommodate the public business of the country at the points where they are located. The recommendation comes here that the limitation of appropriation be changed and that the amount of money appropriated be increased. Certainly it is within the province and power of Congress to change the limit of appropriation for any public building. It is not in defiance of any law now existing upon the statute-book, because it is simply a change of the law, which we have a perfect right to make and which we should make.

As a business question, then, it simply amounts to this: Shall we compel the Supervising Architect to go on with these buildings, and erect buildings which are not fire-proof and will not answer the public purposes of the Government, or shall we, following his recommendation, so change those limitations, so add to the appropriations that the buildings when completed shall be perfect and fire-proof and shall be of sufficient size to accommodate the public business of the Government at these various places? There is nothing in existing law, there is nothing in the rules of the Senate which prohibits this; and judging from the arguments which have been made by the Appropriations Committee, chiefly by the chairman and by the Senator from Kentucky, it must be evident to the Senate that the Appropriations Committee desire this body not to concur in the amendment which they have proposed. I trust that the Senate will meet the Appropriations Committee in that spirit and disagree to their amendments in all these cases.

Mr. MITCHELL. I desire to ask the Senator a question. I find upon the statute-book, in the Revised Statutes, section 3734, in these words:

Before any new buildings for the use of the United States are commenced, the plans and full estimates therefor shall be prepared and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, the Postmaster-General, and the Secretary of the Interior; and the cost of each building shall not exceed the amount of such estimate.

I ask the Senator whether that does not come within this provision of Rule XVI:

No amendment which proposes general legislation shall be received to any general appropriation bill, nor shall any amendment not germane or relevant to the subject-matter contained in the bill be received.

Mr. MILLER, of New York. It has been stated here repeatedly that these amendments can not be considered general legislation, and even if they were general legislation they would not come under the provisions of this rule, because this legislation comes to us from the House. The House had a right to put it in, and all the Senate can do is to agree to it or strike it out. We can not change the provision which the House has put into the bill. That rule refers to amendments suggested in the Senate, and not to bills of the House.

Mr. MITCHELL. I ask further whether during this session this body has not repeatedly decided that certain provisions coming from the House were within that clause of Rule XVI and not in order?

Mr. MILLER, of New York. The Senate has never decided anything of the kind, but it has repeatedly decided through the Chair directly to the contrary, and on every occasion during this session when that question has been submitted to the judgment of the Senate it has, I think, without any exception, held directly to the contrary. In the case of every amendment upon the Post-Office bill, which passed the other day, the Senate held directly the opposite. It has never held to any such doctrine as the Senator states.

Mr. MITCHELL. One word in reply to what the Senator said. My recollection is entirely different from that of the Senator, and I think the RECORD will bear me out that the Senate has repeatedly decided the other way and sustained the President of the Senate in making that decision. It is true sometimes it has broken down that ruling.

Mr. MILLER, of New York. If the Senator will put that question to the Chair for an answer I shall be entirely satisfied with the answer he will receive.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment recommended by the Committee on Appropriations in line 106.

Mr. BECK. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and being taken, resulted—yeas 8, nays 46; as follows:

YEAS—8.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. SHERMAN. I suggest to the Senator from Iowa to insert the words "extension and" at the beginning of line 106.

Mr. ALLISON. I have no objection to that.

Mr. SHERMAN. That will make it uniform with the other public-building items.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Ohio moves to amend the clause by inserting the words "extension and" before the word "completion" in line 106; so as to read:

For court-house and post-office at Columbus, Ohio: For extension and completion of building, $110,000.

If there be no objection, the amendment will be received and considered as agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, after line 107, to insert:

For court-house and post-office at Concord, N. H.: For completion under present limit, $100,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after the word "for," at the end of line 111, to strike out:

Completion of the building, $25,000; and the cost of said building, including site, shall not exceed $100,000.

And insert:

Approaches, fencing, and grading, $15,000.

So as to make the clause read:

For court-house and post-office at Dallas, Tex.: For approaches, fencing, and grading, $15,000.

Mr. BECK. According to the vote taken by the Senate in the Columbus case, I think the committee ought not to ask that that amendment be adopted.

Mr. COKE. I hope the Senate will not concur in this amendment.

Mr. ALLISON. This case stands precisely on the footing of the case just decided by the Senate. This clause as it stands is an extension of the limit $25,000.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment recommended by the Committee on Appropriations.

The amendment was rejected.

The next amendment was, after the word "dollars," at the end of line 117, to insert "to be immediately available;" so as to make the clause read:

For court-house and post-office at Denver, Colo.: For continuation of building, $28,000, to be immediately available.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 118, to insert:

For court-house and post-office at Detroit, Mich.: For continuing work on same, $100,000.

Mr. PALMER. I offer the following amendment as a substitute for the amendment of the committee:

For the execution of the provisions of the act of Congress entitled "An act to provide for the erection of a public building at Detroit, Mich.," approved May 25, A. D. 1882, or for the execution of the provisions of the act of Congress entitled "An act to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Detroit, Mich.," as the Secretary of the Treasury may determine according to law, $300,000.

Mr. ALLISON. If I can I make the point of order on that amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks it subject to a point of order on the amount; it increases the amount reported by the committee; but it is not subject to a point of order on what it declares, as it refers to laws existing.

Mr. ALLISON. I hope the Senator from Michigan will not insist upon the phraseology that he has inserted there with reference to the two laws, but that whatever amount is appropriated will be appropriated as is proposed by the committee.

Mr. MORRILL. I ask the Senator from Iowa to accept an amendment on line 102, after the word "same" —

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Michigan [Mr. PALMER] is entitled to the floor.

Mr. CONGER. My colleague [Mr. PALMER] yields to me for a moment. I do not understand that any point of order lies against the amount here proposed under any law or rule. There are still several hundred thousand dollars of the estimate for this building that have not been appropriated, so that my colleague's amendment does not increase the amount beyond the sum already provided either by the former law or by the present one recently passed. I hope the Senator from Iowa will not insist on the point of order as to the amount. That matter was presented to the committee by my colleague, and there is no necessity for insisting on a mere form.

Mr. ALLISON. I will say with reference to the amount that we had the Supervising Architect of the Treasury before the committee with reference to the various public buildings authorized by law. We asked him the question as to the amount of money he needed to economically continue the construction of the buildings authorized by law, and the recollection of the committee is that he stated that if had $250,000 for the current year it would be as much as he could economically expend on the building at Detroit. There is now a balance of $149,000 of the appropriation of last year remaining unexpended, and we add $100,000 in this bill, making $250,000 in round numbers that will be at the disposal of the Treasury if the amendment proposed by the committee shall be adopted.

Mr. BECK. Then we had another trouble, which I will call attention to, that there is some difficulty about a change in the site. That I think is going to cause some delay, and therefore the Architect could not expend all that is proposed, because of the delay likely to grow out of that condition of affairs.

Mr. PALMER. I will come to that if the Senator will give me an opportunity. In 1882 a public-building bill was passed for Detroit appropriating $600,000 if a new site was obtained, and $500,000 if it was not obtained—that is, if the old Government property there was used for a site. The building was commenced; some progress has been made; and this Congress has passed another bill increasing the limit to $900,000, and opening the question of choice of site. That is the reason of the phraseology in the amendment that I sent up. I have no objection to withdrawing that if the Senator from Iowa, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, will permit me to change the phraseology of the appropriation in the bill.

Mr. INGALLS. I did not understand from the reading of the amendment to what the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury applies.

Mr. PALMER. To the selection of a site according to the terms of the recent bill. That bill has been passed by both Houses; it has gone to the President, but has not yet been returned with his signature. It opens the whole question. The first bill is involved in the second. If the second fails the first stands. There is no objection to an increase, because the limit under the old bill has not been reached.

Mr. COCKRELL. I would suggest to the Senator that probably the bill he refers to will become a law before this bill becomes a law, as it has already passed the House and Senate, and this will be one of the last bills signed.

Mr. ALLISON. We make no point on that. I will say that the amendment of the Senator from Michigan is still within the present limit of the law. The present limit of the law is $500,000, and there has been appropriated about $250,000; so that the amendment is within the limit of the law as it now stands. But if the Senate will bear with me one moment, I wish to suggest that we ought to perhaps obey a law that has not yet passed, though I hardly see how we could do so. The facts are that here is an old building in Detroit; authority was given some years ago to enlarge and extend it, and an appropriation of $250,000 was made for that purpose. One hundred thousands dollars and over of that sum has been expended at the present site. Now it is proposed, as I understand, to change the entire site of the building, and commence the erection of an absolutely new building with a limitation of $900,000 for its construction. Is not that what is proposed under the law?

Mr. PALMER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. ALLISON. The Committee on Appropriations believed that it was a wise thing to give $100,000 in addition to the amount already in the Treasury for this purpose without committing the Senate to this question of a change of site and a new building.

Mr. PALMER. I will say in reply that I do not think in either case the change will be made unless it be made by the Secretary of the Treasury; it is very doubtful if it will be made; but the question is opened by the bill recently passed, and if a change is made the present appropriation, or what remains of it, the unexpended balance, will not more than buy a new site. The property that the Senator from Iowa speaks of as having been purchased for this site is worth all the money that it has cost. There can be no loss to the Government in either event; but the question of the location of the building is reopened. If the site is changed we shall want more than $100,000 additional. If it is not changed, $100,000 will be sufficient. When there is a law already fixing the limit at $500,000, of which $250,000 is unexpended, it seems to me as if the Senate would be taking sides for keeping the location where it is, instead of opening it, as the bill just passed contemplates, and leaving it within the discretion of the Secretary by adopting the committee's amendment in the language proposed.

Mr. HARRISON. May I ask the Senator from Michigan if the bill opening the question of location has already passed both Houses and gone to the President?

Mr. PALMER. It has.

Mr. HARRISON. Would it not answer the Senator's purpose to let this stand simply by an increase of the amount, and then the other bill being signed by the President will settle the matter, without putting in any additional words here?

Mr. PALMER. It would if it were not for the phraseology of this amendment. I want to make it so clear that the man who runs may read. "For continuing the work" might be construed by some of our people as committing me to the present building, although I do not think that would be a fair construction. I would say:

For public building and site at Detroit, Mich., $300,000.

Leaving out the rest of that clause. I should be satisfied with that.

Mr. MORRILL. I hope the Senator from Michigan will not insist upon that, because that would be taking sides on the question of the site. My own opinion is very decided that there ought not to be a change of site. The present building is right in the heart of business, on the borders of the lake, in the midst of the greatest part of the mercantile and law business of the city. If the appropriation is made it is all that is needed; and so far as a new site is concerned, if that should be decided upon, it would take some considerable time to obtain the authority of the Legislature in relation to it, and it would probably take a considerable time to compose the quarrels of the city in relation to the building. I hope, therefore, the Senator will not ask the Senate to decide the question of a site at this time.

Mr. HALE. If the Senator desires to change the location of the Detroit post-office and custom-house from the center of business where it is now and where it accommodates the business of that city, let him say so in terms, because what he suggests, an appropriation for a site, is pregnant with the idea of a change of location. The Senator must see that as plainly as I do.

Mr. PALMER. If the Senator will permit me, that is the reason why I submit the amendment I do, expressing no opinion in regard to the site. Whatever my opinion may be on that subject, I do not declare it. I do not propose to take a hand upon either side of the controversy. It was on that ground that the amendment I sent up was couched in the language it was. I ask the Secretary to read it. I think the Senator from Maine, who was not in at the time, may have a little light thrown upon the question when it is read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be again read if there be no objection.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to strike out the paragraph comprised in lines 119 to 121, inclusive, and to insert:

For the execution of the provisions of the act of Congress entitled "An act to provide for the erection of a public building at Detroit, Mich.," approved May 25, 1882, or for the execution of the provisions of the act of Congress entitled "An act to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Detroit, Mich.," as the Secretary of the Treasury may determine according to law, $300,000.

Mr. HALE. The reason why the clause is put in as it stands in the bill is that this is a begun building. Whatever additional accommodations Detroit has for post-office and custom-house business, whether it be in one place or another, there has been money already expended. Whether it shall be on the old site or on a new site is to be settled hereafter through the Secretary of the Treasury. The committee thought that without in any way committing itself upon that question, it being undoubtedly a continuing work, the increasing of the appropriation should be left in that way.

Then the law squarely says, and it has already been passed, that the whole subject shall be taken up by the Secretary of the Treasury, and he shall consider and determine where this additional work of providing additional accommodations for Detroit shall be done. I can not believe that any Secretary will change the site. I do not believe the Senator himself would want the site changed.

I hope the Senator will not insist upon his amendment on this statement. Under the act the Secretary will go on and settle it, and then this work which has been begun will be continued with the additional accommodations for Detroit. If he takes it up at a new place, and thereby removes it from the business center, the responsibility must be with him. I hope the Senator will not insist on the amendment, because evidently it will (and I know the sentiment of many business men in Detroit) be construed as committing both the Senator and this body and Congress in favor of a new location; and I do not think the Senator ought to press that.

Mr. PALMER. In regard to the merits of the location, with the quarrel, as I said before, I will have nothing to do; my opinion shall not be heard upon that point. What I care for more is to satisfy the people whose interests in the aggregate are greater than mine or those of any other Senator present. It was on that account that I did not want the appropriation even by implication to limit the location of the building to where it is now.

Mr. HALE. There is no danger of that.

Mr. PALMER. I will withdraw my amendment and modify the clause in the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Michigan withdraws the amendment he has already offered, and offers an amendment to the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. PALMER. I move to strike out and insert so as to make the clause read:

For public buildings at Detroit, Mich., $200,000.

Mr. HALE. That of course carries with it in as clear terms as possible that this is to be a new building.

Mr. PALMER. I can not see how the Senator from Maine makes out that this is to be a new public building.

Mr. HALE. That is the language used where we appropriate for a new public building. It is for a public building.

Mr. PALMER. I propose to make it read "for public buildings at Detroit, Mich." There are no new public buildings there. I think not a stone has been laid, so that it can not by implication affect the site.

Mr. HALE. That is a worse amendment, if the Senator will allow me, than the other. It carries with it the idea of an entirely new building.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment now proposed by the Senator from Michigan will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 119 it is proposed to strike out the words "court-house and post-office," and in line 120 to strike out the words "for continuing work on the same, one," and to insert "two;" so as to read:

For public buildings at Detroit, Mich., $300,000.

Mr. PALMER. That is the amendment I now propose, and I hope it will be adopted by the Senate. It seems to me to be the fairest and most equitable way in which the appropriation can be put without committing any one to the site.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair on reflection is still of the opinion that unless there is an estimate for more than $100,000 for the year, the amendment is subject to the point of order made by the Senator from Iowa. The Chair thinks the language of Rule XVI in regard to carrying out provisions of an existing law or a treaty applies to a case where there is an obligation on the part of Congress to do something which requires the payment of money; and as these public buildings are authorized, if there be not an estimate the Chair thinks the amendment is not in order. There are a great many analogous and similar cases where the increase of appropriation would be enormous under any other construction of the rule. The Chair thinks that the motion to increase the recommendation of the committee from $100,000 to $200,000 is not in pursuance of the estimate of the head of the Department, and does not fall within the provision of carrying out the provisions of existing law, as the Chair understands the rule to mean, as an obligation of the United States to enter into which requires the payment of money; but the Chair understands the Senator from Michigan to say that it is in pursuance of an estimate.

Mr. PALMER. It is in pursuance of a general estimate, but not, as I understand, of an annual estimate. I was not aware that such an estimate was required every year where a work was continued.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does it appear in the regular estimates of the Treasury Department for the expenses of the coming year?

Mr. HALE. No, sir; it does not.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will submit the question to the Senate if the Senator from Michigan desires. The Chair thinks it does not fall within the provision of the rule about carrying out the provisions of an existing law, inasmuch as the Chair thinks, as he stated, that that means where the existing law requires an appropriation to be made, not merely where it authorizes an appropriation to be made.

Mr. CONGER. One law has been passed authorizing the expenditure of $500,000 on the building. Another law, which may or may not at this hour of the proceedings have been approved, has increased that to $900,000. Only $250,000 have been appropriated of the $500,000 which were authorized to be used for the building. Now, I think, under any rule, there may be under that law $250,000 more appropriated right along, which has been authorized; and, under the new law, if it should come here approved in half an hour, there would be $400,000 additional which might be appropriated. There is no request that there shall be an amount appropriated beyond the provisions of either of the laws.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair does not put it on the ground that the last act of Congress has not been approved by the President, because if a bill of the Senate alone were passed which required the appropriation of money, an amendment appropriating the sum would be within the rule. But as the law only authorizes the carrying on of a public work and limits the extent to which the expenditure shall go, the Chair is of opinion that it does not fall within the meaning of the rule as an amendment which the Senator from Michigan may offer to carry out the provisions of an existing law. The Chair thinks that that has always been construed to mean, and it is clear that for the purposes intended by the rule it should mean, that the provision heretofore passed should require an appropriation to be made and not merely authorize an appropriation.

Mr. CONGER. I do not know that the Chair quite understood the point I made. It is that under the prior law, leaving the present law out of consideration entirely, there are still $250,000 authorized by law to be appropriated for the purpose. If the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. HOAR] will allow me to finish my remarks, directed to the Chair, it might perhaps be better.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understood the point of the Senator. The Chair thinks that under the rule the Senator can not move to increase the appropriation reported by the committee, on the ground that the provision in the act authorizing the building is only a limitation of expenditure and does not require that any money shall be appropriated whatever.

Mr. CONGER. Under the same phrase an appropriation was put in here for the increase of the appropriation at Columbus.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands that; but that was put in on the report of a committee, and that may be done whether against the law or pursuant to the law.

Mr. CONGER. There may have been a mistake in regard to it. Both the Senators from Michigan personally appeared before the committee and requested the committee to fix the amount at $250,000, and presented that as an amendment which they wished to have reported by the committee. If it gives any more formality to have an amendment sent up to the desk without reading and referred, without anybody knowing what it is, to the committee, than to go to the committee and present the amendment directly to them, we should understand that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the amendment had been reported from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, or any other appropriate committee, and sent to the Committee on Appropriations, then the difficulty would not have existed. The Chair understands the amendment to be submitted by one of the Senators from Michigan in his individual right as a Senator.

Mr. CONGER. The committee informed the Senators from Michigan, they acting under their supposed construction of the rule, that they could not recommend it because they had already struck out every such provision from the House bill. Now, the Senate has overruled that, and by consequence it should overrule the decision against the amendment proposed by Senators to the committee, as I have stated.

Mr. ALLISON. There is no estimate whatever for the building at Detroit in the Book of Estimates for the coming year. The change of limit has been made at this session. We called the Supervising Architect of the Treasury before us with a view of inquiring of him what amount he could economically expend at Detroit, Mich., for the building, and he stated to us $250,000. Then we investigated the amount remaining on the 1st day of January unexpended under former appropriations and found $149,000. So the building at Detroit, if the amendment proposed by the committee shall prevail, will have $250,000 for whatever purpose the law authorizes it to be used.

Mr. CONGER. I desire to call the attention of the Chair to the first clause of Rule XVI. I submit that if we have been mistaken in the law it is a new ruling, I think, of the Chair. The first clause of Rule XVI, as to amendments to appropriation bills, says:

No amendment shall be received to any general appropriation bill, the effect of which will be to increase an appropriation already contained in the bill, or to add a new item of appropriation, unless it be made to carry out the provisions of some existing law, &c.

Now, we find on the statute-books a law which authorizes the construction of a building at Detroit, and limits the amount to $500,000. We find that there have been appropriated under that provision $250,000. The law authorizes the expenditure of $250,000 more.

I do not know why it is, with a rule which provides that no Senator shall pass between the Chair and the speaker, that shall not only be done, but the attention of the Chair, to whom a Senator is addressing his remarks, should be obstructed by it. Twice during the course of my remarks that has been done, and I object to it now and hereafter.

The rule provides that no amendment shall be received—

Unless it be made to carry out the provisions of some existing law, or treaty stipulation, or act, or resolution previously passed by the Senate during that session; or unless the same be moved by direction of a standing or select committee of the Senate, or proposed in pursuance of an estimate of the head of some one of the Departments.

We come with the first of these propositions, the provisions of an existing law, and we ask to increase an appropriation under the provisions of an existing law within the limits which that law prescribed. Why is not that of equal force with the estimate of the Treasury Department or with the recommendation of a committee? I call the attention of the Chair to that point, and ask, within this provision of an admitted existing law by which a building not to cost more than $500,000 shall be built, and there remaining a margin of $250,000 of appropriation to carry out that law, why an amendment to increase the amount within that limit is not in order under Rule XVI?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The reason why the Chair expressed the opinion, which he will however gladly leave to the Senate for its determination, was that all the operations of the Government are carried on under the provisions of existing law—ships are built, forts are built, guns are made, the Indian service is carried on, and so on. The Chair thinks that this rule was intended to mean and has always been construed to mean (this part of the rule has stood for more than twenty years, the Chair thinks) that the right to move by an individual Senator, without taking the judgment of a committee and their recommending it, and it then being sent to the Committee on Appropriations, is the right of an individual Senator to move such an amendment, without having it referred, as would carry out the provisions of existing law which require the expenditure of money; in other words, an obligation that the money shall be expended for the purpose proposed. With any other construction the Chair thinks the rule would be of no value at all, because almost every item which proposes to spend money in a bill an existing law authorizes to be done. But, as the Chair stated, the Chair will submit to the Senate the question as to this amendment being in order, it increasing the sum recommended by the committee.

Mr. LAPHAM. Allow me to make a single suggestion. In the last Congress on an appropriation bill I offered just such an amendment as this, appropriating money for a public building in Brooklyn, and the Senator from Iowa made a point of order on it. The then occupant of the chair, when I called his attention to the fact that the limit proposed by my amendment was within the act authorizing the erection of the building, overruled the point of order, and held that it was admissible, and the amendment was carried by the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks that the present occupant could not have been in the chair at the time. He remembers no such precedent.

Mr. LAPHAM. No; it was in the last Congress, when Judge Davis was in the chair. The decision was made by him. I cite it simply as a precedent.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will submit the question of order to the Senate. Is the Senate ready for the question? Senators who are of opinion that the amendment proposed by the Senator from Michigan [Mr. PALMER], increasing the sum recommended by the Committee on Appropriations, is in order, will say "ay;" those of the contrary opinion will say "no." [Putting the question.] The yeas appear to have it.

Mr. PALMER. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. COCKRELL. I should like to know exactly the point which is presented. What is the amendment decided to be out of order?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. No amendment is decided to be out of order. The Chair is submitting the question to the Senate.

Mr. COCKRELL. What is the particular amendment?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The particular amendment is to increase the appropriation for the public building at Detroit from $100,000 to $200,000. The Committee on Appropriations report an amendment providing an appropriation of $100,000. The Senator from Michigan moves to increase that sum to $200,000. The question is whether the amendment increasing the sum above that recommended by the committee, not having been reported from a standing or select committee and referred, is in order, there being no estimate of appropriation for it.

Mr. PALMER. I will state that the amendment would have been referred to the committee if I had not understood from the committee that the appropriation to be recommended by them was $250,000. They probably, in making the statement that they did to me, took the unexpended balance of $148,000 or $149,000, and then this $100,000 additional, making $249,000; but I understood that they were to report an appropriation of $250,000, and I told them I wanted but $200,000. Those are the facts; and it is through no laches of mine that the amendment was not formally offered in the Senate and referred to the committee before to-day. I supposed that this item would come in at $200,000 or $250,000 by way of recommendation. I think under the circumstances the amendment I propose should be received and adopted.

Mr. ALLISON. I hope the Senate will not, under a desire to accommodate the Senators from Michigan, establish a rule which would allow any amendment offered to an appropriation bill to be increased upon the motion of a Senator. That rule never has prevailed in the Senate, and it seems to me it would be a very dangerous one to establish.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is, Is the amendment proposed by the Senator from Michigan in respect of its increasing the sum recommended by the Committee on Appropriations in order? Senators who are of opinion that it is in order will as their names are called answer "yea;" the contrary, "nay."

The question being taken by yeas and nays, resulted—yeas 22, nays 28; as follows:

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate decides that the amendment, so far as it increases the sum, is not in order.

Mr. CONGER. I feel an embarrassment about this matter that I do not like to feel. The chairman of the committee stated, and I could not find it at the moment turning to it, that there was no estimate for this appropriation in the Book of Estimates, and the Chair so put the proposition. I was spending my time as rapidly as I could to find the estimate.

I make the same request of the officers that I have of Senators, that they do not address the Chair when I am addressing him about a matter for his own personal consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks that it is necessary for the officers to address the Chair about current business even when Senators are speaking. They will try not to interrupt the Senator.

Mr. CONGER. Then perhaps the same courtesy which requires a Senator to suspend until a message from the House shall be received might be extended satisfactorily. It comes so often I should like to have some rule about it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Michigan will proceed.

Mr. CONGER. The Chair made his ruling on the statement of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations that there was no estimate for this additional money. I find on page 143 of the Book of Estimates for public works:

Detroit, Mich.: Court-house, post-office, &c., completion under present limit, $250,000.

It is under the head of total amount to be appropriated this year; and if there is not an estimate for that, there is not an estimate for an item in the whole bill, for it turns on exactly the same rule. I will send this to the Chair; it is exactly in the same line and mode and manner as every estimate in the book. I submit that it is a little irregular to rule the amendment out on statements made contrary to the fact when the estimate is before us. It is at page 143. I do not like to be the subject of that kind of information.

Mr. ALLISON. At the moment I supposed there was no estimate. I think the Senator from Michigan makes a fair criticism. I withdraw my statement.

Mr. CONGER. Then, the statement being withdrawn, I suppose the amendment does come within the proper ruling of the Chair and may be offered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It appears in the estimates of appropriations as submitted. The Chair thinks that should be considered as an estimate affirmative. It appears to be for the coming year. So the Chair thinks on that point it is in order. It was understood when the Chair submitted the question of order to the Senate that there was not an estimate for it.

Mr. CONGER. I know it was so stated; and I was unable at the moment to find the estimate.

Mr. ALLISON. I will state to the Senator from Michigan that it is impossible for me to keep in my memory every item of appropriations estimated for or not estimated for by hastily glancing at the Book of Estimates. I supposed at the moment that this item was not estimated for.

Mr. CONGER. I do not question at all the correctness of the information of the chairman of the committee at that time, but it affects very seriously a matter of interest to us, and therefore I called attention to it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection the amendment that was ruled out on a vote of the Senate will be received. The Chair hears no objection. The question is on agreeing to it. The amendment will be again read.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 119 strike out the words "court-house and post-office" and insert the words "public buildings;" in line 120 strike out the words "for continuing work on same, one" and insert the word "two;" so as to read:

For public buildings at Detroit, Mich., $200,000.

Mr. HALE. I suggest to the Senator from Michigan that the first amendment submitted by him would be more satisfactory than the one that he has put in now.

Mr. PALMER. Does the Senator say that the first amendment would be more satisfactory to him?

Mr. HALE. Neither of them suits me, but I think the first is the better one. I have been looking at it since I was on the floor before.

Mr. PALMER. I will resume my position and take the first amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment was returned to the Senator from Michigan. It is not now at the desk.

Mr. PALMER. I send up the amendment again.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Michigan modifies his amendment. It will be read as modified.

The CHIEF CLERK. Strike out the paragraph from line 119 to line 121, inclusive, and insert:

For the execution of the provisions of the act of Congress entitled "An act to provide for the erection of a public building at Detroit, Mich.," approved May 23, 1862; or for the execution of the provisions of the act of Congress entitled "An act to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building at Detroit, Mich.," as the Secretary of the Treasury may determine according to law, $200,000."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Michigan to the amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. MORRILL. I ask to insert at the end of the amendment the words:

Under the limits of existing law.

I do not want to increase the amount beyond the sum of $500,000.

Mr. PALMER. I accept that amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Michigan modifies his amendment. The question is on agreeing to the amendment to the amendment as modified.

Mr. HALE. The Senator from Michigan, as I understand, under this amendment which he offers, does not in any way consider that it affects or influences the question of a new site or building upon the old site?

Mr. PALMER. No, sir.

Mr. HALE. And he has no such intention?

Mr. PALMER. The intent is to leave that entirely to the proper authorities. There is not the slightest wish on my part, nor on the part of any one else that I know of who has spoken for this amendment, to influence the location of the site.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Michigan to the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House requested the return of the concurrent resolution for the printing of 3,500 copies of the first and second volumes of "Decisions relating to the public lands," prepared under the direction of the Department of the Interior.

The message also announced that the House had concurred in the resolution of the Senate for the printing of 3,000 copies of the communication of the Secretary of State, containing a list of claimants against France by reason of the spoliation committed prior to the 31st of July, 1801.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8256) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, after line 121, to insert:

For court-house and post-office at Des Moines, Iowa: For extension and completion, $45,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 124, to insert:

For custom-house at Dubuque, Iowa: For approaches, grading, fencing, and paving, $8,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 133, after the word "building," to strike out "eighty-five" and insert "thirty-five;" so as to make the clause read:

For court-house and post-office at Fort Wayne, Ind.: For completion of building $35,199.12.

Mr. ALLISON. That should be "$60,000" instead of "$35,000," under the ruling of the Senate.

Mr. HARRISON. How does the Senator get at $60,000 instead of $85,000?

Mr. ALLISON. I will explain it. At this session of Congress a law was passed for the public building at Fort Wayne making an appropriation in the law itself.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Iowa moves to amend the amendment of the committee, in line 133, by striking out "thirty-five" and inserting "sixty" before the word "thousand."

Mr. VOORHEES. Eighty-five thousand dollars is the amount named in the bill as it came from the House. Why is 60,000 proposed?

Mr. ALLISON. Because at this session of Congress the limit of the Fort Wayne building has been extended $25,000; and in the act extending the limit there is an appropriation of $25,000; and with the $60,000 there will be a sufficient sum under the new limit.

Mr. VOORHEES. My reason for inquiring is that the House makes the sum $85,000. The explanation of the Senator from Iowa is satisfactory.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in line 139, after the word "acquire," to strike out "such" and insert "three;" in line 140, after the word "additional," to insert "lots of," in same line, after the word "ground," to insert "adjoining those already purchased;" and in line 142, after the word "exceeding," to strike out "twenty" and insert "ten;" so as to make the clause read:

The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized, out of any money heretofore appropriated for the purpose of purchasing a site and erecting a public building in the city of Galveston, Tex., to purchase and acquire three additional lots of ground adjoining those already purchased for a public building in Galveston, Tex., as he may deem necessary, at a cost not exceeding $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 143, to insert:

For custom-house at Galveston, Tex.: For completion under present limit, $37,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 149, to increase the appropriation "for court-house and post-office at Greensborough, N. C.: For approaches, grading, fencing, and paving," from $5,000 to $7,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed, and lines 150, 151, and 152 were read, as follows:

For post-office at Hannibal, Mo.: For completion of building under present limit, $37,500.

Mr. ALLISON. In line 151 I move to strike out the words "under present limit" and to strike out "$37,500" and insert "$55,500."

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, after line 152, to insert:

For court-house and post-office at Harrisonburg, Va.: For approaches, grading, fencing, and paving, $7,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to increase the appropriation "for court-house and post-office at Jackson, Tenn.: For approaches, grading, fencing, and paving," from $5,000 to $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 160, after the word "for," to strike out "completion of the building, $32,000; and the entire cost of said building, including site, shall not exceed $132,000," and to insert

"approaches, grading, fencing, and paving, $10,000;" so as to make the clause read:

For court-house and post-office at Jefferson City, Mo.: For approaches, grading, fencing, and paving, $10,000.

Mr. ALLISON. Under the decision of the Senate that amendment should not be agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARRISON in the chair). The Chair did not hear the Senator.

Mr. ALLISON. This amendment should be disagreed to if the Senate intends to adhere to its vote in the Columbus, Ohio, case.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Committee on Appropriations.

The amendment was rejected.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in line 167, to increase the appropriation "for custom-house and post-office at Kansas City, Mo.: For completion of approaches, clock, and sewer connections," from $15,000 to $20,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 167, to insert:

For court-house and post-office at Marquette, Mich.: For completion under present limit, $50,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 170, to insert:

For court-house and post-office at Keokuk, Iowa: For purchase of site and completion of building, $100,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out the clause from line 174 to 177 inclusive; as follows:

For custom-house and post-office at Saint Joseph, Mo.: For continuation of building, $50,000; and the entire cost of said building and approaches, including site, shall not exceed $300,000.

Mr. COCKRELL. That amendment is to be disagreed to under the same rule.

Mr. VEST. That amendment comes under the same rule as the Columbus case.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the recommendation of the committee to strike out the clause.

The amendment was rejected.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in line 179, to increase the appropriation "for court-house and post-office at Louisville, Ky.: For continuation," from $75,000 to $200,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 185, to insert:

For court-house and post-office at Macon, Ga.: For purchase of site and commencement of building, $75,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, to strike out from line 192 to line 196 inclusive, in the following words:

For post-office, internal revenue, and other Government offices at Minneapolis, Minn.: For continuation of building, $110,000: Provided, That the entire cost of such building shall not exceed $500,000.

Mr. SABIN. I ask the Senate to non-concur in the recommendation of the committee.

Mr. ALLISON. That is one of the cases that come under the ruling of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations.

The amendment was rejected.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in line 198, before the word "repairs," to strike out "completion;" so as to make the clause read:

For custom-house at New Orleans, La.: For repairs, plumbing, and drainage, $15,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to this amendment.

Mr. BECK. I do not quite understand. Is the Minneapolis matter passed? I do not object to the disagreement with the committee's amendment, but I desire to strike out the proviso, which reads:

Provided, That the entire cost of said building shall not exceed $500,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will inform the Senator from Kentucky that the question now is on striking out the word "completion," in line 198.

Mr. BECK. I ask consent to go back to that proviso for a moment.

Mr. ALLISON. If we go back to that we shall have to go back to the others. I consented myself to reject that amendment with a view that those provisions should all stand upon an equality.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is objection, in the opinion of the Chair—

Mr. BECK. The vote was taken while I was on my feet trying to be heard. I was willing that the amendment of the committee might be disagreed to, but that did not dispose of the paragraph, and the Secretary commenced reading before I could get a chance to say a word.

Mr. ALLISON. Very well; I shall make no point on that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If no objection is made the Senate will return to the consideration of the amendment proposed by the committee, beginning in line 192. The Chair hears no objection. The question recurs on agreeing to the amendment of the committee striking out the clause.

Mr. BECK. I move to amend the amendment by striking out the proviso beginning at the word "provided," in line 194, down to and including the word "dollars," in line 198, and for this reason: This provision has not passed either House. The House of Representatives, as we know, passed this bill under a suspension of the rules, so that the House really never saw it. There is no court held at Minneapolis. The internal-revenue business there amounts to almost nothing, simply the watching of wholesale and retail liquor dealers and cigar-makers; and for a post-office building alone to have a $500,000 limitation, when it started, I believe, with $110,000, ought not to be. I am willing to vote all the money that they ask and let the limitation be fixed hereafter when the House and the Senate and the appropriate committees of each House shall have had a fair chance to look at it.

I desire to give Minneapolis all that the bill proposes to give it, but I do not wish to make any provision by which they will erect a $500,000 building simply for a post-office and for internal-revenue offices, when the internal-revenue business amounts to almost nothing. The courts are held at Saint Paul, within six or seven miles of Minneapolis. The communications between the two cities are constant; every half hour I believe. There is no pretense that anything is needed except a good post-office building, with a room or two in it for the internal-revenue collections. Minneapolis is a great city and a growing city, and the building ought to be a handsome one because it is a handsome city, but $200,000 or $250,000 at the outside is all that could be properly expended in justice to the other parts of the country and the buildings in the other cities of the country simply for a post-office in that city.

That is the reason why I desire now to strike out the limitation while giving the money that the House has given.

Mr. SABIN. I trust that the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky will not prevail. The city of Minneapolis is a city containing 140,000 or 150,000 inhabitants. It is a city the growth of which has been almost phenomenal and the growth of which in the future can scarcely be estimated. The amount named in the bill, $500,000, is not an exorbitant sum considering the location and the prospects of that city situated in the heart of the great Northwest.

I trust that the paragraph will remain as it came from the House and that the proviso will be retained.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Kentucky to the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations. [Putting the question.] The yeas appear to have it.

Mr. BECK. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. McMILLAN. Let the amendment to the amendment be read, so that Senators may understand it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment to the amendment will be again read.

The CHIEF CLERK. After the word "dollars," in line 194, strike out the following proviso:

Provided, That the entire cost of such building shall not exceed $500,000.

The question being taken by yeas and nays, resulted—yeas 20, nays 35; as follows:

YEAS—20.

So the amendment to the amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question recurs on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the committee, which is to strike out from and including line 192 to and including line 198.

The amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question recurs on agreeing to the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations in line 198, before the word "repairs," to strike out the word "completion."

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, after line 199, to insert:

For court-house and post-office at New York, N. Y.: For iron shed for shelter of mail-wagons and force employed in delivery of mails, and for extension of mezzanine gallery for the proper accommodation of the postal business, $35,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 204, to insert:

For court-house and post-office at Oxford, Miss.: For approaches, fences, grading, and paving, $7,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after the word "for," at the end of line 208, to strike out "continuation" and insert "completion;" and in line 210, before the word "thousand," to strike out "fifty" and insert "seventy-five;" so as to make the clause read:

For post-office and court-house at Peoria, Ill.: For completion of building under present limit, $75,000.

Mr. CULLOM. In line 210 I move to strike out the words "seventy-five," before "thousand," and insert "one hundred;" so as to read "$100,000."

Mr. ALLISON. I hope the Senator will not insist on that.

Mr. CULLOM. I hope the Senator will hear me for a moment.

Mr. ALLISON. I will.

Mr. CULLOM. The item that I propose to amend is in reference to the court-house at Peoria, Ill. I think the amendment which I suggest ought to be adopted. As most Senators perhaps know, the business at that city is very large, and the building that would be built if completed under the statute as it stands to-day would not be near sufficient to accommodate the public interests in that city.

As the Senator from Iowa will see, under the form of the amendment proposed by the Committee on Appropriations, the building would necessarily have to be completed with the $75,000 appropriated in the bill. The building has been in progress and is now up to the top of the second story, and is waiting for the determination by this Congress whether there shall be an additional appropriation so that a third story may be put upon the building, which will make it sufficient to accommodate the public interests.

This is just one of that class of cases where clearly the equity and right in the premises would justify the amendment which I have asked to be adopted, and I hope the Committee on Appropriations will make no objection to it, at least so far as a point of order is concerned, so as to let the Senate vote upon the question whether they will agree to the increased appropriation which I propose.

I might go into a general discussion of the vast amount of revenue which is collected in that city and the public business done there, so as to show conclusively that the building if finished under the present law will not be sufficient to accommodate the public interests. It will either have to be finished as a two-story building and an insufficient one, or it will have to stand there for another year, unless my amendment is adopted. I hope, therefore, that the chairman and other members of the Committee on Appropriations will make no objection to the amendment, and allow the $25,000 increase which I propose.

Mr. ALLISON. For the building at Peoria, Ill., the limit is $225,000. That certainly ought to build a very good building at Peoria. The estimate for this year is only $75,000. I trust therefore that the Senator from Illinois will not at this moment press his amendment.

Mr. CULLOM. The Secretary of the Treasury has recommended that this increase be made, and that it be made at this session in view of the fact that the building has reached a point of construction where it will either have to be completed under the appropriations now made or stand until another session of Congress. I give my word to Senators upon this question that unless the appropriation is increased the building will not be sufficient in size to accommodate the public interests in that city.

Mr. ALLISON. I wish to ask the Senator if the building can be changed in its general plan by the amendment proposed.

Mr. CULLOM. It can be changed by adding a story to the building. It is a two-story building as originally designed. It is built up to the top of the second story. All that is necessary is to go on with the third story and make the building larger.

Mr. ALLISON. I can not understand why it requires over $200,000 to build a two-story building.

Mr. CULLOM. The Senator will understand that some $45,000 of the original appropriation went to the purchase of ground upon which the building was to be located, which reduced the amount for the building. I desire the Senate to understand that the city of Peoria is a city which pays more taxes than almost any other city in this country and consequently has more need of a public building.

Mr. ALLISON. Notwithstanding that, I must make the point of order upon the Senator's amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa raises the point of order upon the amendment proposed by the Senator from Illinois. The Chair is of opinion that the point of order is well taken.

Mr. CULLOM. I do not like to appeal from the decision of the Chair, but I insist that the amendment ought to be adopted. I hope the Committee on Appropriations will not stand here and raise a technical point where there are other buildings just exactly like it, so far as merits are concerned, but which do not happen to be in the same category on the question of order and get through, while some are ruled out. I shall have to appeal from the decision of the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois appeals from the decision of the Chair. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the judgment of the Senate? [Putting the question.] The "ayes" appear to have it. The "ayes" have it. The decision of the Chair is sustained.

Mr. CULLOM. I ask that the President of the Senate submit the question to the Senate not technically upon the question of order, but upon the point whether the amendment may be allowed to be made to the bill.

Mr. FRYE. That can not be done, Mr. President.

Mr. HARRIS. The question of order has been raised and settled. I suggest to the Senator from Illinois that he may perhaps in some measure accomplish his object by asking the Senate to disagree to the committee amendment striking out the word "continuation" and inserting the word "completion" in line 209.

Mr. CULLOM. If the Senate refuses to increase the amount, then I ask that the word "completion" be stricken out, and that the word "continuation," which the committee proposed to strike out, shall be allowed to stand in the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from Illinois that there is no pending proposition to increase the amount except as made by the Committee on Appropriations. The Senator's amendment has been ruled out of order.

Mr. CULLOM. Then I move that the word "completion" be stricken out and that the word "continuation," which the committee has reported to strike out, be allowed to remain in the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will suggest to the Senator from Illinois that all that would be necessary would be for the Senate to disagree to the amendment reported by the committee, which would leave the word "completion" to stand.

Mr. CULLOM. I will put it in that form.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the committee, in line 209, to strike out the word "continuation" and insert the word "completion."

The amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now is on agreeing to the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations, in line 210, to increase the appropriation from $50,000 to $75,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in line 211, after the word "for," where it occurs the second time, to strike out "completion of building, $30,000," and insert "approaches, fencing, grading, and paving, $10,000;" so as to make the clause read:

For post-office at Poughkeepsie, N. Y.: for approaches, fencing, grading, and paving, $10,000.

Mr. MILLER, of New York. That is the same as the Columbus and other cases. I wish to have the amendment disagreed to. I understand the committee have given their consent to that. This is one of the cases already decided, and by the understanding of the committee these amendments are to be disagreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the committee.

The amendment was rejected.

The next amendment was, to strike out the following clause, from 214 to 238, inclusive:

That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to sell at public auction, in the city of Philadelphia, Pa., to the highest bidder, after thirty days' notice in four of the principal newspapers published in the city of Philadelphia, in one or more lots, the land and premises known as the old court-house and post-office in said city, lying upon Chestnut street and extending back to Library street, and between Fourth and Fifth streets, and adjoining the present custom-house site in said city; the time and place of said sale in said city to be fixed by the Secretary of the Treasury at a date not later than ninety days after the passage of this act, and at a price not less than $200,000, with power to reject any or all bids and to readvertise and offer the said property in like manner as often as may be necessary to secure the value thereof, and the cost to be paid from the proceeds of sale; and it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to cause inquiry to be made as to the value of this property, and if it shall appear that the price above named is inadequate, he is authorized and directed to appoint a board of three persons in the employ of the United States to assess the value of the said property, and report the same to the Secretary of the Treasury, when the sum fixed by this board shall be the minimum price at which the property may be thus sold.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 241, to insert:

For post-office at Reading, Pa.: For purchase of site and completion of building, $20,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 244, to insert:

For public building at Richmond, Va.: For enlargement of building, $50,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 248, to insert:

For post-office at Sacramento, Cal.: For purchase of site and completion of building, $100,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out lines 258 and 259, as follows:
For post-office and court-house at Syracuse, N. Y.: For completion of building, $58,000.

Mr. LAPHAM. That is one of the cases in which the Senate has already overruled the committee. I hope the Senate will disagree to that amendment. It comes within the same class.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, after line 265, to insert:

For court-house and post-office at Troy, N. Y.: For purchase of site and commencing the erection of building, $100,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 268, to insert:

For court-house and post-office at Tyler, Tex.: For purchase of site and completion of building, $50,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 271, to insert:

For court-house and post-office at Wichita, Kans.: For purchase of site and completion of building, $50,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out lines 282, 283, and 284, in the following words:

Extensive repairs to roof, $6,400; and annual repairs to Treasury building, $6,000; in all, $12,400.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

Extensive repairs to roof, renewal of old concrete floors, replacing worn and worthless water-closets, and annual repairs to Treasury building, $37,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 292, before the word "thousand," to strike out "fifty" and insert "seventy-five," so as to make the clause read:

For repairs and preservation of public buildings: Repairs and preservation of custom-houses, court-houses, post-offices, and other public buildings under the control of Treasury Department, $175,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out the clause from line 305 to line 315, inclusive, in the following words:

That hereafter no plan shall be prepared or approved by the Secretary of the Treasury for any public building authorized by Congress to be erected until after the site therefor shall have been purchased and paid for; and he shall not authorize or approve of any plan for any such building which shall involve a greater expenditure in the completion of such building and approaches thereto than the amount that shall remain of the sum specified in the law authorizing the erection of such building as the limit of the cost of the site and building after the site shall have been paid for.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. VEST. I offer the following amendment, after line 315, to insert—

Mr. ALLISON. I ask the Senator to withhold that until after the committee amendments are disposed of. That was the understanding.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks that was the understanding of the Senate.

Mr. ALLISON. That I believe is the rule of the Senate also.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks it is. The reading of the bill will be continued.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in the appropriations for "light-houses, beacons, and fog-signals," in line 319, to increase the item of appropriation "for establishing a light on Romer Shoal, in the lower bay of New York," from $20,000 to $25,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after the word "dollars," in line 323, to insert "to be immediately available;" so as to make the clause read:

Winter-Quarter Shoal light-ship, Virginia: For the construction and establishment of an iron light-ship, with a fog-signal, for Winter-Quarter Shoal, Virginia, $30,000, to be immediately available.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. There was one light-house omitted, and I move to insert, after line 323, from the Committee on Appropriations:

For the construction of a light-house at Plantation Inlet, near the mouth of Chesapeake Bay, $25,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in line 336, to increase the appropriation "for a light-house and fog-bell on Bush's Bluff, Elizabeth River, near Norfolk, Va.," from $20,000 to $25,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 332, before the word "thousand," to strike out "five" and insert "ten;" and in the same line, after the word "dollars," to insert "to be immediately available;" so as to make the clause read:

Hunting Island light-station, South Carolina: For protecting the site of the light-house at Hunting Island, South Carolina, $10,000, to be immediately available.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 334, after the word "for," to strike out "continuing" and insert "completing;" and in line 336, before the word "thousand," to strike out "thirty" and insert "seventy;" so as to make the clause read:

Mosquito Inlet light-station, Florida: For completing the light-house at Mosquito Inlet, Florida, $70,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 338, to increase the appropriation "for establishing a light at Anclote Keys, Florida," from $15,000 to $20,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 342, to insert:

For the establishment of a small range-light at Northwest Passage, Key West, Fla., $200.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 348, to insert:

Hell Gate electric light, New York: For the purchase of land for the site of the electric-light tower already established at Hallet's Point, near Hell Gate, New York, $10,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 355, to insert:

Pipe Island light-station, Michigan: For establishment of a light upon Pipe Island, Michigan, to form a range to guide into the Detour Passage, Saint Mary's River, $10,000.

Mr. CONGER. I move to amend by adding the words "to be immediately available." There can be no objection to that.

Mr. ALLISON. I hope the Senator will not do that. There is no reason for making any one of these items immediately available more than another except where the work can be completed during the current year.

Mr. CONGER. This is a small range-light. It can be completed in a month or six weeks at the most.

Mr. ALLISON. Very well. I had rather agree to it than spend time upon it.

Mr. CONGER. All right.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, after line 359, to insert:

Saint Mary's River ranges, Michigan: For erecting range-lights to guide through the dredged cut in Saint Mary's River, near Round Island, Michigan, $12,000.

Mr. ALLISON. Let the same amendment be made to that.

Mr. CONGER. I move the same amendment there.

To be immediately available.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in line 366, after the word "dollars," to insert "to be immediately available;" so as to read:

Detroit River light-house: For the completion of the light-house at or near the mouth of the Detroit River, in Lake Erie, $18,000, to be immediately available.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 370, to increase the appropriation "for continuing the construction of a light-house on Northwest Seal Rock, off Point Saint George, California," from $30,000 to $75,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 371, to insert:

Angel Island fog-signal, California: For establishment of a fog-signal on Angel Island, San Francisco Bay, California, $4,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 376, after the word "establishing," to strike out "complete;" and in line 378, before the word "thousand," to strike out "twenty-five" and insert "forty;" so as to make the clause read:

Destruction Island light-station, Washington Territory: For establishing a first-order light and fog-signal on Destruction Island, Washington Territory, $40,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out the following clause from line 379 to 381, inclusive:

That appropriations made by this act shall not be available before the 1st day of July, 1885, except where expressly provided herein.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 432, to reduce the total amount of the appropriation "for pay of crews of surfmen employed at the life-saving and life-boat stations during the period of actual employment," &c., "and miscellaneous expenses that can not be included under any other head of life-saving stations on the coasts of the United States," from $730,000 to $710,000.

Mr. CONGER. I desire to ask the chairman of the committee whether the wording of this provision would not exclude payment to those members of the Life-Saving Service who have become disabled and under an act of Congress are entitled to pay for the year following whether in service or not, or, if they are dead, their widows. I fear that is not included in this. I call attention to the clause from line 412 to 432.

Mr. ALLISON. That is in the language of last year's bill.

Mr. CONGER. Since that time we have passed a law giving one year's salary to persons injured while in actual duty.

Mr. ALLISON. I believe at this session some law has been passed giving additional pay or pension to these people.

Mr. CONGER. At the close of the last session.

Mr. ALLISON. I can not state to the Senator whether the language here employed would cover the provisions of that law or not. There is no special estimate that I know of covering that provision. We had the chief the Life-Saving Service before us and he assented to this provision.

Mr. CONGER. That may have been provided for in the general bill.

Mr. ALLISON. I will say to the Senator that the committee did not specially examine that. We took it for granted that the chief of this service, who is usually pretty prompt and pretty vigorous in asking for whatever is necessary to maintain the establishment, would have called attention to it if it was wrong. I think the Senator will find that there is no difficulty in the way.

Mr. CONGER. If it may be understood that if, after examining the general bill making appropriations for that service it is found not to be provided for in that, we may return to this and offer an amendment to secure those who have been injured in the service and their widows—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that the whole bill will be open to amendment after the committee amendments have been disposed of.

Mr. CONGER. I will wait until that time and examine the subject.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment in line 432.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in line 435, to increase the appropriation "for establishing new life-saving stations and life-boat stations on the sea and lake coasts of the United States" from $25,000 to $50,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MILLER, of California. I desire to ask the chairman of the committee if the chief of the Life-Saving Bureau made any statement as to the proposed necessities of the service for new life-saving stations? I see the committee have increased this item from $25,000 to $50,000, but as I am advised the whole amount of $50,000 is needed for new stations on the Pacific coast alone.

Mr. ALLISON. Some two or three years ago we passed a bill providing for forty new life-saving stations, and the chief of the Life-Saving Service said to us that with this $50,000 he could establish ten new life-saving stations, and that that was about the required number for the next fiscal year. He did not state where they were to be located.

Mr. MILLER, of California. That is satisfactory.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was to strike out the following clause, from line 450 to line 453:

That the Secretary of the Navy be, and is hereby, directed to transfer to the Treasury Department, for use as a revenue cutter in the waters of Alaska, the Bear, one of the vessels of the late Greely relief expedition.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 503, to increase the appropriation "for salaries of keepers of light-houses: For salaries, fuel, rations, rent of quarters, where necessary, and similar incidental expenses of 1,015 light-keepers and fog-signal keepers," from $575,000 to $585,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to increase the appropriation "for expenses of light-vessels: For seamen's wages, rations, repairs, salaries, supplies, and incidental expenses of thirty light-ships," from $220,000 to $230,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, before the word "thousand," in line 514, to strike out "twenty" and insert "twenty-five," so as to make the clause read:

For expenses of buoyage: For expenses of raising, cleaning, painting, repairing, removing, and supplying losses of buoys, spindles, and day-beacons, and for the maintenance of whistling-buoys and bell-buoys, and for chains, sinkers, and similar necessities, $325,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 518, before the word "thousand," to strike out "fifty" and insert "seventy," so as to make the clause read:

For expenses of fog-signals: For establishing, renewing, duplicating, and improving fog-signals and buildings connected therewith, and for repairs and incidental expenses of the same, $70,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at the end of line 530, to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That so much as may be necessary of the unexpended balance of the appropriation for lighting and buoyage of the Mississippi, Missouri, and Ohio Rivers for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1884, may be used to defray the expense of repairing the light-house tender Lily, damaged by fire September 20, 1884.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was continued to the end of line 547.

Mr. CONGER. I desire to call the attention of the chairman of the committee to this paragraph, ending in line 547:

For maintenance of lighted buoys: For the maintenance of light-buoys now in use, $5,000.

I move to strike out the words "now in use," so that the Light-House Board may change the light-buoys from point to point, as may be necessary.

Mr. ALLISON. That amendment is not in order now.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator that under the order of the Senate the amendments of the Committee on Appropriations are being disposed of. It will be in order when the bill has been read through to propose other amendments.

Mr. CONGER. I will reserve it, then, until the reading is completed.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in the appropriations "for Coast and Geodetic Survey," in line 569, after the word "Head," to strike out "seven thousand five hundred" and insert "nine thousand;" and in line 570, after the word "dollars," to insert "of which sum $1,500 shall be immediately available;" so as to make the clause read:

For continuing the survey of the coast of Maine eastward from Englishman's Bay toward Quoddy Head, $3,000, of which sum $1,500 shall be immediately available.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after the word "Sound," at the end of line 575, to strike out "thirteen thousand" and insert "fifteen thousand five hundred;" and after the word "dollars," in line 576, to insert "of which sum $2,500 shall be immediately available;" so as to make the clause read:

For continuing resurvey of Long Island Sound, $15,500, of which sum $2,500 shall be immediately available.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 654, before the word "thousand," to strike out "thirty-eight" and insert "forty-two;" so as to make the clause read:

And 10 per cent. of the foregoing amounts shall be available interchangeably for expenditure on the objects named; in all, for party expenses, $142,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was continued to the end of line 623.

Mr. ALLISON. In line 622 the committee authorize me to move to strike out "five" and insert "eight."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The first "five" or the second?

Mr. ALLISON. The first "five."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa proposes in line 622 to strike out "five" and insert "eight;" so as to make the clause read:

For continuing the topographical survey of the coast of Southern California, including the necessary supplementary surveys near San Francisco, $3,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. I will say that at a later stage that will require an amendment in line 493. I will call attention to it later. It will necessitate the rechanging of totals to the amount of $3,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment referred to by the Senator from Iowa will be stated by the Chief Clerk.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 493 strike out "$350,000" and insert "$353,000."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair believes that is the amendment intended to be proposed by the Senator from Iowa. It can be acted on now.

Mr. ALLISON. That is not the place. I will reserve that for the moment.

The reading of the bill was continued to the end of line 626.

Mr. MILLER, of California. There is an error in line 625. The name "Sancelito" should be "Saucelito." I move to strike out "Sancelito" and insert "Saucelito."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That amendment will be made if there be no objection.

The reading of the bill was continued. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, before the word "thousand," in line 654, to strike out "thirty-eight and insert "forty-two."

Mr. ALLISON. It should be $42,800.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa proposes to amend by inserting "eight hundred."

Mr. ALLISON. Strike out "five" and insert "eight."

Mr. MILLER, of California. The addition should be $3,000.

Mr. ALLISON. Ten per cent. of these appropriations is reserved interchangeably.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from Iowa will be considered as agreed to if there be no objection. The question is on the amendment of the committee as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to, so as to make the clause read as follows:

And 10 per cent. of the foregoing amounts shall be available interchangeably for expenditure on the objects named; in all, for party expenses, $142,800.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is the duty of the Chair, the hour of 1 o'clock having arrived, to lay before the Senate the unfinished business, which is the bill (H. R. 7299) forfeiting a part of certain lands granted to the State of Iowa to aid in the construction of railroads in that State, and for other purposes.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask unanimous consent that the regular order may be informally laid aside in order that we may proceed with this appropriation bill.

SAINT PAUL AND SIOUX CITY RAILROAD LANDS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa asks unanimous consent that the regular order be informally laid aside in order that the Senate may continue the consideration of the appropriation bill.

Mr. McMILLAN. I desire to inquire what the regular order now laid before the Senate is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The title will be read again.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 7299) forfeiting a part of certain lands granted to the State of Iowa to aid in the construction of railroads in that State, and for other purposes.

Mr. McMILLAN. May I inquire if that is the bill which was under consideration on Saturday at the adjournment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that it is.

Mr. McMILLAN. Then I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota objects.

Mr. McMILLAN. If the Senator from Iowa will yield to me I will move that the bill be laid upon the table. It has already occupied one day of debate.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask unanimous consent to say a word.

Mr. McMILLAN. I do not yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota declines to yield.

Mr. ALLISON. Is he making a speech?

Mr. McMILLAN. I am making a statement. That bill has occupied one entire day of the Senate's time in debate, and it would occupy two or three days more if there were that much of the session remaining. It is interfering seriously with business, and I move that the bill be laid on the table.

Mr. ALLISON. Pending that motion—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion of the Senator from Minnesota is not debatable.

Mr. ALLISON. I understand that; I do not propose to debate it; but pending that motion, I ask unanimous consent that the bill may be informally laid aside, in order that we may proceed with the appropriation bill, and pending that I desire unanimous consent to say one word.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no objection the Senator from Iowa will be allowed to make a statement.

Mr. ALLISON. I hope the Senator from Michigan will not interpose an advantage which he has at this moment to get rid of another bill which I do not propose to interfere with one way or the other. I ask what has never before been denied, unanimous consent to proceed with the appropriation bill without affecting the pending orders, whatever they may be.

Mr. McMILLAN. I ask unanimous consent to make a statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the Senator from Minnesota being heard? The Chair hears none.

Mr. McMILLAN. I do not think that the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations has pursued a proper course in making the remarks he has in using the power of the Committee on Appropriations to protect this bill which I have moved to lay on the table. To attempt to raise an issue between me and the Senate in regard to the merits of this motion is not I think entirely fair. I present no contest of that kind. I desire to proceed with the bill the Senator has had before the Senate this morning; and it is for the reason that I desire the sundry civil bill to be disposed of without interruption that I make this motion. It will take no time to dispose of this motion except what is required to take the vote of the Senate; and to attempt to antagonize it with the weight of the Committee on Appropriations is not, I think, exceedingly fair.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will say to Senators that the pending motion is not a debatable motion. If any Senator asks unanimous consent to be heard the Chair will put the request of the Senator.

Mr. WILSON. I ask unanimous consent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa asks unanimous consent to be heard on this question. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. WILSON. I do not desire to antagonize the appropriation bill with the pending order. I desired and suggested to the Senator from Minnesota that we allow this to be laid aside informally in order that the Senate might proceed with the consideration of the appropriation bill; and when that shall have been completed, if the Senator from Minnesota desires then to make his motion to lay the bill on the table, he can do so and have a test vote. But I do not desire that advantage taken now when the Senate is anxious to proceed with this appropriation bill. Let it go over informally, and when we shall have concluded the appropriation bill, then if he desires to take a test vote on the motion to lay on the table I shall have no objection, for I do not desire to occupy the time of the Senate on that bill. I shall not, if we come to the discussion of it, occupy more than five minutes of the time of the Senate in what I desire to submit concerning it.

Mr. McMILLAN. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota is not in order.

Mr. ALLISON. I object to any further debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made to debate.

Mr. McMILLAN. I desire to withdraw—

Mr. ALLISON. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator rise to debate the question?

Mr. McMILLAN. No, sir; I do not rise to debate it. I yield to the power of the Committee on Appropriations and withdraw the motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota withdraws his motion.

Mr. ALLISON. Now I ask unanimous consent—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa asks unanimous consent that the pending question be laid aside informally, and that the Senate continue the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill? Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. ALLISON. Now I desire to say to the Senator from Minnesota that it is both unjust and unfair to the Committee on Appropriations to assert that they are interposing anything here, and I do not wish that imputation to be cast upon the committee. I only ask in this regard that this bill, whatever it is, shall be treated as everything else informally laid aside in order that the business of the Senate may be proceeded with in reference to appropriations.

Mr. McMILLAN. In justice to myself I desire to say that the time consumed in opposing this motion has been much greater than would have been consumed in taking a vote of the Senate upon the motion to lay the bill on the table. This is a question of great importance, involving public and private rights, and it is my duty as a member of the Senate to take all the opportunities I have to protect those rights. The Senator from Iowa in charge of this bill, it seems to me, has interfered with the motion that I had made without any necessity for doing so.

RETURN OF A HOUSE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following resolution of the House of Representatives:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, March 2, 1885.

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House be directed to request the Senate to return to the House of Representatives the concurrent resolution of February 27, 1885, providing for the printing of the first and second volumes of "Decisions relating to the public lands," which was by mistake communicated to the Senate as having passed the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senate agree to the request of the House of Representatives for the return of this resolution?

There being no objection, the request was granted.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask consent to make a report at this time so that it may be placed on the Calendar without printing, as I wish to call it up to-day.

I am directed by the Committee on Finance, to whom was referred the bill (S. 2069) to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to issue a duplicate certificate of deposit to the People's National Bank of Lawrenceburg, Ind., to report it without amendment. I do not ask that the report be printed. We have adopted the House report, and therefore it is not necessary to print it.

Mr. BLAIR, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 7618) granting a pension to Harry H. G. Kisingbury, Walter F. Kislisbury, Wheeler Schofield Kislisbury, and Douglas E. L. Kislisbury, respectively, children of the late Frederick F. Kislisbury, a lieutenant in the Eleventh Regiment United States Infantry, reported it without amendment, and submitted a report thereon.

Mr. SEWELL, from the Committee on Military Affairs, to whom was referred a letter of the Secretary of War, transmitting, in compliance with law, an abstract of the military force of the United States, reported it back with a recommendation that it be printed; which was agreed to.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARRIS in the chair) presented a petition of the department encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic of Indiana, praying that General U. S. Grant be immediately placed on the retired-list of the Army on full pay; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. MILLER, of California. I ask unanimous consent to present a joint resolution of the General Assembly of the State of California, in regard to the Indian-war debt of that State. I do so because I desire it to go before the Committee on Appropriations before the deficiency bill is acted on.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection, the resolution of the Legislature of California will be received, read, and referred.

The resolution was read, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations, as follows:

Assembly joint resolution No. 73, adopted March 30, 1878.

Resolved by the assembly of the State of California (the senate concurring). First. That our Senators be instructed and our Representatives requested to urge upon Congress the immediate payment of all bonds, coupons, and certificates of coupons issued by the State of California for expenses incurred in the Indian wars which have not been paid by the General Government. Second. That his excellency the governor be requested to cause a statement of all such bonds, certificates, and coupons, and of the circumstances connected therewith, to be prepared by the comptroller, and upon such statement being prepared to cause an application to be made to Congress, in the name of the State of California, for the payment of said bonds, coupons, and certificates. Third. And that he forward a copy of these resolutions to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

I, Thomas L. Thompson, secretary of state of the State of California, do hereby certify that I have carefully compared the annexed copy of assembly joint resolution No. 73, adopted by the Legislature of the State of California on the 30th day of March, 1878, with the original now on file in my office, and that the same is a correct transcript therefrom and of the whole thereof. Also, that this authentication is in due form and by the proper officer.

Witness my hand and the great seal of State, at office in Sacramento, Cal., the 31 day of January, A. D. 1885.

[SEAL.]

T. L. THOMPSON,
Secretary of State.
By A. E. SHATTUCK Deputy.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania. I ask unanimous consent to present several joint resolutions of the Legislature of Pennsylvania.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania, presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Pennsylvania, in favor of the passage of an act placing General U. S. Grant on the retired-list; which was ordered to lie on the table, and be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, February 13, 1885.

Whereas the bill providing for the retirement of General U. S. Grant is still pending in Congress, the dilatory action of that body tending to create a feeling of indignation among the people, who believe that the most generous treatment of this distinguished soldier and patriot is the merest justice; and

Whereas it is the sense of the General Assembly of this State that only the promptest action in passing the said bill can keep pace with the increasing age and failing strength of the great soldier, and that the debt due him from his country should be acknowledged while yet it may lighten the increasing cares of his life: Therefore

Be it resolved (if the senate concur) That our Senators be instructed, and our Representatives in Congress be requested, to use their earliest and utmost efforts to pass the bill placing General U. S. Grant on the retired-list.

ROBERT E. PATTISON,
Governor.

Mr. CAMERON, of Pennsylvania, presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Pennsylvania, favoring the passage of an act granting pensions to the surviving soldiers of the Mexican war; which was ordered to lie on the table and be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, February 6, 1885.

Whereas there is now pending in the House of Representatives of the United States a measure known as the "Mexican pension bill," which provides for the pensioning of the surviving soldiers of the United States who participated in the war with Mexico, as well as to facilitate the speedy settlement and allowance of claims of disabled soldiers and sailors who participated in the battles for the supremacy of the Union in the war of the rebellion; and

Whereas the Government of the United States is abundantly able to provide a pension for the soldiers and sailors of the country whose sacrifices have given us a restored Union and a united people: Therefore,

Be it resolved (if the senate concur). That our Representatives in Congress be requested to support said Mexican pension bill with the Senate amendments, and to use their utmost endeavors for its speedy consideration and passage before the termination of this Congress, in order that good faith may be kept and justice done to the nation's defenders.

Resolved. That this resolution, with the preamble, be printed, and a copy, properly attested, forwarded to each of Pennsylvania's Representatives in the national Congress.

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF THE COMMONWEALTH,
Harrisburg, February 19, A. D. 1885.

PENNSYLVANIA, ss:

EDUCATION EXHIBITS AT NEW ORLEANS.

Mr. BLAIR. I ask unanimous consent to introduce a resolution calling for a report from a Department:

Resolved. That the Secretary of the Interior be directed to transmit to the Senate the report of the Commissioner of Education of the exhibition of education at the World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition at New Orleans, La.

Mr. ALLISON. That is a little premature, I think.

Mr. BLAIR. It is not to print it. It is simply to transmit it to the Senate.

Mr. ALLISON. How can the report be ready when the exposition is going on now?

Mr. BLAIR. It will be here to-night if it is not here now.

Mr. ALLISON. I object, and ask that the resolution be printed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will lie over and be printed.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill (H. R. 8256).

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in the appropriations for "pay of field officers of the Coast and Geodetic Survey," after line 685, to insert:

For pay of four assistants, at $1,550 per annum, $6,200.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 689, before the word "assistants," to strike out "nine" and insert "five;" and in line 690, before the word "thousand," to strike out "thirteen" and insert "seven;" so as to make the clause read:

For pay of five assistants, at $1,550 per annum, $7,750.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at the end of line 704, before the word "hundred," to strike out "twenty-four thousand nine" and insert "twenty-five thousand one;" so as to make the clause read:

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 954, before the word "thousand," to strike out "thirty" and insert "forty;" so as to make the clause read:

Disbursive paper for United States securities: For paper, including mill expenses, transportation, examination, counting, and delivery, $40,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 956, after the word "coin," to strike out "that" and insert "for transportation of silver coin, $50,000; and in expending this sum;" so as to read:

Transportation of silver coin: For transportation of silver coin, $50,000; and in expending this sum the Secretary of the Treasury, &c.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. What has become of the amendment from line 956 to 970?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question has just been taken on the insertion of the words:

For transportation of silver coin, $50,000; and in expending this sum—

Mr. ALLISON. All right.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, after the word "Treasury," at the end of line 958, to strike out the words "be, and he is hereby" and insert "is;" and in line 960, after the word "subtreasuries," to strike out "and mints;" so as to read:

The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to transport from the Treasury or subtreasuries, free of charge, silver coin when requested to do so.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the proviso to the clause in relation to the "transportation of silver coin," after the word "applicants," in line 964, to strike out:

The expenses of such transportation shall be paid from the fund arising from the profits accruing from the coinage of the standard silver dollar, which is hereby appropriated for that purpose.

And in line 969, after the word "this," to strike out "paragraph, so far as the sum relates to the Treasury or subtreasuries," and insert the word "appropriation;" so as to make the proviso read:

Provided, That an equal amount in coin or currency shall have been deposited in the Treasury or such subtreasuries by the applicant or applicants. And the Secretary of the Treasury shall annually report to Congress the cost arising under this appropriation.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Secretary read the clause of the bill from line 971 to line 974, inclusive, as follows:

Transportation of gold coin: For the transportation of gold coin from San Francisco to New York, $100,000; the same to be immediately available.

Mr. INGALLS. I should like to hear from the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations on the subject of the amount of gold coin in San Francisco, and why it requires to be transported at the expense of the Government to New York.

Mr. BECK. I rose for that purpose, and to add that I hope the chairman of the committee will now tell the Senate the exact condition of things in regard to these matters. We had more trouble about this than perhaps any other item in this bill, and the chairman of the committee knows all about it.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, this is a provision inserted in the House of Representatives for the transportation of gold coin from San Francisco to New York. This appropriation was made after an investigation of an executive document, the number of which I have on a memorandum, but I do not remember it exactly. I think it is House Executive Document 106, in which the Treasury Department asked for an appropriation of $500,000 for the transportation of silver coin between subtreasuries and for the erection of further vaults for the purpose of containing the silver coin. The House instead of adopting the suggestion made in this report, authorized the transportation of gold coin from San Francisco to New York.

The facts are that there are now in San Francisco $56,000,000 of gold coin in the subtreasury at that place. There are also in the subtreasury at that place 19,000,000 silver dollars. There are in the mint at San Francisco 32,000,000 of silver dollars.

Mr. INGALLS. Are these deposits of gold and silver coin the product of the mint at San Francisco, or are they received in the course of the payment of customs and other duties?

Mr. ALLISON. The great body of the gold coin at the San Francisco subtreasury is the accumulation of years, which comes there from the production of gold on the Pacific coast. It is utterly impossible under existing law and in the regular range of commerce and trade between the Pacific coast and the Atlantic coast for this silver or this gold to reach the Atlantic coast. The exchanges of course are all in favor of the Atlantic coast, while both gold and silver are produced on the Pacific coast. So it is an inherent difficulty not only with reference to silver but with reference to gold coin that there is an accumulation on the Pacific coast. The Committee on Appropriations believed that it was a wise thing to transfer this gold coin or a portion of it to the Atlantic coast from the Pacific coast.

Mr. INGALLS. Why?

Mr. ALLISON. For the purpose of having it nearer the range of the great commercial transactions of our country.

Mr. INGALLS. But we have a great deal more than we can use now in the Treasury. Why should there be $56,000,000 more brought here?

Mr. ALLISON. I will answer the Senator. There is a constant accumulation at the San Francisco mint and at the San Francisco subtreasury, and there is now in the subtreasury all the coin that it has room for, and therefore the committee believed that this provision was a wise one in relieving the subtreasury at San Francisco and transporting this gold coin to New York.

Mr. INGALLS. All of it?

Mr. ALLISON. Not all of it.

Mr. INGALLS. How much?

Mr. ALLISON. The provision here will transfer $40,000,000 of gold coin from San Francisco to New York at the rate of $2.50 a thousand, which is the charge made by the express companies, and is said to be the lowest charge for the work.

We have added to this provision a clause authorizing an appropriation of $50,000 for the transportation of silver coin between the subtreasuries, and the committee made inquiry both of the Director of the Mint and of the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, who was before us, why it was that there was this great accumulation of silver in San Francisco and this great cry against the accumulation in San Francisco when there was nothing said about the accumulation of gold there. It is now within the power of the Treasury Department to transfer these thirty-two million silver dollars from the mint in San Francisco to the Treasury at Washington, or the subtreasury at New York, if they desire to do so, without an appropriation, because the profits that are derived from the coinage of silver can be used under existing law to transport any portion of the silver dollars from the mints to any subtreasury.

So the cry made for appropriations and for additional vault room San Francisco, as it appeared to the committee, was unnecessary, from the fact that if there is an undue accumulation of silver at the mint there the Department can transfer that silver, if they choose, to any subtreasury in the United States or to the Treasury here in Washington, where there is now room for $36,000,000 of silver in the vaults already prepared in the Treasury.

For these reasons the committee not only agreed to the provision in this bill for the transportation of gold coin, but they also have inserted a provision which will enable the Treasury to make such manipulations and changes of the silver coin now in the different subtreasuries as will relieve the Treasury entirely from the necessity of building any more vaults for the storage of silver dollars.

Mr. MILLER, of California. The committee have done exactly what they should have done. There is a large accumulation of both silver and gold coin in San Francisco, because that is the largest mint there is in the United States, and it is in the region of silver and gold production.

Mr. INGALLS. Does this gold and silver all belong to the United States Government?

Mr. MILLER, of California. It does.

Mr. INGALLS. How did they get possession of this fifty-six millions of gold coin?

Mr. MILLER, of California. I do not know how they got possession of it. It was coined at the mint.

Mr. INGALLS. The Government does not buy gold as it does silver for the purpose of coinage.

Mr. MILLER, of California. The Government receives it, though, from the owners of gold bullion for coinage at the Mint, and exchanges greenbacks for it. In that way the United States have accumulated in San Francisco a large amount of gold, and really there is not vault-room sufficient in the subtreasury or in the mint in San Francisco for all the gold and silver there accumulated, and the vaults there should be relieved by the transfer of the coin from the Pacific coast to the eastern coast, where the coinage is needed and where the disbursements take place.

This proposition of the committee is not only in the interest of the Government, but it is good policy and good sense to do precisely what they have proposed.

Mr. BECK. It seemed to me that the transportation companies charged an enormous price for the work they do. When this question came up we sent for the Director of the Mint and Assistant Treasurer and everybody who knew anything about it. It seemed to me that the idea of paying $100,000 to carry gold coin from San Francisco to New York was altogether extravagant; but when the facts were laid before us and the charges made against private individuals for the same work were explained, I did not see how to find fault, and therefore I have no objection to make to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The reading of the bill will proceed. The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, after line 974, to insert:

Transportation of silver coin: For transportation of silver coin between subtreasury offices, $50,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 1041, to insert:

Smithsonian Institution building: For finishing and completing the furnishing of the eastern portion of the Smithsonian Institution building, $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 1089, before the word "thousand," to insert "and twenty;" so as to make the clause read:

Furniture and repairs of furniture: For furniture and repairs of furniture, including carpets, for all public buildings under the control of the Treasury Department, including the public building at Cleveland, Ohio, and including marine hospitals, and for furniture, carpets, chandeliers, and gas-fixtures for new buildings, $300,000. And all furniture now owned by the United States in other buildings shall be used as far as practicable, whether it corresponds with the present regulation plans for furniture or not.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was continued to line 1129.

Mr. ALLISON. In line 1128, before the word "thousand," I move to strike out "fifteen" and insert "twenty;" so as to read:

For the protection of sea-otter hunting-grounds and seal-fisheries in Alaska: To enable the Secretary of the Treasury to use revenue-steamers for the protection of the interests of the Government on the sea-islands and the sea-otter hunting-grounds, and the enforcement of the provisions of law in Alaska, $30,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, after line 1129, to insert:

National Board of Health: For salaries and expenses of the National Board of Health, $15,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 1132, to insert "For suppression of epidemic diseases;" and after the word "danger," in line 1143, to strike out "the same to be expended under the direction of the Marine-Hospital Service;" so as to make the clause read:

For suppression of epidemic diseases: The President of the United States is hereby authorized, in case of threatened or actual epidemic of cholera or yellow fever, to use the unexpended balance of the sum reappropriated therefor by the act approved July 7, 1884, together with the further sum of $300,000, the same to be immediately available, in aid of State and local boards or otherwise, in his discretion, in preventing and suppressing the spread of the same and for maintaining quarantine and maritime inspections at points of danger.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 1145, to insert:

That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized to issue a warrant in favor of the Hartford and New York Transportation Company for the sum of $4,722, which sum is hereby reappropriated, being the amount appropriated for said Hartford and New York Transportation Company under the act approved July 7, 1884, making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1885, and for other purposes, and now unpaid.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 1157, to insert:

To enable the Secretary of the Treasury to reimburse ex-President R. B. Hayes for amount paid for expenses of the commission appointed to go to Louisiana in April, 1877, $3,950.73.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the appropriations "under the Navy Department," in line 1168, after the word "Surgery," to strike out

"one thousand five hundred" and insert "three thousand;" so as to make the clause read:

To enable the Secretary of the Navy to pay to W. P. Wood for services rendered in connection with the detection and exposure of parties concerned in defrauding the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, $3,000: Provided, That this sum shall be accepted by the said Wood in full compensation for such services.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was continued to the end of line 1176.

Mr. McPHERSON. Before any action is taken on that clause I should like to offer an amendment:

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARRISON in the chair). The Chair will state to the Senator from New Jersey that under the agreement amendments are not now in order except those proposed by the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. McPHERSON. I reserve my right, then, to offer an amendment to this clause.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will have that right.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was to strike out the clause from line 1183 to line 1188, inclusive, as follows:

To pay in full the claim of the New England Transportation Company, of New Haven, Conn., for repairs to certain barges belonging to that company which were injured by collision with the United States steamer Tallapoosa, in July, 1884, $76.50.

The amendment was agreed to.

Of said reproduction 1,200 copies shall be for the use of the Senate, 3,500 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, and 300 copies for the use of the Department of the Interior.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "public buildings," after line 1250, to insert:

Interior Department building: For completion of the reconstruction of the east wing of the Department building, $160,000.

Mr. PLATT. Should that be the east wing?

Mr. ALLISON. Yes, sir; the east wing.

Mr. PLATT. I wish to say just one word, not in opposition to this amendment but on a subject to which it relates. I am very glad that the repairs of the Interior Department building are to be completed. It has been a good many years since the fire occurred which rendered those repairs necessary, and I think there has been no public building in Washington that has needed the expenditure of Government money to be made upon it as much as this building of the Interior Department.

But what I rose to say was this: I felt it my duty at the last session of Congress to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that that building was entirely unsuitable and entirely too small to accommodate the business of the Interior Department. At that time I urged upon Congress also the separation of the Patent Office from the Interior Department and the creation of it into a new department or a new bureau.

It has not seemed practicable to accomplish anything by pressing that at the present session of Congress. I want now to say that immediately upon the opening of the next Congress I propose to introduce bills and to press them with all my power to secure two objects: to separate the Patent Office from the Interior Department in some way, and to build another building either for the Interior Department or for the Patent Office.

The Patent Office and the Land Office have grown so and will grow so in the future, and the work of those two offices is now so much behind by reason of the fact of insufficient accommodations, that it becomes an absolute necessity, as I believe, that the Patent Office shall be separated from the Interior Department and that a new building shall be provided. I wish to say just that much here. I should be glad to enlarge upon it, but I know how valuable the time of the Senate is in these last hours and I will not enlarge.

Mr. ALLISON. I desire to say only one word in response to what the Senator from Connecticut has said. The present Interior Department building is now incomplete with reference to its fire-proof qualities from the fact that the east wing has not a fire-proof roof. The north wing, the west wing, and the south wing have all been repaired and new roofs provided for those wings. The Secretary of the Interior said to us that if this appropriation was made it would enable him to make the entire roof of the building fire-proof, and would also enable him to supply a place for one hundred additional clerks now needed, and also give some additional room to the Patent Office; so that whatever may be done in the future in the direction suggested by the Senator from Connecticut, it is important that this work should be done in order to complete the present building.

Mr. PLATT. The chairman of the committee did not understand me as making any objection to the amendment.

Mr. ALLISON. No, I did not.

Mr. PLATT. I am aware of the fact that more room is to be provided for the operations of the Interior Department, but I also believe—and I think the Secretary of the Interior, and the Commissioner of Patents, and the Commissioner of the General Land Office would all agree—that when the new room is provided that is about being furnished, the accommodations will still be insufficient. The Interior Department is growing all the while and must grow as the country grows, and the commencement of a new building in the very near future is an imperative necessity, as I believe.

Mr. ALLISON. I quite agree with the Senator. We are now paying $68,000 per annum rental for buildings for the Interior Department in this city.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, after line 1254, to insert:

For construction of coal-vaults on west wing of the Department building, and repairing pavement, $6,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, at the beginning of line 1258, to strike out "for casual repairs of the Interior Department building;" so as to make the clause read:

For casual repairs of the Department building, $5,780.

The amendment was agreed to.

For constructing terrace north of the Capitol, section marked B, as shown on printed plan accompanying the letter of the Secretary of the Treasury (Executive Document No. 9, first session Forty-eighth Congress), including wages of mechanics and laborers, $21,500.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

For continuing the construction of the terrace and grand stairways of the Capitol, as shown on plan accompanying the letter of the Secretary of the Treasury (Executive Document No. 9, first session Forty-eighth Congress), including wages of mechanics and laborers, $350,000.

Mr. MORRILL. I understand that the committee by mistake left out the following words, and I move to amend by inserting them:

And this appropriation shall be immediately available.

Mr. ALLISON. I have no objection to that, though I suggest to the Senator that there was no mistake about it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the Senator from Iowa does not object the amendment of the Senator from Vermont will be received at this time. The question is on that amendment to the amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to, adding:

And this appropriation shall be immediately available.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The next amendment was in the appropriations for "Hot Springs improvement," after line 1223, to insert:

To construct a reservoir for hot water on the Government reservation at Hot Springs, Ark., in order to provide for an adequate supply of hot water for the Army and Navy hospital and bath-houses, $30,000.

For expenses of hearings to be held and investigations to be made by registers and receivers, under instructions from the General Land Office, to determine whether alleged fraudulent entries are of that character or have been made in compliance with law, $10,000; and the Secretary of the Interior shall report in detail all expenditures under the four preceding paragraphs.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in the appropriations for "surveying the public lands," after the word "hundred," in line 1373, to insert "and fifty;" and in line 1398, after the word "exceeding," to strike out "fifty-five" and insert "fifty;" so as to make the clause read:

For surveying the public lands, $350,000, at rates not exceeding $9 per linear mile for standard and meander miles, $7 for township, and $5 for section lines, except that the Commissioner of the General Land Office may allow, for the survey of standard and meander lines through lands heavily timbered, mountainous, or covered with dense undergrowth, a sum not exceeding $13 per linear mile for standard lines, $11 for township, and $7 for section lines; or where, for any cause not provided for by law, in Oregon or Washington Territory, he is unable to get the necessary surveys made at the rates aforesaid, he may allow a sum not exceeding $12 per linear mile for standard lines, $10 for township lines, and $6 for section lines; and of the sum hereby appropriated not exceeding $50,000 thereof may be expended for occasional examinations of public surveys in the several surveying districts, in order to test the accuracy of the work in the field and to prevent payment for fraudulent and imperfect surveys returned by deputy surveyors, and inspecting mineral deposits, coal fields, and timber districts, and for the making of such other surveys or examinations as may be required for identification of lands for purposes of evidence in any suit or proceeding in behalf of the United States.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 1427, before the word "thousand," to strike out "fifteen" and insert "twenty-five;" so as to make the clause read:

For necessary expenses of survey, appraisal, and sale of abandoned military reservations transferred to the control of the Secretary of the Interior under the provisions of an act of Congress approved July 3, 1834, $25,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out the clause from lines 1428 to 1432, inclusive, as follows:

For establishing initial monuments of a permanent character to govern mineral survey, in order to secure accuracy in survey of mineral claims, and to connect the monuments with each other and with the public lands, $7,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out the clause from lines 1433 to 1436, inclusive, as follows:

The next amendment was, after line 1515, to insert:

For erection of cottage at the cemetery, $300.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 1517, to insert:

For dining-hall for the detached buildings, $9,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. I think the amendment should be modified. It should be:

For dining-hall in such building.

It can be corrected hereafter, though, and I will let it pass.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator make any motion at this time?

Mr. ALLISON. No; let it stand as it is.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, after line 1519, to insert:

For purchase of additional land for farming purposes, $6,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the appropriations for "Howard University," after line 1538, to insert:

For repairs of buildings, $5,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 1539, to insert:

For increase of library, of cabinet, and of philosophical and chemical apparatus, and improvements in the works containing the same, $3,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the appropriations for "Freedmen's Hospital and Asylum," in line 1547, after "subsistence," to strike out "twenty-two" and insert "twenty-three;" in line 1551, before "thousand," to strike out "thirteen" and insert "fourteen;" in line 1556, after the word "thousand," to insert "five hundred;" and in the same line, after the word "all," to strike out "forty-nine thousand" and insert "fifty thousand five hundred;" so as to make the clause read:

For subsistence, $23,000; for salaries and compensation of the surgeon-in-chief, two assistant surgeons, engineer, clerk, matron, nurses, laundresses, cooks, teamsters, watchmen, and laborers, $14,000; for rent of hospital buildings and grounds, $4,000; for fuel and light, clothing, bedding, forage, transportation, medicines, and medical supplies, repairs and furniture, and other absolutely necessary expenses, $10,500; in all, $50,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 1557, to insert:

For purchase of one force-pump, to be immediately available, $400.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the appropriations for "National Museum," in line 1565, to strike out the word "preservation" and insert "preservation;" and in line 1570, before the word "thousand," to strike out "ninety-one" and insert "ninety-six;" so as to make the clause read:

For the preservation of collections of the National Museum: For the preservation and exhibition and increase of the collections received from the surveying and exploring expeditions of the Government, and other sources, including salaries or compensation of all necessary employes, $96,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, to strike out from line 1585 to line 1589, inclusive, in the following words:

Tenth Census: That the twenty-second section of the act entitled "An act to provide for the taking of the tenth and subsequent censuses," approved March 3, 1879, be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

Mr. ALLISON. The Senate will observe that this provision repeals an important section of the act authorizing the taking of the Tenth Census. That provision was put in that act after a very full debate and discussion in both Houses, and it seemed to the Committee on Appropriations that it ought not to be in this way repealed on an appropriation bill.

Mr. HALE. Will the Senator read that section?

Mr. ALLISON. I send the section to the desk to be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If there be no objection the section will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

SEC. 2. That if any State or Territory, through its duly appointed officers or agents, shall, during the two months beginning on the first Monday of June of the year which is the mean between the decennial censuses of the United States is by this act directed to be taken, take and complete a census in all respects according to the schedules and forms of enumeration in the census of the United States and shall deposit with the Secretary of the Interior, on or before the 1st of September following, a full and authentic copy of all schedules returned and reports made by the officers and agents charged with such enumeration, then the Secretary of the Treasury shall, upon receiving a certificate from the Secretary of the Interior that such schedules and reports have been duly deposited, pay, on the requisition of the governor of such State or Territory, out of any funds in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, a sum equal to 50 per cent. of the amount which was paid to all supervisors and actual enumerators within such State or Territory at the United States census next preceding, increased by one-half the percentage of gain in population in such State or Territory between the two United States censuses next preceding: Provided, That the blank schedules used for the purposes of the enumeration herein provided for shall be similar, in all respects of form and size of heading and ruling, to those used in the census of the United States.

Mr. CHACE. That refers to a provision for taking a semi-decennial census by the States.

Mr. ALLISON. That is the provision.

Mr. CHACE. In my opinion it ought to be repealed. I think this clause should be left in the bill. It will be impossible for the Census Department to collate, tabulate, and prepare these statistics and get through with them before the end of this decennial period. I understand that very few States have taken any steps under this provision of law, and unless action under it is arrested now it will be too late, and as a result the Government will be called upon to expend this money without any material benefit to any interest.

Mr. ALLISON. That may be; but I will say to the Senator from Rhode Island that four or five or more States have already taken steps under this provision, and it seemed to the Committee on Appropriations that if it was important to repeal this provision of the law some effort in that direction ought to have been made before the last day preceding the final adjournment of this Congress.

Mr. CHACE. I agree that this whole matter ought to have been brought before the Senate earlier; but I should like to ask the chairman of the committee what information the committee had in regard to what steps have been taken by the States. My information is that there has been really no step taken by any of the States, but I may be misinformed. Is the committee in possession of any information in regard to that matter?

Mr. ALLISON. Of course the investigation of the committee on this subject was of a very summary character. We did understand that four or five States had already taken some steps in compliance with this provision of law, and believing that that was the case, and also believing that it was impossible and improper to repeal this important provision on this appropriation bill, the committee struck out the clause.

Mr. HOAR. I hope the present law will stand and that the amendment will be adopted. In Massachusetts I have no doubt, though I have had no communication with the office very lately, they are making their preparations to have a thorough census taken in 1885. It seems hardly in good faith for the Government to make the repeal at so late a day.

Mr. MORRILL. I also add my hope that this law will not be repealed. It will be a vast advantage to the whole country to have this census taken at the semi-decennial period in order to compare the results of one period with another, to correct any errors that may be made. Whether there are few or many States that are now taking steps with these semi-decennial censuses, I hope they will not be interrupted, and if they were to be interrupted undoubtedly a claim would be presented to us for all expenses, and therefore it would be economy for us to go on under the present law.

Mr. HOAR. I should like to say one thing further. It seems to me it is very important to maintain the present policy, so that sooner or later all the States will get into the habit of having a census taken every ten years. It is a great assistance. In the first place, they get in every State a body of trained enumerators who within five years have taken a census, and the National Government has not anybody ready for that work.

Mr. ALLISON. I will state an additional reason which operated on the minds of the committee, which was that this law certainly ought not to be repealed as respects the taking of the census now in 1885 because certainly some States, and perhaps a good many, have acted under it, and therefore it ought not to be repealed for 1885, and if not for 1885, then we have ten years in which to repeal it.

Mr. MANDERSON. I desire simply to say in response to the inquiry of the Senator from Rhode Island, who, as I understand him, desired to know if the States had taken steps under this law, that the State of Nebraska has passed the necessary act to take a census for 1885 and I understand the officials, the census-takers, have been appointed under that law.

Mr. ALLISON. Iowa has also.

Mr. MANDERSON. The Senator from Iowa informs me that the State of Iowa has passed similar legislation and has taken steps to take a census in 1885.

Mr. MORRILL. And New Hampshire and New York also.

Mr. MANDERSON. There are four States which have complied with this provision. I hope the recommendation of the committee will be sustained.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PLATT in the chair). The question is on the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations to strike out the clause which has been read.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in the appropriation for the Rock Island arsenal, in line 1596, to increase the item of appropriation "for armory-shop K, an iron-finish shop," from $50,000 to $60,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 1601, to increase the appropriation "for commencing and completing fire-proof stone building for offices for both the armory and arsenal" from $30,000 to $35,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 1602, to insert:

For erecting lumber storehouse, $14,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out the clause from line 1666 to line 1673, inclusive, as follows:

That the Secretary of War is authorized and directed to sell at public auction, after due advertisement, and at prices not less than those fixed by the board of appraisers in each case, the following arsenals, namely: Allegheny arsenal, Pennsylvania; Augusta arsenal, Georgia; Indianapolis arsenal, Indiana; and Kennebec arsenal, Maine; and the money so received, after paying the necessary expenses of sale, shall be covered into the Treasury.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the appropriations for "buildings and grounds in and around Washington," in line 1695, before the word "repair," to insert "construction and;" so as to make the clause read:

For construction and repair of iron fences, $500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out the clause from line 1714 to line 1718, inclusive, as follows:

That the officer in charge of public buildings and grounds may, on the approval of the Secretary of War, cause to be removed the iron fences surrounding the reservations on Pennsylvania avenue between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 1760, after the words "Washington Monument," to strike out:

For completion of interior stairways and platforms, $25,000; insertion of presentation blocks, $5,000; cementing interior walls, $2,000; paving the floor and covering drum-pits, $2,000; closures of doorways and passages, $5,000—in all, $40,000—to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

For completion of the Washington Monument, namely: For iron work of stairs and platforms and elevator fronts, engine-house and approaches, insertion of presentation blocks, cementing interior walls, paving floor and covering drum-pit, closures of doorways, doors, and passages, change in elevator-car and machinery, new boiler-house and boiler, office expenses, including rent of necessary office-rooms, and for each and every purpose connected with the completion of the monument, $75,000, to be expended under the direction of the joint commission created by the act of August 2, 1876.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 1779, after the words "Yorktown monument," to strike out—

That not exceeding $5,000 of the unexpended balance of the appropriation for the erection of the Yorktown monument may be expended, under the direction of the Secretary of War, for the erection of an iron railing around said monument.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

For the care and protection of the Yorktown monument, $2,500, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the appropriations for "Army and Navy hospital, Hot Springs, Ark.," in line 1797, to increase the appropriation "for completely furnishing the hospital, including furniture for rooms for patients (officers) and of wards for enlisted men, necessary bedding, hospital clothing, and miscellaneous articles," from $10,000 to $15,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the appropriations for "military posts," in line 1802, after the word "dollars," to strike out:

Fifteen thousand dollars of which sum may be used for the purchase of a site near Atlanta, Ga., for the erection thereon of a ten-company post.

So as to make the clause read:

For the construction of buildings at and the enlargement of such military posts as in the judgment of the Secretary of War may be necessary, $165,000.

Mr. BROWN. Mr. President, I trust the motion to strike out will not prevail in that case. The object of the appropriation of $15,000 is the purchase of a site for military barracks at or near Atlanta, Ga. While General Sherman was General of the Army he strongly recommended the permanent establishment of barracks at Atlanta. The present Secretary of War, Mr. Lincoln, also recommends it. Soon after the war there were military barracks established there which were known as the McPherson barracks, which were upon lands leased by the Government from a man named Alexander. The barracks were built up and were very comfortable. At the end of the lease, however, there being some doubts about the title of the land upon which they were located, there being a disagreement between the land-owner and the Government, the barracks were abandoned; but since that time General Sherman has still insisted that for strategic purposes as well as on account of the health of the place barracks ought to be established there.

As the appropriation now stands there will be no chance for the expenditure of any portion of the money at the military post at Atlanta for the reason that it confines the appropriation to the construction of buildings or the enlargement of a military post. The object here, the lease having expired and the old barracks having been given up, is to purchase a proper site for the location of the barracks that they may be built upon it. Only the small sum of $15,000 is considered necessary for that purpose.

I may remark in this connection that there are troops kept at either Charleston or New Orleans every winter; and on account of the healthfulness of Atlanta they are transferred to Atlanta in the summer season. For the last three summers they have been kept near Atlanta in their tents, there being no other provision made for them. The War Department thinking that the proper location for them, has transferred them there even without any buildings, and has kept them there during each of the last three summers.

I do not know upon what ground it is that the committee propose to strike out the appropriation, but I trust it will not be done.

If there is further objection to retaining the clause I shall ask leave to have read a letter of General Sherman, and also a letter of the Secretary of War, Mr. Lincoln, on the subject.

Mr. ALLISON. The provision which the committee recommend to be stricken out is a provision which would involve the Government in a very large expenditure of money at Atlanta, Ga., within the heart of the Union. Our posts are now on the frontier. The expenditures for the construction of permanent posts are almost wholly, in fact I believe wholly, in that region, and the committee did not believe that it was a wise thing now to enter upon the construction of expensive permanent posts in the interior of our country. The same reason which I think substantially would apply to Atlanta, Ga., would apply to other strategic points on the Atlantic coast.

Mr. COLQUITT. Mr. President, I could hardly catch the remarks made by my friend from Iowa; but, if I understood him correctly, I think there can be a very sufficient answer made to his suggestion. The military officers who have control and jurisdiction of this question advise that these barracks should be built. They do so as a question of humanity, because they are intended to preserve the life and the health of the troops, and also because this is an important strategic point. They, themselves, are the best judges as to whether it is well located or not in that city. The troops are placed there summer after summer with a view to avoid malaria by reason of the latitude in which the barracks are placed. It is purely a question as to whether they shall be made comfortable by a proper building, or whether they shall be exposed to all the vicissitudes of the weather by living in tents. That is the only question which is involved.

Mr. BROWN. Before the amendment is voted upon, I should like to have read the letter of General Sherman, and also the letter of Mr. Lincoln, the Secretary of War, on this question. I ask for the reading of General Sherman's letter.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The letter will be read, if there be no objection.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

I also inclose you an extract of an inspection report I made to the Secretary of War (McCrory) February 5, 1879, in which I expressed my judgment of the importance of the military authorities maintaining possession of this property for sanitary and strategic reasons. I am of the same mind still, and since the Eighteenth Infantry has been sent to Montana have broken up the garrisons at Charleston and Savannah and transferred them to McPherson barracks, which is now the headquarters of the Fifth United States Artillery.

I do not regard the rental of $4,000 and taxes as excessive, but still prefer that the United States should buy outright the title, providing it can be bought at a fair market price.

Assuming $4,500 as the annual rent, and capitalizing at 7 per cent., would give $65,000 as the value of the ground. I think a thousand dollars per acre would be a fair price, or say in round figures, $50,000.

If the lessor, Thomas Alexander, can make a good title to the satisfaction of the Attorney-General, and if the State of Georgia will relinquish jurisdiction as is required by existing laws, I surely will recommend that the United States purchase the site of the ground in Atlanta known as McPherson barracks.

You may construe this letter as official if you have occasion to make such use of it.

I am, with respect, your friend and servant,

W. T. SHERMAN, General.

Mr. BROWN. Now I ask to have read an extract from the report of General Sherman to the Secretary of War on the same question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report will be read, if there be no objection.

Mr. ALLISON. What is the date of the letter just read?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is dated January 16, 1880.

Mr. ALLISON. Five years ago.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

And if the ground on which McPherson barracks stand were the property of the United States, I would advise the retention thereof in this regiment for reasons similar to those which apply to the Saint Paul, Omaha and Leavenworth, but unfortunately the ground, some fifty acres, is private property, leased for a term of years which has expired, and now it is retained from year to year at a rental of $4,000. High, healthy, and admirably placed, the buildings are numerous, well designed, and seemingly well built on brick foundations, and would with care and ordinary repair last twenty-five years. They were built for and are ample for a whole regiment.

Atlanta is geographically so placed that this regiment could reach Wilmington, N. C., Charleston, Savannah, Tallahassee, Pensacola, Mobile, New Orleans, or Nashville by rail in twenty-four hours. Even if we must use this regiment of infantry in the Indian country this year, I think it will be good military policy to retain the barracks, subject to the rental of $4,000 for the headquarters and the greater part of the Fifth Artillery, leaving mere fort-keepers on the coast, ready to re-enforce them on the shortest notice. Most of our Gulf posts and south Atlantic posts are subject to yellow fever, and Atlanta is the surest and easiest place of refuge.

With great respect, yours, truly,

W. T. SHERMAN, General.

Mr. BROWN. The honorable chairman of the committee seems to object to the date of the letter of General Sherman.

Mr. ALLISON. No, I do not object to it; I merely inquired as to the date.

Mr. BROWN. He made a note of it at least, that it has been some years ago. I now desire to have read a letter from the Secretary of War dated December 9, 1884, since the present session of Congress convened.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GARLAND in the chair). The Secretary will read the letter.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington City, December 9, 1884.

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 2d instant, asking to be informed of the present state of the matter of establishing a military post at Atlanta, Ga., and what are the prospects of the same.

In reply, I have the honor to advise you that although this Department has desired to establish a military post at that point, especially for sanitary reasons, no direct provision has been made therefor. By the act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses, approved July 7, 1884, there was appropriated the sum of $200,000 "for the construction of buildings at, and the enlargement of such military posts as in the judgment of the Secretary of War may be necessary." It will be observed that this appropriation makes no provision for the purchase of land, and gives no authority for doing so out of the appropriation. Communications have been received at this Department offering to sell land for this purpose, but it has not been possible to give any consideration to them by reason of this lack of authority to complete the matter. Of the appropriation of $200,000 there remains $100,000 still available for the purposes expressed in the act.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ROBERT T. LINCOLN,
Secretary of War.

Hon. N. J. HAMMOND, M. C., Washington, D. C.

Mr. BROWN. It will be observed that the Secretary of War favors this location on account of sanitary and other reasons that he mentions.

but can not construct the buildings there for the reason that the language of the act precludes that use of the appropriation, the appropriation being for the construction of buildings and the enlargement of military posts, and there being in fact no buildings there and no military post; the old post that was held under the lease has been given up; the Government owning none there, the general appropriation does not cover the case.

Last year Atlanta was stricken out of the sundry civil appropriation bill on the ground that the Secretary of War would be left to his discretion in the matter, but it turns out that under the construction of the statute he had no such discretion, and can not have until some part of the fund is set aside specifically for the use of purchasing the location.

The honorable chairman of the committee refers to the fact that the Indian wars are conducted upon the frontier. That is true; but I believe we might say with great propriety that the Indian wars are about at an end. It is not at all probable that the Government of the United States will in the future have much trouble with Indian wars. The Indians are generally located upon reservations; they are under control; there is some system about their management, and we shall have little more trouble there.

It is much more likely that our next uses for the military may be somewhere in the reach of the coast of our own country, and it is therefore judicious I think on the part of the military authorities—at least they practice it—to keep some of the troops every year along upon the Southern coast, where they would be nearer at hand in case of an emergency of the character to which I allude. But whenever the summer season comes, on account of the unhealthfulness of the climate on the coast, they at once transfer the troops to Atlanta; they are thrown into camp there without buildings, and remain in that condition.

Under these circumstances, as the General of the Army lately in command, and the Secretary of War at the present session of Congress recommend an appropriation of this character, and this $15,000 is all that is asked to purchase the site, I trust there will not be further opposition to it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the recommendation of the Committee on Appropriations that the clause be stricken out.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and being taken, resulted—yeas 13, nays 33; as follows:

YEAS—13.
Allison,	Garland,	Miller of N. Y.,	Sherman.
Beck,	Harrison,	Mitchell,

So the amendment was rejected.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in the appropriation for the "Signal Service," in line 1811, after the word "agriculture," to strike out "of" and insert "throughout;" so as to make the clause read:

For the observation and report of storms: For expenses of the meteorological observation and report of storms by telegraph and signal, or otherwise announcing the probable approach and force of storms, for the benefit of the commerce and agriculture throughout the United States, as follows, &c.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 1815, after the word "reports," to strike out "and messages over commercial lines, and for the rent of leased lines;" and in line 1817, before the word "thousand," to strike out "thirty-six" and insert "forty;" so as to make the clause read:

For telegraphic reports, $140,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was before the word "thousand," in line 1828, to strike out "five" and insert "seven;" so as to make the clause read:

For continuing the connections of signal stations at life-saving stations and light-houses, including services of operators, repairmen, materials (such as cable, wire, poles, and insulators), and general services connected therewith, $7,500: Provided, That such connections, in the opinion of the Superintendent of the Life-Saving Service and the Light-House Board, shall be deemed necessary.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 1838, before the word "thousand," to strike out "forty" and insert "forty-three;" so as to make the clause read:

For rent, hire of civilian employes, furniture, light, heating supplies, stationery, ice, repairs, and other expenses of offices maintained for public use in cities and ports receiving reports, outside of Washington, D. C., $43,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 1848, after the words "telegraph lines," to strike out "including rents of offices, salaries of civilian operators and repair-men, lights, supplies, and general repairs;" so as to make the clause read:

For maintenance and repair of military-telegraph lines, $24,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 1869, after the word "exceed," to strike out "four" and insert "five;" and in line 1871, after the word "of," to strike out "three officers" and insert "one officer lately;" so as to read:

And the Secretary of War is authorized, in his discretion, to detail for the service in the Signal Corps not to exceed five commissioned officers, exclusive of the second lieutenants of the Signal Corps authorized by law, and of one officer lately serving in the Arctic seas.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON subsequently said: I ask unanimous consent to go back to line 1871, in order to make a little correction that I intended to make at the moment, but the Chief Clerk, much to my gratification, reads rapidly, and I escaped it. I ask to insert in that line "two officers" instead of "one officer;" so as to read:

And of two officers lately serving in the Arctic seas.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARRIS in the chair). If there be no objection the amendment suggested by the Senator from Iowa will be entertained at this time, and that modification will be made. The Chair hears no objection, and the clause is so modified.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in the clause making appropriations for "regular supplies" for the Signal Service, after the word "cents," in line 1918, to strike out the following clause:

And hereafter there shall not be allowed for forage, straw, or shoeing for any greater number of horses and mules in the Signal Service than is herein provided for.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 1945, after the word "Signal Corps," to strike out "84,108" and insert "93,960;" and after the word "all," at the end of line 1948, to strike out "85,608" and insert "95,460;" so as to make the clause read:

Barracks and quarters: For commutation of quarters to enlisted men of the Signal Corps, $93,960; work and supplies at Fort Myer, Virginia, $1,500; in all $95,460.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 1972, to insert:

That the joint commission, consisting of three Senators and three Representatives, to consider the present organizations of the Signal Service, Geological Survey, Coast and Geodetic Survey, and the Hydrographic Office of the Navy Department, provided for in the act entitled "An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government," &c., approved July 7, 1864, be, and the same is hereby, continued, with power to sit during the recess of Congress in the city of Washington; and the said commission shall report to their respective Houses on or before the third Monday in December, 1885, or as soon thereafter as may be, by bill or otherwise; and the present President pro tempore of the Senate and Speaker of the House of Representatives shall appoint respectively a Senator and Representative to take the places on said commission of the Senator and Representative whose terms of office expire with the present Congress.

The amendment was agreed to.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. O. L. PRUDEN, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had on this day approved and signed the act (S. 1609) to provide for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building thereon at Detroit, Mich.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had concurred in some and non-concurring in other amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8239) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives concurring in some and non-concurring in other amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8239) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments in which the House has not concurred, and ask a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. HALE, Mr. PLUMB, and Mr. BECK were appointed.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER IMPROVEMENTS.

Mr. VAN WYCK submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Improvement of the Mississippi River be directed to prepare a detailed statement of the expenses of the improvements of the Mississippi River and its tributaries with a view to ascertain the amounts expended for purpose of commerce, the amount expended to protect the lands adjoining from the ravages of the rivers, to report the same to the Senate at the December session of Congress, and be authorized for that purpose to employ a clerk at the usual compensation until December 1, 1885, to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate.

SARAH B. JACKSON—RATES OF PENSION.

Mr. VAN WYCK submitted the following resolution; which was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary be directed to request the House of Representatives to return to the Senate the bill (H. R. 3800) for the relief Sarah B. Jackson.

EVENING SESSION.

Mr. ALLISON. I wish to state that in the judgment of the Committee on Appropriations a night session this evening will be desirable. I move that the Senate take a recess from 6 o'clock until 8 o'clock. I should like to finish the sundry civil appropriation bill before the recess, if possible.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARRIS in the chair). The Senator from Iowa moves that the Senate take a recess this evening from 6 to 8 o'clock.

The motion was agreed to.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Mr. CONGER. I ask permission to make a report from the Committee on Commerce.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Hearing none, the report will be received.

Mr. CONGER. I am instructed by the Committee on Commerce, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8280) making appropriations for the preservation and continuation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes, to report it with sundry amendments.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill will be printed and go to the Calendar.

Mr. CONGER. I ask, in order that it may be before the Senate, that the Chair will instruct the clerks to have the bill printed and returned to the Senate as soon as possible.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8256) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, under the head of "miscellaneous objects," in line 2018, after the word "monument," to insert "in lieu of headstones;" so as to make the clause read:

For erecting a monument, in lieu of headstones, at Baxter Springs, Kans., to the memory of Union soldiers killed at or near that place on the 6th day of October, 1863, $4,000, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 2027, before the word "thousand," to strike out "one hundred and sixty" and insert "seventy-five;" and after the word "dollars," in line 2028, to insert:

Provided, That no part of this sum shall be paid until a complete title is vested in the United States; and the full amount of said sum shall be paid directly to the owners of the property.

So as to make the clause read:

To enable the Secretary of War to acquire good and valid title for the United States to the Fort Brown reservation, Texas, and to pay and extinguish all claims for the use and occupancy of said reservation by the United States, the sum of $75,000: Provided, That no part of this sum shall be paid until a complete title is vested in the United States; and the full amount of said sum shall be paid directly to the owners of the property.

Mr. COKE. Mr. President, I hope the amendment of the committee will not be concurred in. I make no objection to the proviso. I simply object to striking out $160,000 and inserting in lieu thereof $75,000.

The object of this appropriation is to enable the Secretary of War to acquire title to the Fort Brown reservation at Brownsville, on the Rio Grande, in Texas. In 1846 the Government of the United States took possession of three hundred and fifty-eight acres of land at that point, having a frontage on the Rio Grande River of a mile and a half, comprising a part of and adjoining the city of Brownsville, a city of 7,000 or 8,000 inhabitants. The Government has held and occupied that land for now nearly forty years, has never paid one dollar of rent for it, and the owners of the land are paying to the State of Texas, as I perceive from papers submitted to the Committee on Appropriations, some years as high as $1,000 a year taxes upon it.

There have been repeated efforts made here to get something for this land by the owners. These efforts have always failed.

In 1853 an officer of the United States Army appeared by petition in the district court of the county of Cameron, of which Brownsville is the county seat, and instituted proceedings for the condemnation of this land in order that the Government of the United States might acquire it. Proceedings were had, and a verdict of the jury was rendered assessing the value of the land. I will read the verdict:

We, the jury, assess the value of the lands mentioned in said application at $50,000.

This was in 1853. Subsequently a judgment was rendered by the district court of Cameron County, from which I will read:

And it is further ordered, adjudged, and decreed that upon the payment by the United States of the said sum aforesaid of $50,000, together with the interest thereon, from said 29th day of November, 1853, at and after the usual lawful rate of 8 per cent. per annum, into the First National Bank of the city of Galveston, to be disposed of as hereinafter provided, the whole right, title, and interest of both the said city of Brownsville and of the said Marie Josefa Cavazos, deceased, and also of the said Pedro G. Cavazos, her successor in interest in and to the said lands and premises, shall vest forever in the United States of America for the uses and purposes as prescribed and provided in and by the statute aforesaid.

Under this decree, a portion of which I have read, if you compute the interest at 8 per cent., the legal rate of Texas, you will see that the amount appropriated by the bill is insufficient to pay it. The House provides $160,000 as payment for the amount. It is simply a computation of the interest with a liberal deduction upon the amount of the judgment and decree of the court. This judgment and decree is alleged to have been irregular in some respects. The fact that the jury assessed the land at $50,000 and that the assessment was a fair and reasonable one I do not think is controverted by anybody. It gives us the best and most reliable basis we could possibly have for arriving at the value of the land which the Government is bound to have for military and strategic purposes on that border.

The Quartermaster-General, to whom a letter was addressed by the Secretary of War, makes this reply:

Respectfully returned to the honorable the Secretary of War, with the report, as follows:

"In the opinion of the Quartermaster-General the rental value of the site of Fort Brown from 1846 to 1866 was at least equal to $2,500 per annum, which, for twenty years, makes a sum of $50,000. There is no question in his mind that from 1866 to date the value of the rental, considered relatively to prices paid for similar property in the State of Texas, was and is at least $3,600 per annum, which, for eighteen years, gives a sum of $64,800, or a total sum of $114,800."

In addition to that is the $50,000 of assessed value for the title.

The difference between this calculation and the sum named in the bill, namely, $31,200, is a fair, equitable amount to offset deferred payment and the natural differences of opinion that arise in determining values of this land. It was alleged in 1873 and 1874 that the property was taxed at or about $1,000 per annum.

That is, by the State of Texas.

Estimates of the value of this site have varied from $25,000 to $75,000.

Mr. ALLISON. Why does the Senator call it a jury?

Mr. COKE. What is the question asked by the Senator?

Mr. ALLISON. Does the Senator from Texas now allude to the appraisal made in 1853?

Mr. COKE. I allude to the appraisal made in 1853.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask the Senator why he calls that a jury?

Mr. COKE. I call it the verdict of a jury because I have a printed record here, and the verdict is:

We, the jury, assess the value of the lands mentioned in said application at $50,000.

E. B. KATMAN, Foreman.

Mr. ALLISON. What is the date of that?

Mr. COKE. That was in 1853. I show you here, in addition to the computation of the Quartermaster-General for rental, $50,000 for the title assessed by a jury, which has never been paid, which would make $164,000; and if you discard the rental and claim title under the decree of the court, I show you that 8 per cent. interest upon the amount will come to more than the amount in the bill.

The bill, after the gravest and most deliberate consideration in the other House, is presented here with $160,000 as the amount which ought to be paid, and I submit to the Senate that the Government of the United States ought to pay it. The Government has had possession of the land since 1846, has never paid one dollar of rent, has never paid one dollar of interest, and year after year when the owners of the land appear here and ask for relief, if they get it in the other House it has been stricken down in this body. It was so at the last session of the Senate, when there was debate upon this very item and it was stricken out. The applicant comes here again, armed with a certificate from the Quartermaster-General, who approves the amount named in the bill as just, and states that there has been a liberal deduction made from it, and that the balance should be paid.

I submit that the amendment of the committee should not prevail, and that the sum of $160,000 should be paid for the land. I make no objection to the remainder of the amendment contained in the proviso, that is—

That no part of this sum shall be paid until a complete title is vested in the United States; and the full amount of said sum shall be paid directly to the owners of the property.

I make no objection to that; I desire the United States Government to get a clear title; but I do submit that when the Government takes three hundred and fifty-eight acres of land belonging to a citizen, and holds it from 1846 until now, the Government ought to pay for it. The citizen can not sue the Government. He can not dispossess the Government. He can not sell to another. He is bound to submit to the Government. The Government has never claimed to own this land. The title of the applicant for relief is admitted to be good. The Senate can not resist the justice and equity of this appropriation, indorsed as it has been by the House.

Mr. MAXEY. Mr. President, this same item was before the Senate once before, and I presented my views in regard to it. If the Senate could now, as ordinarily, listen attentively to a plain statement of the facts there could be no question as to the result.

The importance of Brownsville as a strategic point was discovered by General Taylor in 1846. He established what is known as Fort Brown, which was besieged from Matamoras in 1846, and held it. From 1846 to the present hour that has been used and occupied as a fort by the United States every year with the exception of the four years during the late war. There has been no general of the United States Army in the command of the Department of Texas who has not felt that the holding of Fort Brown was an essential point in the line of the Rio Grande frontier defense.

The United States have held that land from that day to the present and have never paid any rent upon it. They have put, I will venture to say, at the lowest (the Quartermaster-General puts it much higher) a half-million dollars of improvements upon it. The United States have no title to that property. They have expended that money in the form of improvements. Those improvements belong, under every law ever written upon the statute-book, to the owner of the soil. Here the proposition is to settle upon the basis of $160,000, which not only covers the value of the property itself, but it covers all the rental from its first occupation by the United States to the present time.

I apprehend that the reason why the title was not first obtained before these great improvements were placed there was because there was a suit pending involving, if I remember correctly, eleven leagues of land embracing these three hundred and fifty-eight acres. The suit was brought in the United States circuit court, the case of Trevino vs. Cavazos, which was appealed, and was decided after a most elaborate argument by the Supreme Court of the United States, whereby the title was affirmed. That was since the war. It was only after that time that the United States could have obtained a title from anybody.

Every year from that time on the attempt has been made to settle this thing, and there has been no settlement for some reason unknown to me. Although the House have regularly sent this item up, we meet with disturbance in the subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations, and it is stricken out or the amount reduced. If there is an item in the bill which should be allowed, this is the item, and I only ask that the Senate will consider what has been said in regard to it, believing as I do that if the Appropriations Committee understood it as my colleague understands it, as I understand it, as the member from Texas in the Appropriations Committee of the House understood it, Judge HANCOCK, who urged it there, there would be no difficulty whatever in settling this question.

I submit the question in the hope that the Senate will not concur with the action of the Committee on Appropriations. My point, as was made by my colleague, advises only the non-concurrence in the striking out of $160,000 and the insertion of $75,000. So far as the proviso is concerned, that no part of this sum shall be paid until the complete title is vested in the United States, I say that is right; it ought to be there. So far as the other part of the proviso is concerned, that the full amount of said sum shall be paid directly to the owners of the property, I believe that to be right.

I think the secret of all this opposition is that the opinion of the committee is that perhaps there is some great scheme about this matter in the hands of parties who have been urging it. If the money shall be paid directly to the owners of the property, the question will be settled, and that is all that I want done. I want the money paid to the owners, whoever they are. I do not know who they are. I want it paid to those, whoever they are, and I do not want any dollar of it paid until the title is first completely and fully vested in the United States.

Mr. ALLISON. After what has been said by the two Senators from Texas, I shall occupy only a moment. As the Senators from Texas say, this is an old matter. In the first place, it has no business on this bill. It is purely a private claim, and it is a private claim that so far as I know has never been considered by any of the standing committees of this body. If I am mistaken in that statement, I hope the Senators from Texas will correct me.

Mr. MAXEY. It has never been objected to on that ground. On the contrary, if the position of the Senator from Iowa is a tenable one for an argument, the whole clause should be stricken out, but the committee recognize the validity and propriety of it by simply reducing the amount.

Mr. ALLISON. I have stated the first objection I have to this matter, that it ought to be considered by the proper committee of the Senate and by the proper committee of the House of Representatives, which is the Committee on Military Affairs.

In 1846, as I understand, the Army on its way home from Mexico established a post at what is now the city of Brownsville, Tex. At that time there was no city there. There were perhaps fifty or one hundred people there. The Government of the United States established at that point for defensive purposes a military post, and it has held that post from that day until this. In 1853 the city of Brownsville, then having grown up under the shadow of this post, made claim to the ownership of this land and made a request, or at least General Van Vliet, who was then in the command there, an officer of the Army at that post, summoned a jury for the purpose of ascertaining the value at that time of these three hundred and fifty-eight acres. He had no authority to summon that jury.

No Secretary of War, no superior officer, required him to summon a jury for that purpose. The United States at that time had a proper right to make a claim to the ownership of this ground; but a jury was then summoned, and I believe that jury from the neighborhood of Brownsville did find that the United States ought to pay $50,000 for these three hundred and fifty-eight acres of land, and from that time until within two years there has not been a reason given why the United States should part with any of its money for this purpose. The title was in dispute absolutely from 1853 until 1879. Am I mistaken in the date, because I state it from memory?

Mr. COKE. I will state, if the Senator will permit me, that the judgment to which I referred him just now provides that the money shall be paid into court, to be held there to await the decision of the court as to the title, and the money shall be paid to whoever was found to own the lands.

Mr. ALLISON. The judgment of the jury, that is, a neighborhood jury of the city of Brownsville, provided that the money should be paid into the court by the United States. The United States never paid any money into court; there never was any pretense that it ought to pay any money into court, and in 1878 the heirs, whose names I have forgotten—

Mr. MAXEY. Trevino vs. Cavazos is the style of the case which was decided by the Supreme Court.

Mr. ALLISON. The heirs of the Cavazos estate were adjudicated to be the owners of this property in 1879. Then appeared this claim. Last year it was found upon the sundry civil appropriation bill in the form of an appropriation for rental $121,000 as it came to us from the House.

Mr. MAXEY. I will ask the Senator from Iowa if under every principle of a court of equity, the title being in dispute and a third party being the occupant, he would not have a right to have interpleaded and to have the fact determined as to whom he should pay the money; and if, after the title was determined, it was not the duty of the Government to pay whoever the title was proved to be in? I ask if the Government is estopped, if the Government is relieved from paying the rent because the title was in dispute? It belongs to whoever owns the title surely.

Mr. ALLISON. There never has been any proper adjudication of this question.

Mr. MAXEY. An appeal was taken to the Supreme Court of the United States and it was there decided.

Mr. ALLISON. It was decided as to whom the property belongs, but there never has been any adjudication as to how much rent should be paid or how much the Government of the United States should pay for the property.

What I object to is that this question comes in here from the House of Representatives this year on an appropriation bill for the purchase of the property at $160,000, when last year it came in the same appropriation bill for rent at $121,000. If the Government of the United States is under obligation to pay anybody for the land, for the use of it from 1846 until 1885, let the proper committees of the Senate and House of Representatives take up that question and examine it with care and scrutinize every question involved, and see to it that the Government of the United States has a proper title to the property, and also investigate as to the question whether it is a wise thing for the Government to have this property at all, whether we should not abandon the property rather than pay the amount claimed for it.

Mr. COKE. Let me suggest to the Senator that I make no objection to the proviso put upon the clause by the Senate committee, which provides that none of the money shall be paid until a perfect title is given to the Government.

Mr. ALLISON. I understand; but there is still a question beyond that. The United States has since 1846 made certain improvements upon the property. Now, it is an open question whether the Government of the United States should buy the property at all, or whether it should not abandon it to its uses rather than pay even the $75,000 which is proposed here to be paid. The Committee on Appropriations were led to believe by the investigation they made last year that if we had appropriated $75,000 in the bill of last year we could have then secured an absolute title to the property, although, of course, there was no formal statement made by the owners of the property that they would take $75,000 for it. Now it has grown to $160,000 in a single year, and comes here again upon an appropriation bill.

I submit to the Senators from Texas and to the owners of this property that, having waited from 1846 to 1885, they can wait one year longer until the Government of the United States, through its proper officers and through the proper committee of this body and of the House of Representatives, can have an investigation of all the facts connected with this case, and then pay for it.

But the Committee on Appropriations were willing, in order that the question might be finally settled and disposed of, to pay these people what they have reason to believe they were willing to accept only a year ago, $75,000, for all the rental and for every claim in connection with this property. I submit to the Senate that the proposition to pay $160,000 for the property, with no further information than we now have respecting it, would be an unjust payment from the Government of the United States to the persons who have been claiming this property from 1853 until 1879.

Mr. COKE. Mr. President, I have to say in reply to the Senator from Iowa that he makes precisely the proposition now that was made a year ago when this same question was up, that is, to wait another year.

Mr. ALLISON. The Senator will bear in mind that last year we struck the whole provision out.

Mr. COKE. I know it was stricken out, but it was discussed here, and it was said that the Government of the United States ought not to pay a rent, but should own the land. The facts are that the Government has this land in possession, has had it in possession since 1846; that there are three hundred and fifty-eight acres of it, that it fronts the Rio Grande for a mile and a half adjoining a flourishing and prosperous city of 7,000 or 8,000 inhabitants, and that the Government has never paid one dollar of rent nor one dollar of consideration for the possession and use and enjoyment of it. There never has been any pretense that the Government owned the land.

The only reason why payment for it has not been sought earlier was because the land has been in litigation, and the Government said to the litigating parties, "Whenever you settle your lawsuit over the land we will take it at a fair price." It is a fact that in 1853 General Van Vliet, an Army officer stationed at Brownsville, went into the district court of Cameron County on his petition asking for a condemnation of the land to the use of the Government of the United States. The question of its value was submitted to a jury. The jury assessed it at $50,000 in 1853, and the court said that 8 per cent. interest must be paid upon the money until it was paid into a bank in Galveston. Now, if you assess interest upon the $50,000 from 1853 to this time it exceeds the amount named in the bill. If, however, you say that no title was vested then, and if you pay rent, according to the statement of the Quartermaster-General of the Army the rental will exceed the amount in the bill. I care not which horn of the dilemma you take, the bill is a just one, and unless the Government of the United States proposes to repudiate an honest debt and to take with a strong hand property belonging to citizens the clause should be agreed to as it passed the House, and those people should be paid for the land.

The question about referring this matter to another committee is an after-thought of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations. He struck out $160,000 and inserted $75,000 and added a proviso. Does not this show that the committee took jurisdiction over it and considered it? If the committee can consider it, can take jurisdiction over it for the purpose of paying $75,000, ought not the same jurisdiction to enable the committee to do full justice if the land is worth $160,000 and allow the whole amount?

I hope that the Senate will not permit the rights of the owners of this land any longer to be deferred, but will reject the amendment and cause the Government of the United States in good faith to pay those people for that which it has enjoyed the exclusive possession of since 1846 and upon which it has placed more than half a million dollars' worth of improvements.

Mr. MAXEY. The proposition of the Senator from Iowa in regard to the bill is very heroic, but not very well bottomed in judgment, in my opinion. He says it would be better for the Government to abandon the post. There never has been a general of the Army who has occupied it, never a department commander of Texas who has not regarded it not only as an important point but as a supply depot for the Rio Grande frontier. It faces the city of Matamoros, by far the most important city on the Lower Rio Grande in Mexico. It was regarded from the beginning by General Taylor as a strategic position, and has been held so from that time to the present.

I ask if there is any honesty in holding a man's property against his consent without paying rent? The Government has never paid a dollar of rent from the time it first occupied it to the present. It holds it by the strong hand. The Government has put half a million dollars of improvements on that land, and yet the proposition is made by a committee charged with managing the money of this country to throw away that half million dollars, to throw away a strategic position, because forsooth the committee is unwilling to agree with the House.

The chairman says it ought to have been submitted to some committee of the House for investigation. How do you know that it has not been so submitted? It came here from the House of Representatives in due form. How do you know the manner in which the provision got on the bill in the House? It is here. It comes to us regularly, it is just, and the Government will get at least a half million dollars more than the value of the property for the $160,000. The title is not in the United States; it never has been in the United States. If there was any way whatever of bringing an action of ejectment against the United States, as there would be against a private citizen, all the fixed and permanent improvements built by the United States would pass along with the soil, the improvements would go with the soil; but the United States occupies this position: "You can not sue me; I have got your land; I shall not pay you any rent; I shall keep your land." That is the position. We ask for a settlement. The proposition made by the House is perfectly fair. Not a reason has been given by the Senator in charge of the bill why the position of the House is not entirely fair, and I ask the Senate to non-concur in the action of the committee.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the recommendation of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. ALLISON. I will modify the amendment of the committee. I do not want, even by implication, to say that we are obliged to pay $75,000. In line 2028, after the word "of," in the proviso recommended by the committee, I move to strike out "this sum" and insert "the purchase-money;" and in line 2030, to strike out "said sum" and insert "the purchase-money;" so as to read:

Provided, That no part of the purchase-money shall be paid until a complete title is vested in the United States; and the full amount of the purchase-money shall be paid directly to the owners of the property.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment to the amendment will be agreed to if there be no objection. The question now is on the first amendment of the Committee on Appropriations, in line 2027, striking out "$160,000" and inserting "$75,000."

The question being put, there were on a division—yeas 12, nays 17; no quorum voting.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and being taken, resulted—yeas 15, nays 24; as follows:

So the amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on inserting the proviso.

The Secretary read the proviso from line 2028 to line 2031, inclusive, as follows:

Provided, That no part of this sum shall be paid until a complete title is vested in the United States, and the full amount of said sum shall be paid directly to the owners of the property.

Mr. ALLISON. I desire to ask unanimous consent to modify the amendment—and I suppose the Senator from Texas will not object to this modification—so that it will read:

Provided, That no part of this sum shall be paid until a complete title is vested in the United States, and the full amount of the price, including all claims for rents, shall be paid directly to the owners of the property.

What I desire is to cover not only the purchase-money for the property, but also the arrears of rent. Therefore I insert after the words "amount of" the words "the price, including rent."

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. It is proposed to amend the proviso so as to make it read:

Provided, That no part of this sum shall be paid until a complete title is vested in the United States; and the full amount of the price, including rent, shall be paid directly to the owners of the property.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to the modification? The Chair hears none. The question is on the amendment as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

Mr. VAN WYCK. I call the attention of the committee to the provision at the top of page 83 appropriating $5,000 to Mrs. Mary T. Barnes, widow of the late Surg. Gen. Joseph K. Barnes, "for especial and meritorious services rendered by her husband in the last illness of President Garfield."

I supposed all the expenditures for attendance on President Garfield were provided for in 1882, when some $57,000, I think, was appropriated to cover all the expenses and services in connection with that matter. I remember very well that when the proposition was made here to increase the pension of the widow of Surgeon-General Barnes from $30 to $50 a month, one of the reasons urged why that increase should be made was on account of the services of her husband in attending upon General Garfield; and now we find an item placed in this bill, after all that has been done, of $5,000 to be paid to the widow of General Barnes. I call the attention of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations to that item.

Mr. RIDDLEBERGER. Will the Senator permit me to ask him whether it is not a fact that Surgeon-General Barnes refused to accept any compensation because he was a public officer? Is not that the fact?

Mr. VAN WYCK. I do not know whether he refused to accept it or whether he was unable to receive anything because he was in the employ of the Government in its highest medical position as Surgeon-General of the Army. I do not know whether it was delicacy on the part of General Barnes or whether it was impossible for him to obtain from the Government anything more than the compensation he was receiving. At all events, the fact is that $57,000 were appropriated in 1882 to cover all the expenses attending service upon General Garfield and his burial. It was even provided that extra compensation might be given not to exceed three months' pay to any employé who had been especially faithful to the dying President. Now, after that whole matter was settled in 1882, and when, as I say, since that time Mrs. Barnes has had her pension increased from $30 to $50, and one of the reasons alleged was that her husband had rendered efficient service in attendance on General Garfield, the Appropriations Committee ask us to appropriate $5,000 to Mrs. Barnes. It at least, I think, requires a little explanation. I move that that item be stricken out.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will not be in order to make that motion until the amendments of the Committee on Appropriations are gone through with. The reading of the bill will proceed.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in line 2056, after the words "Garfield Hospital," to strike out:

For the support and medical treatment of thirty-seven transient paupers, medical and surgical patients, in the city of Washington, under a contract to be made with the Garfield Hospital by the Surgeon-General of the Army, $7,500.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

For maintenance, to enable it to provide medical and surgical treatment to transient persons unable to pay therefor, $7,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the clause making appropriations "for the publication of the Official Records of the War of the Rebellion, both of the Union and confederate armies," after the word "dollars," in line 2086, to insert the following proviso:

Provided, That the time during which said publication shall be subject to the order of Senators, Representatives, and Delegates shall be extended from July 1, 1885, to July 1, 1886.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 2090, to insert:

Fort Leavenworth military reservation: For the improvement of roads on the Fort Leavenworth military reservation, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War, $12,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 2094, to insert:

Quartermaster and commissary depot at Saint Paul, Minn.: For the completion of the public building for a quartermaster and commissary depot at Saint Paul, Minn., to be used as offices for officers of the Department of Dakota, and for heating the same, $30,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 2100, to insert:

For purchasing hospital and other records of the war pertaining to the New England Soldiers' Relief Association, $5,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 2103, to insert:

Sea-wall at Governor's Island, New York Harbor: For sea-wall around Governor's Island, $40,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 2106, to insert:

For the purpose of erecting a statue, with suitable emblematic devices thereon, as one of the public reservations in the city of Washington, to the memory of General La Fayette and his compatriots, $50,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 2110, to insert:

That the Secretary of War, the chairman of the Joint Committee on the Library, and the Architect of the Capitol are authorized to contract for and erect the said statue, and to designate a suitable public reservation in the city of Washington as the site for said statue.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the appropriations "under the Department of Justice," after line 2226, to insert:

Reform School, District of Columbia: For repairs to buildings, including new roof on main building and new piers in basement, $1,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had directed him to return to the Senate, agreeably to its request, the bill (H. R. 5800) for the relief of Sarah B. Jackson, with the Senate amendments thereto.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6658) to provide for the sale of the Sac and Fox Indian reservation in the States of Nebraska and Kansas, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House insisted upon its disagreement to certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8239) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes, agreed to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. SAMUEL J. RANDALL of Pennsylvania, Mr. WALDO HUTCHINS of New York, and Mr. JOHN D. LONG of Massachusetts managers at the conference on its part.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (S. 84) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to ascertain the amounts due to citizens of the United States for supplies furnished to the Sioux or Dakota Indians of Minnesota subsequent to June 1, 1861, and prior to the massacre of August, 1862, and providing for the payment thereof; and it was thereupon signed by the President pro tempore.

SAC AND FOX AND IOWA INDIAN RESERVATION.

Mr. DAWES. The Senator from Iowa yields to me to call up a conference report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On what bill?

Mr. DAWES. On House bill No. 6658, to provide for the sale of the Sac and Fox Indian reservation in the States of Nebraska and Kansas, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The message of the House is that it has concurred in the Senate amendments, which disposes of the bill without any report from the conferees. It supersedes a conference report.

AMENDMENT TO AN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. MORGAN submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and ordered to be printed.

SARAH B. JACKSON—RATES OF PENSION.

Mr. VAN WYCK. I wish to ask for a committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on House bill No. 5800, just returned from the House.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there unanimous consent that this bill from the House be now laid before the Senate?

Mr. ALLISON. I make no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate the bill (H. R. 5800) for the relief of Sarah B. Jackson. This bill passed the Senate with amendments, which have been sent to the House of Representatives, but are now returned pursuant to the request of the Senate.

Mr. VAN WYCK. I merely ask for a conference with the House on the amendments.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nebraska moves that the Senate request a conference with the House of Representatives on its amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. MITCHELL, Mr. VAN WYCK, and Mr. JACKSON were appointed.

COINAGE OF SILVER.

Mr. ALDRICH. I wish to be allowed to offer a joint resolution at this time.

By unanimous consent, leave was granted to introduce a joint resolution (S. R. 135) requesting the President to enter into negotiations with foreign powers to secure an agreement for the free coinage of silver; which was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate, &c., That the President of the United States is hereby requested to enter into negotiations with the States of the Latin Union, and such other foreign powers as he shall deem advisable, with the purpose of securing such treaties with them as shall bind the nations agreeing thereto to open their respective mints to the free coinage of silver with full legal-tender power, at such uniform ratio to gold as shall be agreed upon.

Mr. ALDRICH. I ask that the joint resolution go over until to-morrow when I shall call it up.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The joint resolution will lie on the table.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8256) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes.

The Secretary resumed the reading of the bill. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, to strike out the following clause from lines 2230 to 2232, inclusive:

Penitentiary for Utah Territory: For construction and completion of the penitentiary for Utah Territory, $50,000.

Mr. HARRISON. I desire to inquire of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations why that appropriation is proposed to be stricken out. I call the attention of the Senator from Iowa to the two appropriations for a penitentiary in Utah and Montana. I have myself no information as to the situation of Utah, but I have as to the situation in Montana, and I do not think the appropriation there ought to be stricken out.

Mr. ALLISON. I can furnish the Senator from Indiana with some information on both provisions; I do not mean new information, not information unknown to him. Last year we inserted in the civil sundry appropriation bill an appropriation of $26,000 to complete an addition to the penitentiary at Deer Lodge, in Montana.

Mr. HARRISON. We have not got to that yet. It is the Utah case that is before us now.

Mr. ALLISON. I understood the Senator to make inquiry about both.

Mr. HARRISON. I did about both.

Mr. ALLISON. There was a special provision in that law requiring this sum to complete the penitentiary in Montana. In Utah there is a provision here for a penitentiary to cost $50,000. There is nothing to support that except a simple estimate of the Treasury Department in the Book of Estimates. There were no papers, no statements that this was important at this immediate time; and inasmuch as there were a large number of amendments made by the Senate to this bill for important and necessary appropriations, we supposed that the people of Utah could get on for another year without a penitentiary.

Mr. HARRISON. I have no information about the situation in Utah as to their need of a penitentiary, and therefore I make no objection to that amendment being agreed to; but I desire to be heard upon the next one.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was to strike out the clause from lines 2233 to 2235, inclusive, as follows:

Penitentiary for Montana Territory: For completion of the penitentiary for Montana Territory, $25,000.

Mr. HARRISON. The Government made an appropriation some years ago for the construction of a penitentiary in Montana. Plans were furnished for the building, which consisted of a central building intended to be used chiefly for offices and two wings in which the cells were to be situated. The construction of this building was entered upon, and one of the wings was first constructed when the appropriation to which the Senator from Iowa refers of $25,000 in the last Congress to complete the building there was made. The question was presented to the governor of the Territory, through whom, and under whom, it was to be expended, as to how it could be expended. Of course it was practically impossible to go to work to construct the other wing, which would thus have left two isolated, unconnected wings of the penitentiary. So that money was expended in part in the construction of the central building, which was to connect the two wings, and I have seen a statement from the gentleman who was in charge of construction that they have out of that appropriation accumulated at the penitentiary a very large part of the material that will be necessary to complete the other wing; but the appropriation was not sufficient in carrying out the plan to construct the central part and also to provide the other wing.

Now the situation of things in the Territory as to the necessity for an enlargement of the penitentiary is represented to me by Hon. John Coburn, who is one of the justices of that Territory, to be as follows: He says that the penitentiary has only twenty-eight cells, and that there are more than one hundred and twenty prisoners, and that it was so overcrowded and the condition of the convicts such as to render the building unwholesome, and that the courts were compelled to make orders that the prisoners of the Territory, instead of being sent to the penitentiary, should be lodged in the county jails of the counties where they have been convicted.

There are but two courses open to us. One is to finish the building and make it useful for the purpose for which it was started, because the plan has been established, the foundations are in, one wing and the central building are built, and the simple question now is whether we shall stop or complete the structure according to the original design, and furnish that Territory with some adequate place for the confinement of its prisoners.

Mr. BECK. The sundry civil appropriation bill for the current year which was approved on the 7th of July last contains this provision:

To erect the unfinished portion of the United States penitentiary at Deer Lodge, Mont., and to complete the same in accordance with the original plans, $15,000: Provided, That the work shall be carried on under the direction and general supervision of the governor of the Territory of Montana.

That they undertook to do, and when they came to ask us for $25,000 more without explaining why they had made that expenditure necessary under a law that required the building to be done for $15,000, we thought—

Mr. HARRISON. The Senator from Kentucky will allow me?

Mr. BECK. Certainly.

Mr. HARRISON. It was simply impossible. That was all there was about it. The Government was requiring work that would cost forty or fifty thousand dollars to be done for $15,000.

Mr. BECK. No complaint seems to have been made in regard to it as far as we know except that they had adopted plans inconsistent with the act of Congress.

Mr. HARRISON. But the very law which the Senator cites shows that plans had already been adopted before that appropriation was made.

Mr. BECK. But we have had no information so far as I know, or so far as anybody else knows, unless it be from Judge Coburn, that they have attempted to carry out the act; and in the face of facts like these it would hardly seem proper for us to make further appropriations.

Mr. HARRISON. Perhaps I was remiss in not bringing to the attention of the Committee on Appropriations the information I have. I tried to find to-day, but have mislaid it, the report from the gentleman who was put in charge of the construction by the governor, in which he sets out all the facts, some of which I have outlined, one of which is that one wing has been built. Here was $15,000 appropriated. They could not enlarge the cell accommodations of the penitentiary with $15,000. If they constructed the wing without any central part to protect it, they would have there two isolated buildings. That money was expended in part in completing the central part of the building according to the original plan, and he reports that they have accumulated a large amount of material there which can be used in the residue of the work. But there is no use of saying when a plan has been entered upon that will cost $50,000 the building shall be completed for $15,000.

Mr. BECK. All I desire to say is that we have had struggles all the time to make our officials comply with the law, and we had no information given us and no good reason assigned why they do not comply with it, and in the absence of such information, having a positive law that required it to be done, and no excuse being offered to us nor any fact laid before us, we did not feel at liberty to insert $25,000 more. That was all there was of it, I think.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment recommended by the Committee on Appropriations. [Putting the question.] The yeas appear to have it.

Mr. HARRISON. I ask a division on that question. It is one of so much interest to the Territory of Montana that I am sure that if Senators would think of it for a moment they would not refuse this appropriation. There is an unfinished, ragged building, totally inadequate to confine the prisoners of the Territory. What sort of economy is there on the part of the Senate in refusing to give money to go on with it? We have to finish it at some time. I ask for a division.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On this question a division is demanded by the Senator from Indiana.

The question being taken, there were on a division—yeas 22, noes 21.

Mr. HARRISON. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. ALLISON. This is a proposition to appropriate $25,000 in a case where a year ago the Committee on Appropriations stated that $15,000 would complete the building.

Mr. HARRISON. That is just the absurdity of this proposition. The Government made a plan for a penitentiary in Montana, as I have said, that would cost perhaps $50,000—I do not state the amount accurately—and after they had spent $20,000 or $10,000 or $15,000, then the Committee on Appropriations decree that $15,000 shall finish it. If the decree of the Appropriations Committee was sufficient to make $15,000 do the work of $40,000, there might be some sense in that statement. It simply means that you will not finish it at all. Fifteen thousands dollars will not go any further than the number of days' work and the amount of material that it will buy, no matter what the Committee on Appropriations say about it.

Mr. ALLISON. The Committee on Appropriations care nothing about this any more than other Senators. We have no interest in it except to carry on the public service. The Committee on Appropriations make no statement about this. The people who proposed this penitentiary, the responsible officers of the Government, came before the committee last year and expressly stated that if we would appropriate $15,000 they would complete this building according to the original plan, and we appropriated it. Now they come in here, or somebody does through the House of Representatives, and propose that $25,000 more shall be allowed, and I suppose next year they will propose $50,000 more.

Mr. HARRISON. What does the Senator propose—to let them go without a penitentiary or any building?

Mr. ALLISON. I do not propose to do anything now except to strike out this appropriation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations, on which the yeas and nays have been ordered.

The question being taken by yeas and nays, resulted—yeas 30, nays 24; as follows:

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was under the head of "Miscellaneous," in line 2290, after the name "Charles J. Guiteau," to insert "to be immediately available;" so as to make the clause read:

The Attorney-General is authorized and directed to pay to Charles H. Reed and George Scoville, attorneys at law, any sums, not exceeding $3,000 to Charles H. Reed and not exceeding $2,000 to George Scoville, for services rendered in the case of the United States vs. Charles J. Guiteau, to be immediately available.

Mr. VAN WYCK. In regard to the item—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Nebraska object to that amendment making the appropriation immediately available?

Mr. VAN WYCK. Yes, sir; I object to that, and I propose to make a motion to strike out the paragraph. I object to the amendment of the committee, and in order that this thing may be fully understood, as it has been several times in Congress I understand, to allow something to the counsel for Guiteau, I want to know whether there is any statute under which the Appropriations Committee advise this amount. If so, I will withdraw my objection to it; but if it is purely arbitrary, if it is assuming to do what the Committee on Appropriations say they can not do, then I should like to be advised of that fact.

Mr. ALLISON. I know of no law which authorizes the payment of this money and the Committee on Appropriations have no care respecting it. It comes here I believe for the third time in a House bill, certainly the second time, and the Committee on Appropriations in view of all the circumstances surrounding it did not care to strike it out. That is all I desire to say about it; I do not care to defend or oppose it.

Mr. PLUMB. The only time this matter has hitherto been before the Senate was I think two years ago when I moved the provision as an amendment to the deficiency bill, and it was adopted by the Senate. It was rejected in the committee of conference and therefore did not become a law. I think myself the payment ought to be made. A poor creature shot the President of the United States. He was entitled to a fair trial. He had no money. His brother-in-law volunteered to defend him. I do not know anything about the character of that defense; because that is not material to what is before the Senate now; but in addition to that a prominent lawyer of the city of Chicago, at the solicitation of the defendant himself, was engaged as counsel, and devoted some months of service to the preparation necessary to defend this party, and did defend him to the best of his ability. The result of that trial is known. No payment was made to either of these counsel because the defendant had no money to pay the necessary expense of that defense. It is not obligatory on the United States Government to pay for that service; but it was a state trial, it was a trial in the outcome of which the people of the United States had great interest, and I think it is no more than proper that the Government should pay for this service.

But I do not care so much for that as I do for the insinuation which was contained in the remark of the Senator from Nebraska against the Committee on Appropriations because this item was found in the bill as it came from the House and there was no law authorizing it to be paid. Mr. President, there is no law for one-half of the appropriations contained in this bill. They are appropriations from year to year for the purpose of carrying on the United States Government. If we are to wait until a law is passed authorizing every particular thing necessary to be done to carry on all the Departments of the Government, then of course the functions of the Committee on Appropriations will necessarily be largely diminished and many of these items will be stricken out.

In this case, however, the Committee on Appropriations on the part of the Senate simply accepted what the House had said as an expression of their judgment that at all events whatever doubt there might be it ought to be resolved in favor of the payment, as they have done in regard to a large mass of appropriations to be found in other portions of this bill.

Mr. GARLAND. Some two years ago this matter came before the Committee on the Judiciary upon an inquiry, if I recollect correctly, suggested by the Senate, to inquire whether there was any authority under the law to pay for services of this character. The committee were of opinion that there was no law authorizing it, but they were unanimously of the opinion that payment should be made to these counsel of a reasonable sum for their services. I do not remember that there was a single member of the committee who doubted the propriety of making such a payment, although the committee answered in the negative, that there was no existing statute then authorizing it.

Mr. VAN WYCK. Mr. President—

Mr. HARRIS. If the Senator from Nebraska will allow me I desire to suggest to him that it is not now in order for a Senator to move to strike out this paragraph, but it will be so as soon as the committee's amendments have been acted upon. I suggest to him that we go on through the bill, and if he will at that time move to strike out the paragraph I shall be glad to vote with him.

Mr. VAN WYCK. I will assent to that in a moment, because it is opportune to say now that we have been endeavored to be held in line by the Appropriations Committee. Against them no word must be said for their strict adhesion to the rules of this body, and for their observance of the law. It has been stated to us at the commencement and day after day that these rules, so mysterious in their creation and in the construction that has been placed upon them, and even the mysterious conduct of the Appropriations Committee, if I may say it without any offense, rendered it necessary that we should understand, particularly in the light of many things that have been said to-day, whether there was a statute requiring this, or whether it was in conformity with rule. My friend from Iowa says that he has no particular concern about this matter and the committee have none. Very well, I have no particular concern about this matter, but I have as to the rules and the impulses of action.

The provision was placed in this bill by the House. The chairman of this committee says there have been other things placed in the bill by the House of Representatives which the Appropriations Committee insisted should be stricken out. Why, then, did their adhesion to this rule give out? About the time they stuck this appropriation here at the end of the bill they got wearied in well-doing, wearied in following the rules of this body which were supposed to be framed for their guidance when they desired them to be, and then when they get near the end of the bill and become weary this rule is so elastic that they draw themselves out from under the yoke.

Is it not a strange spectacle here this evening that we are to be instructed first that there is no law under which this appropriation can be made, and next that it is a violation of the rules of this body; and now the Senator from Iowa says there is no statute, and the Senator from Kansas and other members of the Appropriations Committee say there is no obligation on the General Government to pay this money? Then why pay it? There is no statute requiring it, no obligation on the Government to pay it except that there was a poor wretch indicted for crime. Do the Appropriations Committee stumble over the rules of this body and discharge their duty in that way in regard to every poor creature who happens to be a defendant in a suit where the Government is the prosecutor? No, sir.

I only desired to stop long enough to call attention to this, because before we finish the consideration of this bill I propose to ask the Senate to do some things standing just where the Senator the chairman of the committee stands, and where that other distinguished member of the committee, the Senator from Kansas, places himself on this item.

I will now consent to the suggestion of the Senator from Tennessee that the matter may be withheld until we get through with the committee's amendments.

Mr. PLUMB. There can be no regret at the occurrence of this debate because it has given the Senator from Nebraska an opportunity to exploit himself; but it is not proper that the statement should go without any objection, that this amendment is in opposition to the rules of the Senate. It is not in opposition to the rules of the Senate, because it is not general legislation.

But, as I said before, there is found in this bill probably one-half of the paragraphs and probably one-half of the gross appropriations and items that have no warrant in the command of existing law. There is no requirement that we should make appropriations for the prosecution of claims; there is no requirement that we should make appropriations for the extension of the Reform School in the city of Washington; there is no requirement that we should continue the completion of the road at Baton Rouge, La., to the national cemetery. There are all through this bill appropriations of different characters that are not required in deference to existing law; that is to say, there is no specific law requiring the appropriation to be made. This is of a character of appropriations that have been made from time to time which in the judgment of Congress, without any legal obligation, are proper to be made. I do not say that this appropriation is one of that overshadowing character which requires us to incur the hostility of the Senator from Nebraska, nor that we should detain the Senate to hear either his speech or mine in regard to it; but it is one of those things which commend themselves, if not to my judgment, at least to my sense of that which is fair and decent on the part of the Government, and I think the appropriation ought to be made.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the committee inserting the words "to be immediately available," in line 2290.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, after line 2291, to insert:

To enable the Attorney-General to employ a competent person to edit and prepare for publication and superintend the printing of the seventeenth and eighteenth volumes of the Opinions of the Attorneys-General, $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was in the appropriations for "United States courts," in line 2318, to increase the appropriation "for fees of United States commissioners, and justices of the peace acting as United States commissioners," from $100,000 to $125,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 2339, to insert:

UNDER THE POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT.

To pay rent of building occupied by the Washington city post-office, at a rate not exceeding $5,000 per annum, $5,000; and for payment of rent of same from November 15, 1884, to the close of the current fiscal year, at same rate, $3,125.

Mr. WILSON. I move to add "to be immediately available." That is in the nature of a deficiency, but providing for the next year as well. We provide for it all here.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The next amendment was, under the head of "House of Representatives," in line 2371, to strike out:

One chief page, Alvin H. Pickens, $900.

And insert:

For one chief page, Alvin H. Pickens, at the rate of $900 per annum, from April 4, 1885, to June 30, 1886, $1,180.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 2377, to insert:

To pay the four pages now employed by resolution of the House the same compensation and for the same period as is provided for the payment of session pages employed by the House, $270, to be immediately available.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 2382, to insert:

To reimburse the postmaster for postage-stamps, $70, to be immediately available.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 2384, to insert:

To reimburse N. A. Fuller, late cashier in the office of the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Representatives, for payment of a certain check forged in the name of a member of the House in August, 1883, $165.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in the clause making appropriations for "the World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition," in line 2393, after the first word "For," to strike out "the purpose of aiding" and insert "final aid to;" so as to read:

For final aid to the World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition now being held in the city of New Orleans, in the State of Louisiana, &c.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 2396, before the words "hundred thousand," to strike out "three" and insert "four;" so as to read:

For final aid to the World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition now being held in the city of New Orleans, in the State of Louisiana, not to exceed the sum of $400,000, to be immediately available, and to be used first in payment of the indebtedness now outstanding of said exposition, &c.

Mr. SHERMAN. This question is rather an embarrassing one to me. When an appropriation of $300,000 was proposed, although I could see some considerations favoring it I had not fully made up my mind on the subject. I should like to have some further and satisfactory reason for increasing the amount from $300,000 to $400,000. I think the Senator from Iowa should be able to give the Senate a pretty full explanation of this matter. I regard it as a very unfortunate thing that this great exposition should have been convened, and that it is found without money, in bad credit. Perhaps circumstances might justify us in coming to its rescue, and it is now proposed to increase the amount of the appropriation made by the House. I think the Senator ought to state the ground for that proposition.

Mr. HARRISON. I suggest that the Senator from Iowa give us some reason for increasing the appropriation $100,000 and for giving any more money to this exposition.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, I presume every Senator understands, as well as the Committee on Appropriations understand, the situation of the New Orleans Exposition. Two or three years ago we passed a law on this subject, in which we expressly provided that the Government of the United States in no respect should be responsible for a single dollar, but that it should only lend its money to this exposition. I think that act was passed in 1882.

Mr. HARRISON. February 10, 1883, is the date of the act.

Mr. ALLISON. I did not remember the exact date. At that time it was expressly stated and understood that the Government of the United States should in no sense take any control or have any responsibility respecting this New Orleans Exposition. The President of the United States, however, at that time was required by that act to invite foreign governments to participate in the exposition. Last year the management of the New Orleans Exposition came to Congress and asked Congress for a loan of $1,000,000 in order to enable them to properly and respectfully conduct this exposition. It was represented then that this sum, if loaned by the Government of the United States, would be repaid; and representations were made to both Houses showing how easy it would be from the receipts of this exposition to reimburse the United States for the advance of $1,000,000.

The law of last year, which I have not before me, was prepared with considerable care in the Committee on Appropriations, and a number of amendments were inserted on the floor of the Senate for the purpose and with the view of making it certain that the amount of money appropriated under that act should first be properly expended; and, secondly, that at some time the United States should be reimbursed. So the management went on, and this exposition, instead of being opened at the time fixed, did not open until about the middle of December or perhaps the 1st of January, and from that time up to certainly about the middle of February it was an absolutely losing performance. Although it was not stated to the Committee on Appropriations, I believe personally from the papers that the committee examined and the statements made that from this time forward the exposition will be practically a losing business; it will not be, to say the least, more than self-sustaining. The Government of the United States last year expressly provided, as it did two years ago, that under no circumstances whatever should we be called upon again for any further payment of money.

The situation, as I understand it, to-day is this: There are some thirty or forty foreign governments represented at the exposition, at least a large number, and they are respectfully represented. The exposition itself, so far as the exhibition is concerned, is a success. These governments are represented at the exposition. Of course they knew nothing of our internal arrangements here with reference to it. They did not know that these managers two years ago, when they secured the authority of the United States, expressly pledged themselves not to make any request to Congress for an appropriation. These foreign governments probably do not know that last year we expressly stipulated that only the million we gave should be required of the United States.

Now it is a question for the Senate, and every Senator can judge for himself, whether or not we should appropriate anything. If we appropriate nothing, in my judgment the exposition can not last a month. If we appropriate $300,000, the probability is that it will survive to the middle of April or the first of May. If we appropriate $400,000, in my judgment it will be able to get on until the 1st day of June.

That is all there is in this case. The Committee on Appropriations believe that if $300,000 is appropriated now, at the next session we shall probably be called on for $300,000 more. We hope that by the amendment which we have inserted here, this final appropriation of $400,000 will finish up this exposition in a way at least not disgraceful to the United States.

Mr. SEWELL. I desire to ask the chairman of the Appropriations Committee to refer to the proviso of the act granting the loan of a million dollars. It expressly provides for a guarantee by a bond of $300,000 for the faithful performance of the duty. What has become of that bond?

Mr. ALLISON. I do not know what has become of it, but I presume the bond was given and, of course, it can be enforced.

Mr. SEWELL. Allow me to read the provision.

Mr. JONAS. If the Senator will permit me, I will—

Mr. SEWELL. Allow me to read the provision. I read from the law:

Provided further, That no greater amount shall be expended or liability or indebtedness of any kind incurred upon buildings, grounds, and preparations than the aggregate sum that may be paid in, by the subscribers to the capital stock and by donations and the amount of the loan provided herein: And provided further, That in the distribution of the amounts that may remain in the treasury of the board of management after the payments of the current expenses of administration the amount of the appropriation heretofore made shall be paid in full into the Treasury of the United States before any dividend or percentage of profits or assets shall be paid to the holders of said stock or contributors: Provided further, That the Government of the United States shall not, under any circumstances, be liable for any debt or obligation created or incurred by the World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition, or its board of management, or for any sum whatever in addition to the amount appropriated by this act; and that adequate space to be determined by the President of the United States for such exhibits as the Government of the United States may see proper to make at said exposition shall be furnished free of all charge by said board: Provided further, That no sum shall be paid to the said board of management of said exposition until after the president, secretary, and a majority of the members of said board shall have executed a bond, with good and solvent security, to be approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, in the sum of $200,000, to sufficiently secure the safe-keeping and the faithful disbursement of the sum hereby appropriated, and for the faithful observance of this act with regard to the limitation of expenditures and liabilities as fixed herein, and for the repayment to the Government of the United States of the surplus of proceeds of said exposition remaining after payment of the current expenses of administration.

On the passage of that bill, looking at it in a purely commercial point of view, I had the honor to use the following language on a motion made to reduce the appropriation or the loan, as it was said to be, to $500,000. I said:

Mr. President, I made the motion for the reduction of this amount, as I supposed that we should never get a cent of it back. Judging from my experience as a business man and a transportation man, in view of the location of this proposed exposition, I would give it as my judgment that none of this money will ever come back. If the exposition were to be located at a central point like Saint Louis, or Chicago, or Cincinnati, where the surrounding population is very dense and where the modes of communication are so frequent that large masses of people could be transported there, I would say that the money might come back, but at New Orleans it is almost an impossibility. The people that come from Mexico and other southern countries will be a very small drop in the bucket. It requires a large mass of population to make an exposition of this kind pay. Therefore I moved to reduce the amount, as I thought $500,000 was enough for the Government to contribute to what is practically to be a local exposition.

At that time it was stated that $700,000 had then been subscribed for this exposition. I have understood since from very good authority that not more than $500,000 has been paid in unto this day and that the city of New Orleans, which reaps great benefit from it, paid $100,000, while the exposition managers have spent $130,000 upon permanent improvement of the park where it is located.

I do not think that the United States Congress has a right to squander the money of the people in this way. The appropriation of a million dollars, ostensibly obtained as a loan but really a gift from the pockets of the people of the country, ought to have been enough under prudent management, under a faithful performance of the contract entered into for which they gave a bond of $300,000, to have carried it through.

I do not believe that three or four hundred thousand dollars now will make it a success. You will then have a deficiency, in my opinion, of half a million dollars afterward. I am opposed to the amendment of the committee, and I move to non-concur in it; and I give notice that I shall move to strike out the whole clause afterward.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARRIS in the chair). The question is on the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. PLUMB. I voted against the proposition of the Senator from New Jersey, when the original appropriation was before the Senate, believing that a million dollars was necessary in order that the exhibition might properly be carried on and that the people of the country could afford to lend to the exhibition, and if necessary give that amount, in order that there might be a reasonable degree of success attained at least. I have been very much disappointed at the result. I have no doubt there is an exposition that is in a manner creditable to the people of the United States at New Orleans; but I am not satisfied that the promise which were made in order to obtain the appropriation of $1,000,000 have been kept, nor am I satisfied that they were made in good faith at the time they were made as an inducement to the appropriation of $1,000,000 heretofore made.

I am now prepared to vote with the Senator from New Jersey to strike out the entire appropriation. I shall cast the vote with considerable regret, but I believe that the circumstances are such that that is due to the case as it is now presented, and I am led to believe from representations which have been made to me—and I am not permitted to doubt either the fact or their authenticity—that if a collapse should come to that exposition revelations will be made in regard to the expenditure of the million dollars we have already appropriated which will startle the people of the United States.

I, for one, plant myself upon the repeated declarations contained in the various statutes on this subject: First, that the United States were not to be responsible at all, and that in the next place it was not to be a responsibility beyond the million dollars appropriated; and believing as I do that the people of Louisiana and the people of New Orleans have not only not done what they ought to have done but that they have not kept faith with the United States in regard to the dealings between the United States and them in regard to the exposition, I am prepared to say that I believe it to be the duty of Congress to refuse to appropriate any further money for the purpose of carrying on this exposition; and I say that, as I remarked before, with great regret.

The State which I have the honor in part to represent on this floor has there an exhibition of the products of that State, which is in line with the exposition which that State has made at other places in the Union, and which is worthy of the State, and it has there a commissioner and assistants for the purpose of making that exposition what it ought to be. The people of the State of Kansas looked to that exposition with a great deal of interest and have attended it in large numbers; but their confidence, as well as the confidence of Congress, and of the people of the United States, in my judgment, has been forfeited by what has occurred in the expenditure of this million dollars and in the failure of the people of Louisiana and the people of New Orleans to keep faith with the Government in regard to their subscriptions and to do what they ought to have done, and what it was manifestly their duty to do, to make this exposition a financial success. Believing that, I shall vote to strike out this entire appropriation. I regret that the House committee and the Senate committee should have felt under constraint to appropriate one single dollar.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, the information which the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations furnished to the Senate in reference to this matter was not satisfactory to me, for one.

Mr. ALLISON. I have been interrupted two or three times.

Mr. HARRISON. I will yield to the Senator now in a moment after indicating to him the direction in which I should like to have information. I notice that this amendment proposed by the Senate committee contains a proposition of this kind, that—

No part of the foregoing sum shall be paid until statements and exhibits in detail, satisfactory to the Secretary of the Treasury, are made of all expenditures under the appropriation made by act of July 7, 1885, and that said expenditures have been made for the purposes and in the manner provided for in said act.

I submit to the Senator from Iowa that that audit of the accounts of the New Orleans Exposition ought not to be referred to the Secretary of the Treasury to take place after we have appropriated $400,000 more. It should have been made and submitted to the Congress of the United States, and I am in hopes that the Senator from Iowa and the committee will be able to furnish the Senate with some information as to what the expenditures have been in connection with this exposition, what they have been for, how much has been received from private sources, what the present debts of the association are, what its receipts and its expenditures are per day, and its salaries, in order that we may have some intelligent understanding of what we are doing here.

I should like to have the item of salaries especially, so as to see how many of these gentlemen have been supported out of this appropriation and at what rate per annum. I should like to know what the prospect is of winding the thing up and when it is intended to be wound up. The Senator intimates that $300,000 may not keep it going thirty days or sixty days at least, and that $400,000 may carry it to June. If we have become committed to this enterprise in such a way as to make the United States responsible for its debts, I think we ought to consider the question as to what is the best way out. Perhaps we had better wind it up, take an account of the assets, and pay the debts if we are liable for them.

It does seem to me that to ask an appropriation of $400,000 in the face of the protestations and promises and repeated declarations of the managers and promoters of this exhibition that they would not ask as a gift one cent from the United States, that it was simply a loan of the credit of the United States, that the million dollars would be returned, and when we are now met with the statement that we are not to have one dollar of the million dollars returned to us, and if we are to follow that million with nearly half a million more, we ought to have from those who have represented this exposition a strict, detailed, and business-like statement of what they have done with the money. It should have been laid in printed form on the desk of every Senator and Member before this proposition was brought under discussion. It should not be asked to refer it to an executive officer of the Government to look into these things, lodging in him the discretion to send $400,000 more after the million that has gone.

It seems to be conceded all around from statements on this floor by members of the Appropriations Committee who have looked into the subject, it seems to be conceded in the public press, that there has been the most gigantic and magnificent mismanagement of this exposition that ever characterized any public enterprise. I should like to have from the Senator from Iowa, if he has it, some statement of what this association have been doing with this money. I should like to know whether it is true that the city of New Orleans has given $100,000 and that permanent improvements which will remain in her park for more than the sum she has donated have been taken out of this money.

For one I shall not vote for this, if at all, until there has been a full exposure of all these matters.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, the Senator from Indiana says that this proposition should not have been presented here by the Committee on Appropriations until a full printed statement was presented with it of all the facts connected with the New Orleans Exposition. Why, Mr. President, does not the Senator from Indiana know that this bill itself did not reach the Committee on Appropriations until last Friday night at 10 o'clock? Does he expect the Committee on Appropriations to go through a hundred pages of a bill between Friday night at 10 o'clock and Sunday night at midnight, and then present here on the tables of Senators at 9 o'clock on the following morning full details of every item in this bill—does he expect that of the Committee on Appropriations?

Mr. HARRISON. I do not, and I was not referring to the Committee on Appropriations as to its being any part of their duty, but I say the promoters of this proposition who ask this additional $400,000 should have furnished it.

Mr. ALLISON. So I agree.

Mr. HARRISON. I agree that the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate have not had time to deal with this bill as they ought, that it has come here so late that they must necessarily give it a hasty consideration. But if there has not been time to examine this matter thoroughly, then I can only blame the Committee on Appropriations for making any proposition to donate money at all. I think they should have said we have not time to go to the bottom of this, and until we do we decline to take any step.

Mr. ALLISON. The Committee on Appropriations take no responsibility in reference to this measure that is not taken by every Senator on this floor. We only have recommended in this amendment a statement that if we appropriate at all we ought to appropriate $400,000.

Mr. MILLER, of California. I should like to ask the Senator why they have recommended the additional $100,000?

Mr. ALLISON. I will state that before I take my seat. The Committee on Appropriations when this bill came before them made a request of the management who asked this appropriation for every item suggested by the Senator from Iowa. We asked them to send to us a detailed statement of the expenditure not only of the million dollars appropriated by the Government, but of all the money received by the management. We also asked them to show us in detail from what sources they received money in addition to the money received from the Government, and I have before me and have in these papers the response made by the management to the Committee on Appropriations.

The whole amount received by this management on account of this exposition, outside of the receipts at the gates, is $1,630,968. Of that sum $1,000,000 was appropriated in the act making a loan to the exposition; $584,000 has been paid in by the State of Louisiana and by individual subscriptions in the city of New Orleans and by persons in Louisiana. Of subscriptions from other sources, one item is $15,000, another $20,000, and another $11,800. These put together make a total sum of $630,968.

I am giving now the statement sent to the committee by Mr. E. A. Burke, the director-general of this exposition and the responsible manager of it, so far as I know, in reference to its finances.

When we appropriated a million dollars last year or loaned it to this exposition we were told that there were $800,000 of subscriptions in round numbers to the exposition in the city of New Orleans and in the State of Louisiana. We were told that these subscriptions were coming in, that every dollar of them would be paid, and when we came to insert that sum, as we did originally in the first draught of our appropriation, they said it would be impossible within the brief time to get it to the committee to collect the $800,000 in full; but they said it would be collected, and we inserted the $500,000 alluded to by the Senator from New Jersey.

I have stated the receipts. The expenses are also given in this paper in general, and the detailed expenses are in papers which I have before me. They state that for construction $1,000,000 has been expended; for machinery, $150,000; for grounds, grading, draining, fencing, &c., $100,000; for distribution to States and Territories, $235,000; for commercial department, $50,000; educational department, $50,000; woman's work, $50,000; agricultural department, $50,000.

Mr. CONGER. I ask the Senator if there is any expense for the Red Cross Association who have brought from foreign countries and all parts of the United States exhibits for the exposition?

Mr. ALLISON. That is not especially mentioned.

Mr. CONGER. I desire to say that individuals out of their own private means have paid the expenses which were to have been met by this management, and they have left ladies in charge of these associations with a good deal of expense out of their own purses, and have not as yet relieved and will not, if we vote $400,000 more, relieve those private persons who have been engaged in making the exhibition of that kind both in Europe and the United States, but leave them to pay their own expenses.

Mr. ALLISON. Of course I can only give in a general way the statements of the managers.

Mr. CULLOM. Did the Senator state that several hundred thousand dollars were distributed to the States? Is there an itemized account showing the amount each State has received?

Mr. ALLISON. There is among these papers an itemized account. Of course the States and Territories had allotments made to them.

Mr. INGALLS. Was that allotment a loan or a gift?

Mr. ALLISON. I suppose it was a gift; that is to say, the managers allowed the State of Kansas, for instance, $5,000.

Mr. INGALLS. Out of the Government loan?

Mr. ALLISON. Out of the general fund.

Mr. SEWELL. Will the Senator state whether it was given to the State or to individuals in the State? The State of New Jersey appropriated $10,000.

Mr. ALLISON. It was given to the executive officers of the State in every instance, I believe, and applied or managed by the governor of the State.

Mr. CHACE. Does the Senator from Iowa say that these amounts were paid over in full to the States?

Mr. ALLISON. I am saying nothing. I repeat what I said before that the Committee on Appropriations could only take the statements of the management in reference to this matter. I do not know that one dollar was paid to any State or to any State agent. I am only stating what the management stated to us.

Mr. CULLOM. When the Senator gets to that point I should like to have him read the paper showing the amount that each State has received, if he has such a document in his possession.

Mr. ALLISON. If I can find it I will read it. This is the statement with reference to the expenditures for the original purposes of the exposition. It is claimed by the management—and I am only speaking with reference to their statement—that because of the general situation at New Orleans, because of the difficulty in the means of transportation, and because of the general delay, the increased cost of the buildings for the opening of the exposition amounted in round numbers to $370,000. They also submitted to us a statement of the indebtedness up to this time.

Mr. HARRISON. May I ask the Senator what the aggregate of the expenditures is?

Mr. ALLISON. The aggregate of the expenditures up to February 1, including, of course, the liabilities of the exposition—as shown by this statement—amounts to $2,070,000, but the aggregate expense of the construction of buildings prior to the opening of the exhibition was $1,709,000.

The detailed statement the Senator from Illinois asked for I have here now for each State and Territory.

The real trouble with this exposition is that it has been, with the exception of a few weeks, an absolute loss from the beginning, and in my belief it will be an absolute loss from now until the time it closes.

I have before me a statement of the daily receipts of the exhibition from its opening on the 15th of December down to and including February 13. The daily receipts ranged from $466 one day, $640 another, $592, $769; and so on, running up to $2,235, and so on up to February, when the receipts increased from $2,000 to $3,000 per day. After the period known as Mardi Gras the receipts ran up for several days to $10,000, $8,000, $7,000, $6,000, $5,000, and $4,000. From the 1st day of February the receipts averaged over $6,000. They now average, I believe, about $2,500 per day, or nearly that sum.

Mr. HARRISON. Will the Senator allow me to ask him a question as he goes on? I notice from his statement that the total receipts have been $1,630,000. That, I understand, was up to the 1st of February.

Mr. ALLISON. Yes, sir.

Mr. HARRISON. The expenditures up to the 1st of February were $2,070,000.

Mr. ALLISON. Yes, sir.

Mr. HARRISON. In other words, there was an excess of expenditures over receipts of $439,000.

Mr. ALLISON. Yes, sir.

Mr. HARRISON. Now I want to ask the Senator if that debt has been reduced since?

Mr. ALLISON. The debt has been reduced by the receipts during February.

Mr. HARRISON. Has the debt been actually reduced?

Mr. ALLISON. I will say to the Senator—but I trust the Senator will not expect the Committee on Appropriations to go into a detailed account of dollars and dimes with reference to this matter—that there has been a reduction, so that at this time the indebtedness of the establishment is $383,071.

Mr. HARRISON. That was what I wanted to get at. Then nearly all this money, $400,000, is to be applied to pay debts, and they will start with a balance of $30,000 of this appropriation on the next experiment.

Mr. ALLISON. Very likely.

Mr. INGALLS. Is this indebtedness of $380,000 exclusive of the million they owe to the United States Government?

Mr. ALLISON. Yes, sir.

Mr. INGALLS. Then they owe $1,380,000.

Mr. ALLISON. One million three hundred and eighty-three thousand dollars; but it is hardly worth while to appropriate money to pay ourselves. During the month of January and perhaps in a portion of December the cost of managing this affair for each day amounted to an average of over $3,000, probably an average of $3,500; I do not remember the exact average.

Mr. HARRISON. May I ask the Senator whether in the statement as made of the reduction of the debt during the month of February, which I believe included the Mardi Gras celebration, the salary account for that month has been paid, or whether it is due on the 1st of March, so that it remains in doubt whether there has been any reduction?

Mr. ALLISON. I think very likely the suggestion of the Senator may be correct. I think it will be left very much in doubt on the 1st of March whether there has been any reduction, and I think when the 1st of April comes there will not only be no reduction but there will be a deficit of several thousand dollars even if we appropriate this $400,000, unless this management can secure money from some other source than any known to the Committee on Appropriations or known to the managers themselves. It is a question whether the Congress of the United States, having reference to our obligations and to the invitations we have extended to other governments, shall give this sum of money to keep the exhibition going until the time prescribed in the law for its closing, or whether we shall abandon it now.

That is all the question. Therefore the Committee on Appropriations provided that this money should be expended by one of our own officers, that he should not expend it for this purpose until he was satisfied that every dollar that was appropriated as a loan last year had been faithfully and honestly expended not only for the purposes indicated in that law but in the manner indicated in that law.

Mr. HARRISON. The appropriation that the Senate provides for in this bill simply pays debts. It is probable when all the accounts are in, it is a close shave whether it will pay the existing debt.

Mr. ALLISON. I think it is.
Mr. HARRISON. How do we get any guarantee that it will run to May?

Mr. ALLISON. None whatever.
Mr. HARRISON. Then is it not likely that it will be compelled to stop at once, or that we shall have to follow this appropriation with two or three hundred thousand dollars more?

Mr. ALLISON. Very likely both.
Mr. HARRISON. If it runs to May the Senator thinks we must add to this appropriation two or three hundred thousand dollars more?
Mr. ALLISON. I think so, unless you make the $100,000 additional appropriation we propose to that made by the House.

Mr. HARRISON. Even if you make that, it only pays the present debt.

Mr. ALLISON. The gentlemen who appeared before the committee stated that if the $100,000 which we add to this bill should be appropriated they would be able to run this exposition until the 1st day of June. I have serious doubts about that.

Mr. HARRISON. Were those the same gentlemen who said the money would be repaid?

Mr. ALLISON. One of them. I have said all I care to say with reference to this exposition. I do not think it stands in a creditable way either to the management or to the United States, and it is a question what we shall do with it under the circumstances. The Committee on Appropriations, or at least a majority of them, believed that under the circumstances surrounding this case it was a wise thing for us in a guarded way to give final aid to this exposition to the extent named in this clause.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. MILLER, of California. I wish to ask the Senator in regard to this bill if any premiums have been paid or awarded to the States yet, and whether in the calculation of $400,000 there has been taken into consideration what is awarded on premiums?

Mr. ALLISON. Certain premiums have been awarded; I do not remember the amount; I think $17,000. Of course that constitutes one of the debts of the association.

Mr. MILLER, of California. This speaks of debts to foreigners or foreign nations. Will the Senator explain what those debts are; how this exposition became indebted to foreign nations, and what the amount is?

Mr. ALLISON. I think the amount is an unknown quantity, though it is not large. This management made certain arrangements with foreign governments to send their exhibits here and agreed to pay freights and some other things in connection with the foreign exhibits. A portion of those expenses have not been paid; premiums have been awarded to exhibitors from foreign countries which have not been paid. I do not think any statements I have before me give in detail the amount of these debts, but it is stated at $17,000; but when the exposition is closed I believe it will amount to over $60,000.

Mr. MILLER, of California. There is a difference between foreigners and foreign nations. I do not see how a foreign nation would bring itself to contemplate taking money of this association for freights on their own exhibits.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not think we owe any foreign nation anything on this account.

Mr. MILLER, of California. I hope not.

Mr. ALLISON. If we do we will try to pay it in some other appropriation bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. MITCHELL. I desire to say one word in favor of this amendment. A large number comparatively of the business men from the State of Pennsylvania, and principally of Philadelphia, have been in attendance on this exposition. I saw a party of them on their return a few days ago. They all gave a glowing account of the exposition in so far as the exhibits are concerned, and without exception they are men of judgment. Those whom I have conversed with, and those whom I have seen, say we ought to make this appropriation. I myself have given some attention to it, and I believe we ought to do it. If we have made a mistake in this matter we made it when we gave the loan in the first instance. As I regard it, the honor, the credit, the good name and fame of this nation are involved in this transaction, and it becomes us to consider that, Mr. President. I shall do it. I would vote very cheerfully even for more than is proposed by the amendment.

I have some knowledge myself in regard to matters of this kind. I was instrumental in a small way in the inauguration of the Centennial Exposition. I know what it costs to set such a work as that in operation and to carry it through. I think people in and about Philadelphia contributed about two millions and a half of dollars, the State of Pennsylvania contributed from its treasury a million dollars, the Government of the United States I believe a million and a half.

Mr. SEWELL. Loaned it.

Mr. MITCHELL. They should have given it, as I thought then and as I think now.

Mr. FRYE. Do not forget to state that the United States compelled the repayment of every dollar of the appropriation made to the exhibition at Philadelphia, and my recollection is, with interest. ["No!"

Mr. MITCHELL. I should not have forgotten to state that. The managers of the exposition undertook to do it and they were able to do it because there was a great central point, a great patriotic object and feeling lying at the bottom of that exposition which is not present in this case to sustain this work.

The gentlemen who were here the other day said to me—and they were very familiar with the work done in Philadelphia—that the work now being done in New Orleans, in extent of buildings erected, of opportunity for exposition, and the exposition itself, is fully equal to that at Philadelphia, and the only thing seeming to be wanting is the gate-money to be received from visitors there; and I trust when the genial sun of spring shall come and enter into the hearts of the people of the North that they will go to New Orleans and make that exposition a success in that respect. In view of the figures presented by the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations I believe they will and I think they ought.

Mr. SEWELL. Will the Senator from Pennsylvania allow me to ask him does he know whether those persons had subscribed money and were desirous of getting it back?

Mr. MITCHELL. I do not know; but I think none of them were in that category. One of them, with whom I talked more particularly than with the others, is a prominent business man in Philadelphia and is a patriotic gentleman. He was engaged in the work of the Centennial Exposition. His heart was in that, and it is in this, and he feels precisely in regard to this matter as he did in regard to that, so far as the Government and its obligations are concerned.

Mr. BLAIR. Mr. President, I voted for this original appropriation, and I am very glad that I did so. I wish I had voted for a larger one and that more had been appropriated and more had been expended. Why, sir, we expended in the preparation of the Philadelphia Centennial Exposition, as I have been informed in the items given here to-day, over $7,000,000 in making that exposition ready to be seen. Here is an exposition located in a portion of the country unaccustomed to making expensive demonstrations of this or perhaps of any other kind, without the necessary means and facilities for intercommunication, unused to this sort of thing, and yet the precise point of the whole country where an exposition was needed for its industrial and its educational effects, and with an amount of money less than $2,000,000.

Whatever they may have done in the way of bad appropriation, whatever they may have done in the way of imprudent expenditure, whatever they may have done in the way of corrupt expenditure, which is hinted at darkly here, but of which there is no evidence in existence as far as I know, with an expenditure of less than $2,000,000 they have prepared an exposition which in many and in important particulars surpasses that of the Centennial. I do not make this assertion wildly or blindly. At least one hundred of the most intelligent citizens of my own State, including the governor of the State, have recently visited the exposition, and I have talked with a great many of them.

The governor was familiar with the Centennial Exposition; so was his wife, a very intelligent woman, as capable of judging in regard to a matter of this kind as any lady almost in my acquaintance; and they and others of this party who went there to observe, and who did observe, as I believe, impartially, prominent men in both political parties, say to me that this exposition in its substance is superior to what they saw and were familiar with at Philadelphia, and this is in the preliminary stage. It has had no visitors of any great consequence as yet. Their facilities for reaching the point of exhibition from where most of the people are obliged to stay in the city, the four miles travel, are thus far very inferior indeed, and, of course, there has not been a great amount of travel to the exposition. The number of visitors has not as yet been large.

Our friends here talk about the United States collecting its money back again, but they did not get that million and a half dollars back again until the Centennial Exposition was over and until there had been a chance for receipts out of which the remuneration was to be made. Now we are holding our friends at the South responsible for accomplished results; we are holding them to, what I think it is very unjust to hold them to, the accomplishment of results at this comparatively early period. Of course it is to be understood that it has taken longer to make this ready, and the weather itself has been inhospitable and unfavorable. Everything has been done at a great disadvantage, and done by a class of people who are not accustomed to make expenditures of this description and who naturally might be somewhat tardy, who might be excused if they failed even without being charged with fraud and corruption, unless we have the evidence of it.

I believe that if this exposition is treated in a good-hearted way, with a national feeling, with a spirit of brotherhood such as we ought to begin to entertain toward all portions of our country, and if we give them three or four or five hundred thousand dollars more to help them along and to let this exposition last another year, it will be a magnificent success of which the American nation may well be proud; and even if it is not, as compared with what was done at the North nine years ago, I say that in my belief the educational effects upon the southern portion of our country and upon the northern portion of our people who may see fit to visit that part of the nation, and the adjacent nations, will fully justify the million or the million and a half which we have given. I trust the committee will be sustained in making this amendment to the bill, and that if a larger amount is thought to be necessary even that may be voted.

Mr. JONAS. Mr. President—

Mr. HOAR. I understand that it is proposed to take a recess at 6 o'clock. That has been ordered, and I desire to ask the Senator from Louisiana whether or not he desires to have what he says broken into, or would he prefer to have the recess taken now?

Mr. JONAS. I should be glad to have it taken now.

Mr. HOAR. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. SEWELL. Will the Senator withdraw the motion for a moment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will inform the Senator from Massachusetts that at 6 o'clock, by a resolution passed at an earlier hour, it is the duty of the Chair to announce a recess until 8 o'clock.

Mr. HOAR. I move that the Senate now take a recess until 8 o'clock.

Mr. SABIN. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Minnesota.

The motion being put, there were on a division—ayes 25, noes 16.

Mr. VAN WYCK and Mr. BAYARD called for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas have it, and the Senate decides in favor of an executive session; but the hour of 6 o'clock having arrived—

Mr. CONGER. Mr. President—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under a resolution of the Senate passed at an earlier hour of the day, the Senate now takes a recess from this time until 8 o'clock to-night.

Mr. CONGER. Which I move to reconsider. I move to reconsider the motion by which the Senate agreed to take a recess.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In the execution of the order of the Senate the Chair has announced that the Senate has taken a recess from 6 to 8 o'clock.

Mr. CONGER. I addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair decides that the Senator from Michigan made his motion too late, because the Chair had announced the execution of the order.

Mr. CONGER. Mr. President, I addressed the Chair two or three times.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is quite aware of that fact.

Mr. CONGER. And the Chair refused to recognize me. ["Order!"]

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is quite aware of the fact that the Senator addressed the Chair when the Chair was announcing the order of the Senate previously made.

Mr. CONGER. And it was to prevent that announcement that I exercised my privilege of addressing the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair begs to state to the Senator from Michigan that the Chair understood it to be the duty of the Chair to execute the order of the Senate, and not to allow the order to be interfered with by the appeal of any single Senator. The Senate is in recess until 8 o'clock to-night.

EVENING SESSION.

The Senate reassembled at 8 o'clock p. m.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARRIS in the chair). In obedience to the order made just before the recess, the Chair directs the Sergeant-at-Arms to clear the galleries and close the doors in order that the Senate may proceed to the consideration of executive business.

Mr. ALLISON. Is it in order now for me to move that the doors be opened?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Not until the order has been executed.

The doors having been closed, the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After twenty minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. BLAIR. I ask unanimous consent to submit two reports from the Committee on Pensions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The reports will be received if there be no objection.

Mr. BLAIR, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

A bill (H. R. 603) granting a pension to Rachel Nickell; and

A bill (H. R. 7907) granting a pension to Matilda Cody.

Mr. DAWES, from the Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8279) making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, and for the armanent thereof, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask for the regular order.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8256) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending question is on the amendment recommended by the Committee on Appropriations, in line 2396, before the word "hundred," to strike out "three" and insert "four;" so as to read:

For final aid to the World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition, now being held in the city of New Orleans, in the State of Louisiana, not to exceed the sum of $400,000.

Mr. JONAS. Mr. President, it would seem from the objections which are made to the amendment and the item of appropriation now under consideration as if Senators in the opposition considered that it only concerned the State of Louisiana and the people of New Orleans whom I in part represent. It is true that this great exposition is held in the city of New Orleans. It is not true that it is held particularly under the auspices of the people of that city or the people of Louisiana. The exposition is held in pursuance of an act of Congress approved February 10, 1883, not introduced either in the Senate or in the House by any representative from the State of Louisiana, and not emanating particularly from the people whom I represent. The preamble to that act sets forth:

Whereas it is desirable to encourage for celebration the one hundredth anniversary of the production, manufacture, and commerce of cotton, by holding, in the year 1864, in some city of the Union, to be selected by the executive committee of the National Cotton Planters' Association of America, an institution for the public welfare, incorporated under the laws of Mississippi, a world's industrial and cotton centennial exposition, to be held under the joint auspices of the United States, the said National Cotton Planters' Association of America, and of the city in which it may be located, and in which cotton in all its conditions of culture and manufacture will be the chief exhibit, but which is designed also to include all arts, manufactures, and products of the soil and mine; and

Whereas such an exhibition should be national and international in its character, in which the people of this country and other parts of the world who are interested in the subject should participate, it should have the sanction of the Congress of the United States.

That act was passed, and in pursuance of its authority the National Cotton Planters' Association selected the city of New Orleans as the city in which the exposition should be held, much, I may say en passant, against the wish of a large portion of the commercial community of that city who have since contributed to its success, and who at the time entertained honest doubts (desirous as they were that the exposition should be held) whether New Orleans occupied the proper geographical position in which to hold such an exposition.

LEGISLATIVE, ETC., APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask the Senator from Louisiana to yield to me for a moment that I may submit a conference report on the legislative appropriation bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. JONAS. Certainly.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the conference report on the legislative appropriation bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is a privileged report that the Senator has a right to make at any time.

Mr. ALLISON. I present the report and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report will be read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

And the Senate agree to the same.

On the amendments of the Senate numbered 1 and 29 the committee of conference are unable to agree.

W. B. ALLISON,

H. L. DAWES,

F. M. COCKRELL,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

WM. S. HOLMAN,

JOHN HANCOCK,

J. G. CANNON,

Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. ALLISON. I desire to say that in the bill every item has been agreed to by the conference except the one item relating to clerks of Senators. There are two amendments involved in that question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator desire the Senate to take any action in respect to the disagreeing votes?

Mr. ALLISON. I do not.

Mr. INGALLS. I should like to ask the Senator from Iowa, for the information of the Senate, whether all the provisions the House of Representatives asks for their force were agreed to by the Senate.

Mr. ALLISON. I will say in response to the Senator from Kansas that they were all agreed to so far as the House force is concerned.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on concurring in the report.

The report was concurred in.

POST-OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. PLUMB submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8138) making appropriations for the service of the Post-Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes, having met after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 9.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 13 and 15, and agree to the same.

On the amendments of the Senate numbered 3, 4, 5, 6, 16, 17, 18, 19, and 20, they have been unable to agree.

P. B. PLUMB,
W. B. ALLISON,
JAS. B. BECK,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

R. W. TOWNSHEND,
WM. S. HOLMAN,
R. G. HERR,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. PLUMB. The points of difference between the two Houses were the proposition of the Senate to authorize the Postmaster-General to pay the rent of third-class post-offices, the proposition of the House that the Bureau of Engraving and Printing should enter into competition with private parties for the production of postage-stamps and stamped envelopes, the proposition of the Senate that to the Postmaster-General should be committed a discretion in regard to the payment of a proper sum for the carrying of foreign mails, the proposition of the House that a special 10-cent stamp should be provided, and that consequent upon that there should be a special delivery of letters in cities of a certain size, and also the amendment of the Senate to the proposition of the House in regard to the pay of railroads, the Senate having added to the sum proposed by the House $490,000.

The conferees have agreed upon the settlement of all these differences except that in regard to the payment of the rent of third-class post-offices, the compensation for the carrying of foreign mails, and the 10-cent stamp or special delivery of letters. In the matter of the increase of the appropriation for the payment of railroads for the transportation of mails the Senate conferees agreed to recede. In regard to the proposition that the Bureau of Engraving and Printing should enter into competition with private parties for the manufacture of postage-stamps and stamped envelopes, the House conferees agreed to recede, leaving, as I have before stated, these three items in controversy still before the two Houses so far as the committee of conference is concerned.

I ask the Senate to concur in the report of the committee of conference.

The report was concurred in.

Mr. PLUMB. I move that the Senate further insist on its amendments to the Post-Office appropriation bill not so far agreed on by the two Houses, and ask of the House of Representatives a further conference on the disagreeing votes.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the presiding officer was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate, and Mr. PLUMB, Mr. ALLISON, and Mr. BECK were appointed.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8256) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending question is on the amendment in line 2396, to strike out "three" and insert "four," so as to make the appropriation for the World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition $400,000; on which the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. JONAS] is entitled to the floor.

Mr. JONAS. I was saying when interrupted that the act of Congress authorized the Cotton Planters' Association, who originated the exposition, and who are an important and respectable agricultural association of this country, to locate the exposition, which they did, at New Orleans. I take occasion here frankly to say that in my opinion it would have been better had they chosen Atlanta, or Nashville, or even Louisville, although that city is outside of the cotton belt. They are all greater centers of population, and I believe the exposition would have been a greater financial success if located in either of those cities. But it was located in New Orleans, and without any action or volition on the part of the people of that city.

The act also provided:

That the President of the United States may, upon the recommendation of the executive committee of the National Cotton Planters' Association of America, appoint six United States commissioners, and, upon the recommendation of the majority of subscribers to the enterprise in the city where it may be located, may appoint seven United States commissioners, who together shall constitute a board of management of said World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition.

Sec. 3. That the President of the United States may, on the recommendation of the governors of the various States and Territories of the Union, appoint one commissioner and one alternate commissioner for each State and Territory, whose functions shall be defined by the said board of management.

Under the above provisions the President appointed six commissioners, and he also appointed seven other commissioners, who were chosen by the subscribers, who subscribed some $500,000 to the stock of this enterprise. These constituted the board of managers, appointed and commissioned by the President, with full faith and authority given to them by the President under the provisions of the act of Congress.

Here I take occasion to say that this board of management thus constituted is chosen from the best, the most prominent, the most reliable, and the most successful business men of the city of New Orleans and its vicinity. They were appointed irrespective of politics, and most of them are men out of politics, but actually representing both political parties.

I take further occasion to say that the director-general of the enterprise, who has been held forth as its head and front, is not a member of this board of managers. He is an executive officer, and whatever power he possesses, whatever acts he has performed, or whatever disposition he has made of the moneys which were in his possession, has been under the control and by the direction and advice and the vote of this board of managers.

Some $584,000 were subscribed to this enterprise by citizens of New Orleans and other persons interested in its success. The President in the mean time was authorized by another provision of the act, which I shall read, to issue invitations to foreign governments:

Sec. 2. That the President be requested to send, in the name of the United States, invitations to the governments of other nations to be represented and take part in said World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition, to be held in some city of the United States, to be hereafter selected as aforesaid.

He issued such a proclamation calling on the nations of the earth to send their exhibits to this great world's exhibition to be held in the city of New Orleans under the provisions of this act of Congress. The States all appointed commissioners who were commissioned by the President, and a like invitation was extended to the States and Territories of the Union to send their exhibits to this exhibition. It grew into such grand proportions, so much beyond the conception of its projectors, so large a space was asked for by the exhibitors, so generous a response came from all parts of the world from the nations of the earth who desired to participate, that it became evident that those who had originated the exhibition would not be able to carry it out. It originated with the poor; its managers were poor; the people of the section in which it was to be held were poor. They were utterly unable to meet its immense growth, which had passed beyond their most sanguine expectations, and they came in good faith to Congress to ask for a loan of $1,000,000, which was accorded to them by the act approved May 21, 1884.

This million dollars has been expended. The exposition which was to have opened on the 1st of December opened on the 16th. It opened like all gigantic enterprises of the kind—behindhand, and wanting in detail and perfection. Very little could be done in the summer. The exhibitor sent forward their exhibits all at once. It was impossible to locate them and get them into position in time for the opening; and when the opening came, instead of the weather being as it usually is, mild, genial, and balmy, suitable not only for the prosecution of outdoor work for the completion of the exposition, but inviting to every one for recreation and enjoyment, for the first two months New Orleans was visited with such wintry weather as has never been known within the memory of the oldest inhabitant—constant rain, cold almost equal to that in this latitude, mud which rendered the roads impassable and which protracted the transportation of the machinery and heavy exhibits; in short, weather which kept off the crowd of visitors who were expected to be present and to pay by their attendance the expenses of the exposition. There were two months of almost absolute disappointment; almost two months of absolute loss of revenue; and it was not until the 27th day of January that the gate receipts began to pay the current running expenses of the exposition.

I believe that the managers of the exposition were acting in good faith when they came to Congress and asked for this loan.

Mr. HARRISON. Will the Senator from Louisiana allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. JONAS. Certainly.

Mr. HARRISON. What has he to say to the statement of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, that when they came before that committee asking the loan of $1,000,000 they represented that they had bona fide and reliable subscriptions to the amount of $800,000 when it appears they had but a little over $500,000?

Mr. JONAS. I think that my friend, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, is mistaken. I think they represented to him that they expected and hoped to raise $800,000; that they had over $500,000 subscribed and they expected to increase it to $800,000. The fact is they had over $600,000 subscribed and $584,000 have been actually paid.

I repeat, they were in good faith when they asked for this loan. I thought they were too sanguine. I never dreamed when I advocated the loan that they would be able to repay it to the Treasury. I believe they were in good faith in thinking that they could pay it, or some portion of it, anticipating as they did that the receipts would be large, and that the whole world would flock to visit the exposition. Situated as it is, at one of the extremities of the Union, almost as remote as if it were in a foreign country, with a sparse population in the adjoining States, and one ill prepared to bear traveling or other expenses, I never dreamed that it would be self-sustaining, but I thought that it would be honestly managed, that it would pay its current expenses, and that what was realized beyond the current expenses would go into the Treasury to the credit of the loan, and that the exposition would be a great and beneficial enterprise which would repay a hundred-fold to the people of this country the paltry amount which was borrowed from the Treasury to carry it on and make it a success.

Mr. President, I wish for a moment to indulge in some comparisons between this exposition and the one held at Philadelphia. There are represented in this exposition forty-six States and Territories and twenty-one foreign governments. The total space occupied in Philadelphia by the State exhibitions was 21,711 square feet; in New Orleans it is 327,196 square feet. It will be observed from the above that the actual area of space for exhibits at New Orleans is more than fifteen times that of the Philadelphia Centennial Exposition. The area of the official buildings in Philadelphia was 2,505,789 square feet; in New Orleans it covers 2,726,305 square feet. The principal buildings at the international exhibition in New Orleans cover 2,370,855 square feet; in Philadelphia they covered 2,044,542 square feet; in London in 1862, 1,400,000 square feet; in Paris in 1878, 456,923 square feet; in Vienna in 1873, 430,500 square feet; and in the small but brilliant exposition in Atlanta in 1881, 107,520 square feet—less than one-twentieth that occupied by the New Orleans Exposition, and occupied and filled by actual exhibits. Now let me give a comparison of the cost of the various buildings erected by the management at New Orleans and Philadelphia. The buildings in Philadelphia cost $5,242,295; in New Orleans $989,211, or less than one-fifth of that amount.

Mr. President, much has been said about the improvements of the ground. My friend from New Jersey [Mr. SEWELL] called attention to a fact, stated also in argument in another place, that the city of New Orleans subscribed but $100,000 to the exposition, and that $140,803 had been expended in the improvement of the public park of that city, in which the exposition is being held, and he called attention to what he said was an injustice that New Orleans should receive back from the improvement of her public park a larger sum than she subscribed to the exposition. The improvement of the grounds upon which an exposition of this kind is to be held is as legitimate an expenditure as the erection of the necessary buildings. Let me call attention to the difference between the amount expended in the improvement of this unoccupied and waste space of ground called by courtesy a park, in which the exposition is held in New Orleans, and the immense amount expended on the beautiful Fairmount Park, opposite the city where the Senator resides and in sight of his home.

At New Orleans the cost of the park improvement was $140,803; in Philadelphia, $922,782.

Now, Mr. President, the city of New Orleans, he says, derives the benefit resulting from this improvement. Can it be taken away? This money is expended for grass plots, for gravel walks, for pavements, for grading, for cementing, for draining—all for the purpose of making this park beautiful and useful for this exposition. Can it be taken up and given to the Government? Do the Government needs require this park to be reduced to its original condition, that of a morass or wilderness, where all this work would be destroyed? Does the gentleman ask that, and was that done with Fairmount Park in 1876?

Again, a large portion of the expenditure for the improvement of this park was for a wharf. This park is on the Mississippi River. The most convenient mode of reaching the fair is by steamboat running from New Orleans some six miles up to the park. A great many of the exhibits have been carried that way. Boats coming down the river land their passengers and freight there. It was necessary for that purpose to build a wharf, and the expense of building that wharf forms part of the amount which has been expended in the improvement of the park.

Now, Mr. President, I will come to the whole cost of this exposition, and first I will ask my friend the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY], who was the president of the Philadelphia Centennial, what was the whole cost of that exposition?

Mr. HAWLEY. I am sure I can not say at this moment what the entire expenditure was. I have not looked at the figures for two or three years.

Mr. JONAS. Was it not in the neighborhood of seven or eight million dollars?

Mr. HAWLEY. I should say in general it was.

Mr. JONAS. It was in the neighborhood of seven or eight million dollars. This exposition is larger than that at Philadelphia, occupying more space, with larger exhibits, and, as it now stands almost fully completed—the greatest exposition that the world has ever seen, and I bring the testimony of gentlemen of Philadelphia to that effect, the distinguished editor of the Philadelphia Times, the mayor of Philadelphia, and others—has cost altogether, including the debts which they now ask Congress to pay, a little over $2,000,000—$630,000 subscribed, $1,000,000 loaned by the Government, and a deficit of near $400,000, making in all some $2,000,000, as compared with seven or eight million dollars spent for the Philadelphia exposition. Does this show extravagance or mismanagement? Does it show waste or corruption? The buildings are there; the exhibits are there. The exhibition as a success is equal to if it does not excel the one at Philadelphia, and the expense is a little more than one-fourth of its cost, including the $400,000 of debt, which we are now asked to pay.

The director-general, when he appeared before the Appropriations Committee and made his estimates for the exposition, estimated that it would cost some $1,700,000. Its cost, including large expenses which have been caused by the delay consequent upon the late opening and the extra expenses of transportation of freight owing to the weather, counting in all the expenses which had to be paid in consequence of these things, is some $2,000,000, scarcely $300,000 over the original estimate.

Is this an evidence, I ask again, of misappropriation of funds in an enterprise so great as this? Are there any people in this country so experienced in the creation and management of these great enterprises as to entitle them to be able to calculate to a dollar, or even within half a million of dollars, what shall be the necessary expense and outlays? Scarcely a gentleman builds a house but finds the outlay 10, 15, or 20 per cent. greater than his estimates made by a careful architect. And this great exposition, a novelty to us, with which every man concerned was entirely unacquainted, in which not one man engaged had one dollar's worth of interest except his subscription on which he expected no dividend or return, the director-general even without a salary, because he invested it in stock and gave that stock away to a charity—does this expenditure, I say, show on their part mismanagement or corruption? The Committee on Appropriations may not have had time thoroughly to examine all the papers referred to them, but what evidence is afforded that there has been any mismanagement on the part of the managers?

My friend, the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PLUMB], says that when the matter comes to be examined things will be developed that will startle the country. I will ask my friend where there is lurking in these expenditures anything which when discovered and exposed to the world (as it is provided by this bill it shall be before a single dollar is taken out of the Federal Treasury) will show any corruption? My friend, I am satisfied, makes this statement without consideration, and has no evidence on which to base the charge.

Mr. President, in these expenditures the managers have paid $192,000 to the States. They gave $5,000 to each State which made an exhibit. At the time this was done many of the State Legislatures had not provided by appropriation for their State exhibitions, and where they did provide an appropriation it was in many cases too small; and this money was taken and used in every case, and used effectively, by the various commissioners from the States in order to perfect and install their exhibits. The management paid $265,000 for the Government building. At Philadelphia the Government erected and paid for the Government building. It was provided by law when the loan was made that the management should erect the Government building in a style suitable for the exhibition of the United States, and this was done at an expense of $265,000.

In addition, over $20,000 was paid for the installation of the Government exhibition and State exhibits, making a total of over $480,000 paid out of this $1,600,000 by the management for the installation of the United States and State exhibits.

Mr. President, this exposition finds itself in debt some $400,000. This debt is for balance due on the buildings and their erection, it is for salaries, it is for freights, it is for costs of installation, it is for electric lights, portions due the States and Territories; it is, the managers say, all an honest indebtedness; and if it is not, they can not get one dollar of this appropriation which they now ask. They ask, or rather it is asked for them by the commissioners of the States and the committee of exhibitors, that the Government pay this $400,000 in order to put this exposition in running order and enable it to maintain itself on its daily receipts.

The chairman of the Committee on Appropriations has expressed his belief in the ability of the exposition to maintain itself even if this relief is afforded. Mr. President, I differ with him. There is no doubt that it will be self-sustaining. Its running expenses have been reduced now to some $2,500 a day, and they will not exceed, even if this appropriation is made, $2,800 a day, which includes advertising, which has been temporarily suspended; and its receipts now average $5,000 a day. They have been $10,000. The receipts yesterday were $5,300. During Lent, after the carnival is over, and with fine weather such as may be expected in March, April, and May, there is no reason to doubt that the receipts daily will be fully double the amount required to pay the current running expenses of the exposition. Of course whatever surplus there is goes to the Government. There are some additional expenses which will have to be paid in the shape of premiums not yet declared.

They find themselves crippled with this debt. Their daily receipts will not pay their indebtedness, or will not pay it as fast as is required. They have creditors who have been long waiting, who should have been paid in December, in January, or February. They can not wait the slow process of the collection of the amount by the daily receipts. They are pressing. They have it in their power to have a receiver appointed and to stop the exposition; they have it in their power to destroy it just as it is beginning to be profitable, just as it is beginning to be successful, and just as it is beginning to be such an exposition that the whole country and the whole world can be proud of. It is impossible for them to raise the money to discharge these debts, and the committee appointed by the commissioners from the different States and the committee appointed by the exhibitors come to Congress and ask for further relief. They do it not because of any failure of the city of New Orleans; they ask it not on behalf of the city of New Orleans; they ask it not on behalf of the State of Louisiana; they ask it from no sympathy or consideration for the managers of this exhibition, and I am not here to defend them except as the figures defend them. They are, many of them, friends of mine; they are among the best of my constituents; I feel every sympathy for them; but I am not prepared to say that they have not made mistakes.

I am not prepared to say that they may not have spent more money than experts would spend under the same circumstances; I am not prepared to say that some of their contracts may not have been improvident and that some small portion of this money may not have been wasted; but suppose it has been, we are brought face to face with the fact that this exhibition is about to fail and that it has not the power or the means of helping itself. We are told by the commissioners of the different States and the exhibitors that the President of the United States under the authority of an act of Congress has invited them there, that their States have expended $30,000 or $40,000 apiece, that the exhibitors have gone to a heavy expense, that the foreign exhibitors have brought expensive and immense exhibits from all parts of the civilized world and from the far East, at a heavy expense to this exposition, on the faith of the Government and under the invitation of its President. They say to the Government, "You have no right to decree that the exposition shall perish." They say it not in the interest of the people of Louisiana, because the interest of the people of Louisiana forms but a small portion of this great and grand exposition.

This exposition brings to them but little of profit except they hope that it will advertise the manifold advantages of their soil and their climate, as they hope it will also draw attention to all their sister States of the South. They say they ask it for themselves, for the citizens of Minnesota, and Indiana, and Kansas, and Iowa, and New Hampshire, and Vermont, and Maine, and New Jersey. They ask it for your constituents, for your fellow-citizens who have sent their exhibits there under heavy expense and who are threatened with ruin unless the exposition can be carried on for three months longer. They tell you it can not last unless they have relief, and it can not stand up under its present burden of debt. These commissioners and exhibitors, intelligent men, whose report is before you, tell you that with this assistance it can not only pay its running expenses from day to day but can earn some money with which to pay back to the Government a portion of the money which it advanced.

The House of Representatives voted $300,000 with a restriction. The list of debts shows that $383,000 are due. Seventeen thousand dollars, not included in this, for which the Committee on Appropriations have the figures, bring up the amount to nearly $400,000. These debts are honestly due; they are due to citizens of all parts of the country; they are due, many of them, for premiums; they are due for objects specifically set forth in a detailed account furnished to the Committee on Appropriations.

There is no reason why, if we pay one dollar, we should not pay all. There is no reason why $400,000 should not be appropriated as well as $300,000. There is no reason why Congress should say that the debts due to persons outside of the State of Louisiana are to be paid with this $300,000 and that not a dollar is to be paid to honest creditors within the State of Louisiana. What sin have the people of Louisiana committed except that this great exposition and world's wonder is now being held on their soil and within their territory—what sin have these creditors living in Louisiana committed, who have given their time and their labor to the perfection of this great enterprise, that they should be denied payment when creditors in other portions of the Union are provided for?

The amendment of the Senate Committee on Appropriations simply proposes, if the theory is correct, if we are bound to pay these debts, if the national honor is involved, if we have made ourselves responsible morally if not legally that this exposition shall be carried on successfully until the last of May, as we told the nations of the earth it would be when we invited them to it—if there is a necessity in order to do that that this debt should be paid it should be paid in full, $400,000 instead of $300,000, and there should be no restriction preferring one creditor to another. I would say right here that the class of creditors who are to be excluded from any participation in this appropriation are that class of creditors who can do the exposition more harm, whose claims will be more urgent than those urged by any other class, as they are mostly mechanics and laborers, who under the law of Louisiana have a lien on the buildings, have a lien on everything on which they can place a hand, a lien which perhaps many of the foreign creditors have not under our system of laws.

I do not care to pursue this subject any further. The testimony of the whole world has pronounced this exposition a great success. It is not a financial success. It never will be; I never hoped it would be; and there never has been such an exposition held in the wide world which was a financial success, whether at Vienna or London or Paris, or even at Philadelphia. In Philadelphia the money loaned by the United States was paid back to the Government, but not a cent I believe was divided among the stockholders. The Government loan was paid and seven or eight million dollars were spent.

Mr. HAWLEY. Lest I might forget it, I beg to say here that 22½ per cent. was paid to the stockholders. It may have been a little more, but I think that was the percentage.

Mr. JONAS. Twenty-two and one-half per cent. was paid and 7½ per cent. was lost where the exposition was visited by 150,000 people a day for weeks together; there were over 100,000 visitors every day in this great center of population.

I have never hoped that this would be a financial success, but, as the Senator from New Hampshire has well said, it is, notwithstanding, a great success. It is an educator of the people. The country could well afford to pay for it five times as much as it has cost. Now, when we are at the fruition of our hopes, when this great exposition is complete, when it offers educational privileges such as have never been seen before in this country, we are threatened with a total destruction and loss because it is pressed down with $400,000 of debt which is due.

Mr. BAYARD. Will the Senator from Louisiana yield to me for a moment?

Mr. JONAS. Certainly.

Mr. BAYARD. I remember very well in 1872 the Centennial Exposition at Philadelphia was first suggested to Congress, and by the express condition of that act the Government of the United States, while extending a national invitation to visitors, was expressly exempted from any contribution for the cost; but as time went on the collapse of 1873 occurred, and the States that were formerly willing and able to have made subscriptions to carry out the object of that exposition were unable to complete their engagements. Then the bill to appropriate one million and a half to aid that exposition came before the Senate, and it was urged that by the express terms of the act authorizing the Government to become the host of foreign guests and invite them here no dollar of the expense was to fall upon the Federal Treasury; but Congress realized that a public depression and that a great public distress had fallen upon the people of the country in the shape of a financial collapse, and that the States were not able to carry out the original design; and therefore, despite the fact that Congress had expressly excepted any obligation to pay at all in assistance of that exposition, the appropriation of one million and a half dollars was made.

In the present case it strikes me that much that is similar in fact has occurred. When this Cotton Exposition at New Orleans was first set on foot all was fair and entirely prosperous in our land. But to-day we all realize that there is great depression, there is great suffering. There is a large amount of idleness among those who are employed and there is great loss to those who employ them. The state of affairs, then, is quite similar and the cause is almost the same that induced the Congress of the United States in 1874 to make a contribution which it had expressly resolved against two years before, simply because a change of affairs had taken place all over the country.

I believe to-day that a large cause of the want of receipts at the New Orleans Exposition is the simple poverty of our people. Men who were well off two years ago do not feel themselves able to-day to meet the expense, and for that reason a great commercial project is in straits—an object that we are seeking to accomplish under the commercial power of the Constitution, and which has been repeated over and over again by the Government of the United States sending ships carrying freight free, with the contrivances of American skill and industry, to the exhibitions at Paris, at Vienna, and at London. If we could afford and could find power to contribute thus to the education of other nations and to expositions in foreign countries, surely that power must be given us when we are dealing with part of the United States themselves.

If there has been, as I submit, a change and a check—a temporary check I hope and believe in the prosperity of our affairs—we will recognize that fact to-day just as the Congress of 1874 recognized the fact then that the contributions which were expected then failed because of a public distress. The contributions which were expected from private sources are now withheld because of public distress, and there is no reason why Congress should not step forward now and for a great public end make as fair and liberal a contribution proportionately as it did ten years ago to the great exposition at the city of Philadelphia.

Mr. JONAS. I was going to say that the proviso which the Senate Committee on Appropriations has inserted provides that—

No part of the foregoing sum shall be paid until statements and exhibits in detail, satisfactory to the Secretary of the Treasury, are made of all expenditures under the appropriation made by act of July 7, 1864, and that said expenditures have been made for the purposes and in the manner provided for in said act.

I submit that if there has been any improvident or improper expenditure, it must all be accounted for satisfactorily before this money can be expended. Here I desire to state to my friend from Indiana, who asked a question of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations to-day, that the exposition closes on the last day of May, and that it is necessary that the aid should be extended now if at all, and that at the next session of Congress this appropriation would come too late, the exposition would have fallen, would have passed into ruin, and it would be impossible to resuscitate it.

Mr. HARRISON. As the Senator has turned his attention to me, I should like to ask a question.

Mr. BROWN. I had risen to ask a question, but I will yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Louisiana yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. HARRISON. The Senator from Louisiana addressed his remarks to me, and therefore I address him. I beg pardon of the Senator from Georgia. It appears from the statements which have been laid before the Senate that the entire amount of the $400,000 suggested by the Committee on Appropriations of this body will be insufficient to pay the existing debts of the management.

Mr. JONAS. No, sir; I beg the Senator's pardon. It appears that it will be sufficient to pay the debts.

Mr. HARRISON. Well, suppose it be sufficient, as the Senator says; what has the Senator to say as to the future prospects of the exposition between now and May?

Mr. JONAS. I have said that the daily receipts now are double the amount of the expenditures, and there is every reason to expect that that will continue so to be until the close of the exposition.

Mr. HARRISON. The Senator has said now—

Mr. JONAS. The daily expenditures are $2,500, and the daily receipts are over $5,000.

Mr. HARRISON. Has that been true on every day during the Mardi Gras celebration at New Orleans?

Mr. JONAS. That has been true every day since Mardi Gras, during Lent, which is the duldest period of the year in New Orleans. The receipts on Saturday last were $5,300.

Mr. BROWN. Some remarks have been made during the discussion in reference to the management of this fund. I desire to ask the Senator from Louisiana if the management disbursing these funds were not appointed by the President of the United States?

Mr. JONAS. I have so stated.

Mr. BROWN. And they disbursed no money except by resolution signed by their treasurer, and on check signed by the treasurer and auditor.

Mr. JONAS. They do not; they have a treasurer and auditor.

Mr. BROWN. But all their vouchers are presented to the Secretary of the Treasury; and do they not undergo the same scrutiny that is required in the case of all Government expenditures?

Mr. JONAS. I am so informed.

Mr. BROWN. Then how is it possible for a misappropriation of funds to have occurred?

Mr. JONAS. I believe the only way it could be insinuated that there has been mismanagement has been in extravagance in expenditures; perhaps they have made improvident contracts; perhaps they have paid more for buildings and more for materials than they should. There is no evidence of it, but I say that as the expenses are some $400,000 more than the estimates, it is possible that there may have been some mistakes.

Mr. BROWN. Was there not as much done there for the $2,000,000 as for the $7,000,000 in Philadelphia?

Mr. JONAS. There has been, and I have argued that this proves that there could have been no mismanagement or improper expenditure.

Mr. BECK. Mr. President—

LEGISLATIVE, ETC., APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask the Senator from Kentucky to yield to me for a moment. I desire to move, as I see the legislative appropriation bill is still on the table, that the Senate further insist on its amendments to that bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARRIS in the chair). The Senator from Iowa moves that the Senate further insist on its amendments to the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. MORRILL. Do you not want to ask for a conference?

Mr. ALLISON. I do not ask for a conference.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8256) making appropriation for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes.

Mr. BECK. I listened to all that has been said in regard to the necessity of the granting of an additional sum to the New Orleans Exposition. I confess I listened with some prejudice when the statements were first made; but after looking over the whole ground I was entirely convinced that we ought to give the $300,000 that the House suggested, and then if we intend to do any good at all we ought to make the aid $400,000, and there end our contribution to the exposition.

The chairman of the Committee on Appropriations has gone over the whole ground. He has stated all that any member of the committee can state as to our reasons for acting as we propose. I do not believe that any additional argument on my part can add anything to what he has said; and as we have only one more working day before this Congress dies, and as the deficiency bill and the fortification bill and the river and harbor bill and this bill, together with a number of other bills yet in conference, have to be disposed of, I hope and trust that we shall endeavor to close this debate, and vote one way or the other, and let this bill get through, as it must be passed. If what has been said will not induce gentlemen to vote for the appropriation, nothing that I can say, or that any other member of the committee can say, I think, will change the mind of a single Senator. Time is extremely valuable, and I will not therefore venture to say more than to urge very prompt action in regard to this bill, or we are not going to get away on the 4th of March with our work well done.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I do not want to make a speech, but simply, as this is perhaps the last time I shall ever address the Senate, to express my amazement that the Senate of the United States has hesitated one moment in voting for this amendment of the Committee on Appropriations.

Now, what is this case? The House of Representatives have sent to us on this appropriation bill a clause appropriating $300,000 in further aid to the exposition at New Orleans; and the Senate Committee on Appropriations propose to increase that by $100,000; and a paltry $100,000 is the sole subject of all this lengthy discussion.

What is the exposition? Is it the exposition of New Orleans? No, sir. Is it the exposition of Louisiana? No, sir. Of the South? No, sir; nor of the West; but of the whole country.

This exposition started with the intention first of being merely an exposition of cotton production and the manufactures thereof. It was widened to embrace all the agricultural interests of the South and West. Finally Congress took hold of it, and they said, "We will widen the basis of your operations, we will make the exposition national, we will make it international, we will give you a million dollars to make it the greatest exposition this country or the world has ever seen." It became by that solemn act of Congress a national concern. It is our exposition and not the exposition of Louisiana or of New Orleans. It was placed at New Orleans because that was the most convenient point for the South American and Central American republics, with whom it is our interest to cultivate the most intimate relations, and to extend our commerce and trade by every means in our power, and also for Mexico, the greatest of all our sister republics upon this continent.

The President of the United States was directed by an act of Congress to invite all the nations of the earth to participate in this grand international exposition to be held at New Orleans. He invited them, and they have come. New Orleans is merely the place where the exposition is located. It is the grand banquet hall, and we are the representatives of 55,000,000 people in entertaining all the nations of this earth. And yet we hesitate, we higgie about adding $100,000 to the appropriation made by the House to prevent this exposition from failing.

Why, Mr. President, I have seen within two days five hundred people who have just returned from that exposition. Many of them have seen the great expositions in London, in Vienna, in Paris, and in Philadelphia, and they all concur in saying that this is the grandest one that has ever been had on the face of this earth. Mexico alone, our sister republic that lies along our borders for more than a thousand miles, occupies five acres of ground in the display of her products alone. There is not one republic of the whole Central or Southern American States that is not represented there to-day; nor is there a civilized nation in Europe or in Asia that has not its exhibition there to-day.

These are the commercial views, but there are moral and political and social views as well. It is a bringing of our people together from every section of this broad country; and the way to make its people love each other more is to make them know each other better. Whenever you bring them together and let them associate with each other, as these exhibitions have always done, the country is greatly benefited, prejudices go away, sectional prejudices drop from off them, and they fraternize at once. They are the occasions when all commune together, and they erect their altars upon which all the sections after their long estrangements may come and renew their vows of patriotism upon a common altar of a common country.

These are some of the advantages, and if the sum was $5,000,000 instead of $400,000 I should say it was money well expended, for we should have a return in time of $500,000,000 for it. Since I have been in the Senate I have never been narrow or sectional in any of my views. I have always stood up for what I thought was the true interest not only of my section, but of the whole country. I have voted away millions and hundreds of millions, or aided in doing it, of the people's money for general purposes that were not confined to my section alone, and I do not believe it is possible that any Senator on either side of the House can have any such view in this matter. I have voted money for internal improvements, I have voted for all public purposes, for education, for pensions, and I voted the other day to put General Grant upon the retired-list. When a great man like Grant, the chief soldier of his age, twice President of the United States, and a man who had filled the largest place in the world's eye of any living mortal, is broken down in health and constitution and weighed down by years, I have felt it to be unjust not to place him on the list of the Army, and I voted for it and I am proud and glad that I did.

I can not believe that there is any Senator who on this question is actuated by a sectional motive. The interests of the Southern country, industrial, commercial, moral, and social, are all to be advanced by this, and it is a paltry sum to be appropriated for such a grand purpose.

These are the reasons for which I shall vote for the amendment of the committee.

Mr. ALLISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the debate upon this amendment and the other amendments to this bill may be confined to five minutes for each Senator under the usual five-minute rule.

Mr. VAN WYCK. Put it on this clause.

Mr. ALLISON. Well, for the present I will ask unanimous consent to confine debate to five minutes by each Senator on this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa asks unanimous consent that debate on the pending amendment shall be confined to five minutes.

Mr. ALLISON. And on all amendments to this clause.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Debate on all amendments to this clause of the bill. Is there objection?

Mr. HAWLEY. I am going to say a few words, but I will do my best to keep within the five minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. HAWLEY. I do not object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered.

Mr. HAWLEY. No doubt there were elements of weakness in this scheme from the beginning. One of them was obviously, as the Senator from Louisiana has admitted, placing the exposition at New Orleans with the Gulf on one side and a thinly settled country all around it. It was different at Philadelphia at least in this: that Philadelphia was the center of perhaps 4,000,000 people who could leave home in the morning, spend some hours, and get back at night; but it is quite useless to discuss that now.

The difficulty in the case is that the United States has made itself in a sense responsible to the world for the exposition; that it openly did so with the experience of the Centennial Exhibition before it. It authorized or directed the Secretary of State to invite foreign nations to come here and join in the exhibition, and loaned the enterprise a million of dollars. That gave a start, particularly to foreign exhibitors, and they came there. We knew the experience which had been had before. I feel under some sort of obligation to the foreign exhibitors. Some one says we have nothing to pay them. I can not help feeling that there is a little moral and equitable obligation at least. If there should happen to be awarded thirty, forty, or sixty thousand dollars to foreign exhibitors, and then the management at New Orleans should turn around and say, "We are quite unable to pay," and a foreign exhibitor writes to his minister at Washington and he says, "The Secretary of State for the United States gave a cordial invitation to our country to go there, and its citizens have gone from Belgium or France; they were cordially invited to come and they did come"—these are the things that trouble me.

I can criticize the management very easily. Any man of business experience can criticize the management of the exhibition to some extent. It was a mistake, I think, to make an offer of $5,000 to each of the States and Territories to get their exhibits there, to get them to make exhibits. The business of a corporation of an exhibition is in the first place to prepare the ground, to put up buildings, and see that they are ready for exhibits; but it is not to undertake to prepare those exhibits, or to bring them down, or to put them in the building even. That is the business of the exhibitors.

The management should have left it to the patriotism and enterprise of the States to pay the expenses for going down, but they have paid out $192,000 (and you might as well charge it out of the Government's million) to the States to bribe and stimulate them to go with their exhibits. I am not scolding about it, but I think it was an error in the management, an error in the general policy of such an exposition.

Again, I do not see why they should payout $6,000 or $7,000 for railways. I suppose they will say that they got into some controversy with the railway companies, and those corporations had not enterprise enough to lay their tracks to the buildings in the way they ought. At any rate the management felt absolutely compelled, in order to do anything in that direction, to spend $6,000 or $7,000 on branch railroads running to the exposition. That, whether a misfortune or otherwise of judgment, it is too late to inquire into. There it is as one of the expenditures.

Then they spent money on the Government building there. There were $285,000 of the million that went toward governmental and State purposes. We ought not to find fault with them about that; we ought not to speak as if they had wasted the million dollars, for they have not done it. If their extraordinary figures, as published in the National Republican of Friday, the 27th, are correct, they have done remarkably well in some respects. I do not see how they have covered so many acres and have a construction account for buildings of only $900,000. There certainly can not be much robbery in that feature. I do not know where the robbery can be discovered in it by my casual observation.

My friend from Louisiana—I am hurrying through as rapidly as I can—made a comparison or two for the sake of praising the managers at New Orleans, which seemed slightly to reflect on the Philadelphia exhibition. Let me explain. He says that the buildings at Philadelphia cost $5,242,000 against $969,000 at New Orleans; but remember that the State of Pennsylvania put up a Memorial Hall there, at a cost of $1,000,000, to be a permanent memorial of the celebration. We covered as much ground and found as much room by the expenditure of seventy-five or a hundred thousand dollars. We did not put that million in our actual account; we did not place that among our obligations, and did not put that into the stock at all. The State of Pennsylvania contributed a million-dollar building; but it was nothing to us. It goes into the $5,000,000, however. So of the beautiful Horticultural Hall, which was a permanent decoration of the ground and is there now. It is the Horticultural Hall of the city of Philadelphia, part of its park. That accounts for the cost of our buildings.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's five minutes have expired.

Mr. VAN WYCK. I hope unanimous consent will be given to the Senator to proceed.

Mr. HAWLEY. I will go on as rapidly as any other man and get through as soon as I can, and that briefly. Horticultural Hall is the permanent property of the city of Philadelphia, in that park.

Again, the Senator from Louisiana says the cost of preparing the grounds in Philadelphia, such as grading, draining, bridges, fences, &c., amounted to $922,782. I had forgotten the figures. Perhaps that is correct. That is not large; but that was done by the city of Philadelphia as permanent improvements of the magnificent Fairmount Park, and there it is to show for itself to-day and it did not cost us a cent. He compares the $922,000 with $180,000 that the management have spent on the ground at New Orleans. The management have spent a part of the general fund and leave it for the city. The city of Philadelphia spent it for the exhibition, and there it is. So the Philadelphia exposition, instead of being $700,000 behind the New Orleans, was $130,000 ahead of it so far as the park business is concerned. I say that by the way lest I might seem to submit to some things that are possible reflections.

Remember in behalf of this enterprise that they were seeking to crowd the railroads at a time when all the fall crops were rushing there; remember the extraordinary season, the flood and rain, the difficulties in getting to the ground; remember the inevitable delay in opening because this affair was not done in season, the foreign exhibits were not ready quite in season; and the people who went there for the first three weeks sent home very unfavorable reports about all the matters of personal comfort, especially the ease of access to the grounds, &c. Those things were a great discouragement. Take the blocking of the railroads, for example. They had to bring in 10,000 tons of goods there, and they crowded up the roads and side-tracks for miles. The railroads were overwhelmed, and so were the exhibitors.

There is one error in the exhibition, let me say in passing, that has pressed upon every exhibition of the sort. I have been to many other places and seen them. It is the temptation of size. A man will come along there with ten pianos, with ten rakes, or ten reapers and mowers, and wants to make a grand exhibition, covering a space as large as this Chamber. You tell him one single mower and reaper is enough, you tell him one Steinway grand is as good as fifteen, and you condense the space to the size of a common bed-room and crowd him into it with his one piano. I mention that by way of illustration. Size is not necessary as the gauge of excellence.

I am not willing to believe from what has been said that this is not really an admirable exhibition. In one feature I am sure they have done better than was done in Philadelphia, and that is in getting fine collective exhibits from a larger number of States. The States exhibited a good deal in Philadelphia, but their exhibits were largely scattered, and they did not to a sufficient extent make agricultural and geological and mining collective exhibits, as Kansas did, to its great benefit without doubt. None of these exhibitions ever paid, none of them ever came near paying in any country in the world, in the ordinary acceptance of the term. They are supported by subscriptions of private stock and by the contributions of governments, and yet there has never been a good one held that was not worth ten dollars to the country for the one that was expended on it. There never has been one of these great international exhibitions held that did not to a large extent revolutionize the industry and the manufactures of the country in which it was held. It was eminently so as far as that of 1851, the famous Crystal Palace exhibition in London, was concerned. The history of every branch of art and manufacturing industry shows it was so with the Philadelphia Exposition, which had an enormous advantage over all others in being the centennial of a sacred event.

I am entirely willing to vote this appropriation. I regret the necessity of doing it; I wish the management could have avoided it. I do not see the evidence of the corruption charged. I think it will be worth what it has cost to the country. I think it is doing good with the extraordinary exhibit that it has brought there from Mexico, for that is remarkable, and so with Costa Rica and various South American and Central American countries that are there with exhibits.

Bad as these statements look to-day that there is no prospect of our getting back any of our million dollars, it is going to be worth what it costs to the country, and the shortest way out of the woods is the daylight ahead instead of the darkness backward, in my opinion.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, when this scheme was inaugurated—and I was one of those who voted for the act loaning a million dollars—we were advised by the Committee on Appropriations that they had by very stringent provisions in the bill protected the United States against any liability for any debt which might be incurred. The chairman of the Appropriations Committee then so advised us. He mentioned another caution or restriction which was contained in the bill which prohibited the management from incurring any debt. We were not only to be non-responsible for any debt, but the management in regard to the million dollars were put under prohibition by law at the time from creating any debt. Now we are confronted with a debt that I do not think any Senator will doubt to be less than half a million dollars on the statements that we have had here to-day. We are met with the statement from the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, who has given careful attention to it, that this money will barely, if so much as, pay the present existing indebtedness, and that he anticipates that the receipts will fall behind the expenses from now until the close of the exhibition.

Mr. President, the question is how are we to deal with this question? The men who came here and represented to us that this could be managed in such a way as to return the million of dollars to the Government come now and tell us that our million is gone beyond hope, that they are a half million in debt, and they bring here a statement of accounts that to my mind is perfectly satisfactory as proving that the half million dollars will not more than set them on their feet to-day to enter upon another course of debt-making in the management of the exposition.

You talk about the value of this exposition. The value of an exposition is in the dissemination of knowledge which induces people to go and see it. There is little value in an exposition that is not able by reason of location or for any other reason to attract people there to see it. You disseminate knowledge of machinery and of textile fabrics, you disseminate knowledge of the fabrics and manufactures of other countries, by bringing in contact with them, so that they may have a sight of them, a multitude of people; and this object has failed entirely at New Orleans, and I predict to-night that if we pass this appropriation we shall be called upon at the next session of Congress to give a half million more to pay the debts of the New Orleans Exposition.

Will the Senator from Iowa tell me upon what principle it is that he says we will pay any debt this management owes to the citizen of any other State except Louisiana? Are the Senators from Louisiana going to support that proposition making a discrimination against their own citizens? How shall we answer a citizen of Louisiana, or any other citizen, if he comes here at the next Congress and says to us, "I have a debt against that management which is just as honest and valid a debt as the debt of the citizen of Pennsylvania that you have paid, and I want you to pay mine." I say, Mr. President, that though the Appropriations Committee have put in the beginning of this amendment again the expression "for final aid to the World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition," it will not be final. We have heretofore said we were not responsible for these debts. By this amendment we assume responsibility for them, and attempt to limit that responsibility to debts to non-residents of Louisiana. I say that discrimination can not be maintained in justice; and if this $400,000 fails to pay off the debt existing now, or the debt that may be incurred, I want to know what answer any Senator will have to make next Congress when they come up and ask us to pay those debts. There is no answer. We are committed to the proposition to see this exposition through, cost what it will.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. GIBSON. Mr. President, I will not detain the Senate by any general argument in favor of this amendment, but I desire to say that the chief difficulty which the management of this exposition have had to deal with is in the bad weather. It has already been shown by my colleague, in his able speech on this subject, how well the money has been used by the management of this exposition; how in comparison with the exposition at Philadelphia they have achieved much more with the money which they have expended at New Orleans than was accomplished in Philadelphia for the same amount.

The great difficulty, as I said, in New Orleans is that in the months of December and January we had heavy rainfalls. The whole earth became saturated; there was a perfect quarantine around this exposition, a mud quarantine, that absolutely cut off the exhibitors from getting their exhibits into the buildings. That condition of things not only prevented the completion of the exhibits, but indisposed people from visiting the exposition; and these two causes combined made it a failure for two months. But with the coming of good weather, with the increase of facilities for travel, with the completion of all the exhibits both of foreign nations and of the several States of our Union, I believe that the increase of receipts will be very large. In fact we already see that the increase of receipts has gone up within the last few days from one to three, four, and five thousand dollars a day. I say therefore to the Senator from Indiana that there will be no failure from this time until the closing of the exposition. The same causes which have brought failure up to this time will no longer exist, and for one I am perfectly willing to give the Senator a guarantee that I will not vote for another appropriation at the next Congress for the exposition in New Orleans.

Mr. HARRISON. How can the Senator refuse to do it if he votes for this?

Mr. GIBSON. I can refuse to do it by answering "nay" when my name is called and by serving notice now that I will not vote for another appropriation; and I am willing to make that guarantee because I believe—

Mr. HARRISON. I do not want to take it out of the Senator's time, but I ask consent to put a question. The money is first to be applied to pay debts to individuals and corporations; then to pay the awards. Suppose there should not be enough to pay the awards, would the Senator vote for an appropriation to meet them?

Mr. GIBSON. You may suppose anything, and if I regarded this exposition with the same feeling that the Senator from Indiana does now I would have voted against the original loan of $1,000,000, and I would vote to-day against this $400,000 appropriation; but I believe that this is a worthy exposition; I believe that it is going to be successful and that the management will be able to pay off every dollar of expense incurred from this time on.

The Senator asked me if I was willing to vote for this amendment which makes a discrimination against the citizens of Louisiana who may be employed in this exposition, the laborer or mechanic. I will answer the Senator that I am willing to vote for this bill just as it stands. I am willing to make the discrimination. Why? Because I believe the exposition is going to be a success and that they will earn enough from their receipts to pay off the laborers and the mechanics; and more than that, I will state to the Senator that under the laws of Louisiana the laborer and mechanic have a lien upon the buildings of the exposition, which secures them amply. So then we are making no discrimination which will be effective against the laboring men who give their time and their services in New Orleans to this exposition. I do not believe that there is a Senator here who would be willing to make such a discrimination. They are amply protected.

All I desired to do was to give the assurance to the Senate that this board of management is composed of able, of conscientious, and of intelligent citizens of Louisiana, appointed by the President of the United States, who will handle these funds properly, and when the time comes to render their account I venture to prophesy that that account will be found exact in every respect.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. BECK. The Senator from Louisiana has answered the question I rose to ask him, and has removed the difficulty suggested by the Senator from Indiana, when he has assured the Senate that the discrimination in this bill is right because in Louisiana mechanics by the law of that State have a lien, while others have not.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment recommended by the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. HALE. Is it in order now to move to strike out the amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. What amendment does the Senator refer to?

Mr. HALE. I have not been in. The question now is on agreeing to the amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On agreeing to the amendment reported by the Committee on Appropriations, which will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. In line 2396 it is proposed to strike out "three" and insert "four;" so as to read:

Not to exceed the sum of $400,000.

Mr. HALE. I have no objection to the vote being taken upon that; and whatever may be the result, then if I shall get the floor I shall move to strike out the whole clause.

Mr. SEWELL. I gave notice of a motion of that kind.

Mr. HALE. That I did not know. Of course I will not interfere with the Senator from New Jersey. I only want the question raised on that proposition.

Mr. HOAR. The Senate gave unanimous consent this morning that it should be in order for me to move an amendment which was sent to the desk. I suppose regularly I ought to wait until the bill is completed before moving that amendment, but it will be certainly much more convenient to the Senate to have me move it now, and if there be no objection I should like to modify that amendment somewhat. Perhaps the best way would be to make the amendment after the vote has been taken on this, but if the Senate think it should come out of the $400,000, I can make it in that form in the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. HARRISON called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered. The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. PLUMB (when Mr. BUTLER's name was called). The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BUTLER] and myself are paired on this question. If he were here, the Senator from South Carolina would vote "yea."

Mr. MAHONE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SABIN]. If he were here, he would vote "yea" and I should vote "nay."

Mr. PLUMB (when his name was called). On this subject I am paired with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BUTLER]. If he were present, I should vote "nay."

Mr. RANSOM (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Illinois [Mr. LOGAN], but I observe that on this question his colleague votes "yea," and he consents that I should vote. I vote "yea."

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. MANDERSON. I am paired on this question with the Senator from Florida [Mr. JONES].

The result was announced—yeas 40, nays 16; as follows:

YEAS—40.

So the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HOAR. I move to amend the bill, after the word "department," in line 2412, by inserting the words:

Also for the woman's department of the said exposition, $15,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from Massachusetts that the order of the Senate was to proceed with the reading of the bill and the amendments of the Committee on Appropriations, and the point to which the amendment of the Senator is directed has not yet been reached in the reading. The last reading ended at line 2396 where "three" was stricken out and "four" was inserted. The Senator will withhold his amendment until the point to which it applies is reached. The reading will proceed.

The reading of the bill was resumed and continued to line 2412.

Mr. HOAR. I now make a motion—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is it a motion to amend the next amendment reported by the committee?

Mr. HOAR. No, sir. I had unanimous consent from the Senate to make this motion this morning.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair was not informed of that. Pursuant to consent, the Senator from Massachusetts may offer his amendment.

Mr. HOAR. After the word "department," in line 2412, I move to insert:

Also for the woman's department of the said exposition, $15,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts.

The amendment was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was to add to the clause making appropriation for the "World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition," after the word "department," in line 2412, the following clause:

And no part of the foregoing sum shall be paid until statements and exhibits in detail, satisfactory to the Secretary of the Treasury, are made of all expenditures under the appropriation made by act of July 7, 1884, and that said expenditures have been made for the purposes and in the manner provided for in said act; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall report to Congress, at the beginning of the next session, all such detailed statements made to him of the expenditures under said appropriation and also under this appropriation; and the necessary expenses of these examinations shall be paid from this appropriation.

Mr. MAXEY. On account of the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts, the word "sum," in line 2412, should be in the plural. It should be "sums."

Mr. HOAR. The best mode of reaching that would be to transfer my amendment to the end of the clause.

Mr. MAXEY. The word "sum" would refer to the last appropriation.

Mr. ALLISON. In this amendment the date of the act should be May 21, 1884, instead of July 7, 1884.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa moves to amend the amendment of the committee by striking out "July 7" and inserting "May 21."

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment as amended.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed. The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in the appropriations for "public printing and binding," after the words "two million," at the end of line 2435, to insert "five hundred thousand;" so as to read:

For the public printing, for the public binding, and for paper for the public printing, including cost of printing the debates and proceedings of Congress in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, and for lithographing, mapping, and engraving for both Houses of Congress, the Supreme Court of the United States, the supreme court of the District of Columbia, the Court of Claims, the Library of Congress, and the Departments, including salaries or compensation of all necessary clerks and employes, for labor (by the day, piece, or contract), and for all the necessary materials which may be needed in the prosecution of the work, $2,500,000; and from the said sum hereby appropriated printing and binding may be done by the Public Printer to the amounts following, respectively, &c.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 2441, to increase the appropriation "for printing and binding for Congress, including the proceedings and debates," from $1,084,500 to $1,350,625.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 2444, to increase the appropriation for printing and binding "for the State Department" from $8,400 to $10,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HOAR. I desire to inquire of the Chair, before the Secretary proceeds further, whether an amendment was assented to which was suggested by the Senator from Texas, in line 2412, changing the word "sum" to "sums?"

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It was not.

Mr. HOAR. It was understood by several Senators that it was assented to. I ask unanimous consent then to return to that line and to change the word "sum" to "sums." Otherwise it would apply only to the $15,000.

Mr. MAXEY. It ought to be amended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts and the Senator from Texas ask unanimous consent that in line 2412 the word "sum" be changed to the word "sums." Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is agreed to.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The next amendment of the Committee on Appropriations was, in line 2446, to increase the appropriation for printing and binding "for the Treasury Department" from $234,800 to $293,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 2448, to increase the appropriation for printing and binding "for the War Department" from $123,200 to $154,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 2451, to increase the appropriation for printing and binding "for the Navy Department" from $52,900 to $66,125.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 2454, to increase the appropriation for printing and binding "for the Interior Department" from $292,800 to $366,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 2458, to increase the appropriation for printing and binding "for the Department of Justice" from $6,300 to $7,875.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 2460, to increase the appropriation for printing and binding "for the Post-Office Department" from $150,500 to $198,125.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 2463, to increase the appropriation for printing and binding "for the Agricultural Department" from $15,700 to $19,625.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 2465, to increase the appropriation for printing and binding "for the Supreme Court of the United States" from $6,500 to $8,125.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 2468, to increase the appropriation for printing and binding "for the supreme court of the District of Columbia" from $800 to $1,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 2469, to increase the appropriation for printing and binding "for the Court of Claims" from $6,500 to $13,125.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, in line 2471, to increase the appropriation for printing and binding "for the Library of Congress" from $9,100 to $11,375.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 2479, to insert:

To enable the Public Printer to continue the operations under joint resolution approved February 6, 1884, for the removal and storage of certain property of the Government mentioned therein, $3,000, to be immediately available.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, after line 2485, to insert:

To enable the Joint Committee on Public Printing to complete the preparation

tion, proof-reading, indexing, and revising the classified, analytical, and descriptive catalogue of Government publications, and of publications of public interest purchased by the United States for use or distribution, $800, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the final completion of the work, which may be expended as additional pay or compensation to any officer or employé of the United States, the same to be immediately available.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was to strike out the clause from line 2496 to line 2499, inclusive, as follows:

For payment to sixty-one printers regularly employed on the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, $60 each, for time unemployed during the present session, $3,660.

Mr. VOORHEES. I rise to oppose that amendment, and say that in my judgment the Appropriations Committee of the Senate is wrong in proposing to strike out this clause.

In composing and preparing the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD it is necessary to employ and keep ready on hand a large number of printers. Now and then there are days when no work is necessary to be done. These men are then out of employment for a week or two at a time. Thus when we take a recess, when the per diem of our own employés of the Senate is going on, these men are docked for a loss of time. They are very ill able to afford such a deprivation on their part, and they are kept on expense and held to be in readiness to go to work on our motion. They were, in fact, so during the Christmas holidays. I certainly hope the Senate will not oppose the retention of what was ingrafted in the bill by the House.

I do not wish to detain the Senate upon the subject. I have looked over, however, the memorial of these compositors, and I am satisfied of the justice of their claim. I hope, therefore, the amendment proposed by the Committee on Appropriations will not be concurred in, but that the bill may be left to stand as it came from the House.

Mr. HARRIS. I should like to inquire of the Senator from Iowa, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, if these printers are paid higher wages than printers are ordinarily paid.

Mr. VOORHEES. I will answer. I presume they are, but they work all night. It is the hardest work known to the craft. There is nothing like it, and nobody but able-bodied men fit to go into the field can stand the work for any length of time. It is hard, long night-work, in which men break down to my certain personal knowledge, and we throw those men off pay whenever we take a recess for a few days, as we did at Christmas, while we make it necessary for them to be ready to resume work. This is an injustice which we do not practice with any other employés of the Government. They earn their pay, fully earn it.

In response to the Senator from Tennessee I say if they are paid a little more than others they are not paid enough in excess of others. I know what kind of work they have to do. I take it for granted they are paid more, though on that subject I have not very accurate knowledge whether they are paid in excess of other printers or not.

Mr. HARRISON. If my colleague will yield to me a moment, I will say to him that in conversation with one of these printers from my State employed on the RECORD, I asked of him the question which the Senator from Tennessee has just propounded, and he told me that they were not, that really they could not earn as much as men doing the same kind of night-work on a newspaper when they had regular work.

Mr. HARRIS. I will say that in consultation with one of these printers to-night I was informed that they were paid the usual wages of job printers. If that be so, I think there is absolute justice in retaining the House provision and paying them for the time that they are held on duty and yet not permitted to work.

Mr. ALLISON. Since the RECORD has been printed at the Public Printing Office the type-setters have been paid by the thousand ems. This is the first instance that I know of where they have asked Congress to give them additional compensation. There are a large number of them. I believe nearly all the printers in the Public Printing Office are paid in this way, and if we are to pay any portion of the printers in the Public Printing Office because for a day or two for some reason or other, or even for a week, there is no type-setting to do, we shall enter upon a system of extra compensation which will result in very large sums of money being paid from year to year.

Mr. BLAIR. I had occasion to inquire into this matter a little, and suggested to the printer who came to me with it the same view of the subject which the chairman of the committee has now presented to the Senate, why it was that for the first time they made this claim, because it seemed to me it would be setting a dangerous precedent, and that the Senate would hesitate to allow the bill to remain as it came from the House making this appropriation. He said to me that this was an exceptional year; that during those days from the 22d of last December to the 7th or 8th of January this year they had had no work whatever. Why it had been so he hardly knew, but always hitherto they had been allowed to work and had worked during the vacation; while others were enjoying their holidays they had work and they were paid, paid by the job; but this year, although they were kept there on duty and were losing their time while others were being paid, the Public Printer gave them no work at all. Hence they thought it was just that they should receive their compensation as usual. They were there in readiness to work and had every reason to suppose that they would be employed as usual, but they failed to get work. They needed the work; others were having it when they were doing nothing, and they thought they should have pay for that time.

Mr. MAXEY. I had a conversation with a young man of intelligence employed upon the RECORD. I asked him in respect to the way they were paid. He informed me by the thousand ems, as he called it, or some expression of that kind; I do not know anything about the work.

During the recess no RECORD is published. Their work is night-work necessarily. That corps is organized, and organized to keep up the RECORD, which is the finest printing that is done, I venture to say, in America or anywhere else. When we are off taking a recess we draw our pay; and when we keep those men here there is no justice to my mind in requiring them to live off of what they have made by hard labor until we get ready to put them back to work.

I think the action of the House is precisely right, and that it is just and fair. We had as well stop our pay, and I think we ought to stop our pay when we take a recess and none of us are tired and there is no need for taking a vacation. We did not do that, and I do not see why these men should not get their rights.

Mr. CONGER. Almost all the other employés of the Government are paid one-twelfth of the time of the year for a leave of absence of thirty days in each year. These printers are required to excel in their profession, and the accuracy and promptness with which the RECORD is published shows perhaps that they are the best skilled printers in the world. That is said of them. In the short session they have but three months' service altogether here, or about that during the year, and it is absolutely necessary in order to carry on the business of printing for the Government that there should be kept here the best printers in the world during the time of the session of Congress, so that the work may be done promptly; and it has always required to be well paid. The work must be done at night, after 11 or 12 o'clock, to have the RECORD ready for the Senate at 8 or 9 o'clock in the morning. It leaves but a small portion, three months, with the recess which we have in the short term, for them to work, and they stay expecting continuous work. So some of these printers, a committee of them, told me that this year there has been, for some reason, a lack of work. They have no leave of absence. They are paid solely for the work they do.

I think it is no more than right, especially in the short session, that they should be paid some compensation for the time they are required to be here to be ready to carry on the printing of the Government.

If they receive but little if any more than they could receive for work in other cities, and I think the law requires them to be employed at what would be called the average wages in other large cities of the country, it seems to me just and right that these men, required to be here, required to excel in their labor, required to do night-work, required to keep up printing at whatever cost of labor and time, who are deprived of employment for some days in the winter, should receive this compensation, and I shall vote most cheerfully to keep the provision in the bill.

Mr. PLUMB. Mr. President, this thing is not very large, and I heartily indorse all that has been said about the character of the work that these men do; but I have never heard it suggested that they were not paid composition wages satisfactory to them. It has been frequently said to me that they are paid higher than is paid for similar composition by private parties. I am willing to admit that taking the scale of wages which the Government pays as compared with the wages paid for similar services by private parties we ought to pay these people more. I think that generally those who are employed in the Government Printing Office by the month or by the year are not paid any more or perhaps not as much as the Government pays in other departments.

There is no question, as I said, about the excellence of the work, but I ask Senators to consider that here is a character of work which has been done by the piece. I do not say whether wisely or not, but it has been done by the piece; that is to say, by the thousand ems. It is work which pertains to the session, and that session is always interrupted during the holidays. It is a necessary part of the understanding with which these people engage in the work when they undertake it that there will be a vacation during the holidays. As I understand, those who work upon the RECORD are specially allotted there to work, and when that fails of course they do not get other work.

Mr. BLAIR. Will the Senator allow me to say that I asked particularly as to that point, and I was informed by one of these men that during the vacation they have always hitherto received other work, so that they were kept employed upon books and other publications, and they were really drawing pay precisely as though they had been at work upon the RECORD; but this year they were obliged to remain, and for some reason, by no fault of theirs, the ordinary extra work furnished during vacation failed them.

Mr. PLUMB. I do not think that is quite true. Besides, I think it will be found that those who work this year do not work next year, and so on; that is, the force changes from time to time.

But I want to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that there is in the Government Printing Office a very considerable force of women and men, very largely women, engaged in what is known as piece-work, in the binding department, and in stitching and various kinds of work of that class. I know of my own personal knowledge that a very considerable portion of that force is furloughed from time to time, a day or two days, a week or two weeks, during which no pay is allowed at all; and that is totally unexpected; that is to say, it comes at times that can not be anticipated. It is not like the ordinary interregnum that occurs in the publication of the RECORD every year and which is thoroughly understood, and yet these poor women, and men also, who work at this piece-work only get wages for the actual number of hours that they work, and some of them are now down almost to the starvation point by reason of the fact that there is not work enough. Some very hard cases have come under my observation, and I have sometimes thought that perhaps we ought to change the method of doing the work in the Government Printing Office and make it all time-work instead of piece-work.

It would not bother me a great deal to vote to pay these people so far as this case is concerned, if you regard this simply as a donation, or extra compensation, or whatever you may call it, to meet an unforeseen emergency; but I wish to call attention to the fact that there are other classes of people in the Government Printing Office and in the Government employ elsewhere who are equally meritorious, and who are doing a great deal of printing, as the Senator from Iowa says, where the work is carried on by the piece also; and if we are to establish the rule that when we get a person in our employ for one day, or for one month, or for two months, working by the piece, the moment the employment commences we are under some obligation to make it continuous, and to pay not what they earn but what they might have earned. If we attempt that it opens up a pretty wide door.

It seems to me that while in this particular case there is something to be said, that is not the strongest argument which has been presented to me. I have heard a very intelligent printer who presented this memorial, and the strongest part of the claim that he urged to me was that since the session opened there had not been as many speeches made as usual this year, and consequently the RECORD was "light," as he expressed it, all the way through. I think some guileless gentlemen like the Senator from New Hampshire, the Senator from Michigan, or the Senator from Indiana ought perhaps to feel some special responsibility in this matter, in that we have not padded the RECORD this year as much as usual, and therefore the very just anticipation was not realized, because I admit that a failure to realize on an investment of this kind would be one of that peculiar character of unforeseen emergencies to which the Government ought to respond.

No doubt the work during the winter has been, as these men say, "light." They have not realized the profit for their labor which they expected, and their labor has been, as everybody knows of course who sees the RECORD every day, as it always has been in fact since I have known anything about the RECORD, of a very conspicuous character; but it is a kind which the Government has paid for, and as to the price of it there has been heretofore no controversy.

As I said, I should not object to giving this extra pay if that was all there was of it, but it seems to me it is opening up a very wide door; and when I think of the pale-faced women I have seen there, who are eking out a miserable pittance, hovering between life and death, confronted almost by starvation, in almost nakedness, who are working by the piece, and who by reason of the frequent furloughs are not able to earn more than the money which is necessary, as I said, to barely keep their breath in their bodies, I feel as though there was even a stronger claim than this, and that perhaps we ought to reorganize this service in such a way as to have either a less force continuously employed, or to have some fair understanding in regard to the portion of time in which employment shall be given, so that claims of this kind may not arise.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment recommended by the Committee on Appropriations.

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 14, noes 29.

Mr. ALLISON. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GEORGE (when his name was called). I am paired on this question with the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS].

Mr. PLUMB (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. BUTLER].

The roll-call was concluded.

Mr. CALL. I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. JONES, of Florida] is detained from the Senate by sickness. He is paired with the Senator from Nevada [Mr. JONES].

The result was announced—yeas 13, nays 34; as follows:

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. ALLISON. I will venture on behalf of the Committee on Appropriations to offer one more amendment, which is to supply an omission. In line 129, I move to strike out "$5,000" and insert "$7,500;" so as to read:

For court-house and post-office at Frankfort, Ky.: For paving, fences, and grading approaches, $7,500.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. In line 130 I move to strike out "$5,000" and insert "$7,500;" so as to read:

And for retaining-wall of lot, $7,500.

Mr. HARRISON. Are the amendments the Senator is proposing to the item for the public building at Frankfort suggested by the estimates, or what reason is there for changing the appropriation?

Mr. ALLISON. They are in the Book of Estimates and recommended by the Committee on Appropriations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. In line 131 I move to change the total by striking out "$10,000" and inserting "$15,000."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. The committee have instructed me to offer one more amendment, but I shall not offer it at this moment.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have two amendments reported from the Committee on the Library which have been twice passed upon favorably by the Senate on previous appropriation bills. I shall offer them again. First, at the end of line 2115, I move to insert as a new paragraph:

To enable the Joint Committee on the Library to purchase the portrait of General George H. Thomas, by Miss C. S. Ransom, $10,000.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. MORRILL. I desire to ask the Senator from Ohio if he considers that a work of art worth the sum of $10,000.

Mr. SHERMAN. This proposition has been debated very often and I believe has received the assent of the two Houses acting separately at different times. I believe it is a work of great merit. It has been debated and discussed here before, and I do not propose to debate it now. I think it is a work of very remarkable merit, a picture of very great value. The lady herself puts a higher value upon it. The Senate has twice agreed to pay her $10,000 for it. Once the House agreed to pay her $10,000, but it could not be acted upon in the Senate. I hope the portrait will be purchased, and I believe it will be if the Senate will now consent to the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 16, noes 21; no quorum voting.

Mr. SHERMAN. There is a quorum present, and I wish to state a little more fully about the picture. I do not care to enter into a debate at this late hour.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks a quorum is present, so the Senator may proceed, if there be no objection.

Mr. SHERMAN. This picture has been settled on by the Grand Army of the Republic, as evidenced by petitions signed by tens of thousands of soldiers which are on the files of the Senate Committee on the Library. The subject has been canvassed for some ten years, and these soldiers, who have taken great pride in the character and services of General Thomas, have selected this as a proper memorial of that great soldier. The work has been submitted time and again to the inspection of the most critical of all persons, and it has been agreed on all hands to be the best picture that has ever been made of General Thomas, it having been taken from life and representing a scene of actual war.

The picture was painted at great expense, the lady having occupied three or four years of her time in making it. It has been selected by the persons who honor the memory of General Thomas as the best possible memorial that could be made of him. It is a very large picture, representing besides the figure of General Thomas on horseback a scene at one of the great battles of the war.

I hope the Senate will not go back upon its action heretofore but will vote this appropriation. Although it is a large sum for a picture, yet it is one of those historical pictures which will ornament the Capitol and will be regarded with favor not only by the soldiers who wish to commemorate and give honor to the merits of General Thomas, but I believe will be regarded as a favorite picture in the Capitol. It is intended for one of the panels of the Capitol.

I know there is a quorum present, and I shall ask for the yeas and nays on the adoption of the amendment.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I desire to ask the Senator from Ohio who painted the picture.

Mr. SHERMAN. Miss Ransom.

Mr. WILLIAMS. What is the price?

Mr. SHERMAN. Ten thousand dollars. It is a very large and a very costly picture.

Mr. VOORHEES. Mr. President—

Mr. SHERMAN. Before the Senator from Indiana proceeds, I wish to say that this matter has come to me partly by inheritance. This picture has been chosen by at least three or four different Joint Committees on the Library, and I believe by their unanimous vote.

Mr. VOORHEES. I simply desire to say that from the fact that I have been connected with the Committee on the Library ever since I have been a member of this body, I have a very considerable knowledge of this great painting. I desire to say further that I am satisfied this proposition represents the expressed wishes of more than half a million of survivors of the late war on the Union side. It is a great and powerful painting of a very great, strong soldier. The war was prolific of great men on both sides. The time will come when they will all be preserved. We are a great people, making a great history, and it is a part of our policy to preserve in a reasonable way the monuments, statues, and paintings of men who have distinguished themselves in American history.

But few men have made a stronger impression on the American mind than General George H. Thomas, and I should regret extremely if the Senate of the United States should reject the only worthy painting that has ever been presented of him. The Government owns no painting of General George H. Thomas, and there are those instances connected with his service which endear him to the public mind almost if not quite as much as any other Union general.

We make this one purchase; it is $10,000. It is a small sum to perpetuate and hand down to posterity a faithful likeness of the general whom it represents.

I hope, after years of association with the subject, that the Senate will honor itself by accepting this painting. I only wish that every eye in this body could see it as I have seen it and as others have. It is on exhibition now in the Hall of the House of Representatives, and is a great and noble painting. While the sum sounds large for a portrait, yet it is not large. Estimated as other nations estimate and prize their paintings worthy of a government's possession, it is not a large price.

I could say more, but I hope I have said enough. I shall vote for the amendment with great pleasure, and in doing so I know that I vote to comply with the wishes which have been expressed here in the petitions. I think I do not exaggerate in saying, of more than half a million American citizens—over 500,000 people—because this is the picture desired and desired and petitioned for by the entire Grand Army of the Republic.

Mr. VEST. I should like to inquire of the chairman of the Committee on the Library, who has brought forward the amendment, if this is one of the pictures against the purchase of which the Academy of Fine Arts, Philadelphia, have made public protest?

Mr. SHERMAN. I do not know of any such protest by the Academy of Fine Arts. I know some gentleman, signing himself as a member of the Academy or Society of Fine Arts, has sent here criticisms of the picture; but I suppose there never was a picture of mortal man painted, including the famous and grand pictures of La Fayette and Washington in the Hall of the House of Representatives, that has not been equally criticised.

Who would take $10,000 for either of those great portraits? The name, the association, and all the surroundings will make this picture more and more valuable and more and more historic. Who has not criticised the great paintings which surround the dome of the Capitol? Even John Randolph made one of those pictures ridiculous by his sharp and acute wit. Yet there is not a man in America who would wish the Government to sell the picture of the Declaration of Independence for $100,000. I am told that Mr. Thackeray also pronounced it as outrageous. Mr. Randolph thought there were too many legs in it, and various criticisms of that kind have been made upon it.

I am not an artist; I am not even a judge of paintings. I should not consider my opinion as worth anything; but I place reliance upon the fact that so many men who loved Thomas, and with whom he is a hero, think that this is a great picture, and they have seen it and observed it, and many persons with whom I have conversed and whose opinion is certainly worth consideration speak of it as a grand picture, a picture that will be immortal, or one that will last at least as long as the canvas endures. I do not regard the criticism of a single person as of great weight, because there never was a painting which did not encounter that kind of criticism even from artists. Sometimes there are no people more uncharitable in regard to the work of other artists than artists themselves.

Mr. VEST. I am not placing myself on any pedestal as an artistic or esthetic critic. I never saw this picture, but I certainly would attach a good deal of weight to the opinion of the Academy of Fine Arts of Philadelphia, because if there is any tribunal in this country competent to pass an opinion upon paintings it is that association of gentlemen.

Mr. VOORHEES. May I ask the Senator from Missouri whether the members of the Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia have seen this picture?

Mr. VEST. I do not pretend to say whether they have seen it or not. I saw the statement in a newspaper, published over the signatures of the members of that academy. I suppose they had seen it. They pronounced it a "daub;" I believe that is the language that was used. I have never seen the picture, and I simply speak of this statement because I take it that gentlemen of their position would not make a false public statement and risk their reputation upon it. It is not fair to assume that they did it from any hostility to this lady. As to General Thomas, it is perfectly useless to talk about bringing his character in question here, and to say it is a painting worthy of General Thomas. As a matter of course it might be some tribute to his memory, but it will not if it is a caricature, as those gentlemen say, in which case it would be an injustice to his memory to make the purchase.

As to the size of the painting, we are certainly not buying it by the square inch. In this Capitol to-day there are daubs, actual caricatures, almost acres of canvas. Right here in this Capitol is a painting in which absolutely there are six toes to the foot—a thing of which a charcoal sketcher would be ashamed. We have paid thousands of dollars for these paintings. I do not pretend to say that this is one of them, but I say that I shall not vote $10,000 after the Academy of Fine Arts, or members of it, men of reputation, have pronounced it to be a painting which is not worthy to be purchased by the United States Senate. I shall defer to their opinion.

Mr. VOORHEES. I know that thousands of men who served with General Thomas and saw him daily in battle, on the march, and everywhere else, have risked their reputations in certifying in the strongest manner that this is a noble and faithful representation of him. I could enumerate names. I need not do so perhaps. I could commence, however, with General Sherman and go through the list of distinguished men who knew General Thomas and who recommend the purchase of this picture as a faithful and worthy representation of him to posterity. I had rather abide by their judgment than by the newspaper criticism of men representing themselves to belong to some academy of art.

There is not a work of art in this Capitol which has not been written down as a wretched failure by somebody or other, whether the person has ever seen it or not. I do not agree with the Senator from Missouri that the Capitol is disfigured with daubs. I do not know where they are. Is it the picture of Perry's battle on Lake Erie over yonder? Is it Chapultepec here? Is it the painting of the Yellowstone Cañon and the Colorado scenes? Are those daubs?

I say with the Senator from Missouri that I do not set myself up as an art critic, and yet I believe I have a loving eye for things that are beautiful, and I can see coarse and incongruous features in paintings when they are there. I have lingered by the panels which are adorned with paintings about this Capitol perhaps as much as any other gentleman, and have seen what it was good to see and what it was evil to see.

I confess that this wholesale sweeping denunciation of the works of art in the national Capitol never commended itself to me. I do not speak this of the Senator from Missouri; I am speaking now in more general terms of that iconoclastic spirit which moves around and seeks to destroy everything that everybody else has done—the destructive spirit which has criticised Houdon's statue of Washington and everything else that has been done here. Nothing is done right in the eyes of some people.

All I desired to say was that I placed my approval of this picture upon the testimony of those who are better capable of judging than the Academy of Art, or Science, or whatever it may be, over at Philadelphia. [Manifestations of applause in the galleries.]

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Sergeant-at-Arms will take into custody any person violating the rule of the Senate in making any symptoms of applause or disapproval of any of the proceedings of the Senate, and his officers will execute the order. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Ohio, on which the yeas and nays have been ordered.

The question being taken by yeas and nays, resulted—yeas 27, nays 22; as follows:

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. HOAR. On page 87, after the amendment last adopted, I move to add the following paragraph:

For the purchase of five manuscript volumes, being the letter-books of William Vans Murray, formerly minister of the United States at the Hague and at Paris, $2,500.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. HOAR. This comes from the Committee on the Library. These letters have been very carefully examined by the committee and by Mr. Spofford. They are historic documents of great importance in our documentary history. Mr. William Vans Murray was our minister at the Hague, and was one of the three commissioners sent to France in John Adams's time, in the time of the Directory and the early part of the French revolutionary period. Among other very interesting matters is the account of a visit to him by La Fayette when he left the prison at Olmutz.

I shall not detain the Senate by going into a full discussion of the matter, but these manuscripts are of great historic importance, and would be of great value to our library. The committee were of opinion that they are worth the price which we have fixed upon them. The owner thought he ought to receive a much higher price.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore (Mr. HARRIS in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Massachusetts.

The amendment was agreed to; there being on a division—yeas 25, nays 18.

Mr. CULLOM. I ask the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations to consent to turn back to line 240, so that I may move to strike out three words.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will state to the Senator from Illinois that the whole bill is now as in Committee of the Whole and open to amendment.

Mr. CULLOM. The chairman of the committee will not object. In line 240, after the word "building," I move to strike out the words "under present limit;" so as to read:

For post-office and court-house at Quincy, Ill.: For completion of building, $47,500.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Illinois.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. CULLOM. In line 209, after the word "building," I move to strike out the words "under present limit;" so as to read:

For post-office and court-house at Peoria, Ill.: For completion of building, $75,000.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. I will inquire what the present limit is?

Mr. CULLOM. The present limit is just what the bill appropriates, but the Senate has passed a bill appropriating an additional sum, which will probably pass the House; hence those words are not needed there. There can not be any objection to striking them out.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. I object.

Mr. CULLOM. Then I move to strike them out, if the Senator does object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. HARRISON. The chairman of the Committee on Appropriations makes no objection to this amendment.

Mr. CULLOM. I so understand it.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. It is not subject to a point of order.

Mr. HARRISON. I say the committee do not oppose it.

Mr. CULLOM. I understand the chairman of the committee has assented to striking out those words in both places.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MAHONE. I offer an amendment which is in conformity with the action of the Senate in respect to the public building at Columbus, Ohio. The amendment I propose is recommended by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds re-enforced by the recommendation of the Secretary of the Treasury. After line 107 I move to insert:

For making the public building at Harrisonburg, Va., fire-proof, $15,000.

Mr. ALLISON. Is that amendment in order?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Virginia states that it is offered by the direction of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Mr. MAHONE. It was before the Committee on Appropriations, and I understand it was left out simply because the committee had agreed not to report a number of amendments of this character.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Virginia.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MAHONE. I move to insert after the amendment just adopted:

For making the public building at Abingdon, Va., fire-proof, $12,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MAHONE. I move to insert after the amendment just adopted: For enlarging the plan of the public building at Lynchburg, Va., and making the same fire-proof, $25,000.

Mr. ALLISON. Has this amendment been referred to the Committee on Appropriations?

Mr. MAHONE. It was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and it is recommended by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. ALLISON. And by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds?

Mr. MAHONE. Yes, sir. It was referred to your committee, but was not reported because you concluded to report no amendment of that character. However, that rule was changed after the adoption of the amendment of a similar nature in respect to the public building at Columbus, Ohio.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from Virginia.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALDRICH. After line 1214 I move to insert:

Naval training station, Coasters' Harbor Island, Rhode Island: For completing wharf and for the maintenance and repair of sea-wall, roads, and grounds, and the necessary labor and implements required for the proper preservation of the same, $25,000.

Mr. ALLISON. I raise a point of order on the amendment.

Mr. ALDRICH. I think it is not subject to the point of order. On page 150 of the estimates submitted by the Secretary of the Treasury will be found estimates for this work, $60,000.

Mr. ALLISON. Is the amendment reported from any committee, I will ask the Senator?

Mr. ALDRICH. It is not subject to the point of order, I think, under the last sentence of the first clause of the sixteenth rule.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The sixteenth rule provides that—

1. All general appropriation bills shall be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, except bills making appropriations for rivers and harbors, which shall be referred to the Committee on Commerce; and no amendments shall be received to any general appropriation bill, the effect of which will be to increase an appropriation already contained in the bill, or to add a new item of appropriation, unless it be made to carry out the provisions of some existing law, or treaty stipulation, or act, or resolution previously passed by the Senate during that session; or unless the same be moved by direction of a standing or select committee of the Senate, or proposed in pursuance of an estimate of the head of some one of the Departments.

Mr. ALDRICH. I send to the Chair the estimates of the Department.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If it is in pursuance of an estimate, the Chair holds that the amendment is in order.

Mr. ALLISON. It is estimated for.

Mr. ALDRICH. The estimate is $60,000. It is to continue work already in progress. I ask only for $25,000.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GORMAN. After line 344 I move to insert:

For the establishment of range-lights at the new cut-off channel entrance to Baltimore, Md., $25,000.

Mr. ALLISON. Is that estimated for?

Mr. GORMAN. It is. It is to be found in the Book of Estimates, page 146.

Mr. ALLISON. Then under the ruling of the Chair I suppose it is in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If it appears in the estimates the Chair thinks it is in order. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PALMER. I move to amend the substitute I offered this morning by inserting after the word "Michigan," in line 11 of said substitute, the words "approved March 2, 1885."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Chair understand the Senator to move to amend a substitute which was adopted as in Committee of the Whole to-day?

Mr. PALMER. Yes, sir.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's amendment will not be in order until the bill shall have been reported to the Senate.

Mr. PALMER. I shall reserve that amendment for a separate vote there.

Mr. VOORHEES. I am authorized by the Committee on the Library to move to insert at the end of line 2115, after the amendment agreed to on that page:

For the purchase of 1,000 copies of the work entitled Original Portraits of Washington, by Elizabeth Bryant Johnston, to be distributed to public libraries under the orders of the Senate, $12,000.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. VOORHEES. This amendment is authorized by the Committee on the Library. For many years past this lady has been engaged in securing the authentic original portraits of Washington and in giving their history. The result is a volume which I hold in my hand, one of the most creditable volumes to industry and ability that I have known published in the last quarter of a century, throwing vast light upon the history of the most important character in American annals. In order to give a better idea than I could otherwise do, I shall take the liberty of reading a paragraph or two from the preface to the work. After some preceding remarks the author says:

The large number of portraits proven to have been original may provoke a smile in the reader, as they have amused the writer, and will suggest, to one who has given the matter only passing attention, an overproportion of personal vanity on the part of Washington. This is an unjust conclusion; for the truth is developed, that the American hero was made a martyr to the devotion of his friends at home and his admirers abroad. We have him presented as citizen, soldier, statesman, and patriarch. Artists followed him through campaigns, visited him at Mount Vernon, sketched him on parade, in the council-room, at dinner, drew his features in the church and in the theater. Washington was proverbially a bad sitter; and he became so restive under these increasing demands, that he was wont to declare, even in the earlier years of his military career, that each yielding to such requests should be the last; but he finally, not very gracefully it must be confessed, would submit to the inevitable. Old comrades naturally desired a counterpart of the face and form they had watched in many an hour of peril; women often asked the favor of a portrait of the leader of the armies in which their husbands and their sons fought; artists were sent by monarchs and nobles of Europe to secure an accurate rendering of the features of the citizen of the New World who commanded their veneration. In the history of man there is not to be found a parallel to the wide-reaching respect and admiration given personally to Washington; nor has a century subdued the world's ardor. In 1863, while ascending a mountain road near Lake Lugano, Italy, an American traveler entered a small pavilion, a wayside resting-place, wherein he found only a bust of Washington. It bore no inscription, but was in itself an eloquent tribute from some lover of liberty.

This book presents a correct, reliable history of every original picture known of Washington from the time when at 25 years of age he was sketched on ivory by Copley in Boston. The circumstances of that first picture which is known of Washington are as follows: After the fatal battle of Braddock's Field he was sent for to Boston to be inquired of there as to that campaign, and while there the handsome, splendid, young Virginia colonel, less than 25 years of age, was painted by that great artist Copley, and it is here and its history given. From that time until Washington was painted in his old age by Gilbert Stuart and various other eminent artists, embracing the Peales, father and son, and Rembrandt Peale, the authentic history of each original portrait is given here.

I feel that to the youth and to the aged also of American readers this would be one of the most instructive books that could be given to the public by the Congress of the United States. I do not know whether the love of the Father of his Country has waned or not. I do not think it. From what I have recently seen, I am inclined to regard this as a good year for Washington memorials, and in presenting this noble monument to history I feel that I am doing something worthy of the name of the man who is here commemorated.

I know how inadequately my remarks do justice to this subject, but I submit, after full consideration by the committee, that we have done what will commend itself to the public justice, and this book, being purchased, will be placed in the public libraries of the country, one of the handiwork, one of the noblest, and best executed works that ever was presented to Congress for adoption.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Indiana.

The question being put, there were, on a division—ayes 19, noes 27.

Mr. VOORHEES. Let us have the yeas and nays.

Mr. VEST. I am instructed by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds to offer an amendment, to come in after line 315.

Mr. VOORHEES. Will the Senator from Missouri allow me a moment? I desire to inquire whether I can renew my amendment again in the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. VOORHEES. Then I give notice I will renew the amendment in the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. VEST] will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 14, after line 315, it is proposed to add:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to purchase a suitable site, and cause to be erected thereon, at Montpelier, in the State of Vermont, a substantial and commodious public building, with fire-proof vaults, for the use and accommodation of the post-office, court-house, and internal-revenue office. The site, and the building thereon, when completed according to plans and specifications to be previously made and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall not exceed the cost of $75,000; and the site purchased shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than forty feet, including streets and alleys; and for the purposes herein mentioned the sum of $75,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided, That no part of said sum shall be expended until a valid title to the said site shall be vested in the United States, and the State of Vermont shall cede to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owners thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of any civil process therein.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. VAN WYCK. By direction of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds I submit the following amendment, to come in immediately after the amendment just adopted:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to procure a proper site, and cause to be erected thereon a suitable building, with fire-proof vaults, in Nebraska City, Nebr., for the accommodation of the United States district court, post-office, and other Government offices in said city, at a cost not to exceed $75,000, including cost of site; and the said sum of $75,000 is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose herein mentioned: Provided, That no money shall be used or applied for the purpose mentioned until a valid title to the land for the site of such building shall be vested in the United States; and no expenditure or money shall be made on the building proposed to be erected on said site until the State of Nebraska shall duly release and relinquish to the United States the right to tax or in any way assess said site, or the property of the United States that may be thereon, and shall cede jurisdiction over the same during the time that the United States shall remain the owner thereof.

Mr. ALLISON. Is this amendment subject to a point of order?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska states that by direction of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds he offers the amendment. The Chair thinks the amendment is in order. The question is, will the Senate agree to it.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BAYARD. I offer the following amendment, to come in after line 315.

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase a site for, and cause to be erected thereon, a suitable building, with fire-proof vaults therein, for the accommodation for the United States circuit and district courts, post-office, and other Government offices, at the city of Wilmington, in the State of Delaware. The plans, specifications, and full estimates for said building shall be previously made and approved according to law, and shall not exceed, for the site and building complete, the sum of $150,000: Provided, That the site shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than forty feet, including streets and alleys; and no money appropriated for this purpose shall be available until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Delaware shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask if that amendment is in order?

Mr. BAYARD. The amendment is a bill reported by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds at the present Congress, which has already passed the Senate, is now pending before the House, and has been reported favorably there.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If the Senate has passed the bill authorizing the completion of such a building, the Chair holds the amendment to be in order under Rule XVI. The question is: Will the Senate agree to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Delaware?

Mr. MILLER, of New York. Do I understand that the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds propose to put upon this bill all the public buildings bills which have passed this body, and which have not yet passed the House of Representatives? If so, I see no objection to it; but if not so, I call upon the chairman of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds to report as an amendment to this bill a bill which passed here at the last session for a public building at Saratoga, N. Y. That bill has been reported favorably in the House of Representatives, but, owing to the condition of business there, it has not passed. If the Public Buildings Committee propose here to do this I call upon that committee to treat all public buildings on an equality and all Senators on the same footing in this matter. I ask for an answer from the chairman of the committee.

Mr. MAHONE. Mr. President, the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds is not undertaking to do any such thing as the Senator understands. It does not propose to report as an amendment to this bill all the bills that have passed the Senate and failed in the House, but there are extraordinary cases—

Mr. MILLER, of New York. The Senator will pardon me for a moment.

Mr. MAHONE. Allow me to finish and then I will yield entirely. There are extraordinary cases; there are some of the States that have had no public buildings during this Congress, and there are others that have had two and some as high as three buildings, and the committee think in those cases, where no buildings have been allowed to a State by the passage of a bill through both bodies, it is but fair they should have an opportunity to put one building on this bill for such States. That is the state of the case.

Mr. MILLER, of New York. I simply desired to have a statement made by the chairman of the committee as to the grounds on which they make exceptions in those cases. I have noticed that two or three bills have been offered here as amendments, and when they have been presented the Senators presenting them stated they did so by instruction of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, which made them in order. Now another amendment is offered for another public building, the bill for which has passed this body either at this session or the last, and upon that ground it is to be put upon this bill.

I think that the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds should treat all these applications alike. I do not care for one to enter into any unseemly scramble for my State or my constituents. They have been fairly treated and I have no disposition to find any fault with any of these measures; but it does seem to me that if the Senate now put upon this bill amendments for public buildings such as have passed the Senate during this session or the past, but have failed in the House, the committee should take up all those bills and put all of them upon this measure as amendments. I submit to their own sense of fairness and propriety to do it. I do not propose, as I said, to enter into any scramble on this matter. I leave it to the committee to decide for itself what it will do.

Mr. MORRILL. Mr. President, it is but due that I should make a statement in relation to this matter. I understand that thus far there has been but one building put upon this bill that has passed the Senate heretofore. It was proposed by the Senator from Delaware to put one on that has passed the Senate, and the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds have not moved as an amendment the bill proposed by the Senator from Delaware, which I think is a meritorious case and ought to go on. That proposition has not been before the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. The amendment reported by the Senator from Missouri for Vermont, I will say, is to supply the capital of the State. There has not been any money appropriated for the State of Vermont for public buildings in the last thirty years. Every other State in the Union, so far as I know, has had a public building erected at the capital of the State. This bill passed two years ago and it passed again this year, and it is recommended in the House by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and I do not suppose there is a member at this end of the Capitol or the other who would vote against it. So far as the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds are concerned, they have done this more at their motion than my own.

Mr. MITCHELL. I should like to ask the Senator from Vermont a question. Do I understand him to say that the amendment now proposed has not passed the Senate and has not been considered by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds?

Mr. MORRILL. The bill has passed the Senate heretofore, but has not been referred to the committee to be considered on this appropriation bill.

Mr. MITCHELL. Has it passed the Senate during this session?

Mr. MORRILL. During this Congress.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state to the Senator from Pennsylvania that on the question of order which was raised by the Senator from Iowa on the amendment of the Senator from Delaware it was held that as a bill authorizing the construction of this building had passed the Senate and was now pending in the House of Representatives, the amendment was in order. The question is, Will the Senate agree to the amendment of the Senator from Delaware?

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MILLER, of New York. I offer the following amendment, to be inserted after the amendment just agreed to:

For the purchase by the Secretary of the Treasury, from the present owners, the property in the town of Middletown, Richmond County, New York, known as the Seamen's Retreat, consisting of thirty acres, more or less, and buildings thereon, together with a water front of six hundred feet, more or less, the same to be used for the purpose of a marine hospital at the port of New York, $250,000.

I will occupy the attention of the Senate but a moment on this question. The United States Government is now occupying this ground and building as a marine hospital. It has been occupying it for two years under a contract which expires on the 1st of May next, at which time if the premises should not be purchased by the United States Government the Government will be without any marine hospital at the port of New York. While we have a marine hospital at nearly every other important port in the country, the United States Government has never owned and maintained a marine hospital at the port of New York. Before it leased these premises it had been in the habit of farming out the sailors who needed treatment there to the various hospitals about the city. A short time ago it erected a temporary hospital on Bedloe's Island, but it has been compelled to abandon it on account of the erection of the Bartholdi statue. Two years ago it leased these premises, and the Secretary of the Treasury makes this recommendation:

The recommendations heretofore made for the establishment of a national snug harbor, or sailors' home, are also renewed.

The recommendation of the Surgeon-General for the purchase of the Seamen's Retreat property at Staten Island, New York, as recommended by my predecessor, which recommendation was subsequently adopted by the Committee on Commerce of the present Congress (Report No. 1039), is respectfully renewed, and early action on the part of Congress is suggested. Without action the service at New York will probably be without a hospital when the lease of the building terminates, in May next. A return to the old contract system, formerly in vogue at that port, would, in my judgment, be highly injurious to the service.

I have here also the report of the Surgeon-General of the Marine-Hospital Service, urging in the strongest manner the purchase of this property; and, as I have already said, it has been two years in the control of the Government, under a lease, with the privilege of purchasing it at the expiration of the lease. The lease expires in May of this year.

This hospital and grounds belong to a number of charitable institutions, the Marine Society and the Seaman's Aid Society, and it has been leased by them to the Government of the United States. They have no longer any use for it; and if not purchased by the Government the property will undoubtedly be broken up and subdivided, and thus the Government will be prevented from continuing the lease or purchasing the property at any future time. It is undoubtedly one of the most desirable points in the harbor of New York for a marine hospital, and certainly the Government ought to have a marine hospital at that port.

The price here fixed has been agreed on by an appraisal and is undoubtedly a fair price; it is not excessive in any way; and it has been recommended now by two successive Secretaries of the Treasury that the premises should be purchased, and, if purchased, the amount paid for them will be much less than the cost of any marine hospital now at any of our prominent ports. The marine hospital at Boston cost $303,000; the one at Chicago has cost $420,000; the one at San Francisco, an old one, which is now being rebuilt, cost $231,000; the one at Detroit $109,000; and the marine hospital at New Orleans cost over $500,000.

This is entirely in the interest of the Marine-Hospital Service and in the interest of the Government.

Mr. MORRILL. May I ask the Senator from New York a question?

Mr. MILLER, of New York. Certainly.

Mr. MORRILL. Have not at the present session two bills passed for New York, one for Saratoga, and one for Troy? That is my recollection.

Mr. MILLER, of New York. I am not now talking about a building at Saratoga or any other place. My amendment is for a marine hospital at the port of New York.

Mr. MORRILL. A moment ago the Senator was talking about fair play to all the States.

Mr. MILLER, of New York. I was talking about fair play for all the States, and I still stand here to talk for fair play for all the States.

This is asked for by the Secretary of the Treasury and the Surgeon-General of the Marine-Hospital Service. It is not asked for by the people of the State of New York. It is not a public building to be used in the public service in the State of New York. It is a marine hospital for the care of the sailors of our marine. Quite likely some of them may come from the good State of Vermont and many of them from the States of Maine and Massachusetts, but certainly the Government ought to maintain a marine hospital in the port of New York.

A hospital tax has been levied upon the sailors of this country, and more than 15 per cent. of the entire sum heretofore collected has been collected at the port of New York, and yet during all these years it has been levied without any marine hospital at New York, and the sailors have been fanned out to different hospitals scattered about the city and neighborhood, thus preventing any proper control or any proper management of the Marine-Hospital Service. This is undoubtedly a cheap property and should be bought. I submit the question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from New York.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MCPHERSON. I move to strike out from line 1173 to line 1176, as follows:

To pay in full the claim of the owners of the schooner Druid for damages occasioned by the collision of that vessel with the United States steamer Powhatan, in October, 1883, $11,519.88.

And in lieu thereof to insert:

That the claim of the former owners of the schooner Druid for damages caused by the collision of said schooner with the United States steamer Powhatan be, and the same is hereby, referred to the Court of Claims, under the provisions of section 1055 of the Revised Statutes.

Mr. ALLISON. Is that amendment in order?

Mr. MCPHERSON. It is an amendment to the text of the bill. I am very much surprised that a provision has found its way into this bill for the Government to pay out the sum of $11,519.88 for this vessel, when, taking the whole testimony presented in the case, it is shown conclusively that the Government is not liable at all. The libellants in a case of collision certainly have to prove that they are without fault themselves, and that the opposite party is in fault. In this case no such proof has ever been made. The Government should not pay a dollar of this claim until such time as the Court of Claims has adjudicated upon it and declared it to be valid.

The first board of inquiry that was organized to act upon this case declared that there was only a sum of about $2,500 due for damages to the Druid. The captain of the Druid himself declared that he lost his head and ran his vessel against the Powhatan. The second board of inquiry were authorized only to investigate as to the value of the cargo and the value of the ship, without determining in any manner as to the liability of the Government. A claim for over $11,000 has found its way into the bill from the House of Representatives when last year it was rejected both by the House and by the Senate for the very reason I am now stating. It is presented here again. The Government is not liable for certainly more than $2,000 or $2,500 at the outside, and the claim is to be paid for $11,000. There certainly can be no hardship in permitting the libellants in this case to go to the Court of Claims and prove their case if they have a good one, but certainly the Congress of the United States should not make an appropriation to pay a sum of money which has no foundation in justice or right.

Let me say still further while on my feet that when the collision took place between these vessels it was in broad daylight. The vessels were nearing each other in opposite directions. The Druid had just as much opportunity of keeping out of the way of the Powhatan as the Powhatan had of keeping away from the Druid. The captain himself declared that he changed his helm and therefore threw his vessel against the Powhatan, seemingly for no purpose in the world except to wreck her, that he might make the Government pay for her. After the wreck the board of inquiry declared that the only damage the Druid had sustained was the loss of her spars and sails. Two Government officers from the Powhatan followed the vessel to port, and it was there discovered (contrary to what had been alleged by the owners of the Druid) that the vessel was not leaking. These two officers declared that she had not sprung a leak, that the cargo was not injured in the least. The second board of inquiry appointed by the Secretary of the Navy never saw the Druid at all, never had the opportunity of investigating the question as to whether she was damaged or not. I claim that the part of prudence and right in this matter would be to refer this whole case to the Court of Claims and let them decide whether the libellants have any claim or not.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks the amendment is in order. As a proposition to pay a private claim it would be indefensible; but being merely a proposition to amend a provision in the bill relative to a private claim, the Chair thinks the amendment is in order. The question is on agreeing to it.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. McMILLAN. I offer an amendment, which I send to the desk, to be inserted after the last appropriation for public buildings offered this evening. This is an amendment which has been recommended by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds; and a bill for the improvement has passed the Senate and has been reported favorably in the House also.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Has this amendment been referred to the Committee on Appropriations?

Mr. McMILLAN. The amendment has been referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported favorably, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Minnesota will be read.

The SECRETARY. At the end of the amendments already adopted, after line 315, it is proposed to insert:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase a site for, and cause to be erected, a suitable building, with fire-proof vaults therein, for the accommodation of the United States courts, post-office, and internal-revenue and other Government offices, at the city of Winona, Minn. The site, and building thereon, when completed upon plans and specifications to be previously made and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall not exceed the cost of $100,000: Provided, That the site purchased shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than fifty feet, including streets and alleys; and that no money appropriated for his purpose shall be available until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Minnesota shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owners thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal law of said State and the service of any civil process therein.

That the sum of $20,000 be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, to be used and expended in the purchase of said site and toward the construction of said building.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. GROOME. Mr. President, I offer the following amendment, to come in after the one just adopted:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase a site for, and cause to be erected thereon, a suitable building, with fire-proof vaults therein, for the accommodation of the post-office, custom-house, and other Government offices, at the city of Annapolis, Md. The plans, specifications, and full estimates for said building shall be previously made and approved according to law, and shall not exceed for the site and building complete the sum of $100,000: Provided, That the site purchased shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than fifty feet, including streets and alleys; and for the purposes herein mentioned the sum of $100,000 is hereby appropriated out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided further, That no money appropriated for this purpose shall be available until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of Maryland shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

Mr. ALLISON. I make the point of order on this amendment.

Mr. GROOME. I will state that this measure has already passed the Senate unanimously as a bill, and hence I do not think it subject to the point of order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Has it been reported from a committee and referred to the Committee on Appropriations?

Mr. GROOME. It has not been referred to the Committee on Appropriations as an amendment to this bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks then it is not in order.

Mr. GROOME. But I think the case is exactly like that of the State capital of Vermont. Certain it is this is a building for a State capital. It is for the only State capital I think in the Union for which steps have not been already taken to provide a public building. I hope, therefore, that the point of order will not be pressed if the amendment is amenable to the point.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks if it has not been reported from the Committee on Public Buildings, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations, it is not in order under the decision of the Senate this morning on the yeas and nays after discussion as to the meaning of the words "carrying out an existing law" or "a bill or resolution previously passed by the Senate during that session."

Mr. GORMAN. A moment ago, in a case precisely similar at Montpelier, Vt., where the bill had passed the Senate at the last session and been reported from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, the Chair held that under the rule that was in order, and it was inserted on this bill within the last half hour.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The present occupant of the chair was not present at that time.

Mr. GROOME. It was on the strength of that decision that I have moved the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair bases his opinion on the distinctive decision of the Senate this morning after discussion and upon the yeas and nays as to the meaning of the words of the rule.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. In the Vermont case the amendment had been introduced and referred to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, reported back favorably from that committee, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That makes quite a different question.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. Quite a different case. So that was clearly in order under the rule.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair, unless the point of order is withdrawn, feels bound to hold that the amendment is not in order.

Mr. MILLER, of California. I offer an amendment which has been reported from the Committee on Foreign Relations, and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

The CHIEF CLERK. After line 30, on page 2, it is proposed to insert:

To enable the President to bestow testimonials, as recommended in his message of January 27, 1885, upon those officers and subjects of the Russian Government who extended aid and comfort to the survivors of the Jeannette Arctic exploring expedition and assistance to the parties dispatched by the Government of the United States to relieve and succor the said survivors, and to convey to the Government and people of Russia an expression of the high appreciation in which the Government and people of the United States hold the humane services so rendered, the sum of $15,000 or so much thereof as may be necessary, the same to be immediately available.

Mr. MILLER, of California. That is recommended by the President to reward those people who aided the Jeannette, the list of which is given in the report made by the committee and which is contained in the President's message. I presume there will be no objection to the amendment.

Mr. ALLISON. Is this amendment from the Committee on Foreign Relations?

Mr. MILLER, of California. Yes, sir; and was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and overlooked in some way.

Mr. ALLISON. Not overlooked.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands the Senator from California, the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, to state that this amendment has been reported from the Committee on Foreign Relations and referred to the Committee on Appropriations in time.

Mr. ALLISON. I did not hear the reading of the amendment, being occupied at the moment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment will be again read.

Mr. ALLISON. I do not ask it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from California.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MILLER, of California. I have another amendment of the same character. This amendment was reported from the Committee on Foreign Relations and referred to the Committee on Appropriations. I move to insert it immediately after the amendment just adopted:

To enable the President of the United States to send a delegate to represent the Government of the United States at the jubilee to be held by the Statistical Society in London in the month of June, 1885, the sum of $2,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be immediately available.

That society meets in London, and the Secretary of State has recommended that a delegate be sent, and one ought to be sent.

Mr. ALLISON. That proposition was also referred, I believe.

Mr. MILLER, of California. It was.

Mr. VOORHEES. I did not hear distinctly what this was.

Mr. MILLER, of California. A meeting of the Statistical Society at London in grand convention.

Mr. VOORHEES. Why is it called a jubilee?

Mr. MILLER, of California. I do not know.

Mr. HOAR. Are other nations represented as nations, or are these societies represented?

Mr. MILLER, of California. The societies.

Mr. HOAR. Why should this Government be represented at an association of societies?

Mr. MILLER, of California. Because other governments are represented by sending delegates. It is recommended by the Secretary of State.

Mr. BUTLER. I should like very much to see a statistical jubilee.

Mr. VOORHEES. May I inquire of the Senator from California whether it is recommended to us by the Secretary of State as a jubilee?

Mr. MILLER, of California. Yes; it is.

Mr. VOORHEES. It is his designation?

Mr. MILLER, of California. Yes, sir.

Mr. BUTLER. A statistical jubilee?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from California.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. BUTLER. I offer the following amendment, to come in after line 268, on page 12:

For court-house and post-office at Greenville, S. C.: For purchase of site and commencing erection of public building, $50,000.

Mr. ALLISON. I make the point of order on that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Has the amendment been reported from a committee?

Mr. BUTLER. It has not been reported from a committee, but a bill has passed the Senate making an appropriation of $50,000 for that building on two occasions.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks it is not in order.

Mr. BUTLER. I submit, of course.

Mr. MILLER, of New York. I offer the following amendment, to come in after the last amendment adopted—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The last amendment adopted was that on the motion of the Senator from California, on page 2.

The CHIEF CLERK. On page 14, after the amendments already agreed to, it is proposed to insert:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to purchase a site for, and cause to be erected thereon, a suitable building, with fire-proof vaults, for the accommodation of the United States court, post-office, and other Government offices, at Saratoga Springs, State of New York. The plans, specifications, and full estimates for said building shall be previously made and approved according to law, and shall not exceed for the site and building complete the sum of $100,000: Provided, That the site shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than forty feet, including streets and alleys; and no money appropriated for said building shall be available until a valid title to the site for said building shall be vested in the United States, nor until the State of New York shall have ceded to the United States exclusive jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein.

That the sum of $50,000 is hereby appropriated for the purchase of a site and commencement of work.

Mr. ALLISON. I make the point of order on that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is the amendment reported from a committee?

Mr. MILLER, of New York. What is the point of order?

Mr. ALLISON. It is not reported from any committee.

Mr. MILLER, of New York. The bill from which this amendment is copied was reported from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, and passed this body in the last Congress.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Has it been reported as an amendment from any committee and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. MILLER, of New York. I think not.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks it is not in order.

Mr. MILLER, of New York. The decision of the Chair heretofore has been the other way, as I have understood it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The present occupant of the chair was not present when any other decision was made. In the case referred to the Senator from Wisconsin stated that the amendment was reported by a committee and referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. MILLER, of New York. I am unfortunate, then, in not getting in my amendment earlier in the evening.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks it is not in order.

Mr. MAHONEY. I am instructed by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds to offer an amendment, to be inserted between lines 288 and 289. This amendment comprehends the full text of a bill that was passed by the Senate a few days ago for the purchase of square 406 in this city. It passed the Senate unanimously, and has been reported by the House committee, but no action has been taken on it in the House. The necessity for the purchase of this square comes from the pressing demand for a city post-office in Washington; in addition to which it is conceded that sooner or later, and none too soon, the Government must acquire this piece of property for the enlargement of the Post-Office Department building, already largely insufficient for the proper and convenient conduct of the business of that Department.

This piece of property embraces 86,000 square feet when you take in the street, measuring 25,000 square feet, which the Government may take in after the acquirement of this square. The square now brings in a rental of $43,500, or 7 per cent. upon the price it is proposed to pay for the property. In addition to all this the Post-Office Department is now paying $14,500 rent for buildings in part upon this very square and for a city post-office, of all of which the Government may be relieved upon the acquisition of this piece of property, since there are buildings upon the square that will fully and conveniently serve the purposes of the city post-office until you are ready to proceed with the construction of a suitable building.

That is the state of the case, Mr. President, and this amendment is now before the Senate coming from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds duly referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and, as I said, is the full text of a bill that passed the Senate but a few days ago.

Mr. ALLISON. It seems to me that it is not quite enough to have had this referred to the Committee on Appropriations. It seems to me to be legislation for the purchase of property. If I can make that point on it I shall be glad to do so.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair does not think it falls within the rule of general legislation.

Mr. ALLISON. Then I make no point.

Mr. MORRILL. I desire to say that this has been recommended since the passage of the bill by the Senate by the Committee on Public Buildings to the Committee on Appropriations, and it is not any singular way of doing business. The National Museum was reported by that committee in the same way and put onto a sundry civil appropriation bill.

Mr. ALLISON. I make no point of order.

Mr. MORRILL. So was the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and so was the Agricultural Department. In fact there is hardly any other way you can get a building for this city through Congress except upon an appropriation bill.

I wish to say that there is a very urgent necessity that this building should be erected, and erected promptly. If this ground is taken with the buildings upon it, the Le Droit building alone will furnish better accommodations than we now have in the present building that is rented by the Government for a city post-office, and there are several other buildings that are now rented by the Government for the Post-Office Department. There is a building in this square that is rented by the Government, and also a building on Ninth street, all for the Post-Office Department.

This is obviously an economical thing for us to do. There is not a shadow of doubt but what the property, if it can be purchased at the price these parties have agreed to sell it for, would be a good bargain for the Government.

Mr. MAXEY. I would ask the Senator from Vermont, as a member of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, whether or not, after making ample provision on that plot of ground for the city post-office, there is not enough ground to be used for the use and benefit of the Post-Office Department?

Mr. MORRILL. Very much; and buildings that would be occupied by the Department. If the city post-office was put up on Ninth street, between E and F, there would be other buildings which could be used that would save the Government a large sum of money; but the main building, with the exception of the city post-office, might be delayed for some years.

Mr. MAXEY. It is more convenient to the Post-Office Department than any other plot of ground which can be obtained.

Mr. MORRILL. Undoubtedly.

Mr. PLUMB. I do not know very much about property in this city, but I do know that there is a very widespread impression based on apparently good foundation that the price proposed to be paid for this property is at least $150,000 too great, and that the Government in making this purchase is really bullying the real-estate market in the city of Washington. It does not signify to us that if we buy this property and do certain other things we shall save a little money on the basis of a 4 per cent. or a 3 per cent. investment; the question at the bottom of it all is, can this property be purchased at a suitable price, such as it is worth in the real-estate market and as private parties would have to pay for it? Taking the information that I have, my judgment is—a judgment not very securely founded, I admit, but still it is the judgment on which I am bound to act, and which I should act upon as a private individual—that this private property is put at a very much higher price than its value. If I may allude to what has taken place elsewhere, I may say that the Senate in one of its amiable moods, and with that consideration which it always has for a very large sum of money—for I believe it will let through any bill at any time for a half million dollars, while it will higggle with parsimonious persistency over a bill appropriating fifty or sixty dollars for somebody—but in that mood in which it finds itself occasionally the Senate passed this bill; it went to another body which I am not authorized to mention, but like the man who, when approached on a horse-trade, said he could not trade on Sunday, because it was against his religion, but if it was not Sunday he would say that he would pay $20 to boot; and so I can say in reference to this other place, or if it was not that other place I would say that the committee of that body—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks the Senator is not in order. He is alluding to a report in another body.

Mr. PLUMB. If on reflection the presiding officer thinks that is against the rule I will withdraw the remark; but I will say that a body of men—not the House of Representatives, but a body of men charged with the duty of investigating this subject—say upon their responsibility that $500,000 is an ample price for this property; and now the Senate is proposing to take a short cut to get around that opinion, and in the closing hours of this session, by means of a committee of conference, to avoid the collision and the wreck that would apparently follow from that collision with another portion of this legislative body, and complete the purchase of this property in defiance, as I believe, of what is just, of what is right, of what is fair, of what is prudent, and of what is due to this body and to all other legislative bodies having to deal with the public money. I do not think that is the proper way of conducting legislation.

Mr. MAHONEY. Mr. President, I think if the Senator from Kansas had given a little more attention to the subject rather than been content to state some impression which he has formed from floating statements, he would have had no such opinion as that to which he has given expression.

I hold in my hand letters from nine respectable, responsible real-estate owners in the city of Washington. I do not know a single one of these gentlemen; I never saw one of them; but they have addressed letters to the committee, and I have read them all. They all agree that the price proposed to be paid for this property, which is by agreement to the extent of the whole square save about four little pieces involving $100,000, is quite fair. We shall see who they are in a moment. They all agree that the price proposed to be paid is below the value of the property saving one, who thinks it is a little above the value.

Now, let us see who they are. I shall not look inside the letters, but give the names from the outside of the envelopes. Hufty & Dyer, real estate, insurance, stock, and note brokers. The most of these gentlemen—indeed all of them—disclaim any connection or any interest whatever in the sale of this property, but they have been called upon—

Mr. PLUMB. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Will the Senator yield to the Senator from Kansas?

Mr. MAHONEY. In a moment. They have been called upon by some of the citizens here who seem to be interested in the procurement of this most suitable site for the post-office, and have given expression to their judgment.

John Sherman & Co., real estate and loans; Duvall & Marr, real estate and insurance; Parker & Townsend, real estate and brokers; B. H. Warner; George Truesdell; F. H. Smith & Son; Fitch, Fox, and Brown; Thomas J. Fisher & Co., real-estate agents. These are the parties from whom the letters come. If the Senator from Kansas would like to be better informed, he can take the letters.

Mr. PLUMB. I am glad to have those names go on record, as they will add to the circulation of the paper in which they appear. What the Senator says confirms me in two things, one of which I am very sorry to be confirmed in, and that is that the Senator from Virginia does not seem to understand how people are influenced. Did you ever hear of a real-estate agent who did not, like Paul, magnify his office? Is it not the line of business of all these gentlemen to enhance by representations the value of all property in Washington? They do not have this particular site for sale, but they have other property for sale, the price of which will largely be based on the price the Government pays for this property in the city of Washington if it purchases it.

The one thing these gentlemen are interested in is to establish the fact that property in Washington is greater in value than the price being offered, in order that they may get thereby more business to do; and if they can get the Government into this laudable enterprise of bullying the real-estate market as I said, thereby they will get more percentage and their customers will get greater gains. I may not know as much about this ground as the members of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, but I do believe that if the Government were to-day to invite real competition for a site it could save $100,000. That is not much I know, the present impression being that the great burden we are laboring under now is how to get rid of the money we have in the Treasury; and of course under that idea the larger the appropriation the more beneficial it is.

The Senator from Maine [Mr. FRYE] says we are getting rid of the surplus fast enough to-night. I think that is so myself, and if we shall sit here until morning, and the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds have the floor, and a few more enterprises of this kind shall be brought into the bill, the surplus will be less to-morrow morning than it was yesterday morning certainly.

Mr. President, I think in regard to this matter that it has not had proper consideration. I do not believe this is the way to buy property either in Washington or elsewhere, and I especially think in regard to this purchase there ought to be some competition, so as to bring the price down to that level which would naturally prevail in dealing between private individuals. We have had some experience of that kind heretofore; at least we have had some observation of the result of this method of buying property. If we were to go around anywhere in the city of Washington and ask owners what they would sell their property for in the absence of competition, we may be certain that the price they offer would be a very large percentage above what they themselves actually believe its value to be.

I am willing, as far as I am concerned, to build a post-office in Washington, although the business I have with it does not seem to impress me with the need of that institution very much. I do not think there is very great want for it, but still I am willing to have it, willing to take the steps necessary for the purpose of getting it; but I want to do it on some basis which shall be just and open, in which we shall seem to be applying the ordinary rules of private business to the transaction of public business.

Mr. BUTLER. Then why not authorize a commission to purchase a site for a post-office?

Mr. PLUMB. I would go in for something of that kind. I honestly believe that $150,000 less, certainly $100,000 less, would buy this block if we in the mean time, by our proposition to buy it, do not enhance its value in the minds of those who have it to sell.

Mr. President, there will be, as there always is properly under proper circumstances, more or less competition in regard to the location of public buildings. I have in my mind the capital of a State where property was needed for a Government building. The people owning adjoining property bid for the location of the United States building, and they paid large sums for the property in order to get the location in a certain place. They knew its value to them. It brought them business. They were willing to pay for it. Competition of that kind is proper and fair. I do not say it could be instituted in this particular case, but I do say that when we come to buy this property, in view of all the circumstances surrounding the transaction of public business here and the general extravagance which prevails and which we are all the time cultivating by the money we are paying out and by the salaries we are paying, we ought to secure fair and free competition. In regard to public buildings, about which there is no perishing interest at the present moment, if we can not wait, if we must go ahead volens volens, at least we ought to go ahead with some decent regard for the practices which obtain in transacting private business.

I therefore hope this amendment will not be put on. It is going to be put on now in the expectation that it will escape the final judgment of the other branch of the Legislature. That is what it means. It is absolutely known, I think, that the House of Representatives will not agree, as an independent proposition, to this purchase in the terms proposed by the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. It is, therefore, sought to get around that judgment which has been substantially expressed, and in this way by means of a conference committee and the consent, grudging or otherwise, given by these men in the expiring hours of the session and under the fear of an extra session if the concession is not made, that this will be done which otherwise would not be done.

Mr. MORRILL. I do not like to have this measure "whistled down the wind" in this kind of style. The Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds have had this subject under consideration for at least half a dozen years. They have investigated various sites throughout the city. I have no doubt that we could go out beyond the boundary and get competition and get for a small sum a site that would not be appropriate or at all suitable for the post-office building; but to get a site where it will be proper to locate such a building we shall have to pay for it. And when we are investigating this subject it is well that we should have some forecast and look out for the future. We not only need a post-office for the city accommodation, but we need such a building largely for doubling the accommodations of the General Post-Office. There is no question but what the General Post-Office must have accommodations double their present amount, and that in a very short time. This site is adjoining the General Post-Office; that building can be extended on to Eighth and Ninth streets to very great advantage, and there will be ample room to accommodate the General Post-Office and the city post-office. So far as the price is concerned I have examined it with some particularity, and there is but one piece of property that I think is overvalued, and that the Government had the option of taking for a year or two at $80,000. The present holders of it have raised their price to $115,000, which I think is extravagant, and I should be glad to have that appraised by a jury appointed by the court; but beyond that I venture the prediction that the Government will not only buy this specific piece of property as the only one that can accommodate the General Post-Office and the city post-office, but that they will buy it and pay more than 25 per cent. more for it than what has been proposed and what the Senate has heretofore agreed to.

Mr. BUTLER. May I ask the Senator from Vermont how the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds arrived at the value of this property?

Mr. MORRILL. They arrived at it in the first place by looking at the assessment and then by having an agent go around and see each one of the parties and obtain the lowest terms. We informed them in the first place that $500,000 was all we would give for the whole square, and we squeezed the major part of them to a very low price; and there is only one piece of property that the Government had the option of for two or three years which I think is held at an extravagant price.

Mr. VORHEES. May I ask the Senator from Vermont whether it is designed to close Eighth street, between E and F?

Mr. MORRILL. It is designed to cover the whole space from F to E street.

Mr. VORHEES. And to close Eighth street?

Mr. MORRILL. To close Eighth street so as to make the General Post-Office a building of the same size as the Patent Office, to match that in point of distance from one end to the other.

Mr. HARRIS. From Seventh to Ninth streets.

Mr. PLUMB. If this purchase be effected I hope it will be effected before the RECORD comes out to-morrow, because I have no doubt —

Mr. MORRILL. Let me say one word. Some gentlemen contend for this without any expectation that it is going to carry, with the potential influence of the Senator from Kansas and with the tired, jaded look of my friend the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations; and I have no doubt they will fling out all our amendments without a single tear in either eye.

Mr. PLUMB. I do not happen to be on the conference on the sundry civil bill; but the reference to me is somewhat gratuitous. I was going to say that if we are to buy this property for the sum proposed we ought to buy it to-morrow, because after what the Senator from Vermont has said it is plain to be seen that these property-holders have the Government in a hole. We can not have a post-office that is a post-office which will be what a post-office ought to be, unless we have it on this particular spot of ground; and after the very lurid statement of his in regard to the value of that property I shall do justice to the modesty of the ordinary real-estate owner of the city of Washington when I say that I think he will find some way, particularly after the RECORD is published to-morrow and comes under his observation, to raise the price of the property 25 per cent., especially after the Senator from Vermont has stated the manner in which they applied the screws to some of the property-owners to get them down in order that the balance might get up, just as one part of a feather-bed rises when you put down any other part. So I think that the moment we attempt to establish the average, the general average after that statement will rise to the highest peak of price established by any owner in any part of the square. I think this debate has perhaps—and I may say that I fear I have contributed to that—enabled these people to put on the screws so that this property will cost even a great deal more than is now proposed.

But, seriously, it seems to me that this is not the way for the Government to purchase property in the city of Washington or elsewhere. I know that it does not purchase it that way out West; it does not purchase it that way anywhere, so far as I know, except in the city of Washington. In the desire to beautify the capital of the nation, and to spend public money for the benefit of this community, all considerations of propriety, of justice to the tax-payer, of business principles that ought to govern the just transaction of the Government business like that of private individuals, seem to be lost sight of.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had concurred in the report of the committee of conference on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8179) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes, further insisted upon its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1 and 29 to said bill, and asked a further conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. WILLIAM S. HOLMAN of Indiana, Mr. JOHN HANCOCK of Texas, and Mr. J. G. CANNON of Illinois managers at the conference on its part.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (H. R. 8256) to provide for the sale of the Sac and Fox and Iowa Indian reservations, in the States of Nebraska and Kansas, and for other purposes; and it was thereupon signed by the President pro tempore of the Senate.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8256) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the amendment proposed by the Senator from Virginia [Mr. MAHONE].

Mr. VEST. I simply wish to say in regard to the remarks of the Senator from Kansas that the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds—and I say it without personal reference to myself—have done the very best they could in regard to this matter. For two years past, anticipating the very thing to which the Senator from Kansas has alluded, that when we had concluded that this block opposite the General Post-Office building was the most eligible site its price would rise, had a paper drawn up and signed by nearly all the property-holders pledging themselves not to charge over a certain price for their property. It is true that after this paper was signed by the large property-owners a few others stood off. That is always the case and is inevitable. Every lawyer who has had experience in regard to the adjustment of estates in bankruptcy or the settlement of failing firms knows that invariably there are a few, generally small, creditors, who will stand out from any arrangement in the hope that they will be paid in full; and so in this instance five or six of the small property-owners in the block refused to sign the paper as soon as they ascertained that the Government wanted the property, but all the large property-owners agreed to reasonable terms, and some of them put their property in under the appraised value. I beg to say, after serving on the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds for six years, that this is the fairest transaction that I have ever known where the Government was a party to a proposed purchase of property for a Government building.

Now I want to call the attention of the Senator from Kansas to one fact, because he has not examined this matter as the committee has that has had it in charge. The Government, for 35,000 feet of ground on the site of the old city post-office where it is now, were asked $400,000. For sixty thousand and more feet in a much more favorable locality near the General Post-Office we are asked $640,000, and that is in a portion of the city where property is advancing in value, on F street, one of the best squares in the entire city, and I think is by far the best site for the location of the post-office.

These are the facts. In my judgment it is the best bargain the United States can obtain. The large property in this block can not go back in value. The property is advancing in that locality, and in the course of twelve months if we want this same block we shall be compelled to pay, in my judgment, 25 per cent. more in order to obtain it.

Mr. PLUMB. It seems to me that if the committee have been at this about six years they ought to have found a way of getting a bill through both Houses without coming in at this moment and asking to put it on an appropriation bill, not for the purpose but still with the effect of getting around the adverse action of the House, and therefore preventing it practically from receiving concurrence.

Mr. MORRILL. I will say to the Senator that the bill has been reported in the House, but the chairman of the committee informed me yesterday that he feared he would not be able to get any action upon it. It has been reported, and reported favorably.

Mr. PLUMB. For $500,000, a hundred thousand dollars less than is here proposed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is not in order to refer to proceedings of the other House.

Mr. VEST. I want to state to my friend that the Senate Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds have done everything that could be done by mortal men in regard to this matter. The chairman of that committee and myself took a carriage and went in bad weather and looked at each one of these sites. On three separate occasions I have been over them. We have attempted to guard the interests of the Government in every possible way; we have shut out all lobbyists; we took this agreement from these property-owners in order to prevent the advance of property as soon as they found the Government wanted it. As I said, five or six of the small property-owners held out. The gentlemen who were the large owners told us they thought the entire property could be obtained for $500,000, and I will do them the justice to say—the chairman of the committee has the papers—that those gentlemen acted fairly, and reduced their price in order to bring it within the $500,000; but I believe there were six of the smaller property-owners who nearly doubled the valuation.

If any others can do this business any better, I hope they will take it in charge. For myself I am tired of it. We have done everything we could, and because this bill has not passed, and because we have acted as faithfully as possible, we are told now, "Do not put it on an appropriation bill."

Mr. PLUMB. It seems to be confessed that this ground is to be sold to the Government at a great value, because while certain large property-owners would not ask beyond the real value—and I do not know anybody who would sell for less than real value to the Government—certain others wanted more. That brings it back to the point I started with. Here is $140,000 to be given more than this property is really worth.

Mr. MAXEY. My judgment about it is that the sooner the Government gets possession of this property the better. It is the only block of ground that can be purchased which is adapted, first, to the city post-office, and, second, to the extension of the Post-Office Department. You can not combine both purposes in any block of ground except this. Years ago, when the city post-office was in the Post-Office Department building, the Department building was then large enough to accommodate all the business of the Post-Office Department and the city post-office. The country has been rapidly increasing. They have had to take out the city post-office; and not only have they had to do that, but the Government has had to rent another piece of ground, for which we pay about $14,000 a year, to carry on the business of the Post-Office Department. This country is rapidly increasing in population, and as it increases in population every one connected with the post-office business knows that the postal business increases with the population of this country.

Now you have a chance to get a piece of ground, which added to the present Post-Office Department, will answer for years and years to come; and it is a most unwise thing, in my judgment, for this Government to let the proposition pass by.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL. In line 276 I move to strike out the words "under present limit" and insert "and for the purchase of additional ground one hundred and," so as to read:

For court-house and post-office at Williamsport, Pa.: For completion of building and for purchase of additional ground, $125,000.

Mr. ALLISON. I raise the point of order on that amendment.

Mr. MITCHELL. I hope the Senator will not raise the point of order in this case. If it is made, at all events I have here a recommendation of the Architect of the Treasury Department, who says that this appropriation is necessary. That work has been suspended now for a year and a half. A portion of the ground which is desired for the building is condemned and waiting the action of Congress. That condemnation is now interfered with by an application to the court to set it aside. The case was recently postponed until after the 4th of March, in hopes that Congress would make an appropriation for this public building.

This is one of the most important towns in Pennsylvania as respects the question of public buildings. The United States courts are held there, and have been for a great many years. Twenty counties of the State do their legal business at that place so far as they do it in the United States courts. The internal revenue collected at the town is very large, amounting to about a quarter of a million dollars a year. The receipts of the post-office during the last year were $31,991. There are over half a million people who are concerned in the business of the United States court held at that point.

The town of Williamsport manufactures between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 feet of lumber every year. There is the largest manufactory at that point of lumber in the United States east of Michigan. The internal-revenue offices are also there. The Government has to pay, I think, a thousand dollars a year for rent of the post-office, and of course it has to pay rent for all the other offices of the United States.

An appropriation of $100,000 was made. It was found that no lot in that city could be purchased at any eligible point for less than $40,000. I know that seems to be a large sum, but the surroundings of the place are such that it was impossible to get an eligible site for less than that amount. The work itself was delayed for about two years in order to get a lot even as cheap as that. Three judges of the common pleas court adjoining that county were appointed, and finally selected a place which was to cost $60,000. That the Secretary of the Treasury would not purchase under the appropriation which was made. Afterward they secured a portion of the square for a little less than $20,000, I believe, and the rest of that square has been condemned, and it cost $20,500 according to the condemnation. That is now pending. So it will cost $40,000 to secure the land for the building, and the recommendation of the Architect of the Treasury, which I hold in my hand, is that the appropriation here desired is absolutely necessary in order to construct a proper building in that place. A bill is pending in the House of Representatives and has been favorably reported by the committee there.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is not in order to refer to reports in the House of Representatives or proceedings there, as affecting the action of the Senate.

Mr. MITCHELL. I perhaps may be allowed to state that the gentlemen representing the Committee on Public Buildings of that body have recommended that this amount be inserted in this bill. I hold in my hand a paper signed by them to that effect.

I trust the point of order will not be made and that the Senate will adopt this amendment. I do not know how I can very well go home through the city of Williamsport in my old Congressional district, which I represented in the House of Representatives for four years, or I shall have to go some other way, unless the Senate will do me the kindness to put this amendment in the bill. It is an appropriation which I think must and will be made. The work is suspended; the Government is at a considerable cost to take care of the property, and the Architect of the Treasury wishes to have the appropriation made now.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is the amendment reported from the Committee on Appropriations?

Mr. ALLISON. It is not.

Mr. MITCHELL. Let me say further that, as I understand, in two or three instances the Senate has agreed to do precisely what I desire shall be done in this case. It has done so in the case of the amendment which was inserted on the suggestion of the Senator from Missouri. On page 7 the bill as reported from the committee reads:

For post-office at Hannibal, Mo.: For completion of building under present limit, $37,500.

That has been increased to $52,500, an increase of $25,000, and the words "under present limit" have been stricken out.

I understand that to be in effect precisely what I propose here. I think the same thing has been done in other instances.

I did all I possibly could in this case. I introduced the amendment as intended to be proposed to this bill and had it referred to the Committee on Appropriations, but that committee, obeying, as I suppose they thought they were doing, the rule of this body, declined to insert any of these propositions. I understood that if any of them were to be inserted this one would be. I hazard the statement there has been no case presented to this body which deserves its recognition so strongly or at least more strongly than this.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is the amendment reported from a committee?

Mr. MITCHELL. Unfortunately it is not reported from the committee. That is what I desired, but the committee declined to report it, as they declined in other cases, I understand.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Was it reported from any other committee and referred to the Committee on Appropriations?

Mr. MITCHELL. I think that committee has not reported it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Then the amendment is not in order.

Mr. MITCHELL. I am sorry for it.

LEGISLATIVE, ETC., APPROPRIATION BILL.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives further insisting upon its disagreement to the first and twenty-ninth amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8179) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes, insisted upon by the Senate, and asking a further conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that the Senate still further insist upon its amendments and agree to the conference asked for by the House.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. ALLISON, Mr. DAWES, and Mr. COCKRELL were appointed.

AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin, from the Committee on Claims, reported an amendment intended to be proposed to the deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. McMILLAN submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the deficiency appropriation bill; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills:

A bill (S. 2577) to authorize the printing of the eulogies delivered in Congress upon the late Henry B. Anthony; and

A bill (S. 2868) to provide for the printing of the report and proceedings of the commission to provide suitable ceremonies for the dedication of the Washington Monument.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the resolution of the Senate for the printing of the annual volumes of Astronomical and Meteorological Observations of the Naval Observatory for the years 1881 and 1882.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the resolution of the Senate for the printing of the report of the Commissioner of Fish and Fisheries for the year 1885.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. CONGER. I give notice that as early in the morning, after the Senate meets, as possible I shall call up the river and harbor appropriation bill and ask its consideration by the Senate.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 8256) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes.

Mr. ALLISON. I move to insert after line 21:

Subject to the deduction provided for in the tenth article of the convention between France and the United States, concluded on the 15th day of January, A. D. 1880.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. CONGER. How would it read? What is it about?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is a deduction provided for in the treaty with France for French claims from the sum to be paid for the expenses. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MILLER, of California. I offer an amendment which was submitted and referred to the Committee on Appropriations, and which is estimated for in the Book of Estimates. After line 1634 I move to insert:

For reclaiming eighteen and three-quarter acres of marsh land of the Benicia arsenal grounds, $10,000.

This is estimated for in the Book of Estimates, Public Works, page 155. It is a much-needed improvement. It is estimated at $35,000. I only put in $10,000 in my amendment.

Mr. ALLISON. I make the point of order that the amendment is not reported from any committee.

Mr. MILLER, of California. Under the sixteenth rule I think it is in order. It was estimated for.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair thinks it is estimated for in the sense in which the construction usually has been put upon it. It is a submitted estimate, and it has been the practice of the Senate to treat such estimates as being within the rule. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. MITCHELL. In line 276, I move to strike out the words "under present limit twenty-five," and to insert in lieu thereof "seventy-five." This would be an increase of $50,000 for the public building at Williamsport. The Architect of the Treasury Department in a letter which I hold in my hand recommends an increase of $100,000. As I have stated, unless something is done there now, nothing can be done in relation to this matter. I trust the Senator from Iowa will find that there is no occasion for any objection at this point in view of what has been done in other instances precisely like it without objection coming from that source. I appeal to him to read industriously the items in the appropriation bill to which I refer while this amendment is being adopted.

Mr. ALLISON. The amendment is in order to strike out "under present limit." I do not make a point of order on that.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Iowa make the point of order?

Mr. ALLISON. I make the point of order on the increase of appropriation. I do not make the point on the first part of the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair feels bound to sustain the point of order. It increases the amount.

Mr. MITCHELL. The amendment I proposed was to strike out the words "under present limit," and to increase the appropriation from $25,000 to $75,000. I can see no object in striking out the words "under present limit," as the appropriation which remains in the bill is not in excess of the limit already fixed by existing law.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands the Senator from Pennsylvania to offer an amendment increasing the sum from $25,000 to $75,000?

Mr. MITCHELL. Yes, sir; that would be the effect of the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That the Chair thinks is not in order. It increases an item in the appropriation bill, and that is against the rule.

Mr. MITCHELL. It ought to be in order after what has taken place.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The rule positively prohibits it.

Mr. BECK. I only rose to say before the Chair ruled—I do not know that I desire to say it now—that the motion which would seem to be more in order than any other is a motion that the Senate does not intend to pass a sundry civil appropriation bill.

Mr. DOLPH. In the item in regard to the New Orleans Exposition, I move to strike out all from and including the word "for," in line 2393, down to and including the word "published," in line 2405, and to insert:

For the purpose of paying the indebtedness now outstanding of said exposition which is due to foreigners and foreign nations, and all premiums heretofore awarded or which may be hereafter awarded by said exposition to foreign exhibitors in accordance with the lists of awards heretofore published, the sum of $50,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. DOLPH. I do not propose at this late hour to make a speech. Some Senators who spoke upon the amendments proposed by the committee to this appropriation suggested that the United States by reason of having invited foreign nations were under some sort of moral obligation to foreign exhibitors and to foreign nations as to debts which were owing by the exposition to foreign exhibitors and foreign nations, and as to premiums which had been awarded or should be awarded. I have been told by the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations that probably the indebtedness to foreigners would not exceed $30,000 or $25,000. The amendment offered by me proposes an appropriation of $50,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, for the payment, first, of all the indebtedness of the exposition to foreign exhibitors or foreigners, and next, to the premiums which have been awarded or shall be awarded. I suppose it will meet the views of those Senators who think we are under some obligation to foreigners.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. INGALLS in the chair). The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Oregon.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. DOLPH. I offer still another amendment. I move to strike out all from the word "due," in line 2390, to and including the word "published," in line 2405, and to insert:

To foreigners and foreign nations; secondly, in payment of all premiums heretofore awarded or which shall be hereafter awarded by said exposition to foreign exhibitors; thirdly, in the payment of the indebtedness now outstanding of said exposition which is due to persons, firms, or corporations other than foreigners and foreign nations; fourthly, in payment of all premiums heretofore awarded or which shall be hereafter awarded by said exposition to other than foreign exhibitors in accordance with the lists of awards heretofore published.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Oregon.

Mr. DOLPH. This proposed amendment does not increase the amount of the appropriation, but it provides for its application, first, to the debt due to foreigners and to foreign nations; second, to premiums which have been or shall be awarded to foreign exhibitors; third, to debts due to others than foreigners; and, lastly, to the payment of premiums to others than foreign exhibitors. The object of the amendment is to get rid of our supposed obligation to foreign nations and to foreigners, so that when at the next session an application is made for another appropriation of half a million dollars we shall not have our obligation to foreigners used as an argument for making the appropriation.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. VAN WYCK. In lines 2014, 2015, and 2016 I move to strike out the appropriation of $5,000 to the widow of Surgeon-General Barnes. I fail to perceive any reason for this appropriation. I remember that when it was proposed to raise the pension of Mrs. Barnes from $30 to $50 a month one of the arguments used in the Senate was on account of the meritorious services performed by her husband in waiting upon General Garfield during his sickness. Why a proposition now comes to pay her $5,000 for those services, I am at a loss to know. In 1882, $57,000 was appropriated for payment for the medical attendance and expense of attending upon General Garfield's sickness and burial. I think $37,500 was assigned for medical attendance, and a board was provided in that act to determine and designate how the division of the $37,500 should be made. That I supposed was the end of the matter, and ample provision made; but now at this late day, after the widow has been compensated by the highest rate of pension on the ground of the services of her husband, we are asked to appropriate in bulk $5,000 for what? That is a proper inquiry, for what? It is to be given to the widow of Surgeon-General Barnes, and then the question arises again, for what? I move that it be stricken out.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from Nebraska.

The question being put, it was declared that the yeas appeared to prevail.

Mr. VAN WYCK. I call for a division.

There were on a division—yeas 2, noes 25; no quorum voting.

Mr. EDMUNDS. There is no quorum; let us have the yeas and nays. That is the shortest way.

Mr. ALLISON. I trust the Senator from Nebraska will withdraw his demand for a division.

Mr. VAN WYCK. If it is any accommodation to the Senator, I will withdraw it.

Mr. ALLISON. It is no accommodation to me. It is only a question as to whether the bill shall pass before the 4th day of March or not.

Mr. VEST. Let us have another division.

Mr. CULLOM. I think there is a quorum in the Chamber.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is satisfied that there is a quorum, and if there is no objection the demand for a division will be regarded as withdrawn, and the motion to amend will be regarded as rejected.

Mr. ALLISON. I offer an amendment from the Committee on Appropriations. After line 110 I move to insert:

For continuation of the public building at Council Bluffs, Iowa, $50,000.

Mr. CONGER. I should like to hear that amendment read.

The Chief Clerk read the amendment.

Mr. VAN WYCK. Let it be read again, please. What is the State? The amendment was again read.

Mr. VAN WYCK. May I ask where that amendment comes from? Not knowing, I will raise the point of order, and then I will obtain the information.

Mr. ALLISON. It comes from the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. VAN WYCK. Is it just reported?

Mr. ALLISON. I have authority to report it. I will state to the Senator and to the Senate that for two days last week I was obliged to be out of the Chamber. There were some eight or ten public-building bills voted on in the Senate, all of them passing. I not being in the Chamber on account of the business of the Committee on Appropriations, the Council Bluffs bill was not called up. It was called up, I believe, this morning, if this is still Monday, and passed. The Committee on Appropriations authorized me to move to insert this provision in the pending bill. I state the facts. If any Senator desires to raise the point of order upon the amendment, he can do so, and if the point is sustained I shall have discharged my duty as chairman of the Committee on Appropriations and as one of the Senators from my State.

Mr. BECK. The Committee on Appropriations in view of all the facts gave unanimous consent that this amendment should be moved, whatever that is worth.

Mr. FRYE. The bill authorizing the expenditure has passed the Senate.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin. It passed the Senate to-day, so that the amendment is not subject to a point of order.

Mr. FRYE. The amendment is in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. ALLISON. In line 2473, I move to change the word "sum" to "sums;" so as to read:

And no more than an allotment of one-half of the sums hereby appropriated shall be expended in the two first quarters of the fiscal year.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on concurring in the amendments made as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. HARRISON. I desire to reserve a separate vote in the Senate on the amendment as to the Montana penitentiary building.

Mr. SEWELL. I desire to reserve the paragraph in relation to the Cotton Centennial Exposition for a separate vote. I gave notice that I should move to strike out that section in the Senate.

Mr. HARRIS. I call the attention of the Senator from Michigan [Mr. PALMER] to the fact that in Committee of the Whole an amendment which he moved and which was agreed to be subsequently desired to amend, and he must move his amendment before the amendment is concurred in.

Mr. PALMER. I desire to offer an amendment to the amendment.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask that the amendments not reserved may be considered together.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no other amendment reserved the question will be taken upon concurring in all the other amendments made as in Committee of the Whole.

The amendments were concurred in.

Mr. PALMER. My amendment to the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole is, after the word "Michigan," in line 11 of the substitute for lines 119, 120, and 121, to insert "approved March 2, 1885."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no objection, that amendment will be made and the amendment will be concurred in as amended. The next reserved amendment will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. Page 91, beginning at line 2233, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, agreed to strike out the following paragraph:

Penitentiary for Montana Territory: For completion of the penitentiary for Montana Territory, $25,000.

Mr. HARRISON. The Senate has voted to-night, I do not know how many hundreds of thousands, up into the millions, perhaps, for the construction of public buildings where the buildings provided for have been a mere matter of convenience to those having business with the Government. I believe that the completion of the penitentiary in Montana is more than a matter of convenience; it is a question of the humane treatment and the safe-keeping of prisoners in that Territory.

It does seem to me that the Senate ought to consent to make the appropriation provided for in the bill as it came to us from the House.

Mr. BECK. After the debate this afternoon I examined all the past appropriation acts, and I could find only $4,000 appropriated before, and that with the $15,000 makes only $19,000. I am inclined to think that the Senator from Indiana is right, and that we have not given enough for that building. I for one shall vote to non-concur. I thought we had given a good deal more before.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senate concur in the amendment made as in Committee of the Whole?

The amendment was non-concurred in.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will report the next reserved amendment. Does the Chair understand the Senator from New Jersey to move to strike out?

Mr. SEWELL. I move to strike out the whole paragraph relating to the World's Industrial and Cotton Centennial Exposition.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out, beginning at line 2391, down to and including line 2423, as follows—

Mr. HOAR. I ask unanimous consent that the words be not read. The paragraph is very long.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the paragraph. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. SEWELL. I ask for the yeas and nays on my motion to strike out.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BECK. There is some misapprehension about the meaning of the vote. Will the Chair please state the question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey moves to strike out the provision contained in lines 2391 to 2423, inclusive, relating to the Centennial Cotton Exposition.

Mr. BAYARD. There seems to be some misapprehension in regard to it. A vote in the affirmative will destroy the appropriation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It strikes out the entire provision relative to the Centennial Cotton Exposition.

Mr. BAYARD. Then it amounts to a clear issue for or against the appropriation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from New Jersey to strike out the paragraph.

The Secretary called the roll.

Mr. CAMERON, of Wisconsin (after having voted in the affirmative). I am paired with the Senator from Georgia [Mr. BROWN]. I had authority, however, to vote if it were necessary to make a quorum; but as there is a quorum without my vote, I shall withdraw it.

Mr. PENDLETON. I am paired on this question with my colleague [Mr. SHERMAN]. I should vote "nay" if I were not paired.

Mr. MANDERSON. I am paired with the Senator from Florida [Mr. JONES]. If he were present, I should vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 10, nays 35; as follows:

YEAS—10.

Chace,	Hale,	Mahone,	Wilson.
Dolph,	Harris,	Plumb,
Frye,	Harrison,	Sewell,

NAYS—35.

Allison,	Conger,	Jonas,	Palmer,

So the motion to amend was not agreed to.

Mr. PLUMB. By the authority of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds I move, after line 277, to insert:

For court-house and post-office at Fort Scott, Kans.: For purchase of site and erection of building thereon, $50,000.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BLAIR. By authority of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds I move, after line 315, to insert:

That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to purchase a site for, and cause to be erected thereon, a suitable building, with commodious fire-proof vaults, for the accommodation of the post-office, pension office, the United States courts, internal-revenue office, and other Government offices, at the city of Manchester, in the State of New Hampshire. The site, and the building thereon, when completed upon plans and specifications to be previously made and approved by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall not exceed the cost of $200,000: Provided, That no money to be appropriated for this purpose shall be available until a valid title to the site shall be vested in the United States, and the State of New Hampshire shall have ceded her jurisdiction over the same, during the time the United States shall be or remain the owner thereof, for all purposes except the administration of the criminal laws of said State and the service of civil process therein: Provided, That the site shall leave the building unexposed to danger from fire in adjacent buildings by an open space of not less than fifty feet, including streets and alleys. That the sum of $100,000 be, and the same is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be used and expended for the purpose provided in this act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire. [Putting the question.] The yeas appear to have it. The yeas have it. The amendment is not agreed to.

Mr. BLAIR. Mr. President, I desire to say a word. There was a bill introduced, for the purpose of the construction of this building, at the last session, which passed the Senate, appropriating $300,000, the estimate having been made by the Treasury Department.

Mr. BUTLER. May I inquire what the question is before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is still open to amendment in the Senate. The Senator from New Hampshire has the floor.

Mr. ALLISON. From the statement made by the Senator from New Hampshire the amendment is liable to a point of order, which I make.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment has been rejected by a vote of the Senate.

Mr. BLAIR. I do not understand that it is subject to the point of order.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire has the floor.

Mr. BLAIR. I wish to have it understood by the Senate, as the proposition is to be voted upon on its merits, that at the last session a bill was introduced for the construction of a public building at Manchester, N. H.

Mr. ALLISON. I inquire what amendment is pending?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is still before the Senate and open to amendment. The Chair supposes that the Senator from New Hampshire desires to offer an amendment. He is entitled to the floor.

Mr. BLAIR. I have offered an amendment, which I understand to be pending.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It has been rejected by a vote of the Senate.

Mr. BLAIR. I do not understand how that can be, Mr. President. I addressed the Chair before the vote was announced, and I desired to be heard upon it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair did not so understand the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. BLAIR. It was a misapprehension of the presiding officer, then.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair regrets it.

Mr. BLAIR. May I be heard?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire has the floor.

Mr. BLAIR. I do not wish to move another amendment. I desire to be heard upon the amendment which I have offered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That amendment has been rejected by a vote of the Senate.

Mr. BLAIR. I ask unanimous consent that the vote by which the amendment was rejected may be reconsidered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire asks unanimous consent that the vote—

Mr. BUTLER. I object, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made. Are there further amendments to be proposed to the bill?

Mr. BLAIR. I wish to say before I sit down, having the floor, that during the short period I have been in the Senate I have never known a presiding officer to decline to allow a question to be put when a Senator rose and declared that he addressed the Chair with the hope of being heard upon the merits of the proposition, as I now state, although technically there may have been a declaration of the decision of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there further amendments to the bill in the Senate? If there are none, the question is on ordering the amendments to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time, and passed.

Mr. HARRIS obtained the floor.

The report was read, as follows:

H. L. DAWES,

F. B. PLUMB,

M. W. RANSOM,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

E. JOHN ELLIS,

W. S. HOLMAN,

THOMAS RYAN,

Managers on the part of the House.

The report was concurred in.

Mr. DAWES. There are several disagreements, the result of the conference, which will cause some discussion. It is suggested that the question upon the disposition of the amendments still pending be postponed until after an adjournment. I have no objection to that course; but I will go on with a discussion at this time if the Senate prefer.

Mr. HARRISON. I wish to ask the Senator from Massachusetts if he will yield to a suggestion. There are quite a number of pension bills reported favorably from the Committee on Pensions the consideration of which I understand the chairman of the Committee on Pensions desires to move. He does not intend to call up any contested cases, but only those bills which are reported favorably. They must be acted upon to-night in order that they may be properly enrolled. If the Senator will allow the Indian appropriation bill to lie over, I will suggest that we take up those pension bills. I think we can dispose of them in a very few minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. HARRIS] had been recognized and was upon the floor, and yielded to the Senator from Massachusetts to make a conference report.

Mr. DAWES. If it is agreeable I will let this matter lie over informally to be taken up when the Senate again convenes.

Mr. PLUMB. Has the report been concurred in?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The report has been concurred in, but it does not dispose of all the amendments to the Indian appropriation bill.

Mr. DAWES. Does this leave it the unfinished business to come up when the Senate again meets?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair understands that it being a conference report it will be privileged, and can be moved at any time.

Mr. DAWES. The conference report has been adopted, but there are disagreeing votes. In what manner will they come before the Senate if we take a recess at this time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. On a motion to recede or a motion to insist and ask for a further conference.

Mr. DAWES. I should like to have an understanding that this matter be laid aside informally to be called up when we meet again.

Several SENATORS. Ask for unanimous consent.

Mr. DAWES. I will ask for unanimous consent to that arrangement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts asks unanimous consent that the further consideration of the report of the conference committee be informally laid aside to be resumed at the next meeting of the Senate. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

BRANNIN, SUMMERS & CO.

Mr. HARRIS. I ask unanimous consent to proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 652) for the relief of Brannin, Summers & Co. It is a bill that has had six reports, I think, in its favor and not one against it.

Mr. MITCHELL. I desire, if it is the wish of the Senate to continue further in session, to take up the pension bills on the Calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Tennessee has been recognized by the Chair, and asks unanimous consent for the consideration of a House bill.

Mr. MITCHELL. I was not aware of that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill indicated by the Senator from Tennessee?

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 652) for the relief of Brannin, Summers & Co. It directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay Brannin, Summers & Co., of Louisville, Ky., $9,588.62, in full for duties paid by them in certain proceedings in rem brought by the United States against certain sugars, in the United States court for the district of Kentucky, alleged to have been fraudulently imported through the custom-house at New Orleans.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REPORT ON THE PRECIOUS METALS.

Mr. MANDERSON. I ask unanimous consent to make several reports from the Committee on Printing, which seem to be important. I am directed by the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the following concurrent resolution, to report it without amendment:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring). That the report of the Director of the Mint on the production of the precious metals in the United States for the year 1884 be printed, and that 9,000 extra copies be printed; 4,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, 2,000 copies for the use of the Senate, and 3,000 copies for the use of the Director of the Mint.

I ask for the present consideration of the resolution.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to.

REPORT OF BUREAU OF ANIMAL INDUSTRY.

Mr. MANDERSON. I am directed by the Committee on Printing, to whom was referred the joint resolution (H. Res. 341) to authorize the printing of 50,000 copies of the second annual report of the Bureau of Animal Industry for the year 1885, to report it without amendment, and I ask for its present consideration.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

Mr. JONES, of Nevada, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred the following resolution, reported it without amendment; and it was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds be directed to compile a statement showing the number of public buildings constructed and authorized to be constructed under existing laws for each State, the amount expended or authorized for each such building from the first public building constructed to the 4th of March, 1885, and to report such statement to the Senate in December next; and for such purpose the said committee be authorized to employ a clerk at the usual compensation until the 1st of December next; to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate.

COMMITTEE ON RULES.

Mr. JONES, of Nevada, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred the following resolution, reported it without amendment; and it was considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Committee on Rules be, and is hereby, continued and authorized to sit during the recess of Congress, and that the necessary expenses thereof be paid out of the "miscellaneous items" of the contingent fund of the Senate.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER IMPROVEMENTS.

Mr. JONES, of Nevada. I am directed by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, to whom was referred the following resolution, to report it without amendment; and I ask for its present consideration:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Improvement of the Mississippi River be directed to prepare a detailed statement of the expenses of the improvements of the Mississippi River and its tributaries with a view to ascertain the amounts expended for purpose of commerce, the amount expended to protect the lands adjoining from the ravages of the rivers, to report the same to the Senate at the December session of Congress, and be authorized for that purpose to employ a clerk at the usual compensation until December 1, 1885, to be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate.

The Senate, by unanimous consent, proceeded to consider the resolution.

Mr. HARRISON. Would it not be cheaper to put these clerks on the annual roll?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks it would. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

TOWN LOTS IN PERU, IOWA.

Mr. PLUMB. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 449) to provide for the appraisal and sale of lots in the town of Peru, Dubuque County, Iowa. It is a bill which has passed the Senate twice heretofore, and has now come to us from the House. It will take but a moment.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

DISTRICT TAX SALES.

Mr. INGALLS. I ask for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 8236) relating to sales for taxes in the District of Columbia. It is a bill which was previously under discussion, and I believe all objections have been withdrawn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARRIS in the chair). Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

Mr. MORGAN. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama objects.

OUTERBRIDGE HORSEY.

Mr. GORMAN. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill (H. R. 4089) to empower the commissioners of the District of Columbia to examine the claim of, and providing for the payment of, Outerbridge Horsey, assignee.

By unanimous consent, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It directs the commissioners of the District of Columbia to examine the claims of Outerbridge Horsey, assignee of T. B. Winter, for medicines furnished the poor of the sixth council district in the District, and ascertain forthwith what, if any, sum be due and unpaid thereon.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. HARRISON. I ask the unanimous consent of the Senate to proceed now to the consideration of House pension bills on the Calendar reported favorably.

Mr. CULLOM. That is exactly what I was going to ask myself.

Mr. HARRISON. There are quite a number of them, and it is only proposed to take up the unobjected cases. They are House bills, and unless they are considered to-night it will be impossible to enroll them.

Mr. BUTLER. Before the Senate proceeds with the consideration of the bills to which the Senator from Indiana calls attention, I ask him to allow me to call up House bill 1401.

Mr. HARRISON. I would gladly consent to let the Senator from South Carolina call that bill up, but I am pressed by Senators about me to yield in the same direction. I hope the Senator will let us go on with this other order now. We shall have time for that bill to-morrow. There are several other bills in which I have friends who are interested, that I should like to have considered now if it were not for the necessity of considering the pension bills.

Mr. VEST. Let me ask the Senator from Indiana what objection there can be to taking up the House bills on the Calendar in their order?

Mr. HARRISON. These are House pension bills that I propose to have considered.

Mr. VEST. Why not take up all House bills? I have a bill here in which I or my constituents have no more individual interest, only as much as the constituents of other Senators, which I have been trying to get up—a bill entirely in the interest of valuable property and human life.

Mr. CULLOM. If the Senator will allow me to suggest one reason why I think the order ought to be carried out—there is quite a large number of these pension bills and they can be passed more quickly than any other class of bills, and go to the enrolling clerk so as to give him time to get the work up.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Indiana to proceed to the consideration of House pension bills reported favorably from the Committee on Pensions?

Mr. BUTLER. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is objection.

Mr. HARRISON. Let me appeal to my friend from South Carolina not to make that objection.

Mr. BUTLER. I shall insist on it.

Mr. HARRISON. Here are perhaps seventy-five or eighty of these pension applicants whose bills have passed the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Indiana may proceed by consent; otherwise he is out of order.

Mr. VEST. Now I ask the Senator—

Mr. HARRISON. I have not yielded the floor. I desire to move, then, if we are to be met with this sort of resistance, that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the first one of the House pension bills on the Calendar.

Mr. CULLOM. It is House bill 7718, Order of Business 1357.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chief Clerk will report the title of the bill referred to by the Senator from Indiana.

Mr. BUTLER. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chief Clerk will report the title of the bill. The Senator from Indiana moves, as he has a right to move, that the Senate proceed to its consideration.

The CHIEF CLERK. "A bill (H. R. 7718) restoring John Snyder to the pension-roll."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Indiana moves that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill. [Putting the question.] The "ayes" appear to have it.

Mr. BUTLER. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered and taken.

Mr. PENDLETON. I am paired with my colleague [Mr. SHERMAN], but inasmuch as there is no quorum voting I shall vote. I vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 31, nays 5; as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No quorum having voted, it is the duty of the Chair to order a call of the roll. The Secretary will call the roll of the Senate.

The Secretary called the roll, and 34 Senators answered to their names.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Thirty-four Senators have answered to their names—not a quorum.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that the Senate take a recess from now until 9 o'clock this morning.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 2 o'clock and 30 minutes a. m., Tuesday, March 3, 1885) the Senate took a recess until 9 o'clock a. m.

MORNING SESSION.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore (at 9 o'clock and 15 minutes a. m., Tuesday, March 3). The time of the recess has expired. At the time the recess was taken there was no quorum present, and there seems to be no quorum present at this time.

Mr. DAWES. I move a call of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The roll of the Senate will be called. The Secretary called the roll, and 21 Senators responded to their names.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Only twenty-one Senators have answered to their names. There is no quorum present. Several Senators entered the Chamber.

Mr. ALLISON (at 9 o'clock and 45 minutes a. m.). Is there a quorum present, Mr. President?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is not. Thirty-seven Senators are now present.

Mr. FRYE and Mr. MAXEY entered the Chamber.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. A quorum of Senators has now appeared. The Senate proceeds to the consideration of the motion to take up the bill (H. R. 7718) restoring John Snyder to the pension-roll.

Mr. CONGER. Mr. President—

Mr. DAWES. I ask the Senator to give way.

Mr. CONGER. Let that bill be passed and I will give way. I have been waiting all winter to pass that bill.

Mr. DAWES. I have been waiting all winter to pass the Indian appropriation bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Debate is not in order.

Mr. HARRISON. If I may be allowed to make a suggestion, I ask unanimous consent now that we proceed to the consideration of the pension bills reported favorably, and when that consent is obtained, if it is, then of course I will give way to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. DAWES. I should be very glad to do that, but it is perfectly apparent that if the Indian appropriation bill can not go to the House now—

Mr. HARRISON. I am going to give way as soon as I get unanimous consent.

Mr. DAWES. Why do you want to get consent of the Senate and then not use it?

Mr. HARRISON. I intend to use it; but it simply gives the conference committee report a chance to get in.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair would suggest to the Senator from Indiana that he ask unanimous consent to take up pension bills after the Indian appropriation bill is disposed of.

Mr. HARRISON. That is exactly what I propose to do.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Indiana asks unanimous consent that the report of the conferees on the Indian appropriation bill be now considered, and that immediately after the disposition of that the Senate take up the House pension bills.

Mr. HARRISON. Reported favorably.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. House pension bills reported favorably. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. DAWES. I beg pardon of the Senate for taking any considerable portion of their time this morning. I wish to state the condition of this bill and the final disposition of it by the two bodies.

The Senate and the House have now come together upon everything in this bill that pertains to an Indian appropriation bill. It has been some time since this bill passed the Senate, and perhaps it is proper that I should state the condition of it in the beginning, and that will show the condition of it at this time.

It came over from the House with the ordinary appropriations for the Indian service loaded with a large amount of what are called depredation claims and burdened with a large amount also of general legislation upon important matters. The Senate at that time sustained the Committee on Appropriations in stripping the bill of everything except what pertained to the appropriations. It went back to the other branch with the Senate rejecting by way of amendment the entire body of depredation claims and substituting in their place a provision which seemed so wise that the conferees on the part of the House have agreed to it, looking to safeguards and clearer light upon the subject of depredation claims, and also with all the independent legislation stricken out of it.

The conferees have agreed on all matters in the bill pertaining to appropriations, and it comes back to the two Houses to say whether it shall be an appropriation bill, or shall be an appropriation bill and a private claims bill and also a bill to carry general legislation.

As the Senate sustained the Committee on Appropriations in striking out all the independent legislation, I have to say that this was the first bill I believe in which the committee's determination that they were instructed by the Senate came before this body and the Senate sustained the committee in every respect and struck out every particle of that legislation. Since then the course of the Senate in reference to other matters, while the committee have been compelled to adhere to the resolution and rule of the Senate, has somewhat weakened the conference committee, and this conference committee have resolved to submit the question to the Senate, and the conferees on the part of the House to the House.

The conferees on the part of the Senate have been severely criticised publicly and in this body for resisting the introduction of legislation into this bill which of itself the public have come to consider very important. It was. It was in vain that the committee at the time it was considered pointed out defects in this legislation, admitting its general purpose to be wise and that if in independent bills where it could be perfected it would be eminently proper to consider it. It seems to have been in vain for them to try to make others understand outside of this body, and even the body itself, that under the rules we could not perfect this proposed legislation.

I have felt that it is necessary to ask a vote of the Senate upon some of these propositions, at the same time voting to adhere to the rule of the Senate, and to point out what are the defects in these measures that render it improper that in their present shape they should go on the statute-book; and for that purpose I would, if it were proper, if there were any such motion known to parliamentary law as receding from our amendment with an amendment, make that proposition; but there is no such motion known to parliamentary law. There are but two motions that can be made in reference to this independent legislation. One is to insist upon our amendment striking it out, and the other is to recede from it. The only way it seems to me that we can make known to those who demand that we yield this legislation what is the matter with it beside the rule, is to propose an amendment here and let it go into the RECORD, and that will show what if this were in a place where under the rules we could adopt it in our opinion it ought to be; and therefore I desire to call attention to one or two of these provisions.

The first to which I desire to call attention is that one which seems to have attracted attention in the other body and throughout the country as one of vital importance. It is what is called the crimes act, for the first time proposing to punish Indians like white men, in the same courts for the commission of crimes—a very important provision and one which the demands of the Indian service are very urgent for; and yet the provision, which is section 11 of this House bill, proposes in the first place—unfortunately in its phraseology, not in its intent—to take away from State courts, whether there be a reservation in the State or not, in Massachusetts or Connecticut, as well as any other State where there is a reservation, jurisdiction over the commission of an offense if either party to it be an Indian, and transfer it bodily to the United States courts. If any Indian should come from Nebraska to Massachusetts and there fall into a quarrel with any white man there or an Indian there the State courts of Massachusetts, if this were a valid provision, would lose all control over that offense, and it would be taken into the United States courts. It is sufficient to say that the Constitution would not permit that, and therefore if this provision were taken, as we are obliged to take it as it stands or strike it out, it would be well in this respect.

It then goes on further and attempts to establish the civil jurisdiction of the United States courts among the five civilized tribes where they have their own courts, and where we have solemnly by treaty covenant declared that they shall have them exclusively, and where we have no right to interfere. Therefore I would propose, and I should like to have it go upon the record so that people may not say we are against this provision—I would propose if it were in order that instead of this provision the following be adopted; but it is impossible under our rules that it can be done:

That immediately upon and after the date of the passage of this act all Indians committing against the person or property of another Indian or other person any of the following crimes, namely, murder, manslaughter, rape, assault with intent to kill, arson, burglary, and larceny within any Territory of the United States, and either within or without an Indian reservation, shall be subject therefor to the laws of such Territory relating to said crimes, and shall be tried therefor in the same courts and in the same manner and shall be subject to the same penalties as are all other persons charged with the commission of said crimes, respectively; and the said courts are hereby given jurisdiction in all such cases; and all Indians committing any of the above crimes against the person or property of another Indian or other person within the boundaries of any State of the United States, and within any Indian reservation, shall be subject to the same laws, tried in the same courts and in the same manner, and subject to the same penalties as are all other persons committing any of the above crimes within the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States.

Now, in order to ascertain whether the Senate are willing to recede from the amendment which strikes out the defective provision which I have pointed out, I move that the Senate recede from their amendment striking out the defective provision, and I say that I shall vote against the motion myself; and I only make the motion to ascertain by a yea-and-nay vote of the Senate what is the sentiment of the Senate upon the subject. If it were in our power I would propose to offer the amendment which I have just read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARRISON in the chair). Will the Senator from Massachusetts indicate the number of the amendment to which he refers?

Mr. DAWES. It is numbered 113.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts moves that the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 113, which will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. Amendment numbered 113 is to strike out section 11, in the following words:

SEC. 11. That immediately upon and after the date of the passage of this act all Indians within the provisions of this act committing against the person or property of another Indian or other person any of the following crimes, namely, murder, manslaughter, rape, assault with intent to kill, arson, burglary, and larceny within any Territory of the United States, and either within or without an Indian reservation, shall be subject therefor to the laws of such Territory relating to said crimes, and shall be tried therefor in the same courts and in the same manner and shall be subject to the same penalties as are all other persons charged with the commission of said crimes, respectively; and the said courts are hereby given jurisdiction in all such cases; and all such Indians committing any of the above crimes against the person or property of another Indian or other person within the boundaries of any State of the United States, and either within or without an Indian reservation, shall be subject to the same laws, tried in the same courts and in the same manner, and subject to the same penalties as are all other persons committing any of the above crimes within the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States: And provided further, That from and after the passage of this act any Indian or Indians may hereafter prosecute in any court any civil action at law or equity in like manner as others are permitted to do; and in all actions in said courts Indians shall not be rejected as witnesses on account of their race or nation: Provided further, This act shall not be so construed as to confer jurisdiction upon either the State or Federal courts to execute the laws of any of the five civilized tribes in the Indian country: Provided further, That the district court of the United States for the western district of Arkansas shall have civil jurisdiction over the five civilized tribes and white people of the Indian Territory in cases of debt on contract or torts committed upon the personal property of any person either in or out of said Indian Territory.

Mr. FRYE. I should like to inquire, if the Senator can with propriety reply to the inquiry, whether or not the amendment which he proposes has been submitted by the Senate conferees to the consideration of the conference committee?

Mr. DAWES. If there is no impropriety in answering the question, I will state that I have reason to believe that that would be adopted by the conference if the Senate should insist upon its amendment. If the Senate recedes, following my motion, against which I shall vote myself, it puts into the law the defective measure which I have pointed out.

Mr. FRYE. And if the Senate insists, probably the modified amendment will be inserted?

Mr. DAWES. Yes, sir. If it were in order I would move to recede with an amendment substituting that for the present section, but it is only because it is not in order and there is no way that the Senate can reach it except by insisting and indicating in this way what the Senate would like—

Mr. SHERMAN. I would a great deal rather hear the Senator make the motion to insist upon the amendment.

Mr. DAWES. The only reason I move to recede and then vote against it is because there is a feeling elsewhere that we prevent the Senate by our course from receding and taking these provisions; and I want it to be understood that I submit this plainly to the Senate, whether they will recede or not.

Mr. SHERMAN. The old rule—I have stated it two or three times and am almost ashamed to repeat it again—is that where a legislative provision is proposed by either House and readily accepted by the other it is all right; but where it is objected to by the other body the House proposing it has no right to insist on it under parliamentary custom.

Mr. DAWES. We have preached that doctrine the last three or four weeks so long and so ineffectually to other ears than our own that we are utterly helpless. Now, I do not propose to ask a ye-a-and-nay vote on the formal motion to insist. I know the law is just what the Senator says.

Mr. SHERMAN. I beg pardon of the Senator. The Committee on Appropriations have not put their conduct on the right position. I do not want to find fault with them, because they are doing the very best they can; but I say there never was a rule of the Senate that forbade legislation to be put upon an appropriation bill. It has been done time out of mind. The ground is that when we propose legislation that the House object to we must at once abandon it. When they propose legislation, as they have a right to do, the rule is the same; but we have no right to say that they can not put legislation on an appropriation bill, and therefore it is out of order for us to complain of the House of Representatives for putting legislation on appropriation bills. We have no business with that. They have the right to make their rules, and they can put all the legislation of Congress, repeal all the statutes of the United States, on an appropriation bill, and we have no right to complain if they do it in any way they choose, either by unanimous consent or by their rules. But when they do anything in that respect which we do not like we can simply say, "No; we will not agree to that; first, because it is wrong, and next, because we do not want it on an appropriation bill;" and in that event, whenever that disagreement occurs, the House proposing the legislation is bound to recede according to parliamentary law, and they will do it always. If they insist and insist they have a right to do so, but they have no right under parliamentary laws; they have the power to do it, but they have no right to insist ultimately upon independent legislation on any appropriation bill to which the other House objects.

Mr. INGALLS. Suppose they do insist?

Mr. SHERMAN. Then the Senate would be perfectly right in adhering to its disagreement, and instead of making a motion to recede

I would simply say, "Upon that amendment we adhere." Then I would stand upon that until the crack of doom!

Mr. DAWES. No Committee on Appropriations that ever I served on in this body ever took the ground that the House had not, under its rules, the right to put independent legislation on an appropriation bill. We have not gone before a conference on any such weak ground as that. We have admitted that they had the right under their rules to put it there; but we have submitted to them that it was unwise to put it there. We have told them that under our rules we were bound hand and foot and could not perfect their independent legislation, and there was another reason why they should not force us into that position; and another one was the reason assigned by the Senator from Ohio—and that reason has never been set aside by any committee of conference in which I have been—namely, that when either House proposes independent legislation in an appropriation bill and insists upon it and the other House resists it, the proposing House must yield in order to let the appropriation bill go through. That is sound, and that is an argument in a committee of conference that has always been urged; but the others have not been lost sight of.

Now, Mr. President, the reason why I desire to have a ye-a-and-nay vote upon the motion to recede is so that if I go into another conference I can meet the committee of conference on the part of the House by saying that I have presented their question precisely as they wanted it submitted. They have sent up this defective legislation, and up to this time they are insisting upon it. I come back and say if the Senate is willing to take such defective legislation the responsibility is off the shoulders of the conferees; I submit it fairly to the Senate. I submit it in such a form that it will give them the best opportunity of acting, and the responsibility shall be upon the Senate.

It will take no longer to take a ye-a-and-nay vote on a motion to recede than it will on a motion to insist. Nobody will ask a ye-a-and-nay vote on the formal motion after this is acted on, and so I hope the Senator from Ohio will see the wisdom of the Senate presenting this question fairly, so that the House will have no occasion to complain that we refuse to take the sense of the Senate on this matter, and I hope there will be a ye-a-and-nay vote on the motion to recede.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. On this question the yeas and nays are called for.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. PLUMB. Mr. President, this question has assumed very considerable proportions by reason of the contention between the two Houses on this very important proposition, and also by reason of the fact that we are in the very closing hours of the session confronted with the possibility, to say nothing more, of an extra session of Congress growing out of this contention. The subject has never assumed any very great importance to my mind heretofore; but the events of this session have impressed upon me more strongly than I ever expected I could have been impressed in that way with the utter unwisdom and legislative unsoundness of the position of the House of Representatives in assuming to legislate upon important matters on appropriation bills; and that is true, as it seems to me, from every possible standpoint from which it can be viewed.

Take, for instance, the legislation which is on the Indian bill and which is now under consideration on the motion of the Senator from Massachusetts. As it came to us it had not received practically the consideration of the House of Representatives, it had not received the consideration of the Appropriations Committee even, and if it had the subject was not germane to the jurisdiction of that committee, and it was a subject which that committee, in the multitude of its other business, could not properly consider anyhow. In point of fact it was put on in the House, and when we come to consider it we find that it not only violates solemn treaty obligations of the nation, but it is absolutely unconstitutional.

Now what shall we do? That is a very grave question. The House people say, "Amend it; we will consider this thing on its merits, and if you will show us wherein we are wrong we will amend it." The answer to that is twofold: In the first place our rules do not permit us to do that. We have got to take the chances of a unanimous agreement upon the modification of an important measure, and which in the shape it comes to us from the House is pregnant with the great consequences which may grow out of any measure which violates a treaty and is also unconstitutional. In answer to that the House conferees say, "That is your fault and not ours; it is your rules, therefore, that are obstructing this matter, and not our rules." My answer to that is this: Take the Senator from Massachusetts, who I am willing to follow as a lawyer and as the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, and as a Senator versed in all the intricacies of the law on this very important question; but is he himself willing to accept a snap-judgment such as he may form in the hurried hours of conference on this question? I say he is not, because he has said so himself.

In the next place, this measure ought to be discussed in the Senate; and no man can say with reference to a proposition of this kind thus hurriedly fixed up that if it were submitted to the mature judgment of the Senate it would not receive important modifications in the discussion which must necessarily ensue if it came forward as an independent proposition.

But there is another important objection, and that is this: We have had a great deal of discussion as to the relative powers of the two Houses of Congress in regard to the origination of appropriation bills. The Senate has yielded in effect to the demand of the House that it, and it alone, has the power to originate appropriation bills. But this is going a step further. It is yielding to the demand of the House that they shall originate not only appropriation bills but by the means of appropriation bills they shall originate all other substantive legislation to be passed upon by Congress. It is even stronger than that. Taking into account what has occurred within the last few days, it is a proposition that the Appropriations Committee of the House shall originate all the legislation to be passed upon by both branches of Congress, because that committee has so managed its affairs, or has been so managed, that it has been impossible that legislation should pass the House that did not come from that committee, whether it were in the shape of measures originating in the House or in the shape of measures which originated in the Senate and passed the Senate and had gone to the House and were on the Speaker's table.

But it is even more than that. It is not only the Appropriations Committee, but it has been in the power, as has been amply demonstrated in the last few days, of a single individual member of the House and of that committee, to do all the things I have mentioned in the nature of coercion in regard to that legislation, and in the absorption not only of the functions of the House but the functions of the Senate as well. We have seen how near the magnificent will-power of one man could bring Congress to the danger of an extra session of Congress, pregnant as I believe that event would be with the gravest consequences to the people of the United States.

Mr. President, all these reasons conspire to make me immovable, as an individual member of this body, upon this question of yielding upon these propositions, so far as they involve at least important legislation.

Mr. BECK. I desire to ask the Senator from Kansas for his views in regard to an argument we often hear. Five of the most important appropriation bills that have come over to us have come laden down, some of them, with legislation, within the last week of the session. We come at once to look at them; we can not examine them without sitting up all night, as our Committee on Appropriations has had to do for a week past. Might there not be some joint rule, some arrangement, something requiring that the bills should come to the Senate within a reasonable time, or that we should take some step ourselves to lay such bills before the Senate, because under the present system we can not really consider them at all, as they are held back so long that it is an impossibility to do it? And why ought not some modification be made, so that we can at least see them and consider them, by originating them ourselves if they are not presented within sixty days, or do something; for at present we can hardly do anything else than take what is sent to us?

Mr. PLUMB. That is a question which can be discussed incidentally here. The propriety of the course intimated can be suggested, and perhaps it ought to be done; but that is a question which relates to the practice of the other House of Congress. It is something which they ought to do themselves in some effective way. The mere question of method amounts to nothing. If they are to preserve their own control of legislation, I can conceive of no more gross confession of legislative incompetency than has been manifested within a stone's throw of where we are now during the last thirty days, and, in fact, during this entire session of Congress. The absolute helpless condition of things existing has impelled the sending to the Senate of one appropriation bill, involving an appropriation of $22,000,000, without the consideration of any item in it with one single exception, and that one not germane to the carrying on of the operations of the Government; and another bill, the deficiency bill, was passed in the same way without any opportunity to debate, and under the whip and spur of an apparent necessity to do it in that way in order to avoid the graver consequences of an extra session.

Mr. INGALLS. Has the deficiency bill yet been reported from the Senate committee?

Mr. PLUMB. The deficiency bill is now in the hands of the committee of the Senate, and will be reported to-day.

Mr. PLUMB. The bills thus passed receiving no consideration at the hands of the House, subjected to no scrutiny there, submitted to no debate and no amendment, coming here in the way they did, imposed upon the Appropriations Committee of the Senate a double responsibility. We are in the habit, as all of us are, of being enlightened from time to time when bills are on their passage with the arguments for or against not only the bills themselves, but the several items which they contain as found in the speeches reported in the RECORD every morning; and although not permitted to give it any very great weight directly, we are in the habit of giving great consideration to matters which, having been subjected to discussion in the other branch of Congress, have received its final judgment in the shape of a vote following such discussion.

But, Mr. President, bills have come to us this year without any such aid to their enlightened consideration here; and, in addition to that, they have come here with legislation of an important character, which I have spoken of; and the Senate has been characterized during the last week or ten days as deliberately designing to bring about an extra session of Congress because, forsooth, it insisted that it would not take legislation of that kind upon appropriation bills. And though we have been ready here at all times to consider these measures promptly as they came over, to give them ample consideration if time were allowed us, the endeavor is made to put us in the wrong in this very important matter.

The sundry civil bill which passed last night received the consideration of every single moment of time of the subcommittee and of the full Committee on Appropriations of the Senate that elapsed from the moment it was received from the House until it was reported to this body; and so with the deficiency bill; and the Senate committee was obliged to do in two days what the House required three months to do. The deficiency bill, as the Senator from Massachusetts reminds me, has been subjected to the same process, the committee taking it the moment it came over and sitting night and day in its consideration in order that they might in some decent way discharge their duty to this body before presenting it here.

Mr. President, this is a grave question with reference not only to the condition by which we are confronted now, but with reference to our future relations to the legislation of this country. If it is suggested that this legislation ought to come in the shape of separate bills, we are confronted with the statement that under the rules of the House no legislation can be put through there unless it is put through under the whip and spur of an appropriation bill; and there we land at last in that final confession of legislative incompetency which has borne the fruits which I have brought to the attention of the Senate, not only in the passage of two bills, among the largest appropriation bills for carrying on the Government, under a suspension of the rules and without the consideration of any but one single item in both of them put together, and in the final passage of a river and harbor bill giving a lump sum of $5,000,000 to be expended pro rata upon public works named in the preceding year's bill, which is not only a similar confession of incompetency but is a criminal expenditure of the public money because, as every man knows who voted for it and as every other man knows who has given it any consideration whatever, three-fourths of that money must necessarily be wastefully and wickedly expended, substantially without any returning result to the Government.

Mr. INGALLS. By a Democratic Secretary of War.

Mr. PLUMB. I do not know how much or how little that might aggravate the case, nor do I speak now to characterize this with reference to the political complexion of either House of Congress. I had occasion to say some disagreeable things once about the House of Representatives of a Congress that happened to have a majority of my political faith.

I think if this difficulty is not inherent in the system, at any rate it is incured by time, and nothing but some drastic remedy can ever be effectively applied to relieve us from similar straits to that which we are now in and from the grave consequences with which we are confronted.

Mr. President, if there is to be an extra session of Congress, if we shall go hour by hour steadily and resistlessly up to the time when by the Constitution the session of both Houses is to cease, it will not be because this body in all its parts has not done its duty in regard to appropriation bills. It will be because of the fact that crude and undigested measures have been sent to us here, and sent to us in the closing hours of the session, with a demand that we should bolt them entire, take them as they came, abandon our own prerogatives as Senators, give up the co-ordinate position of this body, and simply record the will of the House of Representatives, which has practically sought, whether intentionally or not, to drag the Senate at its heels; and not only that, but in doing so to give to the country legislation which its own conferees admit is in violation of treaties, in violation of the Constitution, subversive of private right, crude, ill-digested, and unworthy of the name of legislation.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the House had passed a joint resolution (H. Res. 346) authorizing the immediate payment of the officers and employees of the Senate and of the House for the month of March, 1885; in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had non-concurred in the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8256) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes, asked a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. SAMUEL J. RANDALL of Pennsylvania, Mr. WILLIAM H. FORNEY of Alabama, and Mr. THOMAS RYAN of Kansas managers at the conference on its part.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. DAWES. I ask unanimous consent to take up the message from the House of Representatives accompanying the civil sundry bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives non-concurring in the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 8256) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes, and asking a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. DAWES. I move that the Senate insist on its amendments and accede to the request of the House for a conference.

Mr. HOAR. I do not desire at this time of the session to detain the Senate by a discussion—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator will pardon the Chair. Does he desire to discuss the motion of his colleague on the sundry civil bill?

Mr. HOAR. No, sir; I desire to discuss the subject which the Senator from Kansas was discussing.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The sundry civil bill is before the Senate, and the question is: Will the Senate agree to the motion of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. DAWES]?

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the President pro tempore was authorized to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate; and Mr. ALLISON, Mr. HALE, and Mr. BECK were appointed.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments to the bill (H. R. 7970) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian Department, and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, for the year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes.

Mr. HOAR. Mr. President, I do not expect to discuss at this time of the session the very interesting and important matters which the Senator from Kansas [Mr. PLUMB] has touched, but I think it proper after what he has said to remark that while his criticism upon the condition of affairs presented at the present Congress by the conduct of the two branches is undoubtedly sound, and while the Senate could have and would have dealt carefully, prudently, at any rate considerably with all the great matters of legislation if they had been presented to us for our consideration from the other branch as they might have been, yet the evils of which he complains can never be corrected without a change in the time of the assembling of the two Houses of Congress for legislative purposes.

There is no reason why the habits which were formed when the country contained a population of five, ten, or fifteen millions should be maintained by the Legislature of a country containing fifty or sixty millions with its large commercial and other business interests. Now there is no reason why the time of stimulating and pleasant weather in this climate from the 1st of October to the 1st of December should not be spent in legislation, especially in the session which ends under our arrangement on the 4th of March. I hold that it will be the duty of Congress at a very early day to provide by law for the assembling of Congress at a day as early as the 1st of October, certainly in the year when the session ends on the 4th of March.

Mr. HALE. Does the Senator believe that it would be possible on the year of the Presidential election, which occurs in November, for any great public business to be attended to and well done at any time previous to that election, or perhaps immediately succeeding it, unless an interval of a few weeks elapsed?

Mr. HOAR. A vacation of two weeks could be had, if it were necessary, consistently with the general plan which I have stated; but if it could not, it certainly is of more importance to the country that the great legislative subjects should be dealt with conscientiously and considerably than it is that the particular gentlemen who belong to this or the other branch of Congress should take part in the campaign. It is certainly more important that legislation should be dealt with than that we or they should be attending to the interests of our own election or re-election.

Mr. HALE. I agree fully with the Senator from Massachusetts that there should be some equalization in some way of the two sessions of Congress; but it has occurred to me always in thinking of it that the direction was more favorable toward utilizing the spring months, March and April, in the alternate year, so that we should have the benefit of a lengthened session that might be ended before the summer heats set in, and give us at least five months for the shorter session. I agree fully with the Senator that we can not remedy this almost intolerable evil until something is done in that direction.

Mr. HOAR. As I said, I did not rise to enter into a discussion of the details of this difficulty in our legislative processes and habits. We have practically every other year a session of Congress of ten weeks, deducting the ordinary time taken for the Christmas holidays. The particular time of meeting or separating of course will be adjusted at a time when that can be considered; but I think it proper to state to the Senate and the country my own conviction that this change is a change which we must enter upon the consideration of when we assemble again next winter.

Mr. DAWES. Now I hope we may have a vote, and I hope the Senate will understand that the vote upon receding will be the judgment of the Senate whether they desire this defective legislation in the bill or not.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. DAWES] that the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 113 to the Indian appropriation bill, and on this question the yeas and nays have been ordered.

Mr. INGALLS. Do I understand that the Senator from Massachusetts invites the Senate to assent to a violation of its rules by the adoption of general legislation on an appropriation bill?

Mr. DAWES. I am sorry the Senator has not been listening so that he could better understand the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. INGALLS. I have unfortunately been absent from the Chamber.

Mr. DAWES. I beg the Senator's pardon for the remark I made. The Senator from Massachusetts stated that he made this motion with the intention of voting against it himself in order to get the judgment of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion that the Senate recede from this amendment, on which the yeas and nays have been ordered.

The question being taken by yeas and nays, resulted—yeas 4, nays 47; as follows:

YEAS—4.

So the motion was not agreed to.

Mr. DAWES. I will not ask for the yeas and nays on any other of these amendments. I will indicate what the difficulty is with them and put upon record the amendments that would be satisfactory to the committee of conference.

The one hundred and eleventh amendment is to strike out a proposition to try to prevent the selling of intoxicating liquors to Indians, a very proper provision if properly worded and a measure which is greatly demanded, and which has attracted great attention among all those who have had anything to do with Indians. It is a very desirable thing, but the way in which it is put forth in this provision, section 9, is such that the committee if it were in an independent bill would not feel at liberty to support it without modifications. It starts out in this way:

No ardent spirits shall be introduced, under any pretense, into the Indian country.

It then goes on to provide how it may be done. The committee would propose this simple provision in the place of it; if it were in their power under the rules of the Senate they would offer this as a substitute for it:

That every person who sells, exchanges, gives, barter, or disposes of any spirituous liquors, beer, wine, or any intoxicating beverage to any Indian under the charge of an Indian superintendent or agent, shall be punishable by imprisonment for not less than six months nor more than two years, and by a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $1,000.

That takes and gathers together in what we suppose to be a proper form for a criminal act all the elements which are contained in this section, and other elements.

Mr. BUTLER. May I inquire of the Senator from Massachusetts if he does not consider that general legislation on an appropriation bill?

Mr. DAWES. Most certainly, and under the rules I say I can not offer it.

Mr. President, there is a provision here designed to authorize the President of the United States to disarm Indians. There is a condition of things on some of the reservations perfectly alarming so that it is necessary to take the arms, Winchester rifles, away from the Indians; but the provision is of such a character as instead of producing peace and safety among the Indians will only irritate them and thwart the very purpose in view. It ought to be amended so that when a Winchester rifle is taken from an Indian, at the same time he will have offered to him the full pay for his rifle; and that is the objection to this as independent legislation.

There is one other matter that I desire to call the attention of the Senate to which has been discussed here a good many times and which it is desirable that the Senate should have some positive position upon; and that is in relation to Oklahoma. There is a provision, section 10, in this bill which I ask the Secretary to read.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

Sec. 10. That the President is hereby authorized to open negotiations with the Creeks, Seminoles, and Cherokees for the purpose of opening to settlement under the homestead laws the unassigned lands in said Indian Territory ceded by them respectively to the United States by the several treaties of August 11, 1866, March 21, 1866, and July 19, 1866; and for that purpose the sum of $5,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated; his action hereunder to be reported to Congress.

Mr. DAWES. It so happens that the Senate on several occasions have expressed a desire to accomplish the very purpose indicated in that section, but they have all along accompanied it with a declaration that until that negotiation shall have brought forth some result those who are now defying the laws of the country and declaring that they will go upon that land, lawfully or unlawfully, shall be kept off. The President of the United States has on two occasions called upon Congress to clothe him with power, to amend an existing statute of the United States which only imposes a fine upon those who willfully commit trespass upon Indian reservations.

The whole trouble in Oklahoma has grown out of that fact. The man at the head of these bands has from time to time led innocent and deluded people into that country; he has then been arrested and fined, and taken the poor-debtor's oath, and the next day snapping his fingers in the face of the officers of the law, gone and gathered a new band. The Senate of the United States has passed a bill amending that law, simply imposing in addition to the fine, or instead of the fine, in the discretion of the court, a short term of imprisonment. That bill has twice passed the Senate, but for some inscrutable reason it has failed to reach the form of law.

Now while the committee are willing and desirous to open negotiations for that property, it is the opinion of some of the committee at least that opening negotiations in the form here proposed is an invitation to all those who can go with impunity upon that land to hurry there, gathering as they are now under some mysterious impression that on the 5th of March they will be at liberty to go there whether the law be regarded or the law be violated.

I propose if that provision is adopted in any way to add to it that section of the bill which has already passed the Senate for the very purpose, simply adding to the existing penalty a short imprisonment, so that if those who demand to have that country opened are honest and really desire to have it opened for honest homesteaders, they will agree to join us in providing that until it is opened law-breakers shall not go down there and possess the land in advance of the honest homesteader. That is the purpose of the amendment, and if it were in order I should offer as a substitute for that section what I send to the desk.

Mr. CULLOM. I inquire of the Senator if the amendment he proposes is the same bill that we passed here a few days ago?

Mr. DAWES. Yes; the same bill in substance.

Mr. CONGER rose.

Mr. DAWES. I will answer the Senator from Illinois before I yield to the Senator from Michigan. It is a provision in the bill authorizing negotiations, with the second section of the bill passed the other day added to it, and that second section is the existing statute with the additional penalty.

Mr. CULLOM. As I understand it, the section that was read as having come from the House is one of the sections of the bill that was passed here the other day.

Mr. DAWES. It is in substance, with some change of phraseology. The second section of the bill we passed the other day I would propose to add to that if it were in order.

Mr. CULLOM. I only desire to say that I hope the section that is in the bill, if nothing else gets in there on the subject, will be left there, but I have no objection to the addition of what the Senator has sent to the Chair to be read.

Mr. DAWES. In reply to that I would say that I would as a Senator have no objection to that section if I did not think that, left alone, instead of producing peace it would increase the difficulty by inviting lawless people, proclaiming to them, "This is about to be opened; first come first served;" and the bands now gathering for an incursion into that territory will be stimulated in my opinion to be there in advance of the honest settler. That is my only objection to it as it stands.

HOUR OF MEETING.

Mr. CONGER. Mr. President, in order that the legislative Journal and Record may be kept right to-day, I move that when the Senate adjourn to-day it adjourn to meet at 12 o'clock meridian.

Mr. ALLISON. I would suggest to the Senator from Michigan that he make that 1 o'clock.

Mr. CONGER. Very well; I so modify the motion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion is not debatable. The Senator from Michigan moves that when the Senate adjourn to-day it be to meet at 1 o'clock on the 3d day of March. The question is on that motion. [Putting the question.] The yeas have it.

Mr. CONGER called for the yeas and nays, and they were ordered.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GEORGE. Mr. President—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Debate is not in order.

Mr. GEORGE. I understand it is proposed to adjourn until 1 o'clock to-morrow.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. This is the 2d of March in the legislative session of the Senate.

Mr. GEORGE. Then it is proposed to meet at 1 o'clock to-morrow.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. One o'clock of the 3d of March is the time proposed for meeting.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll; and Mr. ALDRICH and Mr. BAYARD responded to their names.

Mr. SHERMAN. I should like to make a statement of about two or three minutes in regard to a matter rather in the nature of privilege.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The roll-call has commenced on the motion of the Senator from Michigan, and two Senators have answered. The Chair has only waited for order to be restored to have the call proceed.

The roll-call was resumed and concluded, and resulted—yeas 33, nays 15; as follows:

YEAS—33.

Aldrich,	Garland,	Mitchell,	Sewell,
Beck,	Hampton,	Morgan,	Sherman,
Brown,	Harris,	Morrill,	Slater,
Butler,	Harrison,	Palmer,	Vance,
Call,	Hawley,	Pendleton,	Vest,
Camden,	Jackson,	Pike,	Walker,
Coke,	Jones,	Pugh,
Colquitt,	McMillan,	Ransom,
Conger,	Maxey,	Saulsbury,

NAYS—15.

Allison,	Cullom,	Lapham,	Plumb,
Bayard,	Dawes,	Manderson,	Van Wyck,
Blair,	Edmunds,	Miller of N. Y.,	Wilson.
Cameron of Wis.,	Ingalls,	Platt,

ABSENT—28.

Bowen,	Frye,	Hoar,	Mahone,

Dolph,	Groome,	Lamar,	Sawyer,
Fair,	Hale,	Logan,	Voorhees,
Farley,	Hill,	McPherson,	Williams.

So the motion was agreed to.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. DAWES. I do not care to have the amendment read if it may go into the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be printed in the RECORD, if there be no objection.

The amendment is as follows:

Sec. 10. That the President is hereby authorized to open negotiations with the Creeks, Seminoles, and Cherokees for the purpose of opening to settlement under the homestead laws the unassigned lands in said Indian Territory ceded by them respectively to the United States by the several treaties of August 11, 1866, March 21, 1866, and July 19, 1866; and for that purpose the sum of $5,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated; his action hereunder to be reported to Congress. And every person who, without authority of law, enters and shall be found upon the lands described in the first section of this act, with intent to occupy any such lands or reservation, or any part thereof, shall for the first offense, upon conviction thereof, pay a fine of not more than $500, or be imprisoned at hard labor for not more than one year, or both, in the discretion of the court, and for every subsequent offense shall, upon conviction thereof, pay a fine of not more than $1,000 and be imprisoned at hard labor for not more than two years; and the wagons, teams, and outfit of such person or persons so offending shall be seized and delivered to the proper United States officer, and be proceeded against by libel in the proper court and forfeited, one-half to the informer and the other half to the United States.

Mr. DAWES. I also send up an amendment as a substitute for section 8, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That will also be printed in the RECORD, if there be no objection.

The proposed amendment is as follows:

Sec. 8. That whoever shall furnish to any Indian, by barter, sale, gift, or exchange, any gun, rifle, pistol, or ammunition or munitions of war, shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollars, and be imprisoned not less than six months nor more than two years; Provided, That this provision shall not apply to the five civilized tribes of the Indian Territory; and that the Secretary of the Interior may issue such permits to Indians for the purchase of arms and ammunition for sporting purposes as he may deem proper: And provided further, That the President of the United States may, in his discretion, disarm such Indians as in his judgment may seem best to preserve peace and prevent depredations. All arms thus taken shall at the time they are taken be appraised and the value of such appraisement be at once paid to the Indians entitled thereto, and said arms shall be sold and the proceeds thereof paid into the Treasury. The Secretary of War shall make all needful regulations for carrying out this section and report his doings thereunder to Congress, and the money necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this section is hereby appropriated.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (S. 2577) to authorize the printing of the eulogies delivered in Congress upon the late Henry B. Anthony; and

A bill (S. 2666) to provide for the printing of the report and proceedings of the commission to provide suitable ceremonies for the dedication of the Washington Monument.

INAUGURATION CEREMONIES.

Mr. SHERMAN. I ask the attention of the Senate for a minute or two to a matter personal to the Senate I may say, and personal perhaps to myself and to other members of the committee on inauguration arrangements. I notice in the newspapers and in other places that an impression prevails that the committee on arrangements appointed by the Senate to take charge of the inauguration ceremonies have departed from the established rules in respect to the conduct of the ceremonies. I wish now to correct that impression, and to say that in all respects the rules adopted now and published in the programme laid upon the tables of Senators conform to all the precedents of the past except some changes which have been made in favor of the House of Representatives.

It is complained that the committee of arrangements is composed only of representatives of the Senate and not of the House. We have had the precedents examined, and find that that has been the case always, for the simple reason that the Senate being a permanent body it is the only body in existence after 12 o'clock on the 4th of March. Therefore a committee of three members of the Senate has uniformly regulated the ceremonies.

It has also been complained that a discrimination has been made against the members of the House of Representatives. So far from that being the case the programme is much more considerate as to the members of the House of Representatives than any programme ever before adopted.

I have had all the programmes hunted up. The one issued at the time Mr. Buchanan was inaugurated was the first that I witnessed after I was a member of either House of Congress. We went back to the inauguration ceremonies at the time of Mr. Polk's inauguration, and have followed since in that line. I shall read an extract from these proceedings showing where the changes have been made in favor of the House of Representatives and in no respect whatever discriminating against them.

At the inauguration of President Polk, for example, on the 4th of March, 1845, the privilege of the floor of the Senate Chamber was given to "Senators and others who, by the rules of the Senate, and the arrangement of the committee, are entitled to admission, as follows: The President-elect, the ex-Presidents, the Chief-Justice and associate justices of the Supreme Court, the diplomatic corps, district judges of the United States, heads of Departments and bureaus at the seat of Government, officers who by name have received the thanks of Congress for their gallantry and good conduct in the service of their country or who have received medals by a vote of Congress, and any persons entitled to a seat on the floor of the Senate, including the governor for the time being of any State or Territory of the Union, the ex-governors of the several States, such gentlemen as have been heads of Departments or members of either branches of Congress."

No other mention was made of gentlemen who had been members of the House of Representatives which had just expired by limitation. Nor was any mention made of the members-elect of the new House, yet to be organized.

In the order of procession from the Senate Chamber to the eastern portico the Supreme Court led the way, followed by the President-elect, the ex-Presidents, the Senate, the diplomatic corps, the mayors of Washington, Georgetown, and Alexandria, and then—"the other persons before admitted on the floor of the Senate."

"On reaching the front of the portico," the programme goes on to state, "the President-elect and Chief-Justice will take the seats provided for them. The ex-Presidents, the committee of arrangements, and associate justices of the Supreme Court will occupy a position several feet in the rear of the President-elect. The Vice-President, Secretary, and members of the Senate will occupy parallel lines next in rear. The diplomatic corps will occupy the next position, and the space immediately in their rear is assigned to the late Speaker, Clerk, and ex-members of the Senate and House of Representatives."

It will be seen that according to the old formula the House of Representatives was not recognized in the proceedings as an existing body, it having expired before the ceremonies commenced, but they were recognized as persons who had been members of Congress. There has been a gradual change in favor of a more marked recognition of the House of Representatives, and now we have adopted a still more marked change in favor of the House. Here is the order in which the procession is to be formed on the 4th of March:

Members of the Senate.

The diplomatic corps.

Heads of Departments.

The retired General of the Army, the Lieutenant-General of the Army, the Admiral of the Navy, and the officers of the Army and Navy who, by name, have received the thanks of Congress.

Members of the House of Representatives elect, governors and ex-governors of States.

It will be seen that in the programme forty years ago the heads of Departments, all the heads of bureaus and various executive offices that were then in existence, together with the governors and the ex-governors of the States preceded the House of Representatives. But this has been gradually changed, and the House of Representatives is recognized as a constituent body although it has ceased to exist.

I hope, therefore, if anybody in either House of Congress or any one among the people of this country thinks that the Senate of the United States have sought in any way to make any discrimination or cast any disparagement on the House of Representatives, either past or present, he will be disabused by this correction of the record.

My friend from Connecticut [Mr. HAWLEY] has hunted up all the precedents since the time of which I spoke, and it is found that in every case there has been a marked discrimination in favor of the House of Representatives by the programme now laid upon the table.

I am not at liberty to refer to what occurred in the other House, but I am told that some complaint has been made that the members of the House of Representatives come in here and take their seats in the rear of the Senate. The truth is Senators concentrate themselves in as small a space as possible and give the members of the House of Representatives two-thirds of all the room of the Senate. That has been done during the eight times I have witnessed these ceremonies. Consequently there has been no discrimination made in that respect. I should be very sorry indeed if some of the sensitive gentlemen of the House of Representatives or of the Senate should think that any discourtesy whatever of the slightest shade has been cast upon the House or its members. Certainly no man in this body, or I think in Congress, has a more profound respect for the House of Representatives than I have and I would stand by their rights and their privileges and by the utmost courtesy which has ever been given to them from the beginning of the Government to this time.

I make this statement merely to disabuse the minds of gentlemen who may have been misled by remarks made in the heat of passion probably, or without a consideration or examination of the subject.

Mr. HAWLEY. As a member of the committee of arrangements, the Senate will pardon me if I put upon record, now that the matter has been referred to, one or two references to other occasions than the one spoken of by my colleague on the committee.

I have in my hands a copy of the programme for the inauguration of President Buchanan. I will read from it only that which describes the march from the Senate Chamber. It was the old Senate Chamber then.

The Marshal of the District of Columbia.

The Supreme Court of the United States.

The Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate.

The committee of arrangements.

The President of the United States and the President-elect.

The Vice-President and the Secretary of the Senate.

The members of the Senate.

The diplomatic corps.

Heads of Departments, governors of States and Territories, the mayors of Washington and Georgetown, and other persons who shall have been admitted into the Senate Chamber.

On reaching the front of the portico, the President-elect will take the seat provided for him on the front of the platform.

The ex-President and the committee of arrangements will occupy a position in the rear of the President-elect.

Next, in the rear of these, the Chief-Justice and the associate justices of the Supreme Court will occupy those seats on the left; and the Vice-President, Secretary, and members of the Senate, those on the right.

The diplomatic corps will occupy the seats next in the rear of the Supreme Court; heads of Departments, governors and ex-governors of States and Territories, and ex-members of the Senate, ex-members and members-elect of the House of Representatives in the rear of the members of the Senate.

Representatives were mentioned lastly, and as individuals, not as a House, perhaps because one House has just expired and the new one had not been organized. I will admit that there was an apparent discourtesy at that time in that merely incidental reference to members and members-elect of the House of Representatives.

Mr. FRYE. Is this proceeding by unanimous consent?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. INGALLS in the chair). So the Chair understands.

Mr. FRYE. I give notice that when the Senator from Connecticut is through I shall object.

Mr. HAWLEY. I shall have no objection to the objection at that time.

I desire to put on record a similar statement in regard to the inauguration on the 4th of March, 1865. Substantially the same method was followed in all respects, ex-members and members-elect of the House of Representatives in the rear of members of the Senate.

I wish to put upon record also the programme of the 4th of March, 1881, in which was substantially the same thing, and where the diplomatic corps, heads of Departments, members of the House of Representatives and members-elect, governors and ex-governors of States, &c., are so designated and not otherwise.

In the programme adopted at this time, modeled upon that, there is scarcely a change worth mentioning. I think it just as well that this should be put on record because of criticisms which have been made elsewhere.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills; and they were thereupon signed by the President pro tempore:

A bill (H. R. 449) to provide for the appraisement and sale of lots in the town of Pera, Dubuque County, Iowa;

A bill (H. R. 652) for the relief of Brannin, Summers & Co.; and

A bill (H. R. 4089) to empower the commissioners of the District of Columbia to examine the claim of and providing for the payment of Outerbridge Horsey, assignee.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. INGALLS in the chair). The Chair understands the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. DAWES] to have the floor upon the disputed amendments to the Indian appropriation bill.

Mr. DAWES. The Senator from Kansas [Mr. PLUMB] desires to take the floor. I have nothing further to submit at present.

Mr. PLUMB. I have detained the Senate a good deal on this question already, but I wish to call the attention of the Senate to the difference between this and an ordinary legislative proposition contained in a bill which has been the subject of dissent on the part of the Senate. We have been in the habit of giving to the President of the United States and to the heads of Departments, &c., authority, and, in fact, requiring them, during the vacation of the Senate to do certain things which we think are necessary for our information in regard to legislation which is likely to come before us at a succeeding term.

In the fortification appropriation bill, which will be before the Senate in a few minutes, provision is made for a board to examine the seacoast of the United States, and ascertain and recommend to Congress where fortifications should be built; and so in all appropriation bills. In the legislative appropriation bill which passed a provision was stricken out by the Senate, on which I find our conferees yielded, on authorizing a commission to visit the Yellowstone Park; and so with commissions to visit Indian schools and things of that kind for the purpose of more thoroughly informing the legislative mind than it otherwise would be informed in regard to the subject.

This provision, however, has assumed the proportions of a national question in which there is great danger, as I think, of some untoward result happening very soon. I feel that while this is far from what I should like to have, if it is even half a loaf, still, whether half a loaf or an ounce, it is better than no bread, as I think. This being the only thing which can be done, it seems to me that the Senate ought not to stickle on the question of legislation which is simply of that character which is the inevitable accompaniment of an appropriation bill. It seems to me I may say this without subjecting myself to that criticism which the Senator from Massachusetts has been so quick to visit upon me, that I am here doing those things which are disturbing the public peace. I assure him that conscientiously I believe that the passage of this provision in the bill will tend to prevent a rupture and conserve the public peace.

Mr. DAWES. I should not like to have that statement, the last part of the sentence, go on the record. The Senator is the last man that I would intimate would disturb the public peace. I believe the Senator conscientiously thinks that this is the only way to preserve it.

Mr. PLUMB. The Senator said the other day in debate just such remarks as I made led to all the trouble. While I acquit him of any design to reflect upon me, at the same time he can not resist the opportunity, as he never can, of hitting somebody under the fifth rib. But I appeal to him, notwithstanding that disposition of his, to give to this matter the consideration of his well-formed judgment and of that conscience which he brings to the discharge of his duties here, and let this matter, simply a negotiation, be conducted, which the President of the United States might feel a constraint about otherwise, to go on during the recess of Congress. I believe it will have a sedative effect. I believe the moment we manifest a disposition to do something in this direction it will have the effect of largely preventing the flocking of people to that quarter.

As I said, this is not what I wanted. I have earnestly contended here for affirmative legislation which I believe Congress ought to pass in regard to this land settlement. It seems to me if Congress believes, as it apparently does by the votes it has given, that something of this kind must be done, then to say so in this emphatic and affirmative way will have of itself a very considerable effect in restraining from doing that which the judgment of Congress says can not be legally done.

Mr. MANDERSON. Will the Senator from Kansas yield for a question?

Mr. PLUMB. Yes, sir.

Mr. MANDERSON. I desire to ask the Senator whether the so-called Oklahoma clause in the bill suits him as it was passed by the House, or if he proposes to amend that.

Mr. PLUMB. It does not suit me in any way, but at the same time I am advised by parliamentary authority to which I always bow that it has to be taken exactly as it is or not at all. It being a House proposition, it can not be amended by the Senate, and is therefore beyond our jurisdiction even in committee of conference, as I think it has been stated to us in an authoritative way by the presiding officer of this body; but certainly it can not be amended here. If it were our proposition we could amend it, and being a House proposition the House can amend it, but we can not touch it. We have got to take it as it is, legislation and all, without any change.

Mr. DAWES. If the Senator will permit me, I suppose it is perfectly competent for the committee of conference to modify it in any way. I now ask that the Senate insist upon its disagreeing votes and ask for a new committee of conference.

Mr. MANDERSON. I ask that a separate vote be taken on the amendments numbered 27 and 28. I think that the Senator from Massachusetts will not object to that.

Mr. DAWES. Very well; and let the Senate now insist on all the rest.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will report the amendment reserved by the Senator from Nebraska.

The CHIEF CLERK. Amendment numbered 28: Page 20, line 27, strike out all down to and including the word "act," in line 10, on page 21, as follows:

The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to make such extension of time for the payment of the purchase-money under the sale made under an act entitled "An act to provide for the sale of the remainder of the reservation of the Confederate Otee and Missouri tribes of Indians, in the States of Nebraska and Kansas, and for other purposes," as he may deem advantageous to said Indians and settlers: Provided, That the interest shall be paid at the rate as now provided by said act; but the time for the payment of the whole of said purchase-money shall not be extended more than two years from the time the said purchase-money became due according to the original terms of sale under said act.

Mr. MANDERSON. The other amendment to which I referred is that which makes the same extension of time to those who purchased the Omaha lands. I think it is the amendment immediately preceding.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. What motion does the Senator from Nebraska desire to submit in regard to the amendment?

Mr. MANDERSON. I am willing to submit them both, by unanimous consent, to a vote of the Senate, because they both involve the same principle.

Mr. DAWES. Let us insist as far as we can, and then take the vote on the other amendments.

Mr. PLUMB. I ask that the vote be reserved on what is called the Oklahoma provision of the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will report the amendment desired to be reserved by the Senator from Kansas.

Mr. DAWES. The Senator from Nebraska wishes a separate vote on amendments numbered 27 and 28, and the Senator from Kansas on amendment numbered 112.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion of the Senator from Massachusetts is that the Senate insist upon the other amendments?

Mr. DAWES. Yes, sir.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other amendments to be reserved?

Mr. MILLER, of California. I wish to have amendment numbered 35 reserved, the Hogan claim.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerks will make a memorandum of it. If there is no objection the amendments other than those reserved will be considered as insisted upon. The question now recurs whether the Senate will further insist upon its amendments numbered 27 and 28.

Mr. MANDERSON. I desire simply to call the attention of the Senate to the character of those two amendments.

Mr. DAWES. The Senator will reach what he is after if he moves to recede. That takes precedence of a motion to insist.

Mr. MANDERSON. I move that the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 27 and 28. The different provisions of the bill upon which the Senate insists I understand are those which are objectionable in themselves as the bill came from the House. The Senator from Massachusetts, the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, has suggested to the Senate what there is objectionable in the clause which provides for the jurisdiction of courts over offenses committed by Indians off their reservations. He has given his suggestions as to the objections to the clause which provides punishment for the sale of liquor to Indians, and he mentioned the amendment that he would propose to the clause regarding the purchase of arms, and the amendment also to the Oklahoma provision, which is yet to be considered.

But I do not understand that the Committee on Indian Affairs has any objection whatever to the extension of the time for the payment of the remaining purchase-price of the lands sold by the Omaha and Otee Indians.

This extension of time has been recommended by the Secretary of the Interior, and it would be certainly a great hardship to those people if it was not extended. The extension is properly guarded. The consent of the Indians must be obtained. When this matter was under discussion before I heard no one in the Senate make any objection to it whatever on the ground of merit, but it was conceded to be most righteous and just legislation. I hope the Senate will recede from the two amendments I have indicated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska moves first that the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 27.

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 7, noes 40.

Mr. VAN WYCK. I shall ask for the yeas and nays, and I desire to say a word on the subject. This is one of the cases where the rules are a stumbling-block in the way of accomplishing something which receives the unanimous consent of both Houses. We are instructed as to the meaning and extent of the rule. I think possibly an hour was spent this morning, several hours are spent every day, as to the meaning of the rule which requires that no general legislation or new legislation shall be placed upon an appropriation bill. It would be well if the rules were first made and then construed, so that legislation which commends itself to the judgment of every man should be placed upon an appropriation bill.

The Senate have no trouble while wrangling with the House about their rules as to the power which the House exercised in this matter. They have no difficulty in concurring with the House in a matter of doubtful legislation, and even placing legislation upon an appropriation bill which is of a doubtful character. Only a few days ago, on an appropriation bill from which the House itself had stricken the legislation recommended by its own committee, when the House was placing itself in accord with the rules of the Senate by refusing legislation upon an appropriation bill when the Committee on Appropriations of this body refused to place it in the bill as a recommendation from them, the Senate interposed and placed legislation upon the bill against the recommendation of the Committee on Appropriations of this body and against the position of the House of Representatives. I refer to the legislation which placed a subsidy for steamships upon an appropriation bill. The Senate did it in defiance of our rules; it did it in defiance of the action of the House of Representatives, and the Senate insisted that that legislation should go upon an appropriation bill, and it was done.

Here is an innocent measure. The Committee on Indian Affairs recommend it unanimously, and no one in this body or out of it ever knew the Committee on Indian Affairs to recommend anything wrong. The Committee on Indian Affairs in the other House were in favor of it, and yet a proposition to benefit the Indians and to benefit the white man, unanimously approved, causes the stern virtue of this body to rise in indignation and declare that one of its rules is about to be put in peril.

We seek to do justice to the white settlers, and that is where the trouble is. We seek to do justice to the five hundred families of white settlers upon the Omaha and Otoe lands who by reason of adverse circumstances are not able to make the Senate hear them. They are not entitled to consideration, while John Roach, Jay Gould, and C. P. Huntington can stand at the entrance of the other end of this Capitol and have their lobbies at your doorways and demand that the American Senate shall violate its own rules.

That is the explanation. It is understood in this body. It is understood by the country at large. If any suggestion could be made that there was any possible injustice in the proposition, then it would be well to stop to consider it for a moment. But there is nothing of that kind. The Indians have been benefited by the large price paid for this land. It was assessed honestly; liberally, at a large price. We buy the Indian lands in the Indian Territory; we drive them off of the land and pay them 30 cents an acre. These lands in the Omaha and Otoe reservation brought from $7 to $15 per acre, and were bought by honest purchasers, settlers who benefit the nation, and they are paying 6 per cent. interest to the Indians.

By reason of adverse circumstances, the low price of grain, and the high rate of transportation, they are unable to meet the payment due. Unfortunately they are in a country where it is really cheaper to buy corn for fuel than to buy coal. Those are the men who are stretching forth their hands in their poverty and adverse circumstances and asking the American Congress to do no wrong to anybody, not to harm the Indian, but to benefit him.

The Senate will remember that when this money is paid by the white man it does not go into the pocket of the Indian himself, but it is paid to the General Government and the General Government invests it for him and pays him a certain rate of interest upon it. The money today is drawing 6 per cent. interest, and if it remains unpaid a year longer at 6 per cent. interest the Indian is benefited. If it is paid to the Government of the United States the Indian gets less interest. I know not how much interest he will get, but not to exceed 5 per cent. By and by I suppose the Government will only want to pay the Indian 3 per cent. interest, because that is the rate of interest that it is desired to apply to the immense indebtedness of the subsidized railroads.

Of course Senators and other gentlemen feel as friendly to the Indian as the Committee on Indian Affairs in this body, who insist that the Government should pay no more interest to the Indian than it receives on its own debt from wealthy corporations presided over by the Goulds and Huntingtons of this country. The result would be an actual injury to the Indian, because in a little while he would receive only 3 per cent. upon his money. Now from the settler and purchaser he obtains 6 per cent.

Those are the facts of the case. It is but justice to the Indian. This proposition requires his assent. We only ask now that the bill shall retain the legislation which the House put on it, and let the settler and the purchaser understand that the Indian is to be protected while he injures no one.

It may be that because this proposition is so plain and so equitable, so just and so honest, the Senate adheres stubbornly to its rule. Certainly it is strange in these last hours of the session that this matter which commenced nearly on the first day of the session continues to the last. But the rules are in the way. What do they mean? They are a very convenient resort when Senators desire certain things not to appear upon an appropriation bill; then they are used as a stumbling-block; but when other legislation is required and desired, then there is not a word of objection raised on account of the rules.

Now, Mr. President, I hope—

Mr. DAWES. You hope we shall have a vote.

Mr. VAN WYCK. Yes; I hope we shall have a vote, and I hope we shall have a vote that will be a little in the interest of justice and equity, and in the interest of the class of men who are not able to send lobbies here at great expense, who are not able to employ the most learned intellect, who have not the power to go into your large cities or into either branch of Congress and lay their hands upon the legal talent which may be there and ask that they shall rise up and defend their claims. There is nothing of that kind. All they can rely upon is the petition which they send here to plead for the recognition of a few of the principles of justice. That is all they can ask in this case.

Mr. MILLER, of New York. The Indians do not get any of this money.

Mr. VAN WYCK. I have been standing here talking to the Senator from New York, who was right within the sound of my voice, and who I am pleased to see paid attention to what I was saying, but he now rises up and says that the Indians do not get any of this money. That is just what I was trying to tell the Senator, that the Indians do not get this money. In no way do the Indians get this money. They obtain only the interest on the money. I was trying to show my friend the Senator from New York that it was in the interest of the Indians that the interest should be paid to them.

I shall not say anything more on this question. I have got the Senator from Massachusetts I think calm and quiet and not so nervous. I will therefore ask that we may have a vote upon this matter. I should like to have a vote which would be in consonance with the views of the Committee on Indian Affairs of this body, and that is to retain this legislation upon the bill. Therefore, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. HARRIS. Is the motion to further insist?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion to recede from the amendment numbered 27. As the Senate acted on the bill by striking out the paragraph, the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. MANDERSON] moves that the Senate recede from its amendment, which would leave the paragraph standing in the bill.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. KENNA (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. SABIN].

The roll-call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 13, nays 33; as follows:

So the motion to recede was not agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Amendment numbered 28 is not yet disposed of.

Mr. MANDERSON. I do not care about pressing a vote upon that. I withdraw my motion to recede from it.

Mr. DAWES. I move that the Senate insist upon the amendments numbered 27 and 28.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nebraska withdraws his demand for a separate vote on amendment numbered 28. The Senator from Massachusetts moves that the Senate insist upon its amendments numbered 27 and 28.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Amendment numbered 35 was reserved on the request of the Senator from California [Mr. MILLER].

Mr. DAWES. I wish to say in reference to that amendment that it is one of the depredation claims. I think it is the best of them all, but they all ought to go together. If any one of them is admitted they ought all to be admitted; but, on the other hand, they all ought to be referred for examination.

Mr. MILLER, of California. I move that the Senate recede from its disagreement on that amendment, and I wish to take the sense of the Senate upon my motion.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from California moves that the Senate recede from the amendment numbered 35, the nature of which has been stated.

Mr. INGALLS. Let it be read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. Amendment numbered 35 is to strike out lines 959 to 965, in the following words:

For the payment by the Secretary of the Interior to J. M. Hogan, of Stockton, Cal., the sum of $6,000, out of the funds herein appropriated for the Shoshone Indians, the same being a claim for damages caused by depredations of said Indians, and examined, and approved, allowed, and reported to Congress by the Department of the Interior, $6,000.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from California that the Senate recede from the amendment just read.

Mr. COCKRELL. Is it in order to move that the Senate adhere to its action in striking out?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion to recede has precedence.

Mr. COCKRELL. I hope the Senate will not recede.

Mr. MILLER, of California. I hope it will.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion to recede.

The motion was not agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The next is amendment numbered 112, which will be read.

The CHIEF CLERK. Amendment numbered 112 is to strike out section 10, as follows:

SEC. 10. That the President is hereby authorized to open negotiations with the Creeks, Seminoles, and Cherokees for the purpose of opening to settlement under the homestead laws the unassigned lands in said Indian Territory ceded by them respectively to the United States by the several treaties of August 11, 1866, March 21, 1866, and July 19, 1866; and for that purpose the sum of $5,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be, and the same is hereby, appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated; his action hereunder to be reported to Congress.

Mr. VEST. I sincerely hope that the Senate will accede to the provision inserted by the House. We are now in the last hours of this Congress. Since this matter was up for discussion in the Senate I have received a pamphlet published by the leader of these so-called Oklahoma boomers, in which a plausible argument is made, obviously prepared by a man of ability, taking the position that the Indians have no title whatever to these lands and that they are open to settlement by citizens of the United States.

Unless this legislation is had now we must expect that we shall inevitably have a condition of affairs in that Territory which will be dangerous, to say the least, to the peace of the entire southwestern portion of this country. We ought to make no mistake about this matter. The men who are there, hovering upon the borders of that Territory, intend to occupy it unless the Congress of the United States forbids it.

So far as the rule is concerned I was really in hopes that after the performance of yesterday and last night it would not seriously be invoked here again. Last night we placed upon the sundry civil bill pages of new legislation by the unanimous vote of the Senate, and today when an emergency comes upon us which involves the peace of an entire section of this country and brings us face to face with a most serious crisis, we are told that the rule must stop this legislation.

If there is a single Senator in this body who will say now that in his opinion the legal position which the House and Senate have both assumed in regard to the rights of these Indians is not correct, I shall have nothing more to say upon this subject. I have yet to hear a single Senator say that Congress is not right in saying that its honor, that justice, that the public peace, all require that negotiations should be opened with these Indian tribes, and that their title, whatever it may be, should be extinguished.

Mr. DAWES. If nobody disputes that proposition I should like to have the Senator answer a question. He has stated that the persons hovering upon the borders of that Territory propose to go in there unless Congress prohibits them. I ask him if he has any objection to adding to this section a prohibition to their going in until it is settled?

Mr. VEST. I voted for the bill which contained that clause and it had my full concurrence, as the Senator from Massachusetts very well knows.

Mr. DAWES. There would not be anybody objecting to this proposition if it had that added to it.

Mr. VEST. If such a clause should be added to the section now it would absolutely destroy it. The House would agree to no such legislation. I am not here to discuss that, however.

This provision does not go as far as I would have it go; but it is all that we can get here now, in the very last moments of the session. To put on the clause which is urged by my friend from Massachusetts, and to which I heartily assent, would be simply to destroy what little of value there is in sight at this time.

Mr. PLUMB. It can not be put on now.

Mr. VEST. It can not be put on now, as the Senator from Kansas says. I am no skilled parliamentarian, but I understand it is amenable to a point of order. I have not raised that; but I sincerely hope that the Senate will do all that can be done now at this point of time and agree to the legislation proposed by the House of Representatives.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Chair understand the Senator from Missouri to make any motion?

Mr. VEST. No, sir.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There is no motion pending before the Senate.

Mr. DAWES. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendment numbered 112.

Mr. VEST. I will move that the Senate recede from the amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Pending the motion of the Senator from Massachusetts that the Senate insist upon the amendment, the Senator from Missouri moves that the Senate recede, which latter motion has precedence.

The question being put, there were on a division—ayes 24, noes 14; no quorum voting.

Mr. ALLISON. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. INGALLS. Mr. President, I am disposed to think that the significance of this vote is not fairly understood by the Senate. If I am correct, if the Senate recedes the proposition will be left in the bill as it came from the House of Representatives. Am I correct?

Mr. ALLISON. You are.

Mr. INGALLS. The chairman of the Committee on Appropriations informs me that I am correct, and when he says that I am correct, I have a double assurance.

I have no doubt that within forty-eight hours from this time 20,000 people by concerted action will move upon what are known as the Oklahoma lands with the intention of forcibly occupying them, and that they will be prepared to maintain that occupancy by a resort to arms if need be. I do not think that any graver complication will confront the administration that is just dawning upon us, whose crepuscular light we already see in the eastern sky, than that which will devolve upon it in consequence of the movement of what are known as the boomers upon Oklahoma.

President Arthur felt called upon in pursuance of treaties made with the five civilized tribes of Indians, and under the laws of the United States, to direct that a colony as he believed illegally settled upon those lands should be removed by force of arms, and a small army of the United States, or a small portion of the small army of the United States, under the command of an eminent general, was directed to proceed to that territory for the purpose of expelling some four hundred or five hundred men who had intrenched themselves in that locality. The first manifestation of force made against them was not sufficient to overawe them. They successfully resisted the force which was sent against them, and it was not until re-enforcements had been sent that at last they finally yielded, "folded their tents like the Arabs and silently stole away;" but with the express declaration that upon the 5th of March they should rendezvous upon the southern limits of the State of Kansas in such numbers as they could assemble for the purpose of repeating their assault upon the authorities, and with the further assurance, in some way obtained, that this movement would be with the concurrence and approbation of the incoming administration.

Mr. CULLOM. Will the Senator allow me to interrupt him simply for the purpose of saying that I have had several letters from men who were engaged in this movement stating that over 2,000 would start on the 5th of March for the country the Senator is speaking of?

Mr. DAWES. Why on the 5th of March?

Mr. CULLOM. I am not able to answer that question, but I suppose it is on account of what the Senator from Kansas has suggested.

Mr. INGALLS. Whether that is an instance of post hoc or propter hoc, whether it is cause and effect or whether it is coincidence, this deponent sayeth not. But there will be a great many times two thousand men ready, in my judgment, on the 5th of March to take up their line toward the Oklahoma region. To reach that they must pass over territory which it is admitted they are forbidden by law to traverse. It is alleged that there are some eight or ten million acres of land there held by the United States Government as public lands of the United States within the limits of the Indian Territory.

Mr. VEST. Fourteen million acres.

Mr. INGALLS. Fourteen million acres, the Senator from Missouri tells me, circumscribed, a sort of Mediterranean region that is included, a mare clausum, surrounded on all sides by territory over which confessedly no white man has a right to pass.

Mr. BUTLER. May I ask the Senator from Kansas whether the commanding officer of the United States troops has not been ordered to prevent such an invasion of that Territory?

Mr. DAWES. Certainly he has.

Mr. INGALLS. Certainly he has. I understand that orders have been issued by the President of the United States directing the military force of the Government to assemble upon the frontier for the purpose of preventing this threatened invasion; but, sir, the star of that eminent commander is about to set. Within a very brief space of time the command of that majestic body of men known as the Army of the United States will have passed from the great general who now has control of it to the still greater general who will shortly be its commander-in-chief. What course he will see fit to take of course is yet in the womb of the future; but it is undoubtedly true that these men assume that in some mysterious way or other the policy of the Government is to be changed, and that after the 5th day of March (and the Senator from Massachusetts is as able to answer his conundrum as I am) the military force is to be withdrawn, and the avenues are to be widely opened through which those men may proceed to occupy that territory.

There are no public lands of the United States within the limits of what are commonly known as the Oklahoma lands. They were ceded to the United States for a specific purpose, well defined in the treaty of contract by which the contracting parties agreed, and that was that they should be used for occupation by other friendly Indian nations or by the freedmen of the civilized tribes who had formerly owned and occupied them.

There have been many injurious statements sedulously made public in connection with those lands. Among other things, it has been said that the Senate of the United States was preventing the occupation of the lands by homestead settlers in the interest of the great cattle corporations which it was alleged had grazing leases thereon, and that we were standing here as an impassable and insuperable barrier to the occupation of that territory by the homestead settlers of the United States. I feel called upon to say that having been for a considerable space of time a member of the Committee on Indian Affairs of the Senate, which has had under consideration by order of the Senate the question as to the propriety and the legality of the grazing leases which have been hitherto made by Indian tribes to various citizens in different portions of the Republic, there is not a grazing lease that covers one single rood of that country.

There is not upon all the area that is known and recognized and described upon the map as the Oklahoma region a single hoof of stock that is grazed by any white man under any contract, assumed or direct, permitted or not permitted by any authority whatever, either by the Indians or by the United States Government. It is as absolutely free from all occupation as was the Garden of Eden before our first parents were placed therein, and it is surrounded by a territory upon every square foot of which stands the angel of the law with the flaming sword of a statutory prohibition declaring that under penalty no man shall be permitted to go thereon.

Sir, I take occasion to say further, because many of my own constituents have been stigmatized in connection with this matter as being lawless, violent, disorderly citizens, who were in some way or other stimulating this movement, engaged in hostile demonstrations against the peaceable Indians in that Territory, that to the best of my knowledge and belief this movement has neither the sympathy nor the support of any considerable number of the inhabitants of the State of Kansas. By its propinquity, by its neighborhood, by its being a continuous region, it has so happened that those lawless adventurers, these people who have not the fear of the law before their eyes, these men who are homeless and who always want to go wherever they are forbidden to go, have made the State of Kansas the rendezvous, the stamping-ground upon which they have assembled for the purpose of organizing their colonies and carrying on their attempted operations for the occupation of this territory; but the people of Kansas, in my judgment, do not desire that there shall be any unlawful occupation of that region, for they know just as well as I know, just as well as every Senator who hears me knows, that if the amendment which is proposed by the Senator from Massachusetts to the bill shall be agreed to, it means not only the occupation of the Oklahoma lands properly so called, but it means the absolute subversion and destruction and overthrow of the autonomy of the entire Indian country.

We are not without lessons; we are not without experience in these matters. It is in the memory of many of those who now sit around me that but a few years since the Sioux occupied what is known as the Black Hill region, the Deadwood country. It was held by the sanction of a treaty as consecrated, as binding as that which now controls this land in the Indian Territory; and I say that the Cherokee Nation there have a parchment title to 19,000,000 acres under the sign and seal and superscription of the President of the United States guaranteeing them in the possession of that land by a title as indisputable, as irrefragable, that is as binding in law as that by which any Senator here holds the title to the home which he occupies.

This movement that is being made upon the Oklahoma region simply means that all that autonomy shall be overthrown; that that whole area which we now describe as the Indian Territory shall be given up to white occupation upon such terms as the white occupants who may unlawfully go there shall see fit to prescribe.

Mr. President, this matter should give us pause. It is a very grave situation. It may be that before the sun shall have twice risen upon this Capitol there will be an armed conflict upon the territory of the United States between misguided and misinformed citizens and the Army of the United States under orders from its Commander-in-Chief. I know that such a controversy can have but one issue. I should regret more than words can express to have the blood of American citizens shed in an effort, whether it may be well intentioned or whether it may be in deliberate violation of law, to obtain for themselves homes upon what they believe to be the public lands of the United States.

Sir, there is but one way to avoid it, and that is for the Senate of the United States this day not to invite those men to go there by a promise that there is to be a negotiation entered upon for the purpose of quieting title, not to invite them to go there by telling them that in twelve months from this time it will be lawful for them to be there, but to say that the treaties of the United States are to be respected, that the force of the United States is to be employed until the Indian title to the land is extinguished to prevent any occupation of that territory under any pretext whatever.

I have been astonished—and the Senator from Massachusetts frequently astonishes me—to hear the Senator from Massachusetts deliberately advocate a policy here which he has been, I believe, among the foremost hitherto to resist, by asking the Senate to recede from its amendments, practically for the purpose of enabling the committee of conference to agree to amendments which he says will be satisfactory to the Senate conferees if it can be accepted by the House. I hope I do not misunderstand the Senator; I do not desire to do so; but I gather from his statement that he wishes the Senate to depart from its rule and practice; and he has given notice of an amendment which he says would be satisfactory to him, and which he would offer in the Senate if the rules of this body permitted him so to do.

The Senator from Massachusetts knows that I speak in entire kindness to him, not with any desire, in a hostile spirit, to criticize him, but in view of the emergency which is before us, dangerous, violent, whose ends can not be foreseen, I say that I am surprised that the Senator from Massachusetts should say that he will ask the Senate conferees to agree to the amendment he has proposed, and which if I understand the rules of the Senate is not admissible and could not be retained under the practice we have adhered to thus far this session. I wish the Senator would state to me if I misapprehend him. I do not desire to do so.

Mr. DAWES. The Senator has, I do not know that I ought to say strangely, but he has greatly misunderstood me. The Senator first has misunderstood me in the fact that he thinks I want the Senate to recede from its amendment when I distinctly stated that I wanted the Senate to insist upon it. It is the Senator's colleague who asked the Senate to recede. The Senator misunderstands me further if he understands me to be in favor of any infraction of the treaties of the United States, which I agree with him in saying have made the title of the Indians to that land perfect.

Mr. INGALLS. May I interrupt the Senator? Was I mistaken in supposing that the Senator from Massachusetts tendered an amendment to the provision of the House which he said would be satisfactory to the conferees, and that he would offer it in the Senate if the rules permitted him to do so?

Mr. DAWES. No; fortunately the amendment which I propose is not satisfactory to any other conferee but myself. All the other conferees, I am sorry to say, are for taking that provision of the bill just as it is. I have insisted upon it that I would not agree to that proposition unless there was annexed to it the provision that until the arrangement was made it should be a penal offense for men to go down into that Territory without authority of law. I was for accomplishing just exactly what the Senator from Kansas says. I stand here to vindicate the incoming administration from any aspersion thrown upon it in advance by the statements of the Senator from Missouri and both the Senators from Kansas. I do not believe that those who are gathering on the border of Kansas have the slightest intimation from any one authorized to speak for the incoming administration that it will finch one hair's breadth from an honest, honorable, steady, and firm administration of the law. I vindicate it from the aspersion thrown upon it. I do not know that anybody will thank me for any words of defense in reference to the administration, but I do not for a moment believe that the executive power of this Government has been intrusted to any hands that will for an instant consider the question whether they will maintain the law or not.

But, sir, I look at this question in the future. That country must be opened to settlement. My desire is that it shall be opened according to law and upon just and fair terms. My desire is that the incoming administration shall be authorized to negotiate with these Indians for this vast tract of country that they can not occupy, but which is theirs to dispose of.

They will part with it at some time, volens volens; whether they will or not, they will part with it; and it is my desire, in vindication of the rights of the Indians as well as of the law of the United States, that when they part with it they shall part with it upon fair and just terms agreed to by themselves. But while the negotiation is going on I want the arm of the United States strengthened in an effort to keep lawless trespassers from that land. I do not want the negotiation to go on while the land has been taken possession of by trespassers and law-breakers, such as those described by the Senator from Kansas.

If there is any difference between him and me it is only this: I say that that land must some time or other be opened to the homesteader. I want it paid for, and I want the honest homesteader to have it after it is paid for. That is the only difference. Therefore it is that I want the amendment which I have offered added to that provision authorizing negotiations, if that provision passes at all.

I am not here to advocate or countenance the violation of the sacred treaties with those Indians. I am here to vindicate them and preserve them, and preserve their rights.

Mr. VEST. Mr. President, the Senator from Kansas is right when he states that there is not a single hoof of cattle upon what is properly denominated Oklahoma; but the Senator must understand that the men who are lending this lawless immigration into the Indian Territory claim that the Oklahoma country does not comprise 1,200,000 acres of land in the center of the Indian Territory, but 14,000,000 acres of land, being one-half of the western half of the entire Territory, and upon that land there are thousands of head of cattle to-day.

Mr. INGALLS. Not on the Oklahoma land.

Mr. VEST. I say not upon Oklahoma proper, but Mr. Couch in the pamphlet which he has distributed all over the West, and a copy of which I have, claims that Oklahoma means the western half of the whole Indian Territory, the land purchased from the Cherokees, from the Creeks, from the Choctaws and Seminoles, altogether amounting to 14,000,000 acres.

Mr. INGALLS. He may say that, but he knows better.

Mr. VEST. I am speaking of the effect of that pamphlet, plausibly and ingeniously written, made for the purpose as an appeal to ignorant persons in order to induce them to join him in this incursion in violation, as I hold, of the law of the land and the rights of the Indian tribes.

So far as the declaration of Mr. Couch and the leaders of this immigration is concerned, in which it is said or intimated that the incoming administration will protect them in violating the laws of the United States, it is unfair, unjust to the administration of Mr. Cleveland, about to go into existence, and it is particularly unfair to the members of the Democratic party in the two Houses of Congress.

The legislation which the House of Representatives, a Democratic body, proposes, and which we are now considering, is in direct opposition to the position assumed by these boomers under the leadership of Mr. Couch. The pamphlet to which I have alluded assumes that the Indians have no title whatever to a single foot of this land, but that it is public domain and therefore these people have the right to go upon it for homestead or pre-emption. The Senate of the United States and the House of Representatives of the United States have both declared in their respective provisions that the Indians have a title, and that that title should be secured by negotiation by the Chief Executive.

The proposition to negotiate, and which recognizes the title of the Indians, was twice proposed on this floor by a Democratic Senator. The provision which recognizes the same thing comes from a Democratic House of Representatives, and the assumption, or intimation, or suspicion that the administration of Mr. Cleveland is in sympathy, directly or indirectly, with any violation of the law and intends to violate any treaty made with these Indian tribes, springs alone from the desperation of the adventurers who are attempting to violate the law, and not from the constituted authorities of the Democratic party in this body or in the other.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GARLAND in the chair). The question is on the motion of the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. DAWES] that the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 112, on which the yeas and nays have been ordered.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. PLATT (when Mr. HAWLEY's name was called). My colleague [Mr. HAWLEY] is detained on business connected with the Senate. I do not know whether he is paired or not.

The roll-call having been concluded, the result was announced—yeas 18, nays 24; as follows:

YEAS—18.
Candeen,	George,	Maxey,	Vest,
Cockrell,	Hampton,	Pugh,	Walker,
Colke,	Jones of Florida,	Saulsbury,	Williams,
Calcutt,	McPherson,	Slater,

NAYS—24.
Aldrich,	Dawes,	Hoar,	Pike,

ABSENT—34.

Cameron of Wis.,	Illili,	Mitchell,	Sherman.
Cullom,	Jackson,	Morgan,
Delph,	Jonas,	Palmer,

So the Senate refused to recede.

Mr. DAWES. I now move that the Senate insist upon its disagreeing vote.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts moves that the Senate insist on its amendment numbered 112.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. DAWES. Now I move that a committee of conference be asked.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Massachusetts moves that the Senate request of the House of Representatives a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the several amendments still open on this bill.

The motion was agreed to.

By unanimous consent, the conferees on the part of the Senate were authorized to be appointed by the President pro tempore; and Mr. DAWES, Mr. PLUMB, and Mr. RANSOM were appointed.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

A message from the House of Representatives, by Mr. CLARK, its Clerk, announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled joint resolution (H. Res. 341) to authorize the printing of 50,000 copies of the second annual report of the Bureau of Animal Industry for the year 1885; and it was thereupon signed by the President pro tempore.

PENSION BILLS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is the duty of the Chair now to lay before the Senate the first pension bill, according to the unanimous order of the Senate, being the bill (H. R. 7718) restoring John Snyder to the pension-roll.

Mr. BLAIR. I wish to remind the Chair that unanimous consent was given that the unobjected pension cases should be immediately disposed of as soon as the Indian appropriation bill was out of the way, and that time having come, I ask that under that unanimous consent we proceed now to dispose of the unobjected pension cases.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair was under the impression that this was the first bill moved by the Senator from Indiana yesterday.

Mr. BLAIR. That is the first case; but I wish it understood that it comes up under unanimous consent to dispose of all like it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That was precisely what the Chair stated, that it was his duty under the unanimous order of the Senate to lay this bill before the Senate as the first on the list. The bill is before the Senate as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. WILSON. I ask unanimous consent to make two favorable reports from the Committee on Pensions in order that they may be considered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection to receiving the reports? The Chair hears none.

Mr. GARLAND, from the Committee on Pensions, to whom were referred the following bills, reported them severally without amendment, and submitted reports thereon:

- A bill (H. R. 8155) granting a pension to Addie L. Moore; and
- A bill (H. R. 8237) granting a pension to Mary J. Dickson.

W. H. MURDAUGH.

Mr. GARLAND. I wish to ask the Senator from New Hampshire if he will allow me to make a report from the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. BLAIR. Certainly.

Mr. GARLAND. The Committee on the Judiciary, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8183) to remove the political disabilities of W. H. Murdaugh, of Virginia, have directed me to report it without amendment. I wish to ask the Senate, under the instruction of the committee, to have the bill put on its passage. It is a disability bill, which will excite no debate, and it is the last one of the lot.

Mr. BLAIR. I can not assent to the request of the Senator. I think it justice that we proceed with the pension bills. There are some ninety of them, and I think we ought to insist on their being now heard.

Mr. ALLISON. I rise to make a privileged report.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair understands the Senator from New Hampshire to object to the request of the Senator from Arkansas, and the bill reported by him will be placed on the Calendar. Pending the bill now before the Senate, the Senator from Iowa is recognized.

PENSION APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. ALLISON. I present the report of the conference committee on the pension appropriation bill.

The report was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 7785) "making appropriations for the payment of invalid and other pensions of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes," having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, and 11, and agree to the same.

W. B. ALLISON,

H. L. DAWES,

WILKINSON CALL,

Managers on the part of the Senate.

JOHN HANCOCK,

JOHN F. FOLLETT,

W. D. WASHBURN,

Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. ALLISON. I move that the Senate agree to the report.

The report was concurred in.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does that complete the bill?

Mr. ALLISON. That completes the bill.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill before the Senate will be read.

Mr. HALE. The Senate has proceeded with such unexampled dispatch in the transaction of public business for the last three hours that I have some hesitation in asking it now to proceed to consider the deficiency appropriation bill. It is a long bill of ninety-odd pages, and it ought to be sent to the House of Representatives as soon as possible. There are now but twenty-three hours and one-fourth left in which all the business needed to be done can be transacted, and, therefore, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to consider the deficiency appropriation bill. I am ready to report it.

Mr. BLAIR. Here are nearly one hundred of these pension bills, and they all come from the House. It is necessary that they be acted upon almost immediately or they must fail, and I have no doubt that they can be disposed of inside of an hour. I hope the Senator from Maine will not press for unanimous consent under the circumstances, for it would force me to do what I should very much dislike to do, object, at least for a little while.

Mr. HALE. I report from the Committee on Appropriations the regular annual deficiency bill with amendments.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Maine asks unanimous consent for leave to make a report from the Committee on Appropriations at this time. Is there objection?

Mr. BLAIR. I do not object to the report unless it displaces the existing order.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The report does not displace it. If there be no objection, the report will be received.

The Senator from Maine, from the Committee on Appropriations, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 8255) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1885, and for prior years, and for other purposes, reports it with amendments.

Mr. HALE. I move that the Senate proceed to consider the bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Mr. BLAIR. I must object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made.

Mr. BLAIR. I think there ought to be no collision between these pension bills and that very important measure. It can not take over an hour, probably not over three-quarters of an hour, to dispose of all the pension business.

Mr. HALE. The Senator must take the responsibility if he thinks there is anything now of more importance than this great appropriation bill. If it is put through, everybody knows that the pension bills will surely go through. I have done my duty in reporting it and in exhausting my parliamentary right in seeking to get this bill up. I shall not trouble the Senate again about it until it is entirely ready to go on; and if the Senator chooses to object of course I can not hinder him.

Mr. BLAIR. I would like to inquire of the Senator in charge of this bill if he can give any intimation as to the probable length of time it will consume in consideration?

Mr. HALE. I do not think it will be a long bill. I do not think there are matters upon it that will raise any issue requiring debate. I presume it will pass as fast as the Secretary can read it.

Mr. BLAIR. I ask unanimous consent that this bill reported by the Senator being taken up, the pension bills may be considered immediately after it is disposed of.

Mr. HALE. Would not that follow as a matter of course?

Mr. ALLISON. I will say to the Senator from New Hampshire that there is still another appropriation bill that ought to be disposed of, and I presume it will not take much time, but there are some differences between the two Houses which ought to be submitted.

Mr. BLAIR. I ask the unanimous consent indicated; that is, that upon the disposition of the bill reported by the Senator from Maine, the deficiency bill, and the fortification bill, the pension bills on the Calendar may then be immediately considered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from New Hampshire asks unanimous consent that the deficiency bill being taken up and disposed of, and the fortification bill, the Senate will then take up and dispose of the House pension bills favorably reported. Is there objection?

Mr. CONGER. If there be no objection, that would imply that the Senate agrees to take up the fortification bill and the deficiency bill first. There is before the Senate the river and harbor bill, which has in point of time of report precedence, and I shall take, as I gave notice last night, the earliest opportunity to call the attention of the Senate to that bill. I object to this proposition, because it implies that the other two bills mentioned shall have some precedence of the river and harbor bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made.

Mr. HARRISON. I do not think it implies what the Senator from Michigan says. It is simply as to what shall be done after these two appropriation bills are disposed of. It does not imply, I think, that he may not get precedence over these two bills with the river and harbor bill.

Mr. CONGER. It was tacitly understood, in fact unanimous consent was given, that when the Indian appropriation bill was disposed of, except on consent about pension bills, the river and harbor bill should be taken up. Notice was given to that effect the first thing this morning, and I must insist on that bill coming in before either of the other appropriation bills, or at least after the deficiency bill.

Mr. ALLISON. I desire to say to the Senator from Michigan that I was present and heard him give that notice. I did not think it was at all necessary for me or for any member of the Committee on Appropriations to give notice that we would insist on taking up the regular appropriation bills when they were presented. I supposed that that was thoroughly understood in the Senate and agreed to by every Senator on this floor. So there was no unanimous consent, I submit to the Senator from Michigan, that the river and harbor bill should be taken up.

Mr. CONGER. No; the Senator misunderstood me. I said that I agreed to unanimous consent being given to take up pension bills, and I gave notice that as early as possible, and not to interfere with that unanimous consent, I would call up the river and harbor bill, and I intend to carry out that notice.

Mr. ALLISON. Very well.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Pending the consideration of the present order of the Senate, the request of the Senator from New Hampshire having been objected to, the Senator from Maine asks unanimous consent that the pending order be informally laid aside and that the Senate proceed to consider the deficiency appropriation bill. Is there objection?

Mr. CONGER. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made.

Mr. HALE. Is it in order now to move—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It is not in order.

Mr. HALE. When will be the time that that can be done?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate will be obliged either to rescind or execute the order it has made that the House pension bills favorably reported be considered and disposed of in order.

Mr. HALE. Let me say that I have had great doubt about the possibility in the little time remaining of getting through all the mass of business required to be done. This has added almost immeasurably to that danger. The Committee on Appropriations certainly has done its duty; it has worked day and night; it has spent its days and nights upon these bills; it has pushed them before the Senate whenever opportunity has offered. It has now done its best to get this great appropriation bill before the Senate in order that it may be passed and sent to the House and become finally, through the processes of parliamentary law, a statute upon the law-books of the land. That is all the Committee on Appropriations can do; and the Senate must of course take the responsibility of the situation that will from now until 12 o'clock to-morrow be upon it.

Mr. BLAIR. I desire it to be observed that the failure of the motion of the Senator from Maine depends upon the objection of the Senator from Michigan rather than the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. HALE. I understand that the Senator from Michigan antagonizes a possible or conjectural river and harbor bill with the likelihood of getting through other business in order that we may complete it during this session.

Mr. BLAIR. I wish further to say that when the moment comes—I do not know just when it is—when the Senator from Maine can make his motion under the rules of the Senate, I will not further oppose it.

Mr. COCKRELL. Mr. President, unfortunately under the rules of the Senate this deficiency bill can only be considered now by unanimous consent. It was only reported to-day and one objection kills it. I desire Senators to know the exact weight of responsibility that rests upon them when they refuse to permit this bill to be considered now.

Mr. BLAIR. Will the Senator permit me to ask him upon what Senator the responsibility of this objection rests?

Mr. COCKRELL. I do not know, but upon whatever Senator refuses unanimous consent of the Senate to the consideration of the bill. I hope that unanimous consent will be given in order that we may dispose of it. We have worked in the Appropriations Committee as faithfully as men could work Saturday night, Sunday, Sunday night, and all the time. We have gotten the bills here at the earliest possible day, and now we are ready to dispose of them. There is only this bill and the fortifications bill, a very small bill, only three pages and a half, besides the bills that are in conference. Some of us who are attending to this bill ought now to be in conference; and, unless we get prompt action upon this bill, we can not give attention to the other bills which are now in conference and get them disposed of at this session, and the passage of some of those bills is an absolute necessity to prevent an extra session of Congress.

Mr. CONGER. I do not bear very lightly the reflections of the Senator from Missouri. I do not know by what authority the Committee on Appropriations can come here and talk about their arduous labors and their precedence here over any other committee. There is a committee in this body charged with a general appropriation bill, and as rapidly as it was possible after that bill came from the House Friday night, as soon as they could take it up Saturday the Committee on Commerce took up that bill and considered it as carefully as they had time to do, and ordered it to be reported to the Senate as it was yesterday in calendar time and to-day in legislative time. It has the precedence, and the only point about it is that one objection before adjournment would carry the bill over, as it would the deficiency bill or any other bill reported to-day.

I made the motion early in the day that the Senate adjourn by 1 o'clock so that we could close the legislative day, and I now move that the Senate adjourn, the order having already been entered, as I understand, that when we meet again it be at 1 o'clock.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Michigan moves that the Senate do now adjourn.

Mr. HALE. Will the Senator withdraw his motion for a moment?

Mr. BLAIR. The pension bills are the unfinished business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The motion is not debatable. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Michigan.

Mr. HALE. The Senator will withdraw his motion for a moment.

Mr. CONGER. But I do not yield the floor.

Mr. HALE. I only wish to make a suggestion. If the Senate adjourns and we begin a new day at precisely 1 o'clock, we have got to go through with all the formal proceedings required on beginning every new day. Certain motions can not be made for an hour after we begin that day, and the Journal must be read unless there is unanimous consent to dispense with it.

Mr. CONGER. The motion is not debatable. I have not yielded for debate. I insist on the motion.

Mr. HALE. I only wish to say—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Debate is not in order.

Mr. HALE. If we do not adjourn we can go right on.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the Senator from Michigan that the Senate do now adjourn. [Putting the question.] The yeas seem to prevail.

Mr. CONGER. I desire the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. All this debate is proceeding by unanimous consent. The Senator from Michigan calls for the yeas and nays.

Mr. CONGER. As I stated, one objection—

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Debate is not in order. The yeas and nays are called for on the motion to adjourn.

The yeas and nays were ordered; and being taken, resulted—yeas 41, nays 19; as follows:

YEAS—41.

Aldrich,	Colquitt,	Jonas,	Saulsbury,
Allison,	Conger,	Jones of Florida,	Sewell,
Bayard,	Dolph,	Kenna,	Sherman,
Beck,	Garland,	Lamar,	Slater,
Brown,	George,	McPherson,	Vance,
Butler,	Groome,	Maxey,	Vest,
Call,	Hampton,	Mitchell,	Walker,
Camden,	Harris,	Morgan,	Williams,
Chace,	Harrison,	Platt,
Cockrell,	Hawley,	Pugh,
Coke,	Jackson,	Ransom,

NAYS—19.

Cameron of Pa.,	Frye,	Miller of Cal.,	Plumb,
Cameron of Wis.,	Hale,	Miller of N. Y.,	Sawyer,
Cullom,	Hoar,	Morrill,	Voorhees,
Dawes,	Ingalls,	Pendleton,	Wilson.
Edmunds,	Manderson,	Pike,

ABSENT—16.

Blair,	Gibson,	Lapham,	Palmer,
Brewer,	Gorman,	Logan,	Riddleberger,
Fair,	Hill,	McMillan,	Sabin,
Forsyth,	Jones of Nevada,	Mahone,	Van Wyck.

So the motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore (at 1 o'clock p. m., March 3). The Senate stands adjourned until March 3, at 1 o'clock p. m.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, March 2, 1885.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m. Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. J. S. LINDSAY, D. D.

The Journal of the proceedings of Saturday was read and approved.

Mr. RANDALL. I ask for the regular order.

FRENCH SPOILATION CLAIMS.

Mr. BRATTON, from the Committee on Printing, submitted the following report:

The Committee on Printing, to which was referred the resolution of the Senate of January 24, 1885, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed 3,000 copies of the communication of the Secretary of State, containing a list of claims against France by reason of spoliation prior to the 31st of July, 1801, of which 1,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate and 2,000 for the use of the House of Representatives.

having duly considered the same, recommend that the House concur therein.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. BRATTON moved to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

RETURN OF A SENATE RESOLUTION.

The SPEAKER. The Chair lays before the House the following resolution, which is rendered necessary in order to correct a mistake which has been made in the transmission of a resolution to the Senate.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House be directed to request the Senate to return to the House of Representatives the concurrent resolution of February 27, 1885, providing for the printing of the first and second volumes of decisions relating to the public lands, which was by mistake communicated to the Senate as having passed the House.

The resolution was adopted.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Speaker, under instructions from the Committee on Appropriations I report back the bill (H. R. 8239) making appropriations for the naval service of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes, with the Senate amendments thereto, and ask unanimous consent to consider the same immediately in the House as in Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union under the five-minute rule.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Senate amendments will be reported.

Mr. RANDALL. I ask that these amendments be read, and I will then state after each has been reported to the House the recommendations of the committee in regard to the same.

Mr. HISCOCK. I think these amendments should be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. TALBOTT. I was just going to make that suggestion.

Mr. RANDALL. That is the effect of my motion, unless some gentleman objects to it.

Mr. HISCOCK. There will be no objection to their consideration in the House as in Committee of the Whole with the understanding, of course, that they are to be considered under the five-minute rule.

The SPEAKER. That of course will be the order of the House. The Clerk will report the first amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 1, line 13 of the printed bill, strike out "one."

Mr. RANDALL. That is a mere clerical error, this word being printed twice in succession. The committee recommend concurrence. I must request, Mr. Speaker, that there be order upon the floor, as it is almost impossible to proceed in the prevailing confusion.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state that at this stage of the session it is very important to transact business as rapidly as possible; and but little progress can be made unless order is preserved upon the floor. The Chair hopes gentlemen will preserve order.

Mr. RANDALL. In this first amendment, as I have said, the committee recommend concurrence.

The motion was agreed to.

The second amendment was read, as follows:

In line 21 of the printed bill strike out "nine" and insert "ten;" so that it will read "ten naval constructors," &c.

Mr. RANDALL. The committee recommend concurrence in the second Senate amendment, as also in the third amendment, as they bear relation to each other.

The amendment of the Senate is in obedience to the requirement of existing law.

The amendment was concurred in.

Amendment numbered 3 was read, as follows:

In line 22, strike out "ten" and insert "nine."

Mr. RANDALL. As I have just said, the committee recommend also concurrence in this amendment.

The amendment was concurred in.

Amendment numbered 4 was read, as follows:

On page 74 of the printed bill, line 75, strike out after the word "pilots," the words "bringing home the bodies of naval officers who have died or may hereafter die abroad while on duty."

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Speaker, the House inserted that provision because we believe that where a naval officer died while on duty abroad his remains should be brought home at the expense of the Government. It is a question that appeals to our good feelings, and what I deem to be a case of humanity. I have nothing further to say except that the committee recommend non-concurrence.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Will the gentleman allow me a moment?

Mr. RANDALL. There is no disposition to concur.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I only desire to say that I fully indorse what the gentleman says. I have a case now in my own hands where a young naval officer died abroad while on service at Nagasaki, Japan, and his remains are there without an effort to bring them home.

Mr. THOMAS. I think it would be inhuman to strike this out. It ought to be adhered to.

Mr. RANDALL. The committee recommend non-concurrence in the amendment.

The motion to non-concur was agreed to.

Amendment numbered 5 was read, as follows:

On page 4, line 76, strike out "valuable" and insert "valuables."

Mr. RANDALL. That is the correction of an error of engrossment. The committee recommend concurrence.

The amendment was concurred in.

Amendment numbered 6 was read, as follows:

In lines 112 and 113, page 6, under the heading "Bureau of Navigation," strike out "$87,500" and insert "$100,000."

Mr. RANDALL. This amendment relates to the amount appropriated for the Bureau of Navigation. The committee recommend non-concurrence. I have no doubt when it comes into conference a settlement will be quickly reached.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

Amendment numbered 7 was read, as follows:

After line 113 insert as follows:

"For special ocean surveys and the publication thereof, $10,000."

Mr. RANDALL. The committee recommend non-concurrence; but I desire to say that there is an inclination on the part of the committee to favor this proposition. We propose, however, that it shall be non-concurred in in connection with another matter. The two questions may be adjusted together.

Mr. BLOUNT. What is the other matter?

Mr. RANDALL. The next item.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

Amendment numbered 8 was read, as follows:

After the seventh amendment insert as follows:

"For publication of professional papers, $10,000."

Mr. RANDALL. The committee recommend non-concurrence.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

Amendment numbered 9 was read, as follows:

After line 133 insert the following:

"For the purchase or manufacture of steel guns of small caliber for ships now in service, and for testing the same at the naval ordnance proving-ground, $31,000."

Mr. RANDALL. We recommend non-concurrence.

Mr. REED, of Maine. I hope the gentleman from Pennsylvania will give us some reason for non-concurring.

Mr. RANDALL. This is an item which relates to the purchase or manufacture of small steel guns costing from $2,000 to $4,000 each. The committee considered this proposition before sending the bill to the Senate and thought it was unnecessary. But the Senate has inserted it and the committee desire non-concurrence with a view to having further light, if there be any, from the Department in connection with the subject. The Committee on Appropriations originally were as a whole opposed to the purchase or manufacture of these guns by the Government.

The question being taken on non-concurring, the Speaker stated that in the judgment of the Chair the "noes" had it.

Mr. RANDALL. I call for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 81, noes 25.

So (further count not being called for) the amendment was non-concurred in.

Amendment numbered 10 was read, as follows:

Page 7, line 138, after the words "completion and," insert the word "public;" so that it will read:

"For the completion and public test of two breech-loading rifle cannon of the larger calibers now in course of construction for the Navy, with carriages and ammunition for both, $80,000."

Mr. RANDALL. We recommend concurrence.

The amendment was concurred in.

Amendment numbered 11 was read, as follows:

Strike out all after the word "dollars," in line 141 on page 7, down to and including line 153 on page 7, namely, the following:

"Provided, That the test shall be conducted as follows: With battering charges for two hours, and under the most rapid continuous rate of firing, as near as may be like the conditions of a hotly contested battle; then with the service charge not less than five hours. Permission, with ample notice to be present, shall be given to all persons who indicate a desire to examine the preliminary preparation and witness the firing. Expenditures of public money on all other naval cannon of and above said caliber shall cease until this public test has terminated. And all the facts and incidents of the test shall be reported to Congress by the Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance as soon thereafter as possible."

Mr. RANDALL. The committee recommend non-concurrence.

Mr. THOMAS. I would like to ask the gentleman from Pennsylvania whether this amendment does not stop the construction of the guns which are almost completed now for the new cruisers.

Mr. RANDALL. It has no connection whatever with any armament incident to the new cruisers. I will state for the information of the House to what it relates.

There are now in course of construction at the Washington navy-yard two 10-inch guns. We in this bill give sufficient money for their completion, to wit, $80,000. The House thought it prudent to add the character of test which should be given to these guns prior to their being placed in use on board ship. The Senate has seen fit to strike that out. The House considered that the severest test should be applied to these 10-inch breech-loading steel guns, because probably in the event of their proving a success they will become the type of that sized gun, and because we are admonished by the history of the late civil war that the severest test should be applied to this character of gun. We remember that even guns of smaller caliber than these, the guns, for instance, at Fort Fisher, were more dangerous to us than they were to the confederates in that struggle. There were said to have been eleven of the confederates injured, while forty-odd of the Federals were injured by the bursting of our own cannon.

It is rather surprising that there should be any disinclination on the part of the Department to have a full test as to these guns. It does not indicate to me that confidence in their manufacture which they ought to have, and that is the reason why the committee insist upon this character of test as necessary.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I quite agree with the gentleman from Pennsylvania, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations [Mr. RANDALL], that the greatest test should be given to these guns, and I think it ought to be a public test.

Mr. RANDALL. That is provided for in the bill.

Mr. THOMAS. I do not object to non-concurrence. I simply rose for the purpose of asking whether this prevents the completion of the 6-inch and 8-inch guns which are being built at the Washington navy-yard in addition to the 10-inch gun, but I see by reading the amendment that the language is this: "Expenditure of public money on all other naval cannon of and above said caliber shall cease until this public test has terminated." So it will be seen that this does not affect the 6-inch and 8-inch guns which are building, but is intended to apply only to the two 10-inch guns, and I think that is right.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McCook, its Secretary, announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles:

A bill (H. R. 2268) for the relief of John F. Severance; and

A bill (H. R. 44) for the completion of a public building at Council Bluffs, Iowa.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference upon the bill (S. 84) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to ascertain the amounts due to citizens of the United States for supplies furnished to the Sioux or Dakota Indians of Minnesota subsequent to August, 1860, and prior to the massacre of August, 1862, and to provide for the payment thereof.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Amendment numbered 12 was read, as follows:

Strike out "three" and insert "four."

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Speaker, that relates to the amount of the appropriation, and the committee recommend that the House non-concur, with the view of reaching an agreement.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

Amendment numbered 13 was read, as follows:

After the word "hundred" insert "and twenty-five;" so that it will read, as the total appropriation for the Bureau of Equipment and Recruiting, "eight hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars."

Mr. RANDALL. The committee recommend non-concurrence in that amendment.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

Amendment numbered 14 was read, as follows:

Strike out the words "car-tickets."

Mr. RANDALL. The Senate desires to cut off the supply of car-tickets to employes of the Department, and the committee recommend concurrence.

The amendment was concurred in.

Amendment numbered 15 was read, as follows:

After the word "hundred" insert "and fifty;" so that it will read "£20,000" as the total appropriation for the Bureau of Yards and Docks.

Mr. RANDALL. That also relates to the amount of the appropriation, and the committee recommend non-concurrence.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

Amendment numbered 16 was read, as follows:

Strike out the words: "And if the Secretary of the Navy shall not be able to maintain properly the whole number of naval hospitals now kept open on the amounts hereby appropriated for the maintenance of a civil establishment at naval hospitals, he shall close those which are least necessary to the service, and provide for the patients now cared for therein at such other naval hospitals as may be most convenient."

Mr. RANDALL. That clause was originally placed in the bill at the first session of the Forty-seventh Congress. The Committee on Appropriations deem it a wise provision because it prevents a deficiency; and if sufficient money should not be appropriated for the maintenance of all these hospitals, then the provision is that such of them as can be safely closed shall be closed by order of the Surgeon-General.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, the enactment of this provision has been three times recommended by the Secretary of the Navy—

Mr. RANDALL. And it has been inserted in the law.

Mr. THOMAS. I say it has been recommended three times by the Secretary of the Navy, and it meets the unanimous concurrence of the Committee on Naval Affairs. I will not take time to state them, but there are other reasons than those given by the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations why this amendment should be non-concurred in.

Mr. RANDALL. I am obliged to the gentleman.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

Amendment numbered 17 was read, as follows:

Strike out the words "and car-tickets."

Mr. RANDALL. That amendment, like number 14, relates to the use of car-tickets by employes.

Mr. KEIFER. Mr. Speaker, I wish to say in regard to this amendment, as well as in relation to the one numbered 14, under the head of

Bureau of Equipment, that while I am willing that the amendment shall be concurred in, it seems to me that we are simply prohibiting the supply of car-tickets and leaving persons who may have to be transported to various points on the business that they are engaged in to ride in carriages at a much greater cost to the Government.

Mr. RANDALL. I do not know where there is any appropriation made in any of these bills for carriage-hire.

Mr. KEIFER. But there is plenty of money to be used for carriage-hire made under the head of "incidental expenditures."

The amendment was concurred in.

Amendment numbered 18 was read, as follows:

Page 10, line 3, strike out "ten" and insert "fifteen;" so as to make the appropriation for necessary repairs of naval laboratory, naval hospitals, &c., $15,000.

Mr. RANDALL. This amendment relates to the amount of the appropriation. The committee recommend non-concurrence.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

Amendment numbered 19 was read, as follows:

Page 10, line 13, strike out "eighty-five" and insert "one hundred;" so as to make the appropriation for provisions of seamen and marines, &c., $100,000.

Mr. RANDALL. This amendment also relates to the amount appropriated. The committee recommend non-concurrence, with a view to reaching an amicable adjustment in conference.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

Amendment numbered 20 was read, as follows:

Page 10, line 21, strike out "car-tickets."

Mr. RANDALL. I move to concur in this amendment.

The amendment was concurred in.

Amendment numbered 21 was read, as follows:

Page 11, line 18, strike out "30" and insert "30;" so as to make the proviso read:

"Provided, That no part of this sum shall be applied to the repairs of any wooden ship when the estimated cost of such repairs, to be appraised by a competent board of naval officers, shall exceed 30 per cent. of the estimated cost, appraised in like manner, of a new ship of the same size and like material."

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Speaker, upon the recommendation of the committee in this case, which is to concur in the amendment of the Senate, I am not a proper spokesman for the committee. I will yield to some other member—the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. LONG] or the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER]—and after an explanation on that side of the question I shall take the liberty to give the views of the minority of the committee on this matter.

Mr. LONG. I move that the House concur in this amendment of the Senate.

Mr. RANDALL. That is the recommendation of the committee.

Mr. LONG. That is the recommendation of the majority of the committee. This is the same question which has been discussed and settled two or three times heretofore. For two or three years we have been proceeding under the policy embraced in the amendment of the Senate—that no repairs of wooden ships of war shall exceed 20 per cent. of the estimated cost of a new ship of the same size and like material. The figures show that the great extravagance in our naval establishment has arisen from repairs made upon our wooden ships, which in some cases have amounted to two, three, or four times the original cost of the vessel. Unless we are to go back to the era of wooden ships, we should concur in the Senate amendment.

All the more necessary is this in view of the fact that our Navy consists of old wooden vessels; and unless we continue the present policy of restricting repairs to 20 per cent. we shall be spending all our money in repairs of vessels which when repaired will be of no value.

I move that the House concur.

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Speaker, a minority of the committee would have preferred that this point might go to the committee of conference. The real question involved is how soon we shall get rid of the wooden vessels in the Navy. This naturally depends upon how fast we construct steel vessels to take their place. The minority of the committee thought we should not be too rapid in dispensing with our wooden vessels until we are assured of their substitution by steel vessels; and that until the purpose of Congress in this particular is manifest, the limit of repairs might properly be placed at 30 per cent. For the current year under the two six-month bills and for the prior year the limit has been 30 per cent. This is about what is involved in the amendment. There are some gentlemen so zealous in behalf of steel vessels that I fear they think the taking away of wooden vessels now in the Navy will increase the rapidity with which a new navy may be constructed.

Mr. COX, of New York. Mr. Speaker, when the other day the question came up about finishing the New York, I dropped a remark which I think will apply to this business of wooden ships. As in an army we may need artillery, infantry, and cavalry—all three—so in our Navy we may need wooden ships, iron ships, and steel ships. There is not a very great difference between 20 per cent. and 30 per cent., and we need not take up much time upon it. I would be willing that the House non-concur, and let the question be settled in conference. We must have some wooden vessels. We cannot improvise all at once a steel navy. We have here propositions for steel cruisers which I hope will be concurred in; and, at the same time, I hope we shall non-concur in the amendment as to the finishing of the wooden vessel, the New York. I think it would be well to give the committee of conference a little leeway that they may adjust or, if you please, "trade" on this business, in order that the bill may provide for these various arms of our service.

Mr. KEIFER. Mr. Speaker, in answer to the remarks made by the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. COX], I desire to say that while it may be possible we ought to have various kinds of vessels in our Navy, yet at the same time we have no vessels that rise to the dignity of war vessels. Our vessels are all wooden vessels now; and we do not wish that all the money Congress sees fit to expend for the building up of a navy shall be spent in repairing old obsolete wooden ships.

I desire to understand exactly what this proposition is, because the same form of amendment will be found further along in this bill. The amendment of the Senate proposes that no part of the sum appropriated shall be applied to the repairs of any wooden ship when the estimated cost of such repairs shall exceed 20 per cent. of the estimated cost of a new ship of the same size and like material. If we agree to the limitation of 20 per cent.—that is, one-fifth of the cost of a new ship of the same size and like material—we shall have enough wooden ships of that kind, I think, to answer all the purposes that the gentleman from New York expects to be served by wooden ships. The limitation of 30 per cent. allows nearly one-third of the original cost to be spent in repairing a wooden vessel which we have no use for when constructed. These vessels are all upon old models—all obsolete. If we keep up such a policy we can spend from year to year on these old vessels more than enough to make a good navy.

Mr. COX, of New York. Will the gentleman from Ohio yield to me?

Mr. KEIFER. Certainly.

Mr. COX, of New York. Suppose we compromise this matter at 25 per cent.

Mr. ELLIS. No.

Mr. KEIFER. If the gentleman chooses to make that amendment it can be submitted to the House. I wish to say there is some present promise that we are going to have finished the best cruisers which we have commenced constructing; we are going to finish the monitors; we are proposing to do something also in the way of building the best ship that floats on the waters according to the best and most approved model. We have now this in prospect, but we shall limit ourselves a little on these old obsolete tubs. That is the position I take, that we will spend money enough, that we will keep enough of this class of vessels, if we are allowed to spend up to 25 per cent. of the value of a new ship of the same size and model.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania, rose.

Mr. RANDALL. I understand, Mr. Speaker, that the gentleman from Ohio has not suggested any amendment.

Mr. KEIFER. No; I have not moved any amendment.

Mr. COX, of New York. I move to concur with the amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state his amendment.

Mr. COX, of New York. I move to insert 25 instead of 20, so it will provide that it shall not exceed 25 per cent. instead of 20 per cent.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from New York wish to be heard on his amendment?

Mr. COX, of New York. For a moment only. All I have to say is this in response to what has fallen from the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER], that many of these wooden vessels are not obsolete tubs. They are made of good timber. The New York when completed will be built of perfectly good timber, and the new engines to be placed in these vessels will be of the most recent origin. So the remark of the gentleman does not altogether apply to the wooden vessels, and I hope we may have some of these old wooden vessels which may serve admirably in the uses of the Navy. Therefore, I say 20 per cent. will apply to the repair of more vessels than 30, and a fair compromise between the two I think would be 25 per cent., which amendment I have proposed.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. I should like to ask my colleague where these new engines are to come from.

Mr. COX, of New York. I suppose they will come from the future.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. Out of what fund—how are they going to be paid for?

Mr. COX, of New York. Is there nothing in the bill as to that object?

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. My colleague says they will put improved engines upon these vessels of the Navy.

Mr. COX, of New York. Evidently they would, or they would not be made hereafter.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. Why, they have to be made, and out of what fund is it to be done?

Mr. COX, of New York. That will be attended to hereafter; if not this year, why, then, the next.

Mr. RANDALL. It will come out of the fund for steam-engineering, $950,000.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. Now, Mr. Speaker, I desire to reply to a remark made by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER] a moment or two ago in reference to the models of our ships, he deprecateing the use of the models of the old tube, as he calls them, which were designed years ago. I say, sir, in the interest of the Navy it is to be regretted that the old models have not been adhered to in building ships, both iron and wooden. I will state this fact, which may be information to the gentleman from Ohio, that the old frigates United States and Constellation, wooden ships, built in this century, have never been surpassed in speed. Those are the models which ought to be adhered to. The frigate United States was the fastest sailing vessel in the United States Navy in her day, and the fastest sailing naval vessel in the world. The Constellation came just after her in speed, and the old Constitution not much behind.

I am speaking, Mr. Speaker, in the interest of the old models, and I assert it here that there never has been any improvement since those days in building naval vessels for speed. I do not deprecate the idea, therefore, that we shall adhere to those old models if we want quick sailing vessels.

Mr. KEIFER. Then had we not better build new ships than repair old ones?

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. The ships were built with great care; they were built in the navy-yards of the country. Every piece of wood or other material used in their construction was properly inspected before being allowed to go into their construction. The ship-builders of those days produced vessels which could sail away, if necessary, from the greater fleets of England during the war of 1812. I consider the naval architecture since, as a general thing, to be comparatively a failure in regard to speed.

One vessel I will refer to which gentlemen will recall, and that is the Princeton, which was built under the auspices of a Democratic administration. Everything was allowed to be put in here. She was constructed in accordance with the ideas of Commodore Stockton of that day, who supervised the construction of that vessel. She was a failure. So it has been with vessels since then. Hence, I say, do not let us deprecate the older ship-builders of the country, those who produced ships that could sail away from the hostile fleet if that fleet was stronger than one of our naval vessels.

[Here the hammer fell.]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York has three minutes of his time left. Does he claim it?

Mr. COX, of New York. Yes; and I will yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. LONG].

Mr. LONG. Mr. Speaker, with regard to the amendment of the gentleman from New York [Mr. Cox], I believe it is hardly worth while—it is simply making two bites of a cherry. The Senate have determined on 20 per cent. The question with the House is whether we will amend by making it 30 per cent. This is not permanent legislation. It applies merely to the present year. It is carrying out the policy of the last two years. Our Navy is in a transition state. All our wooden vessels are very old, and most of them if repaired at all would exceed the limit.

Experience has shown that the great expense connected with the Navy arises from the repair of these old wooden vessels. It will reduce that expense and the extravagance which has heretofore applied to their repairs to keep that limit down, as proposed by the Senate amendment. Let us, therefore, during this transition state, keep it down to the lowest point. When we have reached another period, and when our Navy rests upon a basis of iron or steel vessels, we can then afford to change this limit, but not now.

I will yield the remainder of any time that remains to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. ELLIS].

Mr. ELLIS. Mr. Speaker, I trust that this House will restrict repairs upon these wooden ships as much as it possibly can. In the first place, sir, they are all of a type that is passing away. Wood in naval construction is a thing of the past. So far as ship-building is concerned its day is over, and the enormous repairs that have been put upon our ships in the past has been the graveyard of our Navy. Year after year we have been repairing these old wooden vessels at a cost which would have given us a modern navy. Let us take the Tennessee, the best vessel of our Navy, and the only one which ranks as a first-class vessel, and I quote with reference to that from a speech of my honorable and distinguished friend from New York [Mr. HEWITT], every word of which is verified by the official reports. His description of the Tennessee is complete and conclusive. He shows that the repairs to the hull of this vessel and other incidental repairs, during the Robeson administration of the Navy Department, was $1,434,500. That is the Tennessee, our best vessel afloat, which was built in 1844, and the only vessel upon our register which ranks as a first-class ship of war. The reports, as I have said, show that the statement of the gentleman from New York is verified, and that during that administration the expense of the repairs of this ship reached nearly a million and a half of dollars. That would have been ample to have built a modern cruiser—

[Here the hammer fell.]

The SPEAKER. Debate is exhausted upon this amendment.

Mr. ELLIS. I have not exhausted five minutes, certainly.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has exhausted the remainder of the time of the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. HUTCHINS. I move to make the limit twenty-six.

Mr. ELLIS. I move to strike out the last word.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York moves an amendment which is in order. He moves to amend the amendment by striking out twenty-five and inserting twenty-six.

Mr. HUTCHINS. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me the question for the House to consider now is not whether we are to have a navy of wooden ships, but whether we are to have any navy at all after the expiration of two years.

Now, Admiral Porter recommended that this limit should be fixed at 40 per cent.; and for one I prefer to take his judgment as head of the Navy Department to risking my own in a question of this kind. But the Bureau of Construction and Repair recommend that we fix the limit at 33½ or 33, I believe, and the committee after considering the question have decided to fix it at 30, in which form it passed the House and went to the Senate, where it was reduced to 20.

Now, Mr. Speaker, we have in our Navy Department at the present time thirty-one vessels of war available; that is to say, one of the first class, eleven of the second class, and nineteen of the third class. Under the limit proposed by the committee at the expiration of one year from this time eleven, or more than one-third of the available fleet of to-day, will be stricken from the rolls of the Navy; and if we pass this amendment at 20 or 25 per cent. at the expiration of two, or at most three, years we will not have a ship left. Now, the only proposition is to extend the Navy by improving the modern ships or repairing them, making them available for some time for service, until we have devised some plan for the permanent increase of the Navy. As yet no plan has been devised.

There is no certainty whatever that within a year or two we shall have another steel cruiser, and certainly it does not seem to be the part of wisdom or policy on the part of the legislators of this country to deprive the nation of any navy at all, even if it be a wooden navy, until we have something to take its place. It is like a man burning the house in which he lives before he has completed a new one into which he can move. All that gentlemen say of the expense in connection with the wooden vessels is true, but do not let us discard them, in the face of the recommendation of the Navy and the Bureau of Construction and Repair, until we have something to replace them with.

Let us keep the limit of their repair down to 30 per cent. I hope it will be the will of the House to reject the motion to concur in the Senate amendment, and let the matter at least go to a conference committee, where, after a full consideration of the subject, we can doubtless arrive at some arrangement or conclusion that may be satisfactory both to the Senate and to the House.

Mr. ELLIS. Now, Mr. Speaker, to resume where I left off. I desire again to call the attention of the House to the cost of this only first-class vessel, the Tennessee. This vessel has a speed of fourteen knots per hour.

Mr. HUTCHINS. You speak of the Tennessee?

Mr. ELLIS. Yes, sir.

Mr. HUTCHINS. She goes off under this amendment in a year.

Mr. ELLIS. Ah! she is rated as a first-class vessel, the best in your Navy and of a type you want to keep up.

Mr. HUTCHINS. She would not come in under this limit.

Mr. ELLIS. I do not yield. I trust the gentleman from New York will possess his soul in patience. As a coal-consumer she consumes now 2.95 pounds per hour of horse-power; while your modern engine consumes one and one-third pounds per hour of horse-power. She is an enormous coal-consumer. She is too slow for any purpose. And yet the gentleman would have this Government enact a law which would permit this vessel to be absolutely built over, when she would be of no use in war or in peace.

Mr. HUTCHINS. I desire to correct the gentleman.

Mr. ELLIS. I decline to yield. I know the views of the gentleman from New York, and so does the House.

Now, what does the Secretary of the Navy tell us? He gives you a long catalogue of vessels that have not been repaired but have been absolutely built over; more having been expended on their repairs under that enormously wasteful system than the vessels originally cost; enough to have made modern vessels in the place of every one of them.

The gentleman from New York knows we have no vessels; this matter of repairs amounts absolutely to the building of the vessel or the rebuilding it over, and thus perpetuating in the Navy of the United States a type and class and character of vessels that are insufficient in war and no credit in peace.

Now, how long is the country to be subjected to this wasteful and extravagant process? How long are you to keep this open grave for our hopes for a navy? For as long as we have a few old rotten, obsolete hulks on the sea, just strong enough to bear the flag and not strong enough to defend it, I am persuaded the views of certain gentlemen will prevail and that we will not embark in the work of building a navy. I say let these old vessels pass away. I would not spend a dollar in repairing them; but when they become totally unfit I would sell them and get rid of them. Let the people know we have not a navy, and then they will fill this Hall with Representatives up to their throat, up to their wealth, up to their ideas of national power and glory, who will compel the building of a modern navy.

Mr. HUTCHINS. I withdraw my amendment and move to amend by making it 27 per cent.

I am sure the gentleman from Louisiana means to treat this question fairly. He has selected the Tennessee, and he founds all his argument on the condition of that ship as a reason why no money, not a dollar, should be expended on the repairs of the present Navy.

If the gentleman from Louisiana had read the report of the Secretary of the Navy he would have seen he was dealing unfairly with this subject. The Secretary says at page 14 of his report:

The available cruising sea vessels of the Navy are the following: One first-rate, the Tennessee, of 4,840 tons displacement.

He means by that first class, not that it is in the best repair; because on the same page he says:

Of the above list it is reported that the following will be condemned when surveyed, as they can not be repaired under the law: Tennessee, Lackawanna, Powhatan, and Wachusett.

Now, the gentleman from Louisiana has been talking here about the Tennessee, which the Secretary of the Navy tells us under the law, as it stands, of the 30 per cent. clause, can not be repaired. He says that we propose to appropriate a sum of money here to rebuild that vessel. My answer is, under that law that vessel can not be repaired. It is only those in good condition which can be repaired; and it is only for a temporary purpose, that the American flag may be seen at some mast-head until we can agree among ourselves to provide for the construction of such navy as this Government ought to have.

I withdraw the amendment, and hope that the 30 per cent. limit will be adopted.

Mr. HISCOCK. I move to amend by striking out "25" and inserting "26."

Mr. Speaker, this is the old contest which we have had before in the House, striving to support the navy-yards; and every one who has a navy-yard in his neighborhood is in favor of the 30 per cent. limit.

Mr. HEWITT, of New York. Does the gentleman seriously mean to make that statement? I have a navy-yard in my immediate neighborhood and I am not in favor of that limit.

Mr. LONG. And I am not.

Mr. HISCOCK. I will not undertake to say that there are not some exceptions.

Mr. HUTCHINS. Will the gentleman answer me a question?

Mr. HISCOCK. There may be some exceptions, and I will except gentlemen from the State of New York.

Mr. HUTCHINS. That is not the point of my question.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from New York [Mr. HISCOCK] yield?

Mr. HISCOCK. I do not yield further.

I have before me a statement of the expenditures upon these old ships. The investigation of that subject in the past resulted in the establishment of this limitation of 20 per cent. Twenty per cent., I believe, is the law to-day.

Mr. LONG. And has been for two years.

Mr. HISCOCK. And has been for two years, and I am not sure but it has been for three years. Now, as a matter of course, when you carry the limit up to 30 per cent. you increase the employment in the navy-yards.

Now I do not say that my colleague from New York, Mr. HEWITT, or my other colleague from New York, Mr. HUTCHINS, is influenced by that, but it is wooden ships that are to be repaired, and the moment you carry the expenditure up to 30 per cent. you increase the amount of work in these navy-yards, and the interests of locations, the interest perhaps of Brooklyn, the interest of League Island, the interest of all the navy-yards and of the communities in the vicinity of those navy-yards, is in favor of the highest amount.

Mr. KELLEY. Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to say, as representing one of the League Island districts, that I am in favor of the smallest limitation. I want to get rid of these wooden hulks.

Mr. HISCOCK. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KELLEY] has always occupied that position, but I believe that his colleague, Mr. O'NEILL, who is always looking after his navy-yard with great industry and great intelligence, always antagonizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KELLEY] upon that subject. Now, sir, I will call the attention of the House and of my friend from New York [Mr. HUTCHINS] to the remarkable statement which was sent to us at the beginning of this Congress in regard to the ships now borne upon the register. Upon those vessels since they have been borne upon the register we have expended for repairs $41,200,000, and those vessels cost only $40,000,000. Therefore it appears that we have expended upon them for repairs since they have been borne on the register more than they originally cost. Are we to continue this policy? I say, sir, that if we are to have a new navy, an iron and steel navy, we can do for a while with a less number of these old ships, and save this money and devote it to the construction of new cruisers, and I believe that will be a much better use to make of it. I yield now to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BAYNE].

Mr. BAYNE. I have only a word to say. The proposition is made to expend 30 per cent. upon the repairs of these ships. I am informed by the gentleman from Maine [Mr. DINGLEY], who is thoroughly well posted in all naval matters, that these vessels were constructed during the war and soon after the war, when the cost of building ships was very high. Unseasoned timber was used in their construction; they were not enduring; and if this appropriation be made on the basis of 30 per cent. of the original cost, it will amount now to 50 per cent. on the estimated present cost of such vessels. If we appropriate even 20 per cent. now, it will be perhaps equivalent to 50 per cent. of the real value of the vessels, so that in two years the appropriation will reach what would be the full par value of these vessels if constructed in times like these. I can not imagine what business principles enter into a proposition of that kind, and I am surprised that such a proposition should come from this economical Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say a word in reply to the gentleman from New York [Mr. HISCOCK]. I am here, sir, as an advocate of building ships in the navy-yards of the country. I do not hold, however, that there should be no ships built by contract, but pari passu with the building of naval vessels in the navy-yards I would like to see contractors build ships in their private ship-yards. I stand here, sir, as I have always stood, as an advocate of the League Island navy-yard, and to assert that for the purposes of building vessels of war it is not equaled by any navy-yard in the country; and in this connection I desire to bring to the recollection of the House the fact that one of the gentlemen who in a former Congress was foremost in advocating the closing of that yard by legislation was my friend from New York [Mr. HISCOCK].

The League Island navy-yard is in the neighborhood of the city a part of which I represent upon this floor. In that city there are mechanics unsurpassed in their skill in ship-building, either iron ships or wooden ships, either building a new vessel from the keel up or repairing an old one; and such vessels as have been built or repaired at the League Island navy-yard, the Quinnebaug and the Ossipee, for instance, have had less money expended upon them in comparison with the amount of work necessary to be done than any vessels which have been repaired at any other navy-yard in the country. I say this in respect of the mechanics and ship-builders in the city of Philadelphia, that they possess the highest skill, developed by long experience, in the construction of ships and in the production of models of naval architecture, and I predict that before long Congress will have to re-establish the League Island navy-yard, for it is the only place in this country where iron naval architecture can be profitably carried on.

Mr. POTTER obtained the floor.

Mr. RANDALL. After the gentleman from New York [Mr. POTTER] has spoken I shall move to close debate upon this paragraph.

The SPEAKER. On the Senate amendment and the amendments thereto?

Mr. RANDALL. Yes.

Mr. HISCOCK withdrew his formal amendment.

Mr. POTTER. I renew the amendment. I quite agree, Mr. Speaker, that this nation should have a navy equal to its great wants and its great duties. We should not be behind any of the other nations of the world in this respect. But, sir, there is unanswerable force in the suggestion of the honorable member, my colleague, from New York [Mr. HISCOCK], that it is of higher importance than any question of 5 or 10 or 15 per cent. that the flag of our country be kept aloft until we shall introduce and produce vessels of iron that shall supplement those that we now have to bear our flag. For one, sir, I am willing that the naval authorities who have recommended that this limit shall be kept at 30 per cent., or as near that as possible, shall have their way. I desire that the flag of my country, if it can not float upon iron ships, shall at least, until we have such ships, float wherever possible upon the best ships that we have.

Mr. RANDALL. I now move to close debate on this amendment of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The first question is upon the amendment of the gentleman from New York, Mr. POTTER, to the amendment of the gentleman from New York, Mr. COX.

Mr. POTTER. I withdraw it.

The SPEAKER. The question is now upon the amendment of the gentleman from New York, Mr. COX, to strike out "twenty" and insert "twenty-five."

The amendment was not agreed to; there being—ayes 12, noes not counted.

The question being then taken upon the motion of Mr. LONG to concur in the amendment of the Senate, there were—ayes 61, noes 83.

Mr. LONG. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, 53 voting in favor thereof.

The vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. RANDALL moved to reconsider the vote by which the Senate amendment was non-concurred in; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. NEECE, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles; when the Speaker signed the same:

A bill (H. R. 2268) for the relief of John F. Severance; and

A bill (H. R. 441) for the completion of a public building at Council Bluffs, Iowa.

REPORT OF CAPT. M. A. HEALY, UNITED STATES REVENUE MARINE.

The SPEAKER laid before the House a letter from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting the report of Capt. M. A. Healy, U. S. R. M., on the cruise of the revenue-marine steamer Corwin in the Arctic Ocean; which was referred to the Committee on Printing.

Mr. HISCOCK. I move that the question of printing extra copies of that valuable report be referred under the rule to the Committee on Printing.

The SPEAKER. That question will be referred to the Committee on Printing, when it will then become a privileged matter.

Mr. HISCOCK. So I suppose, and that is what I desire.

NAVAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the next amendment of the Senate.

Amendment numbered 22 was read, as follows:

Strike out the following: "For the completion of the New York, $400,000."

Mr. RANDALL. The Committee on Appropriations recommend non-concurrence; and as this subject was very fully discussed when the bill was under consideration some days ago, I feel justified in demanding the previous question.

Mr. HISCOCK. It seems to me we should have some discussion on this question of concurrence or non-concurrence in the amendments of the Senate in striking out this paragraph.

Mr. REED, of Maine. I think we are entitled to a discussion under the order of the House.

The SPEAKER. Under the order of the House there will be discussion for five minutes on each side.

Mr. RANDALL. Very well; let each side state the case.

Mr. KEIFER. I move to concur in the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER. Of course the question will be on concurrence.

Mr. RANDALL. The Committee on Appropriations recommend non-concurrence.

Mr. KEIFER. Mr. Speaker, I have a very bright hope that the House will so vote, looking at the provisions of this bill for the support of the Navy, that it shall be something more than a mere nominal navy, and in that view I ask the amendment of the Senate striking out this appropriation of $400,000 be concurred in. As we all agree, I believe, this money is to be expended upon an old frame of a ship of an obsolete model, and which when finished at this vast cost will be of no possible use or value to the country in time of war.

As has been already said here on this floor in debate on this bill, this is a vessel without speed in comparison with the naval vessels of the world of to-day. It would have a speed of about twelve knots an hour, perhaps not even so much as that, and it would be incapable of catching a vessel on the high seas that it could whip; and what is still worse, it could not run away from anything on the high seas, and everything could whip it that could catch it. It would be of no value in coast defense. It would be of no value at sea in time of war. It is well known that this is a mere frame-work of a ship called the New York, on the stocks in the Brooklyn navy-yard. It has some wooden ribs, and has some of the skeleton of a great ship; but it has been standing now for a full score of years in that unfinished condition, and no Congress up to this time has deemed it worth while to expend any money toward its completion. All of a sudden, however, it occurs to the House of Representatives of the United States to expend $400,000 in trying to put the ship in a condition that it can be launched upon the waters.

But nobody pretends that it will be of any value except my distinguished friend from New York [Mr. COX] who I see before me, and another distinguished friend from Maine [Mr. DINGLEY] on this side of the House, both of whom agreed in the course of debate some days ago that it would be valuable, possibly, in case we should need another ship to keep a naval school in, tied up somewhere in some harbor of the United States. This is the best and the sole purpose to which the vessel could be applied in case the vessel was ever finished. We have, as my friend from Massachusetts [Mr. RANNEY] suggests to me, sufficient of these old wooden ships well fitted for the business of teaching a naval school in at some point along the coast, without the necessity of embarking in the construction of others for that purpose. This vessel, therefore, is not needed for that.

It is beyond comprehension that we should be able to find a body of men insisting upon completing it. The amount to be expended upon it if completed would build some sort of a vessel valuable at least for coast defense; but this expenditure, in addition to what has been already expended on this vessel, is an absolutely useless expenditure and waste of the public money, and ought not to receive the sanction of this House. It would be simply money thrown away, and resolves itself into a mere matter of squandering the public funds.

Mr. RANDALL. Mr. Speaker, this provision was recommended by the Committee on Appropriations, and was adopted by the House after a full debate. The Senate has non-concurred, and the Committee on Appropriations again recommend non-concurrence in their amendment. I do not think any further debate is necessary; but I will yield two minutes to the gentleman from New York, Mr. COX, and two minutes to the gentleman from New York, Mr. POTTER.

Mr. COX, of New York. Mr. Speaker, my friend from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER] has taken occasion, as he did some time ago in the debate on this subject, to indulge in a spirit of ridicule toward the construction of this ship by calling it an old, obsolete type, or tub, or something of that sort. I wish to say to the House, and to the gentleman from Ohio, that it is nothing of the kind. In the Forty-seventh Congress a report was made by a committee on this very subject; and they reported as to the New York that it should be built. They show that the vessel was commenced in 1865; that it is a vessel of twenty-one guns, with 2,490 tonnage and 4,070 displacement; and as to its present condition and location, it is shown by the tabulated statement accompanying the report as a partly completed vessel or frame on the stocks in New York, built of live-oak, and worthy of being finished. That report, the substance of which I have merely alluded to, was made to the Forty-seventh Congress by that very committee, and I call the attention of the gentleman from Ohio to the fact, that recommended the construction of the steel cruisers for our navy of the future.

And now to show that this is not a matter brought up in a hurry, without debate and without proper consideration or proper examination, I hold in my hand another report, which was quoted by myself the other day in reference to this New York, a report made from the Bureau of Construction and Repair to the Secretary of the Navy for the year ending June 30, 1884, in which it will be found, and I will have it printed, but will now only say to my friend from Ohio that this report by Naval Constructor Wilson strongly recommends the completion of this ship. He says, to quote his own language:

The bureau strongly recommends the completion of the frigate New York at the Brooklyn navy-yard. This vessel has been on the stocks in one of the ship-houses since 1865; and from the fact that she was in frame before work was suspended on her, and was neither ceiled nor planked, the air has freely circulated through her timbers, and to-day they are as hard as bone and probably in better condition than any frame timbers ever put in a ship. If completed with materials that have been preserved by the Thilmany process for preserving ship timber, she would make a useful and most efficient ship of her class for twenty years. Although designed in 1865, she is an exceedingly fine model, and if finished will give us a first-class flag-ship. She can carry a battery as heavy and equally as well arranged for head and stern fire as the new cruiser Chicago has. Her length on the mean load line is 315 feet, extreme breadth of beam 47 feet, depth from lower edge of rabbet of keel to lower port sill on gun deck 25 feet 11 inches. She is designed to have a ship's rig, having 24,000 square feet of sail surface in her ten principal sails. Her displacement at a draught of 18 feet 9 inches forward, and 21 feet 5 inches aft, would be equal to 4,627 tons, and her lowest port sill on the gun deck would be 8 feet above water. The plans for finishing this vessel are in such a condition that they could be completed in a very short time, and the work on her, if authorized, could be pushed to completion and the vessel put afloat within six months from the time it is resumed. To permit of doing this work without having to draw so heavily upon the regular appropriations for construction and repair, the bureau has estimated for $400,000, which it is thought will be sufficient to complete her.

All I have to say, then, is that inasmuch as the skeleton of this vessel is in a first-class condition, and as it has been recommended for completion by competent naval authorities, I hope the good work will go on, and we will furnish machinery in the future by which she may be made useful, if not upon the sea as a belligerent in time of war, at least for other purposes in connection with our naval service.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. POTTER. Mr. Chairman, I have only time to say that in my judgment this ship should be completed. We have won nearly all we have won by our Navy in the past in wooden ships; and to whatever extent the construction of iron ships will be carried there will be always ample room and ample demand for the use of ships like this. She has cost already many hundreds of thousands of dollars, all of which is either to be thrown away or else we must make this appropriation to complete her. She is a new ship and will be one of the best of her kind in the Navy when completed; and, as I have said, there will be always places in the naval service where ships of this character will be needed, both in time of war and in peace.

In war we need transport ships; in war we shall always need ships under circumstances where this ship will serve better than the iron ship. I hope the House will stand by the committee and insist upon the completion of this ship.

Mr. THOMAS. I move to amend by striking out "$400,000" and inserting "$200,000."

Mr. RANDALL. I give notice that after the gentleman from Illinois has been heard I shall move to close debate.

Mr. THOMAS. I offer this amendment in order that I may reply to the statement made by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Cox], the chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs, with reference to the recommendation for the rebuilding of this vessel. I happened to be a member of the Naval Committee at the time this recommendation was made and before it was certainly known we could furnish the materials and build steel vessels in this country. Since then it has been shown we can not only manufacture the steel, but we can manufacture the ships, as the new vessels which will soon be completed demonstrate.

I desire to call the attention of the House to a letter I have received from the Admiral of the Navy. And however little or however much the members of this House may know about naval architecture and ships of war it is safe to say that David D. Porter, Admiral of the Navy, knows something. He has written to me in reference to this vessel, and he says:

An item is introduced appropriating $400,000 to finish a wooden ship—whose hull was modeled twenty years ago, and which will cost $1,000,000 before she is finished.

Why, two shells from this little gunboat would set her on fire and completely destroy her.

I have given the experience of fifty-five years to the naval service.

If Congress thinks proper to go to work and build a wooden vessel upon plans that were prepared twenty years ago, and which, when finished, will scarcely have speed enough to get out of her own way, and will be but a duplicate of the Tennessee, with a vulnerability greater than ships had at the time she was planned, owing to the increase in the size of guns and shell, well and good.

It is said the reason for building her is because we must have something to represent us abroad until iron or steel ships are built, but that would be a poor representation of a nation's progressiveness which would offer a ship to the eyes of the European world that was twenty years behind the time and built of a material that no naval power on the earth would think of using for a fighting ship.

Even the Chinese deride the old wooden ships that we send abroad. Of course, Europeans know how useless they are. What we want for immediate use is something to defend our coasts.

These are the words of wisdom which have fallen from the lips and pen of the Admiral of the Navy, and they meet the concurrence of every man who has looked into this question of the construction of the Navy. These wooden ships have passed out of date. They are no longer useful. Take, for instance, the Michigan, to which I referred on another occasion. She was built forty years ago. She cost about $500,000; and in the forty years she has been afloat she has cost less to keep her in repair than any wooden vessel now afloat has cost for the same purpose in five years; while the Kearsarge, the Powhatan, the Lancaster, and any number of wooden vessels I might mention, and to which the attention of Congress has been called by an executive document frequently read here, have cost for repairs twice, ay, three times as much, as their original cost. To-day if this bill becomes a law they will be stricken from the Navy Register, because even 30 per cent. will not keep them afloat and make them efficient even for surveying vessels.

I hope the amendment of the Senate will be agreed to.

Mr. RANDALL. I hope the House will sustain the recommendation of the committee. I move to close debate on the amendment of the Senate and the pending amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. THOMAS. I withdraw the amendment.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER] to concur in the Senate amendment striking out the lines which have been read.

Mr. KEIFER. I think we may as well have the yeas and nays.

On the question of ordering the yeas and nays there were yeas 48—not one-fifth of the last vote.

Mr. KEIFER. I call for tellers.

Tellers were ordered, 40 members voting therefor.

Mr. RANDALL. I perceive that the demand for yeas and nays can not be beaten, and therefore to save time I am willing that they shall be ordered by consent.

There was no objection.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 100, nays 151, not voting 73; as follows:

So the amendment was non-concurred in.

On motion of Mr. RANDALL the reading of the names was dispensed with.

The following additional pairs were announced from the Clerk's desk:

Mr. JONES, of Arkansas, with Mr. HOOPER, for the remainder of the day.

Mr. RIGGS with Mr. JOHNSON, on this vote.

Mr. DIBBLE with Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania, on this vote.

Mr. SNYDER with Mr. GOFF, on this vote.

Mr. BUDD with Mr. GEORGE, on this vote.

Mr. CLARDY with Mr. BELFORD, on this vote.

Mr. FORAN with Mr. CHALMERS, on this vote.

Mr. BLACKBURN with Mr. BINGHAM, on this vote.

The result of the vote was then announced as above stated.

Mr. RANDALL moved to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was non-concurred in; and also moved to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Amendment numbered 23 was read, as follows:

Strike out the word "thirty" and insert the word "twenty;" so that, if amended, the proviso will read:

"That no part of said sum shall be applied to the repair of engines and machinery of wooden ships where the estimated cost of such repair shall exceed 20 per cent. of the estimated cost." &c.

Mr. RANDALL. The committee recommend concurrence, but there has been an indicative vote of the House this morning in the other direction.

Mr. KEIFER. There is no objection to taking the judgment of the House.

Mr. RANDALL. In obedience to the instructions of the committee I make the motion that the House concur, but I express an individual hope that the House will vote that down.

Mr. LONG. I suggest that that amendment and the next one be taken together.

Mr. KEIFER. Make the motion to non-concur in the twenty-third and twenty-fourth amendments.

Mr. RANDALL. That would be in harmony with the action of the House this morning.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the House will non-concur in these two amendments.

There was no objection; so the amendments were non-concurred in. Amendment numbered 25 was read, as follows:

Strike out "warves" and insert "wharves."

The amendment was concurred in.

Amendment numbered 26 was read, as follows:

Strike out "car-tickets, $200."

The amendment was concurred in.

Mr. KEIFER. Mr. Speaker, I wish to make a suggestion. I think the Committee on Appropriations were unanimous in agreeing that the remainder of the amendments of the Senate should be non-concurred in. I do not mean that all the members of the committee were in favor of non-concurrence in each of these amendments, but they were agreed that that was the best policy.

Mr. RANDALL. In accordance with the suggestion of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER], for which I am indebted to him, I move that the House non-concur in the remaining amendments of the Senate.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the remainder of the Senate amendments to this bill will be non-concurred in.

Mr. COX, of New York, and Mr. TALBOTT. There is objection.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

Mr. TALBOTT. I make no objection except as to amendment 28.

Mr. RANDALL. The Committee on Appropriations, as stated by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER], reached a unanimous conclusion as to the remainder of the Senate amendments to this bill, that they should be non-concurred in. The subjects all relate to each other; the amendments are interwoven, as it were, one with another, and the committee have also, in some degree, discussed the position to be taken by the conferees. I hope the suggestion of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER] will be assented to.

Mr. KEIFER. I want it understood that we do not necessarily disagree with the substance of all these amendments, but we do agree that it is a wise policy to go into conference upon them.

Mr. RANDALL. We all agree as to the increase of the navy, and as to the propriety of making the Secretary of the Navy and the heads of bureaus the responsible parties in the construction of these vessels.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection—

Mr. COX, of New York. Objection has been made.

The SPEAKER. The Chair understood that objection was made only to non-concurrence in the twenty-eighth amendment.

Mr. COX, of New York. I understood the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL] to say that he proposed to non-concur in all the rest of the Senate amendments.

Mr. RANDALL. Yes.

Mr. COX, of New York. Now I should think that gentlemen on both sides might be willing to take the sentiment of the House in relation to these things. Let them make the motion to non-concur and let the House act upon it.

Mr. RANDALL. We do move to non-concur.

Mr. COX, of New York. The amendments are quite different in character. Here is a motion to strike out what the House has already inserted and insert something else.

Mr. RANDALL. That is the Senate amendment, and we propose to non-concur.

Mr. COX, of New York. Then, further along, in another amendment, come the monitors. Now, some gentlemen here do not want to vote for the monitors.

Mr. RANDALL. Well, you are not voting for them by non-concurrence.

Mr. COX, of New York. I know I am not, but I may want to vote for some of these other propositions.

Mr. RANDALL. Well, if you want to you can vote for the cruisers.

The SPEAKER. The amendments must be acted upon separately unless unanimous consent is given to act upon them all together. Objection is made, and the Clerk will read the next amendment.

Amendment numbered 27 was read, as follows:

Strike out the words "To complete the construction of the steel cruiser of not less than 5,000 nor more than 6,000 tons displacement, and the armament therefor, authorized by act of Congress August 5, 1882, $1,780,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary: Provided, The Secretary of the Navy shall approve of the construction of said vessel."

Mr. RANDALL. I move the previous question on the motion to non-concur in that amendment.

The amendment was non-concurred in.

Amendment numbered 28 was read, as follows:

Insert:

"To enable the President to strengthen the naval establishment of the United States by additional vessels of the best and most modern design, having the highest attainable speed, the sum of $1,895,000 is hereby appropriated, to be expended as follows and under the following limitations:

"For the construction of two cruisers of not less than 3,000 nor more than 5,000 tons displacement, costing, exclusive of armament, not more than $1,100,000 each;

one heavily armed gunboat of about 1,600 tons displacement, costing, exclusive of armament, not more than $520,000; and one light gunboat of about 800 tons displacement, costing, exclusive of armament, not more than $275,000; and authority is hereby given for the construction of said four vessels, at not exceeding the total cost for each above specified, in accordance with such final plan as may be determined upon, after a revision and reconsideration of all designs which have been heretofore made, and in the manner and conformity to the conditions and limitations provided for the construction of the new cruisers in the acts of August 5, 1882, and of March 3, 1883."

Mr. RANDALL. Under instruction of the Committee on Appropriations—I believe without dissent—I move non-concurrence.

Mr. TALBOTT. I move to concur with an amendment to insert the word "steel" between "two" and "cruisers;" so as to read "two steel cruisers."

Mr. RANDALL. I ask the previous question on my motion and on the amendment.

Mr. COX, of New York. Mr. Speaker, with the permission of my friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL], I desire to state that the Committee on Naval Affairs, of which I am chairman, favor, I believe almost unanimously, some attempt of this kind to increase our navy. We are not wedded to wooden vessels, although I voted for one of them. We are perfectly content with the increase of steel cruisers of the description embraced in this amendment of the Senate. I should think, as I have already said, that my friend from Pennsylvania and the gentleman who may be on the conference committee would be glad to have an expression of the opinion of the House upon this matter.

Mr. RANDALL. Both sides of the House, as represented upon the Committee on Appropriations, favor an increase of the navy, and have joined in recommending non-concurrence, with a view to reaching a conclusion which will give us an increase of the navy.

Mr. COX, of New York. Is not the gentleman from Pennsylvania opposed to this 20 per cent. amendment?

Mr. RANDALL. I am not opposed to the object of the Senate amendment—the increase of the navy, but I think that the Committee on Appropriations, after a full discussion of this subject, will indicate a way in which it can be better and more expeditiously done and place the responsibility for the construction of the ships upon the Secretary of the Navy and the heads of the respective bureaus.

Mr. COX, of New York. That is not included in this amendment.

Mr. RANDALL. Well, we are going to try to reach it by non-concurrence.

Mr. COX, of New York. By a conference?

Mr. RANDALL. Yes, sir. I think I have stated fairly the position of gentlemen on both sides of the House.

Mr. KEIFER. As I have already stated, while we favor non-concurrence, we are in favor of this proposition to construct new cruisers.

Mr. RANDALL. I think I have stated the position of the other side of the House on this question as fairly and fully as that of gentlemen on this side.

Mr. TALBOTT. Mr. Speaker, have I any time for debate at all on this question?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RANDALL] moves to close debate.

Mr. RANDALL. I want to test the wish of the House as to ordering the previous question.

Mr. TALBOTT. I think we may reach an agreement here among ourselves in the House without losing time by a vote.

The SPEAKER. The question is upon the motion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania to close debate.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. RANDALL moved to reconsider the vote just taken; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. COX, of New York. After the statement made by the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, I trust that my friend from Maryland [Mr. TALBOTT] will withdraw his amendment and let the conference committee do all they can to initiate this movement.

Mr. RANDALL. That is what we are all striving for on both sides of the House.

Mr. TALBOTT. Well, Mr. Speaker, I desire to say one word. The Committee on Naval Affairs, who ought properly to have charge of such matters, believe that this is good legislation contained in this amendment.

Mr. RANDALL. Very well; the recommendation of the Committee on Naval Affairs shall have full consideration in the conference.

The SPEAKER. The first question is upon the amendment of the gentleman from Maryland.

Mr. TALBOTT. I withdraw it.

Mr. RANDALL. As I understand, objection will now be withdrawn to the proposition of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. KEIFER].

Mr. KEIFER. I renew my proposition to non-concur in all the remaining amendments.

The SPEAKER. That can be done only by unanimous consent.

Mr. RANDALL. There is no objection now.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the remaining amendments of the Senate will be considered as non-concurred in. The Chair hears no objection, and it is so ordered.

Mr. RANDALL. I now move to reconsider the action of the House on these various amendments, and also move that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. BELFORD. I rise to a question of order. The disorder is so great that gentlemen in this part of the Hall have been unable to hear a single remark of the gentleman from Pennsylvania or other gentlemen touching these appropriations.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the point of order well taken. The Chair has endeavored by all the means in his power to preserve order. There is so much conversation on the floor and in the rear of the seats that it is impossible to transact the public business. The Sergeant-at-Arms will request gentlemen to take their seats and cease conversation.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. BENNETT. I rise to a question of privilege, and call up the contested-election case of Frederick vs. Wilson, from the State of Iowa.

Mr. MILLS. I hope the gentleman from North Carolina will yield a moment to allow me to offer a resolution.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BENNETT] calls up for consideration the contested-election case of Frederick vs. Wilson.

Mr. VALENTINE. On that I raise the question of consideration.

Mr. MILLS. I ask the gentleman to allow me a moment to introduce a resolution which will cause no debate.

Mr. TURNER, of Kentucky. I call for the regular order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky on the right demands the regular order.

PRIVILEGES OF REPRESENTATIVES IN INAUGURATION CEREMONIES.

Mr. MILLS. I move to suspend the rules and pass this resolution—

Mr. SPRINGER. I believe there is no objection to this matter of the gentleman from Texas.

The SPEAKER. There is objection.

Mr. SPRINGER. It relates to the inauguration ceremonies.

The SPEAKER. The resolution of the gentleman from Texas will be read, after which the Chair will ask for objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives, That the committee appointed to arrange the inaugural ceremonies for the 4th instant having declined to give to the Representatives in Congress their proper place, we will decline to take any part in said ceremonies at the Capitol.

Mr. MILLS. I move to suspend the rules and pass this resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of this resolution?

Mr. KEIFER. Let it be read again.

The SPEAKER. The resolution will be read again, and the Chair asks gentlemen to preserve order.

The resolution was again read.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of this resolution?

Mr. HAMMOND. I object.

Mr. MILLS. I move to suspend the rules and pass this resolution. It is a resolution which reflects the wishes of a large number of gentlemen on this floor.

Mr. RANDALL (to Mr. MILLS). Call the previous question.

Mr. MILLS. I move to suspend the rules. No previous question is necessary. The resolution affects the dignity of the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas moved that the rules be suspended. That can only be done by consent of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BENNETT] who holds the floor to call up an election case.

Mr. MILLS. I ask the gentleman from North Carolina to yield to me, as this question which I present affects the dignity of the House of Representatives.

Mr. SPRINGER. I do not see the necessity of taking up the time of the House in a matter of this character.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has already stated that the motion to suspend the rules can not be submitted without the consent of the gentleman from North Carolina, who has the floor on a contested-election case.

Mr. MILLS. I appeal to the gentleman from North Carolina to yield to me the floor.

Mr. BENNETT. I will yield the floor to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. MILLS. I will demand the previous question.

The SPEAKER. Then the gentleman from Texas moves to suspend the rules and adopt the resolution.

Mr. WILLIS. I understand the gentleman from Texas moves the adoption of the resolution, and on that motion demands the previous question.

The SPEAKER. Objection has been made to the introduction of the resolution, and the gentleman from Texas has moved to suspend the rules and adopt it.

Mr. HAMMOND. I demand a second under the rule.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will appoint as tellers the gentleman from Georgia, Mr. HAMMOND, and the gentleman from Texas, Mr. MILLS.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. NEECE, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled the bill (S. 84) to authorize the Secretary of the Interior to ascertain the amounts due to citizens of the United States for supplies furnished to the Sioux or Dakota Indians of Minnesota subsequent to August, 1860, and prior to the massacre of August, 1862, and providing for the payment thereof; when the Speaker signed the same.

PRIVILEGE OF THE HOUSE—INAUGURAL CEREMONIES.

The House divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 133, noes 8.

So the motion to suspend the rules was seconded.

The SPEAKER. Under the rule of the House thirty minutes are allowed for debate, fifteen minutes on each side.

Mr. MILLS. I demand the previous question on the adoption of the resolution. We do not want debate. It affects the dignity of this House.

The SPEAKER. Then if no debate is desired the question will be on the motion to suspend the rules and adopt the resolution.

Mr. HAMMOND. What becomes of the fifteen minutes of debate on either side?

The SPEAKER. The Chair announced there were thirty minutes allowed for debate, fifteen minutes in support of the motion and fifteen minutes against it. It was then stated on the floor that no debate was asked by the gentleman from Texas. Does the gentleman from Georgia desire to debate it? [Cries of "Vote!" "Vote!"]

Mr. HAMMOND. I ask to debate it.

The SPEAKER. Then the gentleman is entitled, under the rules of the House, to fifteen minutes, and will proceed.

Mr. HAMMOND. Mr. Speaker, I regret very much that I am so hoarse that it will be very difficult for me to be heard. But I feel that we are about to do, under passion, a very unseemly thing. On the 4th of March a President of the United States is to be inaugurated. It is usual that the House of Representatives shall be present with the Senators and other public officials to witness that great event. And now we are about to pass, without debate, and as I understand it, in childish pique, a resolution that we will decline to be present on that important occasion because it is charged that somebody has offered us a slight. I deny it. The Senate had no such intention. If this House believes it had, there is a dignified way of asserting and maintaining the dignity of this body. I say that a resolution that declares that, because we sit behind the other gentlemen in the Senate Chamber, therefore we will not sit there at all, is puerile. I had the pleasure of a like seat when Garfield was inaugurated. The House sat there and no man dreamed that he was insulted by his location.

Whence comes this sudden notion of insult to the House. Why is it wrong that the members of the House of Representatives should sit in the rear? There will be the Supreme Court and the diplomatic corps and the Senate and all the rest in the Senate Chamber. Some must sit behind. I maintain that true dignity consists in taking the seat that is offered; for they are all equally honorable and of equal importance. It is childish to quarrel about location in that small assembly hall.

I speak earnestly because I feel earnestly. Instead of maintaining its dignity at this moment the House is in danger of losing its dignity. If there has been any slight, it has been entirely unintentional. The Senate never intended to insult us or in any way to inflict upon us a slight of any sort.

Will any gentleman tell me wherein this inauguration differs from any other? Will any gentleman tell me it is any more dishonorable on the 4th of March to sit behind them than it was to sit behind them when we attended the Washington Monument ceremonies?

Mr. BELFORD. If the gentleman will allow me I will tell him.

Mr. HAMMOND. I yield for five minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. BELFORD. You ask questions and then you decline to have them answered.

Mr. YOUNG. I shall hardly require that much time, Mr. Speaker, to enter my earnest protest against this hasty and inconsiderate action. It seems to me that we owe it to ourselves and we owe it to the occasion to conduct ourselves with somewhat more of dignity.

Mr. VALENTINE. I ask the House be called to order and that members be requested to take their seats. It is impossible to hear what is going on.

The SPEAKER. Members can hear much better in their seats than when crowded in the area in front of the reporters' desk.

Mr. YOUNG. It may be true, Mr. Speaker, that the Senate has not been quite so considerate in this matter as it ought to have been. It may be they have shown some discourtesy to the House. Admitting all that to be true, does it furnish any justification to the House to show equal if not greater discourtesy to the President of the United States by refusing to be present when he is inaugurated? Perhaps it would have been better, and I think myself it would have been, if the Senate had conferred with the House before arranging this programme for the inauguration. Possibly it was an oversight. I can not think any discourtesy or indignity was intended on the part of the Senate toward the House of Representatives. Whether that is so or not, we owe it to ourselves, it seems to me, to take the usual part the House of Representatives has always taken on occasions of this sort.

It would present a most unseemly spectacle to the country if one branch of the legislative department of this Government, and the largest branch, too, should absent itself altogether, and under a resolution favorably adopted, when the President recently elected by the people is about to be inaugurated. I hope, sir, the House will calmly and dispassionately consider this matter before they adopt the resolution offered by the gentleman from Texas. I have nothing more to say.

Mr. HAMMOND. How much time have I remaining?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has eight minutes.

Mr. HAMMOND. I yield two minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Cox].

Mr. COX, of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, this is an unusual resolution which is proposed at this time for our adoption in connection with the inauguration ceremonies about to take place. If I am correctly informed, the method now proposed by the committee on arrangements is the method that has been uniformly followed in similar ceremonies heretofore, and if I am mistaken in that respect I shall be glad to stand corrected by any gentleman on the floor.

I am perfectly satisfied that no discourtesy is intended to the House on the part of the Senate, and that the gentlemen who made the arrangements, providing the order of proceeding on that day, intended no discourtesy. We are acting to-day in the eyes of this country and of the world; and what a spectacle would we present, not only to our own people but to foreign nations, if one body of the great national Legislature of America should stand upon a mere matter of courtesy or form, and absent itself from this great inaugural ceremony to which the people of the whole country are invited? It seems to me, therefore, before any action is taken such as this resolution contemplates, that it would be at least courtesy to the Senate to signify our disapproval in another manner. I think myself we are making a great deal about a matter which does not justify any such course; and before this body commits itself to the action suggested by this resolution I trust it will deliberate upon the question, and deliberate gravely and dispassionately and not hastily and inconsiderately.

This is too grave a question to be disposed of in this hasty manner; and I trust we will consider the spectacle presented, as I have said, to our own people as well as to the civilized world—that the more numerous branch of the national Legislature by resolution propose to absent themselves altogether, taking no part in the inauguration ceremonies of the President because of an imaginary slight or discourtesy. It will not add to the dignity of this House to adopt such a resolution. It is our right as the Representatives of the people who send us here to be present, and they expect us to be present, and in my judgment nothing but a very grave and momentous occasion should prevent our attendance.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HAMMOND. I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Delaware [Mr. LORE].

Mr. LORE. Mr. Speaker, my first impression was in favor of adopting the resolution which has been read, but a moment's reflection convinces me that it is unwise. If the Senate or the committee on arrangements had deliberately intended this as a discourtesy, or as a slight upon us, then, sir, I feel it would be unworthy of this House to notice it. If on the contrary it did not so intend it, and I am persuaded and advised that such is the fact, it is equally beneath the dignity of this House to give it further consideration. My own judgment is clear that it would be but child's play for the House of Representatives of the United States to take such notice of the action of this committee, whether it is intentional or unintentional, as would place us in an unfavorable and ridiculous attitude before the country.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HAMMOND. I now yield one minute to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KELLEY].

Mr. KELLEY. Mr. Speaker, I think one minute will suffice for me to say that this programme is no departure from precedents. It can have nothing offensive as a purpose. It will be the sixth inaugural ceremony that I have attended consecutively; and I have never seen one in which, under a programme identical with the one now submitted, the members of the House could all or any great part of the House get into the Hall of the Senate. I think it would be better if the Senate and the House should take the rear and leave the distinguished guests to the body of the Hall; but such has not been the case, and precedents are all in harmony with the programme now submitted to the House. I think it would dishonor this House in refusing to attend the ceremonies upon such an apparent slight.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. HAMMOND. I think the House has now had time to think, and if so, I know it is ready to vote. I have no intention myself of allowing a Republican Senate, if it wishes to keep me away from seeing Grover Cleveland inaugurated, to perform that act. It is the first chance I have ever had to see a Democrat inaugurated, and I intend to see it. [Applause.] I do not intend that any supposed insult upon the dignity of this body shall keep me from my proper place as one of the Representatives of the people to witness the inauguration of that man in whose hands they have committed administration for the next four years. [Applause.] And I trust that when the House comes to vote it will change its front as solidly as under quick excitement it voted the other way ten minutes ago.

Mr. MILLS. I yield five minutes to my colleague from Texas [Mr. REAGAN].

Mr. HAMMOND. I submit after the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MILLS] had stated there would be no debate in favor of the proposition that there can be none.

Mr. MILLS. That proposition is absolutely ridiculous.

The SPEAKER. The Chair of course can not prevent under the rules of the House fifteen minutes being occupied in support of the proposition.

Mr. HAMMOND. I am glad, then, the gentleman thinks it will take fifteen minutes to make the House do wrong.

Mr. MILLS. I hope the gentleman will sit down and contain himself for the balance of the day. I yield five minutes to my colleague [Mr. REAGAN].

Mr. REAGAN. The President of the United States is to be inaugurated and the two Houses of Congress are to adopt the usual courtesies and regulations for the witnessing of that inauguration. The two Houses make up the Congress of the United States. It is not composed of a Senate alone. Each House is entitled to be respected and to have its voice in making the appropriate arrangements and to occupy its proper position in the ceremonies connected with the inauguration. The Representatives of the American people should not permit the Senatorial branch to take absolute, unqualified control of the inauguration of the President, ignoring the people's Representatives, and after they have accommodated themselves on the right of the President who is to be inaugurated, and placed diplomats, judges, heads of Departments, bureau officers, military officers, and everybody else in the second place of honor, condescending to place the three hundred and twenty-five Representatives of the American people in the last place of honor instead of consulting them and permitting them to occupy the place that common right and common decency and courtesy demand for them.

Mr. GLASCOCK. Will the gentleman from Texas allow me to ask him a question?

Mr. REAGAN. I have not time; but I will hear the gentleman's question.

Mr. GLASCOCK. I want to ask the gentleman this question: At the time the ceremonies will take place what Congress will be in existence?

Mr. REAGAN. Until 12 o'clock of that day this House is in existence, and a number of Senators will have no longer tenure than the whole of the House; and it is the Congress of the United States that ought to make arrangements for the inauguration of the President according to custom and precedent. It is not for a single body of this Congress to dictate to the other co-ordinate branch of Congress and to assign it a subordinate and inferior position. If that is done it can not be otherwise than an intentional and deliberate discourtesy on the part of the Senate. I feel that the Representatives of the people will degrade and dishonor themselves if they do not resent that discourtesy; and that we could not answer to our constituents any more than we could answer to future Houses of Representatives if we permit this degradation.

I regret, Mr. Speaker, that any such question should have arisen. But common courtesy and the rules of propriety demanded that there should have been a joint committee of the two Houses of Congress to have made these regulations, and not that one House should set itself above everything else. I ask by what authority, by what law, by what custom does it assume this new prerogative of absolutely controlling the inauguration of the President?

They go further, and provide that if it is an inclement day the President shall be inaugurated in the Senate Chamber instead of in the Representatives' Hall, before the Representatives of the people, and where a larger number of the people of the country at large can be witnesses of that ceremony. It seems to be a close corporation, arranging everything to suit itself and manifesting deliberate discourtesy to the House, a discourtesy which if not resented ought to degrade and dishonor the men who submit to it.

Mr. MILLS. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. JOHN S. WISE].

Mr. JOHN S. WISE. I rise in support of this motion because I look upon this as simply one of the many slight outcroppings of a growing evidence of an assumed superiority supposed to exist in the Senate of the United States. I believe that the theory of this Government is that it consists of three departments—legislative, executive, and judicial. I see in the programme which is announced here an arrangement whereby the executive department is represented, where the judicial department follows, where the Senate assumes to represent the legislative department of this Government, and allows us, the poor House of Representatives, to follow along as the little dog under the wagon of the entertainment. [Laughter.]

Now, sir, I am not willing to accept that back seat and be quiet. I do not approach this subject from any personal standpoint, because my own time here is too short to fight for any particular precedence. But I do feel that it involves a question of representative dignity in the House of Representatives that we have no right to ignore or to pass over.

This is not an isolated example of the assumed superiority of the Senate of the United States, a superiority which they are inclined to make grow and grow, which exhibits itself in the little social courtesies of the Capitol, which year by year expands so that we, the Representatives of the people, coming directly from the people, and having more right to represent the people than its intermediaries, come to ask ourselves, "On what rich meat have these our Cæsars fed?"

I say I would like to know by what process of reasoning not only Senators but Senators-elect are given five tickets apiece to this entertainment when Representatives have two, and Representatives-elect, who were elected at the same time that Grover Cleveland was made President of the United States, are ordered to stand out in the cold while the Senate takes the first place. I had rather be a doorkeeper in the House of Representatives than a prince in such a palace of Senators. I care not what may be the result of this resolution, but I am glad of an opportunity here and now to enter an emphatic protest on behalf of the Representatives of the people against these gradual encroachments of this would-be aristocratic body, the Senate of the United States.

It is our right to be there as a co-ordinate body. It is our right to be there as their equals in all respects. I believe that the principle announced by this resolution is right, and that if we can not be there as co-ordinates and equals, the most proper thing for us is not to go at all.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. Go as individuals.

Mr. JOHN S. WISE. Yes; go as individuals. I, too, like the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HAMMOND], desire to see this inauguration. He wants to see it because it is the first inauguration of a Democratic President he has seen for a long time. I want to see it because I think it entirely likely that this is the last one I shall have an opportunity of seeing for a long time. [Laughter.]

Mr. HENLEY. I am sorry to hear that the gentleman is not coming to Washington again.

Mr. YOUNG. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. YOUNG. I desire to be informed if it is in order at this time to offer a substitute for the pending resolution.

The SPEAKER. Of course not. This is a proposition to suspend the rules.

Mr. MILLS. Is my time exhausted, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. MILLS] has six minutes of his time remaining.

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, in the outset of the remarks which I shall submit for the consideration of the House, I feel that I ought to make a very low bow to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HAMMOND] for the magisterial manner in which he came down and paraded himself in the arena and lectured this great body, the Representatives of fifty millions, ay, sixty millions of people, for their puerility and childishness in proposing to maintain the dignity and the equal rank of the Representatives of the people in the great and solemn transaction of the inauguration of a republican-democratic President of the United States. I use those terms in their large sense, not in their partisan sense.

I use the expression by way of contrast with the idea of a "scepter," which the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HAMMOND] spoke of a while ago. Sir, it has always been an object of the chiefest concern among the people of England to maintain the dignity of the House of Commons, which they in their affection have characterized as "the breath of the English people." They have never been willing to accept any affront either from kings or lords, and they have maintained that great representative body in all its power and prestige by resisting every attempt to humble it or to make it inferior, either in the law-making power of Great Britain or in anything else pertaining to its character and history. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KELLEY] stated a moment ago that all the precedents were in accord with the idea of the House of Representatives marching at the rear as is proposed in this instance. I have been able to find but one such precedent, and that was in 1877 when the Senate took one side and the House of Representatives the other.

We are told, sir, and it is an old story which we all understand, that the Senate and the House of Representatives are co-ordinate branches of the legislative department of this Government, equal in dignity, equal in authority, equal in importance; but now apologists rise upon this floor and tell us that we ought not to offend against propriety by taking this proposed action when we are assigned to a place in the rear, while the Senate and the heads of Departments and the diplomatic corps are given a superior position. I agree with the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HAMMOND] and other gentlemen here, that we are going to see the inauguration of the President, but we are not going at the tail end of the procession with the boot-blacks; we are not going there as Representatives of the people to take a place in the rear.

Let us go there, but let us occupy the exalted position that all the American people occupy. Let us take our places with our constituents and look on with them at the inauguration of our President. [Applause.] He is our President; he is the President of all parties; he is the President of the people of the United States. He takes the oath of office, not in the Senate, not in the House of Representatives, but before the eyes of the assembled multitude of his fellow-citizens, and there we as individuals, as his fellow-citizens, will go to see him inaugurated as our Chief Magistrate. But, sir, we owe it to the dignity of this House, we owe it to the people whom we represent, not to accept for this great representative body the inferior station which the Senate has assigned to us, and I trust that we will so declare by this vote to-day.

Mr. HUTCHINS. While agreeing with much that has been said on both sides of the House, I move to lay the resolution on the table.

Mr. MILLS. That can not be done.

Mr. HAMMOND. Mr. Speaker, I believe I have a minute and a half remaining.

The SPEAKER. That is the fact.

Mr. HAMMOND. I yield that time to my colleague [Mr. BLOUNT].

Mr. MILLS. How much time have I?

The SPEAKER. One minute.

Mr. BLOUNT. Mr. Speaker, like my colleague from Georgia [Mr. HAMMOND] I am apprehensive that in this matter we are acting under the impulse of temper and under a misunderstanding of the facts. The venerable gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KELLEY] rises in his place and tells this House that he has witnessed the inauguration of six Presidents of the United States, and that the position assigned to the members of the House of Representatives under this programme is in accord with what he has witnessed on those several occasions.

Mr. REAGAN. Will the gentleman allow me—

Mr. BLOUNT. I will not allow the gentleman to interrupt me. I trust that I may use this minute and a half as I see fit.

Mr. REAGAN. The gentleman ought not to flinch at a fact.

Mr. BLOUNT. I do not "flinch at a fact." The gentleman from Texas has misstated the facts.

Mr. REAGAN. I have not.

Mr. BLOUNT. I will refer to the printed order of arrangements, which every gentleman has at his desk. It distinctly states in the first place that the diplomatic corps "will occupy seats on the right of the Chair," that is, of the President of the Senate; and then after giving the position of ex-Presidents, ex-Vice-Presidents, and Justices of the Supreme Court on the right of the Chair, and heads of executive departments, the retired General of the Army, &c., on the left of the Chair, governors and ex-governors of States, commissioners of the District of Columbia, &c., east of the main entrance, the programme states that "members and members-elect of the House of Representatives will occupy seats on the right of the Chair, next to the diplomatic corps."

This is the arrangement in the Senate Chamber; and the gentleman from Pennsylvania tells us that it has been uniformly the arrangement heretofore. I trust, sir, that as the people of this country, and especially the democratic people of this country, are gathering here to witness this inauguration, we shall not do what my friend and colleague has characterized as a puerile thing.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. MILLS. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BLOUNT] refers to the arrangement in the Senate Chamber. When the Senate gets into its position, and when the invited guests who come in before the House of Representatives all get their places, the members of this House can stand in the corridors, as they have done heretofore. I was speaking of the position on the platform; and in relation to this I will read from the order of arrangements that the gentleman may understand it:

The Senators take their position on the right. Why? Because it is the first post of honor. Why, then, should not the House of Representatives take the place immediately on the left? But that is given to the diplomatic corps.

The diplomatic corps will occupy the seats on the left of the President. Heads of Departments, the retired General of the Army, the Lieutenant-General of the Army, the Admiral of the Navy, and the officers of the Army and Navy who, by name, have received the thanks of Congress, governors and ex-governors of States, and ex-members of the Senate, will take seats west of the President.

The Members and Member-elect of the House will occupy seats reserved for them in the rear of the above.

That is the position of the House of Representatives; and it means to place the military in advance of the civil branch of this Government, which has never been done before.

[Here the hammer fell.]

Mr. FINDLAY. I call for the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The question is upon the motion made by the gentleman from Texas to suspend the rules and pass the resolution, on which the yeas and nays are demanded.

Mr. McMILLIN. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Would not a substitute be in order by unanimous consent?

The SPEAKER. Anything can be done by unanimous consent.

Mr. FINDLAY. I object. Let us have the yeas and nays. I hope we shall vote down this frivolous and foolish resolution.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. EATON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to make an inquiry. I am aware that this resolution is not amendable; but I desire to appeal to the good sense of the members all over the House—

Mr. BLOUNT. Debate is not in order.

Mr. EATON. Can we not lay this motion on the table and let a committee be appointed by the Chair to confer with the Senate on this subject?

The SPEAKER. That can only be done by unanimous consent.

Mr. EATON. I hope there will be unanimous consent.

Many MEMBERS. Regular order.

The SPEAKER. Objection is made.

Mr. YOUNG. I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be again read. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

The SPEAKER. The regular order is demanded on all sides of the House; but if there be no objection the resolution will be again read; and the Chair asks gentlemen to stop conversation while this is being done.

The Clerk again read the resolution.

The SPEAKER. On the motion to suspend the rules and adopt this resolution the yeas and nays have been ordered. The Clerk will call the roll.

Managers on the part of the Senate.

The statement accompanying the report is as follows:

The managers on the part of the House of the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 6558) "to provide for the sale of the Sac and Fox Indian reservation in the States of Nebraska and Kansas, and for other purposes," submit the following in explanation of the action of the conference committee as submitted in the accompanying report:

The amendments made by the Senate do not change any of the provisions of the bill (H. R. 6558) except to reduce the amount authorized to be expended by the Secretary of the Interior from thirty thousand to ten thousand dollars, and extends the provisions of the bill to the Iowa tribe of Indians and reservation, which has already been recommended by the Committee on Indian Affairs and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs. These Indians live together and ask for this legislation.

OLIN WELLBORN,
B. W. PERKINS,
T. G. SKINNER,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. PERKINS. I move that the House concur in the report of the committee of conference.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. PERKINS moved to reconsider the vote by which the report was concurred in; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter matter motion was agreed to.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

The SPEAKER. The question is, Will the House now proceed to the consideration of the contested-election case of Frederick vs. Wilson, from the State of Iowa?

Mr. VALENTINE. I would like to ask unanimous consent to see if it is not possible that an arrangement can be made for taking up these election cases without any delay, and considering them in the regular order in which they were reported. In the first place I wish to state that there is no disposition on the part of the minority of the Elections Committee to stand out or make any fight against the consideration of the cases in their order. There are four cases reported from the Elections Committee. Some have been here for ten months and some not more than ten days. We are ready to proceed with the consideration of these cases in the order in which they were reported by the committee to the House, provided that fair consideration and fair debate be given to them, and that we proceed at once in that manner. If the chairman of the committee then will inform the minority of the committee that he will call up the cases in their order as they are now before the House, there will be no objection on this side.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I desire to say that it is my intention to call up for consideration the report on the Post-Office bill.

Mr. HERR. Why don't you call it up now?

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I am not prepared to call it up just now, but give notice that even if this election case is gone into I shall call it up as soon as it is ready.

The SPEAKER. The notice is unnecessary, since the conference report is a privileged matter and can be called up at any time.

Mr. BENNETT. In answer to the question put by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. VALENTINE] I wish to say—

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Let me give notice to the House—

Mr. BENNETT. I can not yield now.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. I do not propose to interfere with you, but wish to make a suggestion—

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina is recognized on a subject before the House.

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Allow me a single word. I will not interfere with the gentleman's motion.

Mr. BENNETT. Not a word now.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman declines to be interrupted.

Mr. WASHBURN. Regular order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota demands the regular order, which is equivalent to an objection.

The question is, Will the House now proceed to the consideration of the election case?

The question was taken; and on a division there were—ayes 106, noes 0.

Mr. VALENTINE. No quorum.

The SPEAKER. The point of order being made that no quorum has voted, the Chair will appoint tellers.

Mr. VALENTINE and Mr. BENNETT were appointed tellers.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 134, noes 0.

Mr. VALENTINE. No quorum.

Mr. SPRINGER. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. ADAMS, of New York, addressed the Chair. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. ADAMS, of New York. I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ADAMS, of New York. I desire to know if it will be in order after this contested-election case is over to bring up for consideration and disposal the bankruptcy bill.

The SPEAKER. That can only be done by unanimous consent or by a motion to suspend the rules; and that is not in order when any other matter of higher privilege is before the House.

Mr. BENNETT. If in order, I would like to answer the question put by the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. VALENTINE].

The SPEAKER. That may be done by unanimous consent.

Mr. ADAMS, of New York. I object.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 164, nays 4, not voting 156; as follows:

So the House agreed to consider the contested-election case of Fredrick vs. Wilson.

Mr. HENLEY. I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the names of members voting.

Mr. ANDERSON. I object.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Mr. GIBSON with Mr. MCCORMICK, for the rest of the day.

Mr. AIKEN with Mr. KELLEY, for the rest of the day.

Mr. DOCKERY with Mr. EZRA B. TAYLOR, on the Frederick-Wilson election case.

Mr. MUTCHLER with Mr. BRUMM, on the Frederick-Wilson election case.

Mr. MILLER, of Pennsylvania, with Mr. DAVIS, of Missouri, on the Frederick-Wilson election case.

Mr. MUTCHLER. I am paired with the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. BRUMM, but have voted as I understand Mr. BRUMM is present.

Mr. BLANCHARD. I voted to make a quorum although paired. Understanding that more than a quorum has voted, I withdraw my vote.

The result of the vote was then announced as above stated.

Mr. ADAMS, of New York. I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. ANDERSON. I move to adjourn.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BENNETT] has the floor.

Mr. REED, of Maine. The gentleman from New York [Mr. ADAMS] stood ready to move as soon as the vote should be announced that the House do now adjourn, and made that motion.

The SPEAKER. But the gentleman from North Carolina having the election case in charge, which the House has just agreed to consider, addressed the Chair and was recognized.

Mr. REED, of Maine. A motion to adjourn after a vote of that kind is always in order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair did not hear the gentleman from New York make the motion before the gentleman from North Carolina was recognized. The gentleman from North Carolina, in fact, addressed the Chair before the result was announced.

Mr. REED, of Maine. The gentleman from New York stood there in front of the Chair and sought recognition.

The SPEAKER. But the gentleman from North Carolina was on the floor and addressed the Chair.

Mr. REED, of Maine. After such a vote as has just been taken a motion to adjourn is always in order when a gentleman takes the floor and makes that motion immediately on the announcement of the vote.

The SPEAKER. If the gentleman from New York states that he made the motion before the Chair recognized the gentleman from North Carolina, the Chair, as he always does, will accept the gentleman's statement.

Mr. ADAMS, of New York. I do not make that statement.

Mr. REED, of Maine. The gentleman from Kansas, Mr. ANDERSON, also made the motion.

Mr. ANDERSON. I made that motion.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine now claims that another gentleman made the motion to adjourn.

Mr. REED, of Maine. I do. The gentleman from Kansas moved to adjourn.

The SPEAKER. The Chair did not hear either of the gentlemen make the motion to adjourn till after the gentleman from North Carolina had been recognized. But if the gentleman from Kansas states he made the motion to adjourn before the gentleman from North Carolina took the floor and was recognized, the Chair will entertain his motion.

Mr. ANDERSON. I can not state that. I made the motion as quickly as I could; but in the confusion I can not say whether I made it before the gentleman from North Carolina was recognized or not. Gentlemen standing around me say I did.

The SPEAKER. There is so much confusion on the floor that it is impossible to transact business. If gentlemen will resume their seats the Chair will endeavor to see that the public business is transacted in an orderly manner. The House will be in order.

The Chair will state that the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BENNETT] rose in his place and addressed the Chair before the result was announced, but the Chair did not then recognize the gentleman. Immediately upon the announcement of the result the gentleman from North Carolina again addressed the Chair, and the Chair recognized him, not having heard any motion made before that time.

Mr. VALENTINE. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say that I heard the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ANDERSON] make his motion to adjourn before the gentleman from North Carolina was recognized.

The SPEAKER. But the gentleman from Kansas himself declines to state that he made that motion before the gentleman from North Carolina was recognized.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, all that I desire to state is this: I did make the motion as promptly as I could make it, but in the confusion I could not hear whether the gentleman from North Carolina was recognized at that time or not.

The SPEAKER. The Chair so understands the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ANDERSON].

Mr. ANDERSON. Gentlemen standing around me say my motion was in time.

The SPEAKER. But other gentlemen say it was not, and the Chair, having recognized the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BENNETT], can not decide that question.

Mr. REED, of Maine. Mr. Speaker, I desire to make a statement.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maine is recognized to make a statement.

Mr. REED, of Maine. I presume that the rule of parliamentary law is very plain and simple. It is not a race on the part of the Speaker or on the part of a member as to recognition. It is not for the Speaker to turn toward a member and recognize him and thereby prevent a motion to adjourn. I am sure that would not be the view of the present occupant of the chair. The motion to adjourn is a privileged motion which takes precedence of recognition, and if a gentleman was standing on the floor and making every effort to be recognized to make that motion, and the Chair turned to another gentleman and recognized him, and then the gentleman who was first trying to get recognition for the purpose of making a motion to adjourn should make that motion, the Chair would be bound to recognize him and to put the motion.

The SPEAKER. The Chair, of course, would not endeavor to give one gentleman an advantage over another on the floor. When the Chair announced the result he had already turned toward the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BENNETT], because that gentleman was in charge of this matter and had addressed the Chair. The Chair thereupon recognized him. Afterward it was claimed that the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ANDERSON] had made a motion to adjourn before the recognition of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BENNETT].

Mr. REED, of Maine. But if another gentleman had previously moved to adjourn before the gentleman from North Carolina— [Cries of "Regular order!"]

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BENNETT], under the statements made by the two gentlemen who claim to have made motions, is entitled to the floor. [Renewed cries of "Regular order!"]

CONTESTED ELECTION—FREDERICK VS. WILSON.

Mr. BENNETT. Mr. Speaker, the returning board of the State of Iowa—

Mr. RANNEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. RANNEY. The resolution in this case has not been read.

A MEMBER. Are we not entitled to have the report read?

Mr. TOWNSHEND. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BENNETT] has the floor, and desires to be heard.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is aware that the gentleman from North Carolina has the floor.

Mr. RANNEY. Mr. Speaker, I raise the point of order that the resolution has not been read.

The SPEAKER. The resolution was read on Saturday.

Mr. RANNEY. The report of the minority was read, but not the report of the majority.

The SPEAKER. Both the resolution reported by the minority and the one reported by the majority were read on Saturday.

Mr. REED. But that is not to-day. We voted not to consider the case then.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is not aware of any rule which would authorize gentlemen to demand the reading of the resolution in the time of a gentleman already on the floor, but of course every gentleman has a right to have the resolution read before it is voted upon.

Mr. VALENTINE. Mr. Speaker, I submit that the Chair had no right to recognize a gentleman to debate the resolution until it had been read or stated to the House.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will examine the rule. [After a pause.] The Clerk will read the rule.

The Chief Clerk read as follows:

RULE XVI.

2. When a motion has been made the Speaker shall state it, or, if it be in writing, cause it to be read aloud by the Clerk, before being debated, and it shall then be in possession of the House, but may be withdrawn at any time before a decision or amendment.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that if this rule is insisted upon the resolution must be read or stated before it can be debated.

Mr. VALENTINE. Now, Mr. Speaker, I insist that the resolution be read, and that opportunity be given to all members alike for recognition to debate it.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That James Wilson—

Mr. HISCOCK. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HISCOCK. Is it in order to move that the House now adjourn?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks not while the Clerk is reading the resolution.

Mr. HISCOCK. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. VALENTINE] has asked for the reading of the resolution.

Mr. HISCOCK. Yes; but we are transacting business, and any business can be interrupted by a motion to adjourn.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks not. The Chair thinks the gentleman can not stop the reading of a paper which has been demanded as a matter of right. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk continued and concluded the reading of the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That James Wilson was not elected as a Representative in Congress from the fifth district of Iowa, and is not entitled to a seat on the floor of this House.

Mr. HISCOCK and Mr. ANDERSON. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. HISCOCK] moves that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. ANDERSON. Pending that, I move that the House take a recess until 7 o'clock this evening.

Mr. HISCOCK. Pending that, I move that when the House adjourn it adjourns to meet to-morrow at 4 o'clock.

The SPEAKER. That would be to change the order of the House.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BENNETT] is now entitled to the floor to debate the proposition before the House. When this matter was called up it was stated that it was the contested-election case of Frederick against Wilson. The question of consideration was then raised and the question was submitted, Will the House now proceed to consider this question?—the question then stated to the House and then before the House. I see the Speaker shakes his head.

The SPEAKER. The question then before the House was merely the question of consideration.

Mr. SPRINGER. But what were we to consider? The resolution which has been read; and the House voted to consider it. If gentlemen had desired to have that resolution read, it was their province to ask it when the question of consideration was raised. The question of consideration being raised, it could only be upon the resolution and upon nothing else; and the House has decided now to proceed to the consideration of the resolution, notwithstanding gentlemen absented themselves and broke a quorum.

The gentleman from North Carolina was then recognized, and proceeded to debate—began his speech; and he is now entitled to occupy the floor for one hour on that question.

The SPEAKER. The question which was pending before the House when the resolution was read was not the question whether the report should be adopted or not; the question then was whether the House would consider it or not.

Mr. SPRINGER. But after the House determined that it would consider it then the question was upon the resolution.

The SPEAKER. But the attention of the Chair having been called since that controversy arose to the fact that the resolution had not been read, and the question had not been stated, the Chair was bound, in accordance with the rules, to hold that it was not yet before the House, and that therefore the gentleman from North Carolina could not debate it.

Mr. SPRINGER. The Chair did not get my point. The point I make is this: If gentlemen had desired the resolution read it was their duty to call for its reading when the question was put to the House upon consideration. The question then before the House was, Will the House now consider this resolution? That question having been submitted, the House voted to consider it; and consideration means debate. The gentleman from North Carolina had the floor and began to debate the question, and he is entitled to speak an hour before he can be taken from the floor without his consent.

The SPEAKER. But the point made by gentlemen on the other side, after the gentleman from North Carolina had been recognized by the Chair, was that under the rules of the House there was then no question before the House which the gentleman from North Carolina could debate, because the resolution had not been read nor had the Chair stated the question to the House.

Mr. SPRINGER. What have we voted on then?

The SPEAKER. The Chair under the rules was obliged to sustain that point of order, and holds that at the time the gentleman from North Carolina took the floor there was in fact no question before the House.

Mr. SPRINGER. What, then, did the House vote on by yeas and nays?

The SPEAKER. That was the question whether the House would consider the matter at all.

Mr. SPRINGER. Whether it would consider this resolution; there is nothing else before it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the distinction is very plain—

Mr. WHITE, of Kentucky. I rise to a question of order.

The SPEAKER. There is a question of order pending. The Chair thinks the distinction is very plain and obvious between the question whether the House will consider the report at all and the question whether the House will adopt the report.

Mr. SPRINGER. Now I make this further point—that the gentleman from North Carolina, having this report and resolution in charge, was first entitled to recognition when the House voted to take it up.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has decided that he was entitled to the floor as soon as the question was before the House for debate, and that he could be prevented from taking the floor only by a privileged motion under the rules.

Mr. ANDERSON. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. Pending that, is a motion to take a recess until 7 o'clock in order?

The SPEAKER. The motion to adjourn has precedence over a motion to take a recess.

Mr. ANDERSON. But still the motion to take a recess may be pending?

Mr. VALENTINE. I move that when the House adjourns to-day it be to meet on Wednesday next, at 10 o'clock.

Mr. SPRINGER. That is out of order.

The SPEAKER. That motion is not in order, because it changes a standing order of the House. The question is on the motion to adjourn.

The question being taken, there were—ayes 37, noes 78.

Mr. ANDERSON. No quorum.

The SPEAKER. A quorum is not necessary on this question.

Mr. VALENTINE and others called for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, 48 voting in favor thereof.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the negative—yeas 11, nays 194, not voting 119; as follows:

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. McCook, its Secretary, requested a conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. 5800) for the relief of Sarah B. Jackson, and stated that it had appointed Mr. MITCHELL, Mr. VAN WYCK, and Mr. JACKSON as conferees on its part.

IOWA ELECTION CASE.

During the roll-call the following additional pairs were announced:

For the rest of the day—

Mr. GEDDES with Mr. HOLMES.

Mr. BALLENTINE with Mr. LAIRD.

Mr. YOUNG with Mr. HOLTON.

Mr. MURRAY with Mr. STEELE.

Mr. NICHOLLS with Mr. WAKEFIELD.

Mr. GEORGE D. WISE with Mr. LIBBEY. If present, Mr. WISE would vote in the negative.

The vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. HEPBURN. I move that the House take a recess until 9 o'clock this evening.

Mr. ANDERSON. I move the House take a recess until 11 o'clock to-morrow.

The SPEAKER. Gentlemen will submit their motions one at a time. As the Chair understands, the gentleman from Nebraska moves the House take a recess until to-morrow at 11 o'clock.

Mr. HEPBURN. I move that the House take a recess until 9 o'clock.

Mr. VALENTINE. Mr. Speaker, I did not make a motion that the House take a recess until 11 o'clock to-morrow morning, but I will move now that the House take a recess until 10 o'clock to-night.

The SPEAKER. Several gentlemen made motions at the same time, and the Chair may have been mistaken.

Mr. MORRILL. I ask by unanimous consent to take up from the Speaker's table the message from the Senate asking for a committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. 5800) for the relief of Sarah B. Jackson, and to move that the conference asked for be agreed to.

The SPEAKER. That is not in order just now. It is a privileged matter, but it does not stand on the same footing with a conference report.

Mr. SPRINGER. What is the question before the House?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. VALENTINE] moves that the House take a recess until 10 o'clock this evening.

Mr. HEPBURN. And I move to amend that motion so the House shall take a recess until 9 o'clock this evening.

Mr. PETTIBONE. And I move to still further amend by making it 8 o'clock this evening.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa moves to amend by saying 9 o'clock, and the gentleman from Tennessee moves still further to amend by inserting 8 o'clock to-night.

Mr. ANDERSON. And now I move the House adjourn.

Mr. SPRINGER. These are all dilatory motions, and I ask notice be taken of that fact. I have been informed that the contestee in this case has said time and again he would not make any objection to the consideration of this case. [Cries of "Order!" I ask [cries of "Order!"] that the assurances of the gentleman from Iowa [cries of "Order!"] that there should be no contest and no filibustering in this case— [Cries of "Order!"]

Mr. WELLER. Mr. Speaker, I move that all these motions be laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will entertain no motion whatever until gentlemen resume their seats and order is restored.

The question is first on the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. PETTIBONE] that the House take a recess until 8 o'clock this evening.

Mr. RANDALL. If taken at all it should be until 8.

Mr. ANDERSON. Let us have a division on that vote.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 4, noes 44.

Mr. VALENTINE. No quorum has voted.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will appoint as tellers the gentleman from Nebraska, Mr. VALENTINE, and the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. SPRINGER.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 0, noes 103.

Mr. VALENTINE. No quorum has voted.

Mr. HEPBURN. I move that there be a call of the House.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 43, noes 54.

Mr. HEPBURN demanded the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and it was decided in the negative—yeas 50, nays 163, not voting 106; as follows:

So a call of the House was not ordered.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Mr. ERMENTROUT with Mr. HARMER, on all political questions, until further notice.

Mr. DARGAN with Mr. FINERTY, for the rest of the day.

Mr. BUCKNER with Mr. WAIT, for this day.

Mr. DIBBLE with Mr. GEORGE, for to-day.

Mr. VANCE with Mr. SMITH, of Pennsylvania, for this day.

Mr. JORDAN with Mr. DINGLEY, until 7 p. m.

Mr. WARNER, of Ohio, with Mr. HOUK, until 8 o'clock p. m.

The result of the vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. HEPBURN. I move to reconsider the vote by which the House refused to order a call of the House.

Mr. ANDERSON. And I move to lay that motion on the table.

The SPEAKER. The motion to reconsider will be entered.

Mr. RANDALL. I would like to make a brief statement, and with the consent of the House.

The SPEAKER. Without objection the gentleman will proceed. [Cries of "All right!"]

Mr. RANDALL. It is probable that we shall be compelled to stay late to-night, perhaps until to-morrow morning, and I think it will be for the comfort of both sides that we now take a recess until 8 o'clock, so as to allow members of the House an opportunity to get their dinner.

The SPEAKER. That is the question now pending before the House. The amendment proposed by the gentleman from Tennessee is that the House shall now take a recess until 8 o'clock.

Mr. ANDERSON. Will the Chair state the question?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. VALENTINE] moved that the House take a recess until 10 o'clock to-night. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HEPBURN] moved to amend that motion by taking a recess until 9 o'clock; and the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. PETTIBONE] moved to amend the amendment by making the hour 8 o'clock, which is now the pending question.

Mr. RANDALL. I suggest to the House that we adopt that with unanimity, and we can commence anew at 8 o'clock.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Iowa withdraw the motion to reconsider?

Mr. HEPBURN. I do.

Mr. ANDERSON. I withdraw the motion to lay on the table.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment to the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. PETTIBONE] that the House now take a recess until 8 o'clock.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to; and accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 23 minutes p. m.) the House took a recess until 8 o'clock.

EVENING SESSION.

The recess having expired, the House (at 8 o'clock p. m.) resumed its session.

CONTESTED ELECTION—FREDERICK VS. WILSON.

Mr. VALENTINE. I move that the House do now take a recess until 10 o'clock to-morrow morning.

Mr. HEPBURN. I move to amend by making it 9 o'clock.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state the motion of the gentleman from Nebraska.

Mr. SPRINGER. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state the motion, after which the Chair will hear the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire to know, in the first place, what is the pending question.

The SPEAKER. The pending question is on the adoption of the report of the majority of the Committee on Elections in the contested election case.

Mr. SPRINGER. Upon that I wish to be recognized.

The SPEAKER. But the gentleman from Nebraska has made a motion that the House take a recess, which is a privileged motion.

Mr. SPRINGER. I desire to ask if it is not in order to proceed to the discussion of the election case.

The SPEAKER. Not pending a motion for a recess.

The gentleman from Iowa moves to amend the motion so as to make the recess until 9 o'clock.

Mr. PETTIBONE. I move a further amendment to the amendment, that the recess be taken until 8 o'clock to-morrow morning.

Mr. ANDERSON. I move that the House adjourn.

Mr. SPRINGER. If gentlemen have got through with their motions, I would like to state that the contestee in this case agreed that there should be no filibustering in connection with it [cries of "Regular order!"], and in view of that agreement I ask that gentlemen now cease their filibustering and let us go on with the case.

Mr. ADAMS, of New York. There never was any such arrangement made.

Mr. SPRINGER. I say that an agreement was made on the part of the contestee [loud cries of "Regular order!"], and I want to inform members on that side of the House [resumed cries of "Regular order!"] that this case will be before the House, notwithstanding their efforts. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

The SPEAKER. The question is upon the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Tennessee to the amendment of the gentleman from Iowa.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. I make a point of order upon that last amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HEWITT, of Alabama. I understand that the gentleman moves that the House take a recess until 10 o'clock, another until 8, and another until 9. That is an amendment in the third degree, and if I am correct in the statement it is not in order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is mistaken. There was a motion to take a recess until 10 o'clock, to which an amendment was offered making it 9 o'clock, and the amendment to the amendment by the gentleman from Tennessee, which is now the pending question, until 8 o'clock. The question is on the latter motion.

The question was taken; and on a division there were—ayes 2, noes 27.

Mr. VALENTINE. No quorum.

The SPEAKER. The point of order being made that no quorum has voted, the Chair will order tellers.

Mr. VALENTINE and Mr. SPRINGER were appointed tellers.

Mr. SPRINGER. I move that there be a call of the House.

The SPEAKER. The House is now taking a vote.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 3, noes 42.

Mr. VALENTINE. No quorum.

The SPEAKER. A quorum has not voted.

Mr. VALENTINE. I move a call of the House.

The question being taken, the Speaker stated that the "noes" seemed to have it.

Mr. HEPBURN. I call for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 26, noes 31.

Mr. HEPBURN. I call for tellers.

Tellers were not ordered, only 22 members voting therefor—not one-fifth of a quorum.

So the motion for a call of the House was not agreed to.

Mr. ADAMS, of New York. I rise to a question of privilege.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. ADAMS, of New York. I have a resolution to offer which bears directly on the question before this House, namely, the contested-election case of Frederick vs. Wilson.

The SPEAKER. A quorum has not appeared and no business is in order except a call of the House or a motion to adjourn.

Mr. SPRINGER. A quorum not being present would it be in order now to proceed to discuss the question before the House?

The SPEAKER. The question before the House is on the motion for a recess and the amendments thereto.

Mr. SPRINGER. That is a mere dilatory motion which gentlemen are urging for revolutionary purposes. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

Mr. VALENTINE. The gentleman from Illinois is out of order.

Mr. SPRINGER. I have a right to be out of order when revolution is afoot.

Mr. GEORGE D. WISE. I move that the House do now adjourn.

The question being taken on the motion to adjourn, the Speaker stated that the "noes" seemed to have it.

Mr. HEPBURN. I call for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 38, noes 56.

So the House refused to adjourn.

Mr. BENNETT rose.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. BENNETT. I rise to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BENNETT. What is the next question before the House?

The SPEAKER. The question before the House is on the motion for a recess. The first question is on the amendment to the amendment, which is now pending.

Mr. VALENTINE. On which no quorum appeared.

Mr. SPRINGER. Does not a motion to adjourn supersede all those motions for a recess?

The SPEAKER. It does not supersede them; it has priority over them.

Mr. CANNON. I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. CANNON. Would it be in order for me to ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. BENNETT] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. SPRINGER] have leave of absence until to-morrow?

Mr. SPRINGER. What was the question of my colleague? That chunk of wisdom has been lost, I am afraid, not only to this generation but to posterity. That cannon exploded in mid-air; nothing was heard of it. [Cries of "Regular order!"]

The SPEAKER. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. PETTIBONE] to the amendment of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. HEPBURN].

The question being taken, the Speaker stated that the "noes" seemed to have it.

Mr. VALENTINE. I call for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 3, noes 36.

Mr. VALENTINE. No quorum.

Mr. SPRINGER. I move that there be a call of the House, a quorum not having voted.

The question being taken on Mr. SPRINGER's motion, the Speaker stated that the "ayes" seemed to have it.

Mr. ANDERSON. I call for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 53, noes 25.

Mr. VALENTINE. Upon this question I call for the yeas and nays. The yeas and nays were ordered, 43 members voting therefor.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 129, nays 61, not voting 134; as follows:

The Clerk read the names of members voting.

The following additional pairs were announced from the Clerk's desk:

Mr. JOHN S. WISE with Mr. TURNER, of Kentucky, on this vote.

Mr. TUCKER with Mr. LONG, on this vote.

Mr. HEMPHILL with Mr. O'NEILL, of Pennsylvania, for the remainder of the day.

Mr. HISCOCK with Mr. DORSHEIMER, for the remainder of the day. The result of the vote was then announced as above stated.

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I move to reconsider the vote by which a call of the House has been ordered.

Mr. SPRINGER and Mr. HEPBURN moved to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

Mr. SPRINGER. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of order. I desire to ask how the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BROWNE] voted.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is informed that the gentleman from Indiana voted "ay."

Mr. BROWNE, of Indiana (to Mr. SPRINGER). I voted "yea" on purpose, my friend.

The SPEAKER. The question is on laying the motion to reconsider on the table. [After a pause.] The "ayes" seem to have it.

Mr. VALENTINE. Mr. Speaker, I think we had better have the yeas and nays on this.

The question was taken; and the yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken on laying the motion to reconsider on the table; and there were—yeas 138, nays 70, not voting 116; as follows:

During the roll-call,

The following additional pairs were announced.

Mr. WARD with Mr. LAWRENCE, for the rest of the day.

Mr. HARDEMAN with Mr. JOHNSON, for the rest of the day.

The vote was then announced as above recorded.

Mr. VALENTINE moved to reconsider the vote just taken; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. STEWART. I ask now, Mr. Speaker, that my colleague, Mr. POLAND, be excused.

The SPEAKER. The noes seem to have it.

Mr. ANDERSON. I demand a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 44, noes 24.

Mr. RANDALL. I desire to make a suggestion to the House.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears no objection, and the gentleman will proceed.

Mr. RANDALL. The report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill (H. R. 8179) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1886, and for other purposes, has come over from the Senate, and if proceedings are dispensed with under the call of the House that report can be taken from the Speaker's table and acted upon.

Mr. ANDERSON. Can not that be done by unanimous consent, the present business before the House standing just as it is?

The SPEAKER. If further proceedings under the call are dispensed with the pending motion can be resumed. These proceedings grow out of the fact of no quorum having voted on the motion before the House.

Mr. VALENTINE. I ask by unanimous consent to dispense with all further proceedings under the call.

Mr. O'NEILL, of Missouri. I object.

Mr. RANDALL. Then I move to dispense with all further proceedings under the call.

The motion was agreed to.

LEGISLATIVE, ETC., BILL.

Mr. HOLMAN. I rise to a privileged question. I submit the report of the conference committee on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill, and also the statement, under the rules, of the conferees on the part of the House.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the report.

Mr. ANDERSON. I wish to make a parliamentary inquiry; is this privileged over the pending motion?

The SPEAKER. It is. The Chair will state that a conference report has priority over everything except the reading of the Journal, the call of the roll, or a division of the House.

WM. S. HOLMAN,
JOHN HANCOCK,
J. G. CANNON,
Managers on the part of the House.
W. B. ALLISON,
H. L. DAWES,
F. M. COCKRELL,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The statement of the conferees on the part of the House accompanying the report was read, as follows:

The managers on the part of the House of the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill H. R. 8179, making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the year ending June 30, 1896, submit the following, in explanation of the accompanying conference report:

The conference committee have agreed upon all of the one hundred and seventy-four Senate amendments except those numbered 1 and 29, which involve the appropriation of $39,432 for clerks to Senators who are not chairmen of committees.

The bill as it is agreed upon, and including the amount involved in said amendments 1 and 29, appropriates in all $21,350,298.70, being $153,488 more than as it passed the House, $80,671.93 less than as it passed the Senate, $2,943.15 less than the law for the current year, and $976,201.35 less than the estimates which were submitted.

WM. S. HOLMAN,
JOHN HANCOCK,
J. G. CANNON,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit only a few facts in regard to the substance of that report and to call the attention of the House to the one proposition which is still in difference between the two Houses. It will be a very brief statement that I shall make.

There were one hundred and seventy-four amendments made to this bill by the Senate, adding $153,480 to the amount. The bill as it would be amended by the report of the conference committee appropriates $80,671.93 less than the amount added to the bill by the Senate. The bill as amended would appropriate a trifle less than the law of the present year—$4,843.15.

The amendment of the Senate which is the subject of disagreement is amendment numbered 29. I ask that that amendment may be reported to the House.

The Clerk read as follows:

For clerks to Senators who are not chairmen of committees, at $5 per day, $39,432.

Mr. HOLMAN. The amendment numbered 1 is simply a matter of footing. If this amendment should be either adopted or rejected it changes the footing; so that amendment numbered 1 is a mere matter of form. But the amendment which has now been read, that numbered 29, involving $39,432 for clerks of Senators, gives the subject-matter of dispute. It is upon that that the committee have not been able to agree.

There are two matters to which I wish to call the attention of the House before asking a vote upon the proposition I have just referred to. The first is as to the act of the Senate touching the employés of the House; and I feel the more in duty bound to call attention to this particular amendment from the fact that it concerns the House Committee on Appropriations. The Senate of its own motion increased the salary of the clerk of the Senate Committee on Appropriations from $2,500 to $3,000, and also the salary of the chief clerk of the House Committee on Appropriations from $2,500 to $3,000.

These two amendments, one affecting the House and the other the Senate, are Senate amendments and have both been concurred in by the conferees. I shall not suppose the House will deem it important to inquire how this conclusion was arrived at. As I have stated this report concurs in these two amendments of the Senate, the one affecting their own body and the other affecting the House. So much for that. I was the more desirous of calling the attention of the House to it because it is a matter affecting the Committee on Appropriations.

There is another amendment to which I wish to call the attention of the House for a moment. It is amendment numbered 135. I ask that it may be reported to the House, being a change in the provision as it passed the House by the act of the conferees.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment 135: Strike out all after line 11, on page 79, down to and including line 9, on page 80, and insert the following:

"That a committee consisting of five members-elect of the House of Representatives of the Forty-ninth Congress, to be appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the Forty-eighth Congress, shall, prior to the first Monday of December next, inquire into and investigate the expenditure of appropriations for Indians under treaty for their support, for their education, or otherwise, and whether any changes should be made in such appropriations or their expenditure. Said committee shall also inquire into the expenditure of public money for the Yellowstone Park, and the administration of the laws applicable to said park, whether any change should be made in said laws or the boundary of the park, and what steps, if any, can be taken to make of practical benefit and utility that portion of the public domain. That said committee shall have power to appoint subcommittees and visit the places where appropriations mentioned herein are expended, and in doing so they are authorized to use Government conveyances and means of transportation. Said committee, or any subcommittee thereof, shall have power to send for persons and papers and to appoint a clerk, and the committee may report by bill or otherwise to the Forty-ninth Congress. A sum sufficient to pay the expenses of said committee hereby authorized, and of witnesses that may be summoned before it, is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, which shall be immediately available and payable on the draft of the chairman of said committee in sums not exceeding $1,000 at any one time."

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] whether this amendment was put in the bill by the Senate or by the conference committee.

Mr. HOLMAN. The original proposition was put in the bill by the House.

Mr. MILLS. Was it not stricken out in the House on the point of order?

Mr. HOLMAN. No. It went to the Senate; the Senate struck it out, and then the conferees restored it with some change in the phraseology.

Mr. MILLS. It ought to be stricken out.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, one additional fact I wish to mention, and it is a subject to which I wish to call the attention of the Post-Office Committee. The conferees have restored the office of superintendent of foreign mails, and have provided for the same body of employés in that branch of the postal service with the same salaries as in the existing law.

I believe that those are all the changes which have been made in the bill since it left the House, and I now call the previous question—

Mr. CANNON. I ask my colleague on the committee from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] to yield to me for a moment.

Mr. HOLMAN. How much time does my friend from Illinois wish?

Mr. CANNON. Very little.

Mr. HOLMAN. Five minutes?

Mr. CANNON. I think that will be enough.

Mr. HOLMAN. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON].

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, my colleague on the committee [Mr. HOLMAN] has called attention to an amendment made by the Senate increasing the salary of the clerk of the Appropriations Committee of the Senate $500, and also increasing the salary of the clerk of the House Committee on Appropriations $500. The House conferees concurred in both those amendments, and I wish to state very frankly that I, as one of the conferees, not only concurred in the amendments but did so heartily, because I believe they are right. I am not so familiar with the clerk of the Senate Committee on Appropriations (although quite familiar with his work) as I am with the clerk of the House Committee on Appropriations.

Most members of the House are familiar with him and his work, and I say to the House that, from the fact of these appropriation bills involving an examination of the whole civil service of the Government from beginning to end, and requiring a technical and correct knowledge of the whole of that service, it must be apparent to every member that the duties of the clerks of these committees are very onerous. Especially is this true under the peculiar rules of the House, by which, to a great degree, appropriation bills are made to carry through the chief part of the legislation that each and almost every member of the House desires carried through. I do not propose to discuss that matter now, except to say that I hope that in the future our rules may be so amended that the committees of this House can have measures which they recommend considered under the rules. As I was saying, gentlemen can readily see that the clerks of these two great appropriations committees require to have a close and technical knowledge of the matters covered by these bills, and that such knowledge on their part can be and is of immense advantage in the preparation of the appropriation bills. I think the two clerks in question have that knowledge. More than that, when it is considered that the appropriations made by these bills aggregate over a hundred million dollars every year and that they are massed together at the close of the session of Congress, gentlemen can see at once that these officers require not merely knowledge but rapidity and integrity. I think that these qualities are to be found in these two clerks, and while I have no doubt that there are many other gentlemen throughout the country who could be educated to do this work I have no hesitation in saying that I do not believe there are two others in the United States who without that education and training would be one-half as competent as these gentlemen are, and I believe that $3,000 is a small salary rather than a large one to pay them. Therefore I, for one, heartily concur in the amendment of the Senate increasing their salaries.

Mr. SKINNER, of New York. How many clerks does the increase apply to in each committee?

Mr. CANNON. One.

Mr. HOLMAN. Mr. Speaker, my special purpose in calling attention to this action of the Senate in increasing the salaries of these two clerks was to bring to the notice of the House the fact that the Senate, while resisting any interference by the House with Senate employés or their salaries, thought proper to increase the salary of an employé of the House. That was the point to which I wished especially to call the attention of the House. Now, Mr. Speaker, I move that the House insist on its disagreement—

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state that the first question is upon the adoption of this report.

Mr. HOLMAN. Then I call the previous question on adopting the report.

The previous question was ordered; and under the operation thereof the report was adopted.

Mr. HOLMAN moved to reconsider the vote by which the report was adopted; and also moved that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table.

The latter motion was agreed to.

Mr. HOLMAN. I now move that the House further insist on its disagreement as to the twenty-ninth amendment of the Senate, and ask a further conference.

Mr. CANNON. Pending that motion, I move that the House recede.

The SPEAKER. The motion to recede takes precedence.

Mr. CANNON. I would like to occupy the floor a minute or two on this question.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state the question. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN] moves that the House further insist on its disagreement to the twenty-ninth amendment of the Senate and ask a further conference. Pending that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the Senate amendment and agree to the same.

Mr. HOLMAN. How much time does the gentleman wish?

Mr. CANNON. I believe I have the floor.

The SPEAKER. Under the rules the question is first upon the motion to recede.

Mr. HOLMAN. Certainly; but I had a right to insist on the previous question upon my motion. I was only giving way so that the gentleman's motion might come before the House before the previous question had been called.

The SPEAKER. Still the motion of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CANNON] is of higher privilege than that of the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HOLMAN. But the gentleman could not take me off the floor.

The SPEAKER. There must be an opportunity under the rules to make this motion of higher privilege.

Mr. HOLMAN. Then I will call the previous question after the gentleman has concluded.

Mr. CANNON. Mr. Speaker, this amendment is as follows:

For clerks to Senators who are not chairmen of committees, at $6 per day during the session, $39,432.

The amendment provides for thirty-one Senators' clerks, at $180 a month in round numbers, for a session of seven months. I have moved that the House recede from its disagreement and agree to this amendment, and I will state very briefly why.

Prior to the last session of this Congress the Senate by resolution provided these clerks for Senators who were not chairmen of committees, and provided for their pay from the contingent fund of the Senate; and we had to concur in increasing the contingent fund. At the last session the Senate, when it came to consider the legislative appropriation bill for the current year, placed upon that bill an amendment substantially the same as this.

The matter was fought at great length, there having been conference after conference between the two Houses, the Senate insisting that it had the right to regulate its own affairs so far as the conduct of the business of the Senate was concerned. Let that be as it may, it is certainly the fact that on a fair, square vote, upon a motion to recede, just such a motion as I now make, this House did recede; and there was put in the bill for the current year an appropriation similar to this.

This year when this bill was considered in the House we omitted this appropriation. The Senate put this amendment upon the bill; it came back to the House; we non-concurred, and the question went to a conference.

Now, I would be very willing, ordinarily, to have another conference upon this question—a third and a fourth, for that matter, though I do not know exactly what good it would do unless to call the attention of the country to this subject. Ordinarily, I say, I would be willing for further conference, but when I recollect that to-morrow is the last legislative day of this Congress, I realize there is not much time for that kind of thing; so I think I am authorized to say that in the end the House will do just what we did last session, and what I propose to do now.

One word upon the merits of this amendment. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. MILLS] offered to-day a resolution that this House should not participate in the inaugural ceremonies because he thought members of the House had been given a back seat. Well, to be frank about it, I did think that the Senate had not treated the outgoing and the incoming members of this House with any very great courtesy; yet I did not mind that much, because the matter was all "dress parade." Neither the House nor the Senate is required under the Constitution or the laws to be present at those ceremonies. Feeling, therefore, that the matter was not of much importance, I contented myself with not voting at all. But here is a proposition to which in substance the House has already assented. This appropriation has run for two years.

This is the second year that this amendment has come to us upon this bill, to give to Senators who are not chairmen of committees clerks at $180 a month. I have thought that if Senators had these clerks the members of the House ought to have the same assistance for themselves. We are a co-ordinate branch of the Government, representing the people, coming near to them—coming more directly in contact with them day by day, week by week, and year by year, with our elections every other year, than the Senators do. We hold positions of equal dignity, positions which, in the years immediately succeeding the adoption of the Constitution, were considered if anything of superior dignity, men of great ability preferring to come here rather than go to the Senate.

I have thought, I say, the House ought to take the same things conceded to the Senate by the House. What prevents them from doing it? I think members of the House are afraid—that they have not the courage to do it.

A MEMBER. Try us.

Mr. CANNON. Everybody understands, of course, they are willing to do it; but they have not done it.

I must confess two years ago when the Senate passed the resolution in reference to these clerks I thought it might attract some attention in the country; that they might be blamed for so doing; but strange to say I do not suppose there are 1,000 people in the United States outside of the District of Columbia who know Senators have these clerks. If they do, I apprehend most of them approve of it, for I have not seen any condemnation in the public prints, nor have I heard a single word of denunciation hurled against them from the stump.

A MEMBER. Most of them think it is right.

Mr. CANNON. The gentleman says most of them think it is right. I did not move an amendment for members of the House because of my remembrance of the fate of a precisely similar motion, and because I was satisfied there was no use in doing so. I venture, however, to say and to hope that at the next session of Congress, early in the session, one of two things will be done, namely, either that this appropriation under the law as it is now provided shall be refused to Senators to pay for personal clerks, or the House shall insist it shall be regulated by law and their salaries somewhat decreased, and the members of this House, a co-ordinate of the National Legislature, shall demand for themselves that while they assume the responsibility of granting this to the co-ordinate branch of the Legislature they shall assume for themselves the same right. [Applause.]

Mr. BELFORD. Is it not a fact that I introduced a resolution giving to each member a clerk, and is it not a further fact that you voted against it?

Mr. CANNON. I do not recollect how I voted; I do not think the yeas and nays were taken or any record of that vote. I recollect, however, that the gentleman did offer that resolution. I think I do. He has offered a great many resolutions and has made a great many demands, as I remember pleasantly, to empty, as he says, the Treasury of the United States. Now, I do not care about emptying the Treasury of the United States.

Mr. BELFORD. You will remember about emptying the Treasury before you are two years older.

Mr. CANNON. I now yield for five minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. MILLS].

Mr. MILLS. Mr. Speaker, at the organization of our Government the House of Representatives was considered to be the important branch of the National Legislature. The Senate was adopted as a body that represented the States, and this House was the great, important representative body of the American people. But the bicameral system was adopted when we had two Houses. Nobody dreamed for years that the House of Representatives was not equal in power, equal in importance, equal in dignity, equal in prerogative, equal in privilege, equal in deed and in fact in all respects with the House at the other end of the Capitol. But, sir, within a few years that House has encroached upon the rights of this House, little by little, as abuses always grow and arbitrary power always gains upon the right, until to-day they boldly avow superior prerogative and privilege, and we bow down on our knees and grant it unto them.

The gentleman talks about the rights of the House after having voted with the vast majority of this House to take in one of the most important transactions of the people of the United States a secondary position, not by the side of the Senate of the United States where our fathers placed this body. They have placed the diplomatic corps, blazoning with the tinsel of foreign decorations, on the right, where this House of Representatives ought to be. Instead of occupying our rightful position we have been located to the rear. Heads of Departments were placed next in importance to the diplomatic corps, and behind them came the Army, with the clanking of sabers, while far to the rear were located the representatives of the American people. And the gentleman from Illinois voted that the representatives of the people by being so placed were rightfully located.

Mr. CANNON. If my friend will allow me—

Mr. MILLS. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOLMAN], your colleague, voted with you, although he first voted through the tellers and voted on the Representatives' side of the question. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. CANNON. If my friend will allow me—

Mr. MILLS. I will.

Mr. CANNON. I was not present when that vote was taken, and therefore did not vote at all.
